"The secession of the Rev. Arthur Wagner, a Ritualistic clergyman of Brighton, England, of some local reputation, is less significant than the terms on which he is to be admitted to the Roman Catholic Church; these latter indicate the influence which the mild progressiveness of the present Pope is having upon the historic faith and traditions of the Romish communion. Mr. Wagner is married; the Pope cannot divorce him even if he were willing to be divorced; but, if the cable reports are to be trusted, he is to be received into the Roman Catholic priesthood, re-ordained, and allowed to assist in priestly ministrations in the Roman Catholic Church, in mass and preaching; the only priestly function denied him will be that of hearing confession. It is reported further, that the principles on which Mr. Wagner is to be admitted to the Roman Catholic Church have been definitely settled upon as a precedent for the future, and it is not unreasonable to hope that a considerable portion of the High Church Anglicans of the Mackonochie, Tooth and Wagner stamp will find this doorway wide enough to admit them to the Roman Catholic priesthood. It is also reported that the newly converted clergy will be allowed to retain the vernacular in the mass as well as their wives in their homes."

ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

The 220th session of the Presbytery of Orange will be held in Washington, N. C., on Wednesday, the 24th of March, 1880, at 7 p. m. F. H. JOHNSTON, Stated Clerk.

In connection with the above we are authorized and requested to publish the following notice:

TO MEMBERS OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

In a generous spirit of accommodation, the Old Dominion Line of Steamers will arrange to take the members of Orange Presbytery, and all visitors, promptly, from Newbern to Washington, N. C., and back to Newbern at the close of the sessions. This will make a delightful trip in daylight through Pamlico Sound to Washington, and Capt. Southgate says he will feed the members on shad and oysters until they can't rest. He knows how to do it, too, we think!

It is essential that delegates reach Newbern by the train which leaves Goldsboro on Tuesday, March 23d, at 6:55 P. M., and arrives here at 10 P. M. The steamer will leave her wharf very early Wednesday morning, 24th of March, and arrive in Washington in time for the session at 7 P. M. the same day.

All purposing to attend will please notify me as promptly as possible. No other route is certain: none so pleasant: and only one boat will run. Address

REV. L. C. VASS, Newbern, N. C.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

A friend writes from Statesville, N. C., that on the 15th inst., two persons joined the Presbyterian church in that town—one by certificate and one on examination.

It has been determined upon to expend $2,500 in enlarging and beautifying the First Presbyterian church building in this city.—State Journal.

DEATH AT COLUMBIA SEMINARY.

Dear Sir: Mr. John F. Mayne, late a student of Davidson College, died here this morning at about 10 o'clock. At the time of his death he was a member of the Senior Class of Columbia Theological Seminary.

F. P. RAMSAY.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 21.

The ladies who compose the committee for soliciting funds to build a Presbyterian church in this place have met with success this week. We understand that about $250 has been subscribed by our citizens.—Wilson (N. C.) Advance.

We are glad to hear that Nutbush church, which was deprived of regular ministrations by the death of Rev. Edward Hines, is not entirely without the preaching of the Word. Rev. T. U. Fancette preached there on the 15th inst. Rev. Thomas Drew, of Virginia, will preach on Friday and Saturday, 27th and 28th February inst., and Rev. F. N. Whaley on Sabbath immediately following.

ROWAN AND DAVIE CLUSTER.

The Rowan and Davie cluster met at Unity church, Rowan county, on Monday, the 15th inst., and was opened by a sermon by Rev. A. L. Crawford, of Mocksville, on "Sabbath Observance." The discourse, founded on the Fourth Commandment, was timely, practical and instructive; timely, because much-needed to counteract the almost universal desecration of that holy day; practical, because interspersed with many examples of the pernicious results of this habit; and instructive, in the valuable lessons drawn from them.

The afternoon session was occupied in discussing some of the questions previously announced, viz: "The Best Methods of securing greater Christian Activity;" and "Is it advisable to have two services on Sabbath in our country churches?" We were agreeably surprised to find all the speakers on this last question advocating the one sermon plan. 'Twill be long, however, before it will be adopted in some churches.

The cluster is evidently doing good. What has become of the other clusters formed in Concord Presbytery? We never hear anything of them these days. M.

TUSKALOOSA AND THE INSTITUTE.

I attended communion services in Dr. Stillman's church on Sabbath; and on invitation at 3 o'clock p. m., visited the colored Sabbath School.

The school is brought into the Presbyterian church for instruction; an aged lady, I suppose between seventy and eighty years of age, is earnestly engaged in teaching the school. She is said to be the mother of the school, and to have been teaching in it for eleven years. Her own son, a prominent physician, superintends the school. The good lady has been the prime mover in a great work, and she will have many stars in her crown of rejoicing in the upper sanctuary.

Several other ladies are teaching in the school, and Prof. Rankin has charge of a class of young men, from which it is thought several will go into the Institute as candidates for the ministry.

The Sabbath School numbers about 150. A great help it would be to the cause of Christianity if, in this respect, the example of the good people of Tuskaloosa would be followed by all the congregations belonging to our Church.

The number of students in the Institute is small, and will perhaps remain so for some time, unless there be greater activity on the part of our ministers and congregations in looking up suitable young men, and in bringing them out to the Presbyteries. This in order that the Presbyteries may direct the young men to the Institute and make the necessary arrangements for their getting there. D. A. McR.

THE MISSIONARY FEELING IN COLUMBIA SEMINARY.

Mr. Editor: When Dr. J. L. Wilson was in Columbia sometime before Christmas, he made a familiar talk to the students of the Seminary on the subject of Missions and their duty in the matter. Many of these students had been members of the Williams Association of Missionary Inquiry at Davidson College, and perhaps others of similar societies elsewhere; and here the students had a like association in successful operation. Dr. W. therefore found a body of young men already interested in this matter, and many of whom had meditated seriously as to their duty in regard to it. But since his visit the feeling has increased, and some have determined, if not prevented by circumstances beyond their control, to offer themselves for the foreign field, while others are hesitating whether it is their duty to take such a step. It is safe to say, that unless the Committee receive greater resources than have been coming in, some of those who are now in the Columbia Seminary will most probably have to be detained at home against their earnest desire, for their interest seems to have the permanence of intelligent conviction. Let the people of God open their purses and their hearts. P. P. R.

THE RULING POWER OF EPITHETS.

Napoleon Bonaparte said: "The world is ruled by epithets." This is true of a large part of the world's history, and still vastly too true. Some epithets are flavored with praise and others with censure; we are driven by the one and led by the other, because most men desire praise more than heaven and fear censure more than hell. Christianity will eventually accomplish what philosophy has failed to do—teach the world that truth is to be desired for its own sake, and to be sought after by honest methods.

The great need of our day—of all days—is thought: honest, earnest thought; you may say the church needs more work, but to work without thought is to beat the air. Another says we need more piety, but piety without thought is the greatest enemy of godliness. Charity when thoughtless and misapplied, sinks into a mandlin sentiment, and is transformed into a curse. The question above all questions is, are we using the best methods for giving the gospel to dying men? Can it not be done more thoroughly, effectively, rapidly? To answer this question is the great duty of the Church. To answer it wisely, will require intense, prayerful thought. Who is doing this thinking?

Many men do not think at all, but deal exclusively in other men's thoughts. Not venturing even to smooth off the rough corners, they use them exactly as received. When their mental machinery runs down they wait patiently for it to be wound up by other hands. They have no capacity for a doctrine, if not expressed by a formula; no mind for a principle if not written in a rule. With them a hypothesis is as valuable as a truth; a custom of as binding force as a divine law; and questions of mode of equal dignity as questions of doctrine. Under their microscope the only difference between a gnat and a camel is that the gnat is a little, the larger. They rear children, and amass wealth, but go to their graves leaving no intellectual progeny, and having added nothing to the world's mental wealth. If such men are to be led they must be roped with formulas and rules; if they are to be driven, you have only to show them the shadow of a frowning epithet.

Other men think wisely and well, but do not give their thoughts to the world. Thus many a golden thought has been quietly pocketed, or treated as Roger Bacon treated some of his, laid up in the cabinet. The Church would be stronger, and the world wiser if such men wrote more. They would be happier if they thought less. But why do not such men give such thoughts to the world? There is at least one reason. They might incur the odium of an epithet; they might be told gravely, that it is presumptious in them to suggest anything to this wise world, this wise Church, here in the last quarter of the nineteenth century. And this would be a stigma from which few men have character enough to recover. Hence they shrink, and are silent. Hence the thought is lost to the world for a generation—perhaps for a century. Oh! that all thinking men were brave men.

A few men think, because they must think; and publish their thoughts, because impelled by duty. Of these some are discovering new truths, or developing new phases of truth, while others, mainly occupied with the past, are eliminating the error from the truth received from the fathers. Both classes are immense powers in human progress, and it would be invidious to determine which is the more valuable. These men are the greatest benefactors of the race. They awaken its energies, direct its movements, fight its battles; and yet an unthinking world too often opposes them in their heroic work, and the Church often lends a hand to the strange opposition. Were the opposition fair and honest—mind to mind, argument against argument, their friends could not complain; but the world's method is the short method to repel their reasoning, and arrest their progress by blind, unmeaning epithets. In the days of Charles V. "heretic" answered any argument, and closed all discussions, as it ever does where papacy prevails. And so in prelatic England, under Charles II. This single word has staid the progress of truth perhaps five hundred years. To escape its tyranny the Puritans fled to New England, but at once coined a phrase as full of ignorance and tyranny, an opposer of the standard. "By the power of the Catechet" they sent men to the whipping-post and the stake, compelled sane men to endorse the "blue Laws of Connecticut," and bound the mind, on this wide continent, in the chains of direct slavery.

Our times have abandoned these "epithets," but then they have their own, less powerful it may be, but none the less objectionable; because they belong to the same fraternity of words, and are used often with the same virtue. A Christian brother who loves the truth, and his church more than life, suggests the modification of some mode, the change of some plan of church work, and straightway half a dozen voices are ready to proclaim him a "croaker," an "innovator," &c. They would not imprison him in a dungeon; but would gladly see him in the ecclesiastical guard house. They would not burn him by any means, but would freeze him out with a shower-bath. The day of snob a method of answering arguments has reached its last hours. The verdict of the intelligent Christianity of our day is, that all questions shall be decided on their own merits; all investigations of truth shall be conducted by honest, open-handed methods.

Among so large a body of men no greater unanimity ever existed than is to be found among the ministry of the North Carolina Synod, in the great doctrines of the gospel. We hear of no suspensions for unsoundness. But as to questions of methods of church work, there is diversity of opinion. To this line of thought, many minds are directed. Much has already been written, vigorously, ably written. For myself, though not always agreeing with these brethren, I thank them for their thoughts, and most of all, for the honesty and frankness with which they have expressed them. Let us not obstruct them by any unfair methods. They are honest and manly men, as clearly evinced by their writings. They are sincerely at work in the interest of truth, and the Church. Let us hear patiently what they have to say. If it be error let us show that it is error, and demand its retraction, because it is error. If it be truth let us accept it, and readily fall into any outgrowing plans for a wider and more rapid extension of the Redeemer's Kingdom.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

WHAT IS THE MATTER?

I am glad, beyond all expression, Mr. Editor, to see and hear Presbyterians asking this question in regard to our Church. It may be hard to find an answer which will please all. But the discussion is going to do great good. For my part, I do not think that the education of our ministry is in the way. Nor do you. But there may be a flaw in the rule by which we are governed. It is almost our idea that none but an educated man is fit to preach the Gospel for us. (My use of the word educated covers the whole training of our ministers.) Now, certainly a minister should have all the education that he can get. But to say that we ought not to let a man preach for us unless he has it all, just as much as our Book requires, is another thing. I do not believe that we are right in insisting upon such large acquirements in all cases. No illiterate man should be admitted, unless we are unable to find others. But if even such an one should give clear evidences of God's calling, I would be slow to "say him nay." To be able to tell the story of the cross so that men will listen and believe, is the very greatest and best qualification which any man can have. This is the highest mission of the gospel ministry. Now, dare any one say that only a highly educated man,—a scholar, can do this? But our trouble, as I said, is not that our ministers are educated. God forbid! What then is it? Seriously and honestly let us think of this question. Do we not lay too much stress on our learned ministry? And are we not in danger—if we have not already done it,—of depending more upon our worldly wisdom, than upon that wisdom which is from above? There is too much prominence, perhaps, given to the idea that a man must have a certain amount of education, in order to be a minister of the gospel. We try to cover too much,—to go over too much ground in preparing our men. Few can master everything. Is it not better to deal in specialities? Let the gospel be the great branch of learning. He who can preach this gospel, so as to build up saints and save souls, is a workman who need not be ashamed, though he be found dumb in arts and sciences.

But, one other thing is in my thoughts. We do not preach enough. Not that we do not fill our "appointments." But "protracted meetings" ought to be more the usage of our church. The people love them,—and they learn to love the church and ministry giving them. Cannot we see proof of this everywhere?

And, Mr. Editor, we need not call on other denominations for help when we do hold such meetings. Send one of our own ministers to do the work anywhere, and he will do it. He preaches the gospel then. I do not mean that he preaches anything else at other times. But in a protracted meeting, he forgets that he has had ministerial training, throws his books away from the pulpit, and, so to speak, "rolls up his sleeves" for earnest work. This is what we want all the time; just this kind of preaching. For after all, it is the gospel which is to save souls. Away with the thought that we must entertain our hearers with the words of manly wisdom. Let us get down from the intellect and work more among the heartel. "My son give me thine heart," God says. And He sends us after the heart! If we seek this, the question "What is the Matter?" will have another significance altogether. For then it will mean: Why do Presbyterians make such rapid progress? Now there is not one single grain of fault-finding in my thoughts, pen or ink as I write. If I have said anything which will cause more discussion I am and will be glad of it, even though my views meet condemnation; for I want a thorough ventilation of this matter. Let the brethren, laymen and all, speak out. If any "tread upon my toes" I promise not to quarrel nor get angry, not even to be hurt.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Sanitary Engineering. By William Cain, C. E., member of the North Carolina Board of Health. Second edition. 86 pages. The first edition of this pamphlet was exhausted in a few weeks after its issue, and since that time Prof. Cain has prepared a new edition, the work before us. It treats of drainage, ventilation, water supply, water sewerage, the dry earth system. The State Board of Health issues these books in the interest of the public health, and the subject treated appeals to heads of families, housekeepers, school teachers and all classes of people having the care of the homes, schools, and public, penal or charitable institutions, etc. The fault of our present advances in civilization is too little care of the matter treated here. If there be any who are not interested in having health, pure air, pure water, untainted food, then they should not give any heed to the sensible advice given by Prof. Cain. But as the class of persons who should be interested is very great, we advise that an early application should be made to Dr. T. F. Wood, the Secretary of the Board, at Wilmington, enclosing a letter stamp for postage.

First Principles of Political Economy, concisely presented for use in high schools and academies. By A. L. Chapin, D. D., President of Beloit College. ECLECTICISMS.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Christian Intelligencer:

The Christian life is a thing of every day consciousness and development. On the coin is the constant impress of its source and authority; the Christian ought to carry the impress of Christ and heaven on his soul always. His realization of Christianity in character and principle is the best; and as such it seeks the best for humanity, in respect to education, elevation and experience. On such a basis of merit, it can challenge the opposition. It wants no better footing. Go on, Christian, in your work of preaching and praying and living. You can afford to persist. You have the best of it.

THE EFFECT OF HABIT.

Presbyterian:

If you are overcome by bad habits counteract them with resistance so oft repeated that your nature works not only necessarily, but harmoniously against them, and you will come out new creatures; old things will have passed away in the victorious struggle. This is ever witnessed in the last struggles of advanced Christians. When those in whose lives divine impulses have been gracious habits come to the last hour—that hour of weakness and decay—then habit brings in the strength of youth through the breaches these foes have made, making the dying pillow soft as down, and the chamber of death more radiant than a banqueting house.

THE DRAMA.

Rev. C. H. Spurgeon:

I see it publicly stated by men who call themselves Christians that it would be advisable for Christians to frequent the theatre that the character of the drama might be raised. The suggestion is about as sensible as if we were bidden to pour a bottle of lavender water into a great sewer to improve its aroma. If the Church is to imitate the world to raise its tone things have strangely altered since the day when our Lord said, "Come ye out from among them, and touch not the unclean thing."

THE SPIRIT OF UNREST.

St. Louis Presbyterian:

We do not propose to exasperate any one by attacking his cherished notion of a spiritual millenium. We most freely admit that this is an age of most wonderful progress, and that never before has the world attained such mental and material heights, and we do not intend to argue that, nevertheless, the world is growing morally worse. We do say, though, that, however it may be accounted for, there is a general unrest, a widespread notion that the foundations are being destroyed, a conviction of the hollowness of the present indisputable progress, an apprehension of the future, something like what Luke calls "perplexity," "men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth."

THE CHURCH A POWER.

Herald and Presbyter:

The Church is a power in favor of law and order. Its chief duty is to preach salvation by faith; but with this is inseparably united the law as given from Mount Sinai. The Christian is pledged not only to faith in Christ, but to peace, chastity, honesty, truthfulness and contentment. His rule of life enforces also industry, temperance, and obedience to rulers. Every particular church is a centre from which go out influences to quiet and purify and bless society. The organization of a church, with a place of worship and regular services, is a blessing politically, socially and financially, as well as spiritually.

THE FOLLY OF MAKING EXCUSE.

S. S. Times:

There is positively no excuse for making excuse—excuses for doing wrong or for failing to do right. A defense of one's course as absolutely correct is one thing. A confession of one's course as absolutely indefensible is another thing. Either of these methods is well in its place. But an excuse for one's course as wrong, but not blameworthy, is never wise, never expedient, never commendable. Yet is is one of the rarest things in the world for a person to frankly confess to error, or to squarely refuse to do a plain duty, without proffering an excuse.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

The pro re nata Presbytery of Central Texas assembled at Waco, February 12th, installed Rev. J. A. McMurray as evangelist of the Presbytery. Rev. S. A. King and Rev. L. Tenney were appointed a committee to visit Whitney and Morgan City promptly, to organize churches should the way be clear.

A note from Crystal Springs shows that our friends there are prospering under the pastoral care of Rev. C. A. Munroe. On a recent occasion, five persons were admitted into the communion of the church; others are expected. Of these five two are heads of families. Another is the second son of the late Rev. M. W. Trawick. We hope that the good work may be continued.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

Rev. A. R. Holderby, of Tuskegee, Ala., who has been seriously ill for weeks is now improving, and will, it is hoped, soon be fully restored to health.

Licentiate E. G. Smith, of Harmony Presbytery will accept the call to Hopewell church. He enters upon his duties at once. His post office address is changed from Winnsboro, S. C., to Mars Bluff.

The churches of Mount Sterling and Springfield, in Kentucky have extended a unanimous call to Rev. W. E. Keller, of Bloomfield, Ky., and West Lexington Presbytery was called to meet on 21st inst., and consider the matter.

The church in Water Valley, Miss., is vacant and wants a supply. Communications addressed to "Presbyterian Elders," Water Valley, Miss., will receive prompt attention.

On Sabbath, 25th ult., Major John H. Stuart, and Capt. Wm. C. Kemy, were ordained and installed Elders, and Alexander S. Walker and Wm. Wade were ordained and installed Deacons in New Providence church, Rockbridge county.—Lexington Gazette.

Items from Central Presbyterian:

Five persons, three on examination and two by certificate, were received into the First Presbyterian church of Richmond, Va., on Sabbath, 15th inst.

Six members, one on profession and five on certificate, were received into Farmvell church, Loudoun county, Va., on Sunday, February 8th. A new elder, well qualified for the office, will be ordained at the next service. The chapel for the use of a portion of the congregation, five miles from the home church, is under way, with two-thirds of the requisite means subscribed. The people are greatly encouraged, and this little church has strengthened under the pastorate of Rev. L. D. Turnbull.

Items from the Christian Observer:

In response to a request from Springfield church for the whole time of Rev. Miles Saunders, the Presbytery of Transylvania dissolved the pastoral relation between him and the Pleasant Hill church.

Rev. Hunter Duppy, who was residing at the house of Mr. John A. Allen, an elder in Mount Carmel church, in Powhatan county, has shared with him in the loss occasioned by the burning of Mr. Allen's dwelling. His loss was about six hundred dollars, of which he has received more than half in books, money and clothing.

A precious season of religious interest has been enjoyed in the First church of Danville, Ky., under the pastoral care of Rev. E. M. Green. At the close of the meeting at the First Church, Louisville, Rev. J. M. Evans went to Danville to assist in a meeting there. The congregations have been the largest that he has seen for years. Up to the 11th inst. there had been eleven professions of faith, and seven accessions by letter.

Rev. A. D. McClure writes from Oxford, Mississippi: "We had our first communion service of this year on the 7th instant. Dr. Craig, of Holly Springs, preached for us with great power. Since our last communion in November, 1879, we have received forty-seven members on profession. A few more will be received soon. A good many of these made profession at our late revival. As a further result of this revival about eighty joined the other four churches. About twenty-five were received by each of three churches—the Cumberland, the Methodist and the Baptist—and five or six by the Episcopal.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

The Second Presbyterian church in Oil City, Pa., of which Rev. D. T. Carnahan is pastor, has been greatly blessed of God. The Week of Prayer developed so much seriousness and interest in the matter of religion that extra prayer-meetings have been continued to the present time, and have resulted in adding to the church thirty-one new members, two on certificate and twenty-nine on examination, of whom eleven were baptized.—Presbyterian.

The Rev. D. R. Frazer entered upon his pastorate as successor to Rev. Dr. Duryea, in Classon Avenue church, Brooklyn, on Sabbath morning last, preaching to a large congregation. During the seven years and eight months of his ministry in the First Presbyterian church, Buffalo, N. Y., 225 were received into the church, and during the pastorate of Mr. Frazer the congregation contributed, in the aggregate, the sum of $181,565, averaging $22,696.—Ib.

REFORMED EPISCOPAL.

The First Reformed Episcopal church of New York cost $150,000. It is now free from debt, and on a recent Sabbath the congregation celebrated the release by a special service.

METHODIST.

Rev. F. M. Kennedy, for some years editor of the Southern Christian Advocate, died at Macon, Ga., of smallpox, on Sunday, 15th inst. He was 47 years of age.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1816, but now numbers 350,000, and has a college, a publishing department, six bishops, higher seminaries and graded schools.

BAPTIST.

Rev. Dr. J. B. Jeter, one of the oldest and most eminent Baptist ministers in the South, and editor of the Religious Herald, died in Richmond, Va., on 18th inst., in the 79th year of his age.

In December last Mr. John H. Deane of New York offered to give $50,000 to be kept as a permanent fund in the University of Rochester, the income of which should be devoted to the education of the sons of Baptist ministers, on condition that other friends of the University would add $100,000 to the permanent endowment.—Presbyterian.

Ladies' and children's boots and shoes cannot run over if Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners are used.

PRESBYTERIAL NOTICES.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet at Laurel Hill church, Richmond county, N. C., Wednesday, April 21, 1880, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The usual blanks will be mailed to all the churches in due time. Let these blanks be carefully filled and sent up to Presbytery at Laurel Hill.

The assessments for the "Presbyterial Fund" are considered due April 1st, and should be promptly paid. Churches which are credited to this fund will be duly notified by the Treasurer. J. P. McPHERSON, Stated Clerk.

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 7, 1880.

Presbytery of Mecklenburg will meet at Dallas, Friday, March 19, 1880, at 7 p. m.
R. Z. JOHNSTON, S. Clerk.

DRY GOODS, CARPETS, &C.—We invite attention to the attractive advertisement of our enterprising neighbor, R. M. McIntire. He will spare no pains to please those who favor him with patronage.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

The Southern Home says: Rev. Wm. S. Lacy, of Eastern North Carolina, has been elected to deliver the annual address before the Alumni Association at Davidson College, during the commencement next June, and has signified his acceptance. Mr. Lacy is a fluent speaker and a gentleman of culture and scholarly ability. We are satisfied he will make an unusually acceptable and entertaining oration.

Mr. Richardson of Philadelphia will this week commence the manufacture of stone pipe at the penitentiary, arrangements having been perfected between him and the authorities of that institution. This is a new enterprise in our midst, and it is proposed to take the place of the old clay pipe now being used.—Raleigh Dispatch.

At present there are quite a number of North Carolinians here (New York) who are students in one or another of the fine arts; among them Miss Williams and Mr. Dangerfield of Fayetteville and two Misses Long of Randolph, grand-daughters of my old friends, Hon. John Long and Dr. James Webb. At least one of the four, perhaps more, stands in no need of the pecuniary results of success, and is, therefore, I suppose, drawn by pure love to wield the pencil.—H., in Hale's Weekly.

Judge A. C. Avery, of the Superior Court, has, at the suit of stockholders, granted an injunction restraining Wallace W. Rollins, President, and the directors of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, from transferring or disposing of the effects of said Company, with an order to show cause, on the 27th inst., why a receiver should not be appointed.

Wilmington contributed $927 to the Irish relief fund. It has been forwarded to the Mansion House Committee, Dublin.

The richest, youthful heiress of the day in England is Miss Maynard, grand-daughter of Viscount Maynard. She has £20,000 a year in lands and large accumulations of money.

The Raleigh Observer learns that the members of the law classes of the late Chief Justice Pearson will this spring erect a monument to his memory at Oakwood Cemetery here. The cost of the memorial will be $2,500, and it will be one of the handsomest in the State.

The United States had twenty-three miles of railroad in 1830; at the end of 1878 she had 81,955 miles.

As near as can be ascertained from the most reliable estimates attainable, not far from 150,000,000 of paper collars, or rather cloth-faced paper collars—for no other kind than this latter are now made or called for—are annually manufactured in the United States.

The Chinese statesman, Shen-Pao-Chen, an honest but cruel viceroy of Liang Kiang, a man worth $2,000,000, has just died. During four years he ordered the decapitation of 4,000 persons.

The farm products of Illinois for the year 1879 amount to $200,000,000; said to be double the product of all the gold and silver mines of the United States.

Two horses belonging to a Mr. Zimmerman died in the lower part of Burke county a few days ago, having marked signs of hydrophobia. They champed the logs of the stable, foamed at the mouth, and manifested many of the usual symptoms of the disease.—Carolinian.

Hale's Weekly says of the late William B. Meares: He was a graduate of the University of North Carolina in the large class of 1825. Among his classmates were Walter Alves, William E. Anderson, William J. Bingham, Joseph Gorrell, John H. Haughton, James Martin, James Moore, William A. Wright, and others, who, living and dead, have made for themselves records of honor and usefulness as he made.

A party of capitalists are now making arrangements to start in Oxford at an early day an extensive sassafras oil works.—Oxford Torchlight.

Unless the food is properly prepared in the stomach it becomes corrupt and poisons the system It is intended to nourish. Dyspepsia, and its accompaniments are Bad Breath, Headache, Constipation, Jaundice, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Depression of Spirits or the blues, and a hundred other symptoms. Simmons' Liver Regulator is the best remedy ever discovered for these ailments. It acts mildly, effectually, and, being a simple vegetable compound, can do no injury. "My wife has suffered for many years with Indigestion and Dyspepsia. I must admit after trying everything else recommended to me, I tried your Regulator—in three days after taking it according to the directions (teaspoonful after each meal), she has been in perfect health; she does not suffer at all and can eat anything she wants without any of her previous symptoms.
"W. C. SUBERS, Jeweler, Bainbridge, Ga."

Those complaining of Sore Throat, hoarseness or "hacking cold," should use "Brown's Bronchial Troches." The effect is extraordinary, particularly when used by singers and speakers for clearing the voice.

MARRIED.

No notice of a marriage or death will be inserted unless accompanied by a responsible name, which is wanted not for publication but as a guaranty of good faith.

In Richmond county, at the residence of Mrs. E. McNeill, Feb. 4th, by Rev. John H. Coble, Rev. A. N. FERGUSON, pastor of Laurel Hill church, and Miss CATTIE McKAY, daughter of the late Maj. John McNeill.

DIED.

Obituary notices must be paid for in advance The first ten lines are inserted free. The excess over ten lines is charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. Correspondents can ascertain what an obituary will cost by counting eight words to a line, and multiplying each line by ten cents.

In Robeson county, N. C., February 7th, 1880, FANNY BRYAN, wife of Thos. B. Russell, aged 30 years and 13 days.

The subject of this notice was the daughter of Benj. F. Havens, Esq., of Washington, N. C. She was married in February, 1870, and had lived in Robeson county up to the time of her death. Snatched suddenly from the bosom of her family by the "grim messenger, Death," with scarcely any warning to her family and friends, her death has been a shock, from which none have yet completely rallied. Her career of usefulness just begun, her future bright with many happy anticipations, a growing family of four children to receive her maternal care and pleasant instruction, it would seem that "death lies upon her like an untimely frost." She was a woman of exceptionally rare virtues and of exemplary character, quiet but firm and cheerful, dignified but unostentatious and pleasant, affectionate but not demonstrative. A devoted, anxious and generous mother, a considerate and affectionate wife, a dutiful and grateful daughter, she was the pride of her family and the idol of their hearts. Her noble qualities of mind and heart had won for her the esteem and admiration of her friends; she commanded and deserved the respect of her equals as well as her inferiors, and hence was able to wield an influence for good over all upon whom it was her privilege and pleasure to exert it.

She had enlisted in the cause of Christ, and was an active, zealous and influential member of the Presbyterian (Centre) Church. In the death of such an one may we have the comfort and consolation of feeling that she has been translated from earth to heaven. Peace to her ashes. B.

Benefactors.

When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were sceptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.

An Important Personal Item,

Charles S. Prentice, of Toledo, Ohio, went to Paris and thence to England to be treated of Bright's disease, and after the best physicians of both countries had done what they could for him, gave up in despair and returned to America to die Here he received further treatment from other skillful physicians without benefit, and while "listlessly lingering in pain and anguish," heard of the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, took it, and was completely cured in a few weeks.

Honesty is the best policy in medicine as well as in other things. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a genuine preparation of that unequaled medicine and blood purifier, decidedly superior to the poor imitations heretofore in market. Trial proves it.

WILMINGTON MARKET
DURING WEEK
ENDING FEBRUARY 25.

THE attention of all persons interested is called to the fact that strict personal attention is given to the collection of the necessary information, and the careful preparation of our MARKET REPORT, so as to give a correct general review of transactions and prices, for the week ending each Tuesday morning.

Monday being observed as Washington's birthday there were no transactions in naval stores or cotton.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE—On Wednesday sales were made at 43 cents, on Thursday price advanced to 44 cents, and Market has since remained steady at these figures.

ROSIN—On Wednesday Strained $1 17½ and Good Strained $1 20; on Thursday, price of latter quality advanced to $1 22½. Prices have since been steady, at figures last named. Sales No. 2@Extra No. 2 at $1 25@$1 35; Low No. 1 at $1 50.

CRUDE TURPENTINE—Has been steady throughout at $1 55 for Hard and $2 55 for Yellow Dip.

TAR—Sales of receipts have been made day by day at $1 10 per barrel.

COTTON—Small sales were made on Wednesday at 12¾ cents for Middling. Since, Market has been unsettled and prices nominal.

CORN—Quiet at 67 cents per bushel for White.

TIMBER—The sales have been at prices ranging from $5 00 to $12 00, and extra sizes and lengths—ship timber—will bring a higher price. During the late freshet 5,000,000@6,000,000 feet of timber have been received and readily sold. Prices are now 35 to 40 per cent. than at the corresponding season last year. The demand continues good, and heart timber would be readily taken on basis given above.

THE PACIFIC
GUANO COMPANY.

This Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was chartered in 1865.

The stock was taken by a few of the largest and wealthiest merchants in Boston and New York, who still direct and control the Company.

The Works, situated at Woods' Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., are the largest and most complete of the kind in the United States.

The Company owns several large deposits of Phosphate, which it works, and having acid chambers, manufactures its own Oil of Vitrol.

The Company employs and consults with several of the leading chemists and most progressive vegetable physiologists in the country.

With all these advantages—viz: long experience, ample capital, large works, splendid machinery, extensive deposits, and the best scientific ability, the Company can and does offer a Fertilizer at the lowest possible price.

By reason of the liberal policy of the Company, as well as the intrinsic value of its principal brand, SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, has become, unquestionably, the most popular Fertilizer in the United States, its sale extending from Maine to Texas.

It would be a work of superogation for us to do more than simply call attention to the fact that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO will be offered this (the fifteenth Spring) season for sale at all points in North Carolina, because there is no manufactured Guano as long, as widely, and certainly none more favorably known, than this brand.

We therefore will devote but a few lines to a description of this popular article, preferring that others should testify from their own practical experience as to its value.

It is proper, however, that we should call attention to a comparative analysis of Fertilizers sold in North Carolina, published in 1878, by Prof. Ledoux, the State Chemist of North Carolina, who places SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO among the very highest grades known.

Such an endorsement of SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, confirmed as it is by Hon. L. L. Polk, the Commissioner of Agriculture, under whose auspices the analysis was published, is certainly worthy of note.

This year SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is equal, in every respect, to what it was in 1879.

It is manufactured by the same Company, under the same formula, using the same materials, and hence must give the same splendid analysis as that published by Prof. Ledoux.

It is in fine physical condition.

It is packed in new, clean bags, each bag containing 200 pounds.

The analysis is stenciled on each bag, as required by law.

Many Testimonials as to its great virtue and curative powers have been received, but the remedy itself is its best recommendation.
The Late ELD. BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,
The gifted evangelist, and earnest, true-hearted Christian gentleman, says, of this great Remedy, in the American Christian Review, of October 28th, 1876:
"We call attention to 'DOBYNS' SURE CURE' as a voluntary thing, and not for pay. We have been troubled with Catarrh of the head for the last ten years, and now, after using the 'SURE CURE' about three months, can truly say that we feel about free from the entire trouble in the head. We have also given the 'SURE CURE' to others—as we have been in public nearly all the time—and it has invariably given relief."
"I know that I am doing a public favor to the thousands who are suffering from Catarrh by adding my testimonial to its value." (Elder) W. K. PENDLETON, Pres. Bethany College, W. Va.—Nov. 3, 1879.
"It will afford me unfeigned pleasure to recommend your 'SURE CURE' to my friends". (Elder) ROBERT GRAHAM, Pres. Bible College, Lexington, Ky.—Aug. 14, 1879.
"I have been using your 'SURE CURE,' and it will do all you claim for it. I recommend it wherever I go. (Elder) D. T. WRIGHT, Chillicothe, Mo.—Nov. 4, 1879.
"Believing in its excellency, as I do, I shall recommend it everywhere I go." (Rev.) W. H. MILBURN, Jacksonville, Ill.—Oct. 4, 1879.
"I have given your 'SURE CURE' a thorough trial, and am now ready to personally recommend it." (Elder) C. C. CLINE, State Sunday School Evangelist, Louisville, Ky.—Nov. 17, 1879.
"Five years ago I paid a Cincinnati Physician fifty dollars for treating that which your dollar box has already completely mastered. I advise the afflicted to send for the 'SURE CURE' at once." THOMAS MUNNELL, Mt. Sterling, Ky.—Oct. 9, 1879.
OVER 10,000 SUCH TESTIMONIALS HAVE BEEN RECEIVED by us, and will be cheerfully shown to anyone.
OUR TERMS:—We express or mail "DOBYNS' SURE CURE" to any part of the United States for One Dollar per Single Box, or three Boxes for Two Dollars. Druggists and dealers will be furnished with wholesale prices on application.

FOR THE FAMILY.

The Church Spider.

Two spiders—so the story goes—
Upon a living bent,
Entered a meeting-house one day,
And hopefully were heard to say,
"Here we shall have at least fair play,
With nothing to prevent."

Each chose his place and went to work;
The light webs grew apace;
One on the sofa spun a thread,
But shortly came the sexton dread
And swept him off, and so, half dead,
He sought another place.

"I'll try the pulpit next," said he;
"There surely is a prize;
The desk appears so neat and clean,
I'm sure no spider there has been;
Besides, how often have I been
The pastor brushing flies!"

He tried the pulpit, but, alas!
His hopes proved visionary;
With dusting-brush the sexton came
And spoiled his geometric game,
Nor gave him time nor space to claim
The right of sanctuary.

At length, half-starved and weak and lean,
He sought his former neighbor,
Who now had grown so sleek and round,
He weighed the fraction of a pound,
And looked as if the art he'd found
Of living without labor.

"How is it friend," he asked, "that I
Endure such thumps and knocks,
While you have grown so very gross?"
"'Tis plain," he answer'd—"not a loss
I've met since first I spun across
The contribution-box!"

Neatness.

A STORY FOR LITTLE GIRLS.

"I'm real glad I didn't live in old times, Old Testament times," said Daisy.

Little Mag looked up from her work inquiringly.

A basket of clothes to be mended was upon the chair between the two little sisters, and beside each was a small work-box.

"You see," continued Daisy, "it says, 'he rent his clothes,' or, they 'rent their clothes.' It seems to me that whenever they had anything to trouble them in Scripture times, instead of crying as we do, they just went about in a frantic way and tore their clothes. Wasn't it silly?"

"Perhaps they didn't have to mend them afterwards," was Mag's reply. She did not mind the rents half so much as the repairing.

"Dear me, what a flutter of rags they must have been in, then," said Daisy, looking with dismay at a dress with the pocket half torn off; mother had laid it upon the top of the basket to be mended.

"Do you suppose they made their little girls mend 'their garments,' or did they go about with the rags flattering in the wind like old Nance Smith?"

Daisy made no reply for the good reason that she was thinking of something else. Not hearing what Mag said the little girls of Old Testament times did not receive the sympathy which under the circumstances she might, as a fellow-sufferer, have offered.

Mag answered her own question. "They didn't have needles and thimbles and spools of cotton in those times. If those children only knew what it saved them not to have such things!" and Mag looked longingly out of the window towards the swing in the garden, where the neighbor's children were waiting for the two sisters to join them.

"What are you thinking about Daisy?" inquired Mag, seeing her sister laugh without any apparent cause.

Daisy was leaning over the half-darned stocking she held over her small fist, quite convulsed with laughter, and was for sometime utterly unable to reply. Then she straightened herself up again, and tossing back the hair which had fallen over her eyes, running the semi-circular comb once or twice through it before it was fastened to suit, she looked up at Mag.

"I'll tell you, what let's do!" she said, her eyes full of merriment.

"Well?"

"The next time we don't like anything, instead of crying let's tear our clothes."

"You little goose! Mamma'll make you mend them. That's all you'll get by it."

And disgusted at finding no better proposition, when she had expected to hear "something funny," Mag snipped off her thread from the finished work with as much energy as if she meant it to express the disappointment she felt.

"I think Benny must have come to grief when he tore this apron!" she exclaimed, picking up next from the basket a check apron torn almost across.

There was a tap on the window from a small switch held by a hand on the ground below.

"It's Bessie White. You're nearest the window, tell her we'll soon be there," said Daisy.

Mag leaned over the window-sill. "We'll soon be through," she said.

"There's an organ-man and a monkey coming!" said the child from the garden below.

"It's a shame that we have so much mending to do. Whoever tears clothes ought to mend them. I'm going. Good-bye."

Daisy threw down the half-finished work, and Mag followed her example. Both children ran out to see the monkey. They thought no more of the work-basket nor the neglected work.

Mother, who came in soon after this, finished the mending and put away the clothes. Mother also put away the two work-boxes.

A week after this, Daisy was gathering blackberries and tore a long rent in her overskirt, and Mag, who had a fall about the same time, caught her foot in the hem of her dress and tore it off the facing, but the work-boxes with which to repair the injury were to where to be found. Strange to say, [illegible] and their other school dresses, [illegible] wearing their best.

They pinned up the rents, and said nothing about the matter. Mag, who was always tripping over something, [illegible] some obtrusive knob, being a little girl who was fond of romping, began to look before the close of the week, as she had said of others, "like a flutter of rags," but mother made no remarks on her appearance.

Happening to see "Nance Smith" pass along the road, the two girls looked down at their own torn dresses and then at the miserable, shiftless beggar-woman, and they both blushed. Things were beginning to look serious.

"This is the man all tattered and torn," shouted little Benny, quoting from "The house that Jack built."

The girls thought he was pointed in his remark, but Benny had not even noticed their dresses.

"Daisy, my dear, you have torn your dress," said the school teacher, noticing the unusual appearance of the little girl who was generally so neat and tidy.

Daisy blushed and said nothing in reply. "O, Mag, I'd give anything if I could find needle and thread to mend this rent. If the Israelites felt as badly as I do over their torn garments it must have been real sorry that they felt, both fore and after the act," she said to her sister.

Their mother took them on her round of visits among the poor that day, and showed them the results of habits of indolence and negligence. They saw wretched, dirty, tattered children; they saw men and women in torn and ragged clothing. Everywhere they noticed the effect of "poverty," they said, but mother corrected them. "It's not poverty," she said, "the poor are not necessarily ragged and dirty. It is the result of idleness and negligence."

Their mother took them after this to abodes of poverty, but where at the same time everything was neat, clean and tidy.

That night this wise mother and her two little girls talked over the matter together. She showed them how unjust she would be to their best interests if she allowed them to grow up with habits of indolence; if she neglected to teach them how to sew and mend, and have a knowledge of all the little things which make our homes pleasant.

As these were sensible little girls they saw the force of what was said; and sorrowful for having pained this good mother, they promised to do better in the future.

When their mother brought out their work-boxes from the high shelf on which she had hidden them, they sat down to mend their dresses with a willingness which a week before would have seemed to them impossible.

If there are any little girls among our readers who are not willing to learn to sew and to mend, we advise them to observe the tattered children in the street, and ask themselves how they should like to present such an appearance. But you say, "We do not have to mend our own clothing."

It would be well for you to to learn how to do it, for then you might teach some poor street child. if God has so blest you—all the more, as a debt of gratitude, should you help those who are poorer and more ignorant than yourself.

Even if you are not obliged to mend your own clothes, it would be wisdom on your part to learn, for there will probably come some time in your life when you would be very glad of the knowledge.—Christian Intelligencer.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Light-Houses.

Sometime ago the Professor wrote about the life-saving stations on our coast, and the means they employ to bring shipwrecked sailors safely to land. This week he proposed to talk about another life-saving institution much older than the coast service, and to which, in fact the coast service is secondary in importance. It is only within a few years that the coast service has been established, but lighthouses—for this is the Professor's topic—date back so far that the Professor himself can scarcely remember the first one.

The first lighthouses were no doubt nothing more than bon-fires lighted on the tops of cliffs overlooking the sea, to warn ships away from the dangerous neighborhood; and these for the time and place answered the purpose quite as well as many of the later inventions do. But cliffs are not the only perils to which ships are exposed. There are shoals and reefs on which vessels are liable to run aground or to be dashed in pieces, and on which bon-fires cannot be lit, or, if they could, would not show at any great distance. On these it became necessary to build elevated towers, which should take the place of a cliff and send out the warning light. So you will find that the first lighthouse of which there is any account in history was a construction of this kind. And it was such a novelty at that time, and so large and beautiful, that it became one of the seven wonders of the world.

This remarkable structure was built by Ptolemy Philadelphus, King of Egypt, about 270 years before Christ. It occupied the small island of Pharos, at the entrance of the harbor of Alexandria. At the base it was 400 feet square, so that the ground which it covered must have been about one-half as large as Washington Square in New York city. No doubt, besides the light-house tower, which rose to the great height of 450 feet, it included fortifications for the defense of the harbor, and looked as formidable as it was magnificent. The material used was white marble; the tower itself was in the shape of a pyramid, and from its narrow apex blazed every night the fiery signal; and the amount of money expended on the work was $850,000. The story is told that the architect, Sostratus, being commanded to cut in the marble an inscription stating that Ptolemy was the builder, was cunning enough to cut it, not in the marble, but in cement, underneath which he had cut his own name in the stone, so that by and by, when both he and Ptolemy were dead and the cement had worn away, men should know that it was he and not Ptolemy who was entitled to the credit of the work. And so it turned out; and to this day the Pharos is known as the work of Sostratus, whereas but for this precaution his name might have been lost. How long the cement lasted the Professor does not know, but the tower itself endured for 1,600 years, or until the beginning of the fourteenth century after Christ, when, for some reason or other, it was destroyed.

Another of the wonders of the world—the Colossus of Rhodes—served the use of a light-house. This was a gigantic figure of Apollo, made of bronze, 120 feet high, standing over the narrow entrance to the port of Rhodes. The tradition runs that the figure held in its right hand a torch which was reached by a passage way through the arm, and at the end of which fires were lit every night. A very good notion of what this may have been can be gotten from the immense hand and arm in Madison Square, New York, which some day or other is to form part of the colossal statue of Liberty in New York harbor, and which is to serve in the same way the purpose of a light-house.

After the building of the Pharos of Alexandria, light-houses became frequent. Whenever the Romans sailed—through the Mediterranean or out into the Atlantic, in England and Spain, on the shores of the Bosphorus and the Sea of Marmora—they built their beacons so solidly that in some places they are standing to-day. In all these years, however, and in fact down to the end of the last century, the only means of illumination was the old primitive iron cage and [illegible] light-houses of the time of [illegible] showed their red, lurid, [illegible] fires; that on the Pharos of Alexandria did in the days of [illegible]my, or the beacons of the early Romans [illegible] the light-houses of Sweden and [illegible] used coal as late as 1640. [illegible] the year 1780 that oil lamps began to be [illegible] their light being reflected from [illegible] of silvered copper, and though this [illegible] and immense [illegible] was by no means perfect. It was costly; the silver on the reflectors had often to be renewed, and a great deal of light was lost in the recesses of reflection. So, about 1810, a Frenchmen named Fresnel hit upon a better plan, which was to substitute lenses for reflector; and it is this plan, with improvements and ingenious modifications, which now prevails in most of the great light-houses of the world.

In order to enable sailors to identify one light-house from another, some of the lights are made to revolve, producing a sort of firefly effect, while others are stationary, looking to one at sea like a great star lying low on the horizon. The Professor will never forget with what a thrill of delight in returning from Europe, he caught a glimpse of Fire Island light, and how it seemed to him as though it had been lit on purpose to welcome him back.

Of modern light-houses the most noted is the Eddystone, which is built on a ledge of rock ten miles out of Plymouth Harbor, England. It was on a quiet Sunday morning that the Professor sailed into Plymouth and saw the slender shaft outlined against the southern sky, so quiet and still, indeed, that it was hard to believe that the shaft marked one of the most dangerous and turbulent spots in the world. On that spot three light-houses have been erected. The first was blown down in a storm, the second was burned, and the third, which is now standing, has lately been pronounced unsafe, and must give way to a fourth.

Another of the important light-houses of the world is that on Minot's Ledge, Massachusetts Bay, a reef which lies in the way of all vessels coming inward to Boston. Here, too, the first house built was carried away in a storm, and so great were the difficulties of the position that it took nearly six years to rear its successor.

The material most largely employed in the building of light-houses, or of those that occupy rocks and exposed situations, is stone; but for shoals, where a good foundation cannot be secured, or for places that are not exposed a very excellent substitute is found in iron piles strongly braced together around a central column which supports the lantern at the top. Of these there are a number in the United States.

In this country the light-houses are under the direction of a Board of the Treasury Department. In England they are controlled by a private company dating from the time of Henry VIII., and bearing the remarkable name of "The Corporation of the Elder Brethren of the Holy and Undivided Trinity."—Christian Union.

The Steam Velocipede.

At the recent Industrial Exhibition at the Champs Elysees, Paris, M. Perreaux of Orne exhibited a steam velocipede, which is illustrated herewith. The generator, the fireplace, and motor are arranged behind the saddle of the velocipede, after the manner of the portmanteau of a horseman. Chains or belts transmit motion from the engine to the wheels. All the parts are small, well put together and very compact. The small tubular boiler is cylindrical and has a capacity of about three quarts, and at the sides there are two receptacles containing a sufficient supply of water to last during a journey of two to three hours. The piston of the engine is about one inch in diameter and has a three inch stroke. The whole engine is a mere plaything, and yet, with a pressure of three and a half atmospheres, it has sufficient power to drive the velocipede at a speed of from fifteen to eighteen miles per hour. The fireplace which heats the boiler is an ingenious novelty, and consists of a small gasometer fed by wood spirit. The vapor of the alcohol issues through holes, and gives a flame endowed with great calorific power. The fire is lighted at will, and in a few minutes steam is up. A method is provided for regulating the escape of the alcohol vapor, and consequently the intensity of the heat. Externally the boiler is furnished with two tubes rolled in the form of a spiral, so that the steam produced circulates through these continuously, and is exposed directly to the fire before entering the motor. The steam being superheated carries no water over with it. With a speed of eighteen miles an hour the cost of alcohol consumed is from fifty to sixty cents (this calculation, of course, for France). This is certainly not very economical, but it is very pleasant to have a horse under control which eats only when he works.—Scientific American.

Educated Seals.

Seals are not only capable of being trained when in captivity, but it may truly be said they can be educated. They are extremely sensitive to sounds, and can even be taught to enunciate short syllables. I had one that could say "pa" and "ma" intelligibly, and no doubt with longer instruction it might have acquired other words. This one would also play a whole tune through on a hand-organ, by holding on to the crank with its right flipper. He could also make as graceful a bow as any lady need wish to receive, and he could "throw a kiss" with his flipper with much more ease and grace than many persons exhibit, but while throwing kisses to you with one flipper he would also throw water over you with the other and expect you to enjoy that as well as himself. He would also follow me about like a dog, and was not even discouraged by a flight of stairs, up and down which he would go to keep me in sight. When I was obliged to leave him, at night or any other time, he would beckon to me with his head and neck "to come back" just as plainly as words could have expressed the feeling, and when he could no longer see me he would cry like a child.

Sight, hearing and memory are very keen. Seals do not readily forget any one who has petted them, for an unkind word either, and never a blow, and really, if one had the proper accommodation, he could not easily procure a more loving and grateful pet than a bright-eyed, intelligent seal.—Ocean Wonders.

Alone with the Dead.

When to the silence and loneliness of ocean or river depths are added the blackness and darkness and the dread presence of death, the diver must needs have courage who boldly descends. In the operations not yet concluded at the Tay Bridge, the less experienced divers were by some suspected of succumbing to the terrors of the situation. If there were any human bodies there they were imprisoned in a double prison of carriage and cage-like girdar. It was impossible for any diver to quickly catch at the body, and, ere he had time to think of his ghastly work, to procure by signal, the instant withdrawal of himself and solemn burden to the surface. The work involved patient and deliberate handling of the dead in the dark and silent deep, and few who suspected the divers of shrinking from this task felt brave enough to blame them seriously for it. The suspicion, after all, had probably but small foundation; at least, two of the divers strongly declared that no "eerie feeling" would prevent them doing their duty, and said that if necessary they would be glad to bring up the dead even in their arms. Still the very way in which these men talk of this subject seem to show that below water they cannot face the dead with the callousness of men who are brought into contact with bodies on shore; that, in fact, they have to reason with themselves against a natural timidity. "My duty," said one diver at the Tay, "is to the living. When I go down to find the dead I feel that I am going down to do what I can for the people they belong to, and that it is not the dead I have to be frightened of. I think of the friends to whom the bodies are to be restored, and nothing would give me greater pleasure than to give them their only satisfaction." If death and darkness do not inspire timidity even in these hardy men, it is sometimes even more difficult for the diver to go among the dead in the light of the day. "The horrible conceit of death and night" is matched by the reality, as seen, for example, by the divers at the ship Princess Alice, when they met the cold stare of the group of cabin passengers who had clung together in agony as the ship went down; or as experienced by certain divers who refused to recover wrecked treasure at the Faroe Islands because they saw dead sailors in the rigging and could not bear the sight.—Scottish-American Journal.

There are three fully organized Courses of Instruction:

1. The CLASSICAL COURSE, occupying four years.
2. The SCIENTIFIC COURSE, occupying three years.
3. The ECLECTIC COURSE, designed for those who do not wish to take a regular course but to pursue special studies.

Applicants for any class will be received at any time during the year.

Davidson College is on the Railroad, midway between Charlotte and Statesville.

It does not destroy the draft.
It does not interfere with cleaning the tubes.
It will not choke up, and requires no cleaning.
It requires no direct dampers to be opened when raising steam (dampers being objectionable, as they may be left open and allow sparks to escape)
It requires no water to extinguish sparks, which, by condensation, destroys the draft. Besides, when water is used, if neglected, the efficiency is destroyed by evaporation of the water, and the boiler is kept in a filthy condition.
It is simple and durable and can be relied upon
It can be attached to any boiler
No planter should be without one of them. Insurance companies will insure gins and barns where the Talbott Engines and Spark-Arresters are used at same rate as charged for water or horse-power.

POWERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Presbyterian church government is such a complex affair that the discussion of it calls for all the powers of analysis one may happen to possess. Under the general head of ecclesiastical laws, for example, are embraced the following things widely differing from each other: (1) moral laws; (2) rules of procedure, arrangements of order, definitions, &c.; (3) administrative orders and commands. It is essential in this discussion that the distinction between these things should be recognized. The question before the Church concerns only the first of them.

It is to be remembered also that our form of government is made up of a system of tribunals, no one of which represents the whole in the sense of embracing in itself all the powers of government. The present controversy is concerning the powers of a particular member of this system; not the "Due Right of Presbyteries (that is, of Church courts in general), but the "due right" of one particular Presbytery, namely the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

All church courts are one in nature, constituted of the same elements, and previous to any constitutional limitation and distribution of functions, clothed with the same powers. But in the year 1788 the Synod of New York and Philadelphia adopted for our Church a written constitution, limiting, distributing and defining the functions of the various courts. Previous to that time "The Synod" was in the habit of exercising all presbyterial powers, as might be abundantly shown by reference to Hodge's History of the Presbyterian Church.

After giving some examples Dr. Hodge says: "All this is very different from anything we are accustomed to, but it is in perfect accordance with the Scotch system. The explanation is to be found in the following provision of the Book of Policy: 'These Assemblies (viz. Synods) have the whole power of the particular elderships (Presbyteries) of which they collected.'" (H. P. C., pt. i., p. 138.)

Speaking of the effect of the adopting act of 1788, he remarks: "It is not to be supposed that our General Assembly has fallen heir to all the powers of the old Synod. * * Acts under a constitution which greatly limits its authority. * * It stands in a very different relation to the Church from that sustained by the old Synod." (H. P. C., pt. i, pp. 217-218.)

It follows from this that we cannot appeal to the history of our own Church prior to 1788, nor to the history of the Scotch Church to determine what are the powers of our Assembly. We must appeal to the constitution itself, which defines them.

There is one clause, bounded by a semicolon on either side, in the enumeration of the Assembly's powers which seems on the face of it to give it the power claimed for it by those who are seeking to upset the deliverance of 1879, viz: "The Assembly shall have power to decide in all controversies respecting doctrine and discipline." Taken by itself, isolated from all that goes before and all that follows it in the book, it would be a fair interpretation of this clause to say it teaches that the Assembly may decide those controversies as abstract questions, by deliverances in thesi, whenever it may see proper to do so. An equally fair interpretation is to regard the controversies referred to as personal, and say it teaches that the Assembly shall have power to decide them, in the ways provided therefor, namely, by review and control, by reference, by appeal and complaint. Which of these interpretations is the true one? is the question now before the Church, the most important question that has been before it for many years, affecting not merely the form, but the vital spirit of our system. That the first cannot be true I hold,

1. Because it is contradicted by the spirit of our system as a constitutional system. It would clothe the Assembly with that very absolute power, in this most important of all the parts of government, which it had before the adoption of the constitution, and which it was the purpose of that instrument to limit and define.

The Church has committed to it a dogmatic, teaching or preaching power, in the exercise of which through its officers and courts it may bear testimony against error and immorality, decide cases of conscience, and every court has the right to resolve questions of doctrine and discipline seriously and reasonably proposed. There is nothing contemptible about this kind of church power, as some brethren seem to intimate. It is entitled to all the respect claimed for it in the Confession of Faith (ch. xxxi, sec. ii.) When the General Assembly preaches and preaches according to the word, it preaches with authority, just as the individual minister preaches with authority. The preaching of both should be received with reverence and submission because of the authority that belongs to it as an ordinance of God appointed in His word.

But preaching is preaching, and in neither case is it the authoritative declaring of law in the technical sense of the term.

Again we do not deny that the Church has power, through its system of courts to declare the law of Christ and declare it authoritatively, so as to make it a term of communion for individual members and regulate the exercise of discipline. This power it must have if it is to exercise any power of government at all. It cannot administer the law until it has first ascertained and declared what is the law. That this is the most important of all the powers committed to the Church, we suppose none will deny. At the same time it is power most liable to abuse, as the history of the Church has shown. The monstrous spiritual despotism which cursed the earth for so many centuries was the direct result of the Church's abuse of this power in "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men." And what are the restrictions and safeguards of our constitution for, but to prevent the abuse of it by any one court? It does seem to me that if we make the Assembly absolute in this matter we had as well throw the Constitution away.

If the Assembly were infallible, as the Pope claims to be, if it had Apostles in it to give an inspired sanction to its decrees, then the more unlimited its power the better; to limit it would be illogical and a hindrance to the cause of truth. But the days of inspiration are past, and there is no other earthly infallibility. Church courts as we meet with them in history, appear to be composed about with the same infirmities that encompass each of us individually in our search after truth, having no other advantage than that which comes from the comparison of views among a multitude of counsellors, in consequence of which all of them may err, and many have erred, "therefore they are not to be made the rule of faith and practice, but to be used as a help in both." Sometimes even such means as intrigue and log-rolling and "parliamentary advantages" are resorted to in them as the means of carrying points. And it will not do to say that such things are the indications of any apostasy that is peculiar to our times, for they come from the weaknesses of partially sanctified human nature, and have been seen in church courts ever since the Apostles died, and hence it has always been found a dangerous proceeding to clothe them with arbitrary and unlimited powers. Our fathers saw this, and adopted a constitution limiting the powers of the Supreme Court, and any interpretation of any part of that instrument which is inconsistent with this design of its adoption must be presumed in the outset to be wrong.

2. This interpretation of the clause under consideration would make it possible for a few men, or even one man to enslave the conscience of the whole Church to his opinions on moral questions. Only let him state his proposition, and be persuasive enough to carry for it the votes of a majority of one, in one Assembly, and the thing is done; the deliverance is law, and binds the conscience of every member. The danger of such a thing will not be counted small by those who have observed human nature enough to know that "every man carries a Pope in his own bosom." It is natural in men to wish to have their opinions on moral questions framed into laws to bind the opinions of other people. It is hard to believe that the framers of our Constitution intended to incorporate in it a principle capable of such an application.

BE COURTEOUS.

Some years ago, during a sojourn in the city of Hartford, Conn., in my school days, I heard a sermon preached by Dr. Clark, (now bishop of Rhode Island) on the text "Be Courteous," and I wondered, as the preacher commenced, how these simple words could be elaborated into a sermon. But as he proceeded to paint the Christian character in contrast with that of the worldling, and to show how inevitably the grace of God in the heart must spread its halo over the whole character of the person, softening and subduing, and moulding into beauty and symmetry the rough points and the crooked ways, changing hatred into love, pity into tender sympathy, and harsh judgment into gentle charity, I no longer wondered, but became deeply impressed with the truth that patient, persistent courtesy of speech and manner, can only proceed from a regenerate heart, and that ergo, the persistent want of it betokens an evil and unregenerate mind which has never encumbed to the gentle and holy influence of the Spirit of Christ. Has He not said that "love and gentleness are the fruits of the Spirit?" And if the Spirit is indeed there, can the lips utter rough and repulsive words? or can a rude and ungracious manner prevail where the Holy Spirit dwells? Assuredly not. The Christian may in moments of extreme trial or weakness give utterance to sharp words, or he may habitually lack in manner the polish of the hypocritical worldling; but the persistent ignoring of the common courtesies of life, which may seem of little importance, yet which go so far to make individuals attractive and society pleasant, must prove that something is wrong. And the remedy for this evil is given in Galatians v: 14—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Then it will be easy to obey St. Peter's behest, to "Be courteous." It is a deplorable fact that the refined courtesies of social and daily life are in this age of toil and strife for preference and money-getting, fast becoming obsolete. The thoughtful attention to these minor duties which so helped to smooth the paths and to beautify the lives of our ancestors, has almost become like the old-fashioned daguerreotype—but a shadow of the past. Oh if the generation now growing up could only see how much more attractive and lovable they are when their manners are formed after the pattern which our Lord has given them, rather than after the modern usages which teach that a lady or gentleman may utter a rude and flippant speech, or commit a selfish and unmannerly act, or willingly omit an opportunity to be kind and polite, without imprinting a blot upon the character that is now moulding for Eternity! I do not mean to intimate that this neglect or ignorance of courtesy is by any means confined to the young people. Unfortunately the example of older persons is in too many cases far from being what was enjoined by St. Peter as "examples to the flock" and too many of us seem to forget that courtesy is distinctly mentioned among the Christian graces. Many indeed who stand in high places in society and in the Church, and even ministers themselves, too often injure themselves and their influence for good by simply forgetting to be courteous in word and act. Let us all read again, and ponder the 8th verse in the 3rd chapter of the first Epistle of St. Peter, and see that we remember to be courteous not only in speech and manner, but in the spirit which enables us to "love as brethren, having one mind, and sincere compassion one of another."

A.

A LASH WITH A SNAPPER.

Three saloon-keepers in Chicago were found guilty of selling liquor to minors, and the following is the address of the Judge who sentenced them, as reported in the Chicago Tribune:

By the law you may sell to men and women, if they will buy. You have given your bond and paid your license to sell to them, and no one has a right to molest you in your legal business. No matter what the consequence may be, no matter what poverty and destitution are produced by your selling according to law, you have paid your money for this privilege, and you are licensed to pursue your calling. No matter what families are distracted and rendered miserable, no matter what wives are treated with violence, what children starve or mourn over the degradation of a parent, your business is legalized, and no one may interfere with you in it. No matter what mother may agonize over the loss of a son, or sister blush for the shame of a brother, you have a right to disregard them all and pursue your legal calling; you are licensed. You may fit up your lawful place of business in the most enticing and captivating form; you may furnish it with the most costly and elegant equipments for your lawful trade; you may fill it with the allurements of amusement; you may use all your arts to induce visitors; you may skilfully arrange and expose to view your choicest wines and captivating beverages; you may, then, induce thirst by all contrivances to produce a raging appetite for drink, and then you may supply that appetite to the full, because it is lawful; you have paid for it; you have a license

You may allow boys, almost children, to frequent your saloon; they may witness the apparent satisfaction with which their seniors quaff the sparkling glass; you may be schooling and training them for the period of twenty one; when they, too, can participate, for all this is lawful. You may hold the cup to their very lips, but you must not let them drink—that is unlawful. But while you have all these privileges for the money you pay, this poor privilege of selling to children is denied you. Here parents have the right to say, "leave my son to me until the law gives you the right to destroy him. Do not anticipate that terrible moment when I can assert for him no further right of protection; that will be soon enough for me, for his mother, for his sisters, for his friends, and for the community to see him take his road to death. Give him to us in his childhood at least. Let us have a few years of his youth, in which we may enjoy his innocence to repay us in some small degree for the care and love we have lavished upon him." This is something you who now stand a prisoner at the bar have not paid for; this is not embraced in your license.

For this offence the court sentences you to ten days' imprisonment in the county jail and that you pay a fine of seventy-five dollars and costs; and that you stand committed until the fine and costs of this prosecution are paid.

NOAH'S CARPENTERS.

"Henry," asked the elder of the younger brother, "do you know what became of Noah's carpenters?"

"Noah's carpenters!" exclaimed Henry; "I didn't know that Noah had any carpenters."

"Certainly there must have been many ship carpenters at work for a long time to have constructed such a vessel. What became of them, think you, when all the fountains of the great deep were broken up and the windows of heaven were opened?"

Though Noah's carpenters were all drowned there are a great many of the same stock now alive; of those who contribute to promote the spiritual good of others, and aid in the upbuilding of the Redeemer's kingdom, but personally neglect the great salvation.

Sabbath school children, who gather in the poor, or contribute their money to send tracts and books to the destitute, or to aid in the work of missions, and remain unconverted, are like Noah's carpenters.

Teachers in Bible classes and Sabbath schools, who point their pupils to the Lamb of God, but do not lead the way, are like guideboards that tell the road, but are not travellers on it: or like Noah's carpenters, who built the ark, and were overwhelmed in the waters that bore it aloft it safety.

Careless parents, who instruct their children and servants, as every parent should, in the great doctrines of the Gospel, yet fail to illustrate these doctrines in their lives, and seek not a personal interest in the blood of Christ, are like Noah's carpenters, and must expect their doom.

Wealthy and liberal, but unconverted men, who help build the churches and sustain the institutions of the Gospel, but who "will not come unto Christ, that they may have life," are hewing the timbers and driving the nails of the ark which they are too proud or too careless to enter.

Moralists who attend church and support the ministry, but who do not receive into their hearts the gospel they thus sustain, are like Noah's carpenters.

GROWTH IN GIVING.

Is thy cruse of comfort failing?
Rise and share it with another,
And through all the years of famine
It shall serve thee and thy brother,
Love divine shall find thy storehouse,
Or the handfull still renew;
Scanty fare for one will often
Make a royal feast for two.

For the heart grows rich in giving;
All its wealth is living grain;
Seeds which mildew in the garner,
Scattered fill with gold the plain.
Is thy burden hard and heavy?
Do thy steps drag wearily?
Help to bear thy brother's burden,
God will bear both it and thee.

Numb and weary on the mountains,
Wouldst thou sleep amidst the snow?
Chafe that frozen form beside thee,
And together both shall glow.
Art thou stricken in life's battle?
Many wounded round thee mourn;
Lavish on their wounds thy balsams,
And thy balm shall heal thine own.

Is the heart a well left empty?
None but God its void can fill,
Nothing but a ceaseless fountain
Can its ceaseless longings still.
Is the heart a living power?
Self-entwined its strength sinks low;
It can only live in loving,
And by serving love will grow.

GROUNDLESS ANXIETY.

The "Country Parson," whose "Recreations" have afforded us so much pleasure, relates the experience of a clerical friend, which is both amusing and instructive. This friend has just been admitted to orders in the Episcopal Church. As was very natural, he had taken the next most important step in life. He had married, and on a salary of five hundred pounds had commenced housekeeping. With his income he knew he must manage his affairs with prudence and economy, and he hoped that he would be able to make his year's ends meet. But he expected, as the weeks passed by, and the outgoes were numerous, and the servants wasteful, and the calls on his purse many and pressing, that he was getting in arrears. The quarter ended. Bills were all in and paid. The amount expended was one hundred and twenty-five pounds, which, as the calculation was made, was at the rate of six hundred pounds a year, one hundred pounds more than his salary. He was overwhelmed at the discovery. Visions of the debtor's prison floated before his diseased imagination. He would be disgraced as a clergyman. His reputation in the estimation of his wife's relations would be sadly damaged. The poor man carried a heavy load day after day, and at night sleep fled from his pillow. At last, as one day he was brooding over his forlorn condition, and thinking of the dismal prospects before him, he once more multiplied his expended one hundred and twenty-five pounds by four, and found that the result was five hundred pounds instead of six hundred pounds—just the amount of his salary. At once the cloud on his spirits disappeared. A happier man could be found nowhere than he. I should not be surprised if the next sermon he wrote was from the text, "Be careful for nothing; but in everything, by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your prayer be made known unto God." If his wife's sister or brother came to dine with him the next day, he met them with a cheerful face, and welcomed them to the best dinner the market could afford.

How often has the Heavenly Father thus lifted loads of groundless anxiety from the hearts of His burdened children. During the years of general depression, which we hope are coming to an end, what cares have pressed upon many weary and cast-down souls. The faith which should make practical our Lord's injunction, "Take no thought for the morrow," has sometimes been very weak. Its trial has been great, and sometimes the strain is so severe on it that it would seem as if it would snap. But in thousands of cases it has stood the test. A gracious Providence has been found to be better than our fears. Like our clerical friend we find we have made miscalculations. We forecast troubles which have never come, because they had no foundation in reality. Our fears having proved needless, we thought we should never again give way to them. At last, we said, we are safely anchored, and we shall never again be driven out upon the dreary wastes of waters. But has it been thus with us? When once more the storm has risen, and the rude winds have beaten upon us, have we remained at our moorings? In dark hours of disappointment have we been able to look up and say, "Though He slay me, yet will I trust in Him?"—Rev. P. C. Stockbridge, D. D., in Christian Weekly.

AT THE FEET OF JESUS.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER.

There are a great many times in our lives when our "strength is to sit still." Motion is good in its time, but so is meditation, so is quiet study, so is a patient waiting on God. If a bucket is to be filled from a spout of water, the best place for that bucket is to keep it under the stream until it is full. We soon run empty of grace, and need replenishing, and need to be "filled unto all the fullness of God."

The cry of the hour is for more work. But genuine work consumes strength. The most laborious farmer must halt his team occasionally at the plow and rest; he must go in from the hot harvest field and sit down at his table and rest his weary frame. An army is never in so good a trim for service in battle as after a sound sleep and a morning meal. So every servant of Jesus must often recruit his spiritual strength by sitting down at his Master's feet in prayer, in meditation, in reading Christ's words and thinking about them. The disciples were not losing time when they sat down beside their Master and held quiet converse with Him under the olives of Bethany or by the shores of Galilee. Those were their school hours, those were their feeding times. The healthiest Christian, the one who is best fitted for godly living and godly labors, is he who feeds most on Christ. Here lies the benefit of Bible reading, and of secret prayer. The very act of sitting down quietly with our Crucified Redeemer at His table of love has its signification.

Let us not forget either that to be instructed we must come often to the feet of Jesus. The transcendent truths of the atonement and the new birth were revealed to Nicodemus when he was sitting as an inquirer beside the Great Teacher. The woman of Sychar found a wellspring of truth while she was listening in the hot noonday to a person who told her all things that she had been doing in her shameful past. We need just such discoveries about ourselves. There is spiritual education in contact with Christ. When He says "Come unto Me" he does not only mean that we must come for forgiveness and salvation, but also for instruction and communion.

There are two sides in the best developed Christian. There is a Martha side which is employed in benevolent activities, in teaching others, in going about doing good. Some Christians over-do this side, and neglect the other side. They keep on the go in a careless round of excitement. They do not enough to develop the Mary side of character—or that habit of self-study, prayer, reflection, and heart converse with their Lord. With such there is a tendency of noise, hurry, worry and to superficiality. Shallow brooks are noisy; there are stiller waters that run deep, and do not run dry. The busiest and most benevolent Martha must often take Mary's place at the Master's feet, both to learn His will and to drink in His Spirit. We do not read much about Paul's quiet hours or secret devotions; yet he must have had constant, close fellowship with his Lord, and deep meditation and soul-fillings, or he never could have stood the strain or drain of his public achievements. All the most effective men, the Augustines, Bernards, Luthers, Bunyans, Edwardses and Paysons, have drawn their strength and inspirations from secret communion with their divine Lord. When at the feet of Jesus these mighty men were little children.

In our hours of sorrow there is no place for consolation like that in which we feel His everlasting arms put under our heads. Oh! how his arms do rest us! How soothing to lie where John did, on that bosom of infinite love! There is room for all of us there. We can hear Him saying "Let not your hearts be troubled. My peace I give unto you. Where I am ye shall be also. If ye abide in Me and I in you, ye may ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you."—Presbyterian.

A FINE POINT.

An illustration of the working of rabbinical rules in Jewish daily life is afforded by those for the proper observance of the Sabbath. In Exodus xvi: 5 it is commanded that food for the Sabbath be prepared on the sixth day, no doubt with the design that the rest of the servant should be as sacred as that of her master or mistress. The rabbis, pondering this command, raised the question whether an egg which a hen had laid on a Sabbath could be eaten on the sacred day, and decided it by a strict negative, if it had been laid by a hen kept to lay eggs, because in that case it was the result of work begun a week day and brought to an end on the Sabbath. On this the rabbis were unanimous. But how would it be if the hen were one intended not to lay eggs but for eating, and how if a Sabbath and a feast day, observed as a Sabbath, should come together? On this point Shammai, one of the two great rabbis of the day, was disposed to be liberal, and decided that it was lawful to eat the egg of a hen, itself destined to be eaten, on whichever day the egg had been laid. But Hillel, the other great rabbi, argued as follows: "Since the egg has come to maturity on a Sabbath or feast day, and is therefore of unlawful origin, it is not allowed to make use of it, and though it would be lawful to make use of the egg of such a hen laid on a feast day or Sabbath, not followed or preceded by another similarly sacred day, yet it must not be eaten if two such days come together, because otherwise there would be a temptation to use it on the second holy day. And since it is forbidden even to carry unlawful food from one place to another, such an egg must not only not be eaten, but must not be touched to put it away. The conscientious man, therefore, is not to put a finger on it, for that might lead to his taking it altogether into his hand, and is not even to look at it, for that might possibly make him wish he could eat it." Hillel's opinion carried the day, for says Talmud, "There came a voice from heaven saying, 'The words of both are the words of the living God, but the rule of the school of Hillel is to be followed.'"—Geike's Life of Christ.

THE POWER OF GRACIOUS HABITS.

The older theologians and preachers in dealing with the affections and conduct were more practical than we are, and in the list of these practical things they talked much of the power of the gracious habits in the renewed soul. In this phrase is contained the secret of a sanctified, useful, glorious and glorified life. God's sovereign grace works in us to will and do of his good pleasure. But this working never becomes really efficient until these divine impulses moving in us are repeated by us until they become not only the conditions of our being, but of our doing. It is not until gracious habit lays hold on our life and directs it that it is a divine force in the world. This habit must assume all the rigidity and fixedness of law, for moral law is but the mode in which divine causes act, and religious life is but the result of these causes reduced to daily practice. Hence a gracious impulse repeated into habit and infused into the very tone of the soul comes out again after its kind in good deeds, helpful by their reflex influence to those doing, to those needing, to all clad in the image of the great Giver and Doer.—Presbyterian.

HURRIED PENITENTS.

It is perhaps one of the most difficult and responsible duties to give proper attention and help to penitents. Especially is this the case when there is a special interest in the person. We are so anxious to see them at rest that we are in danger of urging them to statements before they are ready. Some persons have not yet realized that sense of their state before God which is needed before they are willing to make an entire surrender. Others have not yet wakened to that realization of the nature of the step they are about to take so as to take it properly. And so from a great variety of causes there are many penitents who present themselves at the mourner's bench, or the inquiry room, who are not yet in a condition of mind to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Is there not also too much ground to fear that by the persistent reiteration of the word "Believe" in the ear of penitents they are only bewildered and perplexed? And by constant talking are not many worried and hindered? Then too are not some persuaded by their friends saying, "You are converted, if you would only believe it," to accept this statement and cease their efforts before they have been accepted by the Lord?

It is a great matter to give up a life of sin and be fitted for and enter upon a life of holiness; and whilst it is most graciously and blessedly true that "Now is the accepted time and now is the day of salvation," yet it is also true that without repentance there can be no belief of the Gospel.

Now what we can do is to let our penitent friends know that we sympathize with them: we can quote the promises, we can assure them of God's willingness to save, we can bear testimony of how we were saved, we can point them to Christ, and we can pray with and for them. But in a large measure they must be left to themselves to wait upon God. It does not hurt the soul to wait on the Lord until He manifests Himself.—Christian Companion.

A POLICEMAN'S TESTIMONY.

A number of young men were one day sitting round the fire in the waiting-room at the Normanton station of the Midland Railway, talking about total abstinence societies. Just then a policeman came in with a prisoner in handcuffs. He listened to the young men's conversation, but did not give any opinion. There was also in the room Mr. Macdonald, a minister of the gospel, who, hearing what the young men were saying, stepped up to the policeman and said:

"Pray, sir, what have you got to say about temperance?"

The policeman replied:

"Why, all I've got to say is that I never took a teetotaller to York Castle (prison) in my life, nor to Wakefield House of Correction either."—Band of Hope Review.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

From the London Weekly Review:

A society has been started at Vienna for the study of the history of Protestantism in Austria. The society intends to publish a quarterly journal.

Mr. Spurgeon has lost one of the most learned of his assistants in the preparation of his great work, "The Treasury of David," by the death of the Rev. E. T. Gibson. The deceased has left a Syrian grammar in manuscript.

Forty-eight native Christians, prepared by the Rev. Ruttonji Nowroji, of the Church Missionary Society Mission at Aurungabad, in the Nizam's territory, Central India, were confirmed by the Bishop of Madras on November 21st.

Sir Henry Layard is negotiating with the Porte for the constitution of a Protestant community in Turkey under the direction of a chief ecclesiastic, for whom the British ambassador claims the privileges of a patriarch. The Porte, however, insists on certain restrictions upon these privileges.

It is reported from St. Petersburg that the Commission appointed some time ago to report upon the status of Jews in Russia is believed to have recommended the extension of a large number of class privileges to them, and the recognition of all who at present serve the government as being on an equality with functionaries of the orthodox religion. These reforms have the approval of the educated classes of Russia, but are greatly condemned by the ecclesiastics and lower orders.

A missionary tour around the world was some time ago undertaken by two members of the Society of Friends. The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian hears that Mr. Isaac Sharp and Mr. Langley Kitching have successfully completed their mission in Africa, and almost as fully in Madagascar, and that the latter gentleman has returned to England. Mr. Sharp purposes, after a short stay in Madagaster, to proceed to Australia, and thence return home by way of Australia.

A novel ecclesiastical movement has been set on foot at Brighton by the Bishop of Chichester, the clergy having, under his lordship's direction, commenced a ten days' mission against the frivolities and immoralities of the age. Those engaged in the work, which consists of services being conducted daily in the churches throughout the town, come from all parts of the kingdom. Two or three of the Nonconformist ministers have announced special services for their places of worship during the mission, which commenced on Sabbath day and terminates on Tuesday next. The proceedings were opened by the Bishop himself delivering an address at the parish church.

The Russian Golos, in a leading article, calls attention to a case which, if, as there is every reason to believe, it is true, is calculated to excite great indignation. It seems that in the prison of Snzealya are at the present moment an Archbishop and two Bishops of the Starolbryatsi or Old Believers. Their only crime is that of having held to their faith and performed their office accordingly; yet for this they have laughished in confinement respectively twenty-six, twenty-two and twenty-seven years. They have petitioned that the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Czar's accession would be a fitting occasion for granting them their release.

Since the removal of the sectarian tests which so long excluded Nonconformists from the advantages and honors of the English Universities, the despised Dissenters have proved that their ability and learning are in no respects inferior to the power and acquirements of Anglican Churchmen. All the leading denominations, Presbyterian, Methodist, Independent, Baptist and Unitarian, have already furnished student who have carried off the "blue riband" at Cambridge; and this year it is again a Dissenter, Mr. Joseph Larmour of Belfast, who has attained the distinction of the senior wranglership. Mr. Larmor is a graduate of the Queen's University. In the honors' list at Cambridge we observe the names of several other Nonconformists, including that of Mr. Dale, a son of the distinguished Independent minister of Birmingham. Nor should we omit, in this connection, to note the fact that Miss Scott of Girton College, who has obtained the position of "equal to the eighth Wrangler" in the Mathematical Tripos, the highest place hitherto won by a lady, is a daughter of an Independent minister, Principal Scott of Manchester.

In one of the Roman Catholic cantons of Switzerland the local authorities have discovered a way of defeating the law of the country which permits colportage. "It seems," says the Rev. G. P. Davis, "that even now the cantons are at liberty to fix the conditions under which colportage can be carried on. They have fixed for the colportage of books, at any rate of our books, £4 a mouth as the price of a license! In addition to this every parish has discretionary power to impose an extra tax of from 150 to ten francs per day, which is of course a prohibitory rate." The British and Foreign Bible Society recently applied for permission for one of its colporteurs to work in the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg. The Director General of Finance replied in the following terms: "Sir: In reply to your letter applying for a license to be delivered to Mr. Nicholas Hardy to sell, by colportage, the Holy Scriptures, I have the honor to inform you that your demand cannot be complied with, because licenses are no longer granted in the Grand Duchy for the sale of books other than almanacs and prayer books, and that Bibles in general cannot be placed in this category."

WILMINGTON, N. C.:

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1880.

RELIGIOUS EXCITEMENT.

In reading the reports of revivals made from time to time through the newspapers it is frequently mentioned, and the fact emphasized, that there was no excitement attending the meeting, that everything was calm and quiet, as if this were a great merit and necessary to shield such meetings against reproach. Why should any such necessity exist? Is there no such thing as a healthy religious excitement?

Of course mere animal excitement cannot be too seriously deprecated, and there is little worth in that communicated by the electric magnetism of large crowds and spread by the contagion of sympathy. This has ever been reprobated by Presbyterians, and with justice severely condemned; but to extend this reprobation to all excitement is certainly too indiscriminating. With equal propriety might a sound, substantial, wholesome dinner be condemned, because gourmandism brings the pains and penalties of gout.

When the Holy Ghost convicts a man of personal sin and reveals to his awakened gaze the yawning of an eternal hell, it is but natural that there should be some little excitement in that man's breast. The appreciation of imminent danger generally arouses the feelings to a high pitch. True, the effect is different upon different constitutions, some are calm, cool, collected, even in the greatest peril, some lose all presence of mind and are overwhelmed by the intensity of their excitement. Some receive the saddest tidings without the change of a single feature or the quiver of a muscle to indicate the grief at the heart; others are overcome with sorrow and yield to a perfect abandon of grief. So it is with religious feeling: Some are perfectly calm, others are anything but calm under the conviction of sin. Shall we expect a man whose very nature inclines him to give vent to his feelings in all other dangers and griefs, to be cool and collected, when God shows him the greatest danger that can threaten mortal man? Surely this would be unnatural in him and could not reasonally be expected. The Scriptures do not countenance this indiscriminate condemnation of religious excitement. Judging from the narratives therein contained excitement by no means inconsiderable seems to have followed the preaching of the Gospel. The jailer seems to have been anything but calm when he was convinced of sin, and one can hardly imagine the apostle Peter writing of the revival on the day of Pentecost, and adding, "everything was calm and quiet, and the meeting was not attended with any excitement whatever."

Some persons are terribly afraid of excitement, so much so that they hinder their success. They handle the Gospel like a child does a firearm, too timid to discharge it because fearful of the report and rebound. Such ministers are not willing to conduct protracted services for fear of some excitement attending them. It is needless fear. Give God's weapon full play, use it to the utmost, and He will take care of results. Put the truth to the people in the most forcible and moving way in your power, and put it repeatedly. Strike blow upon blow; if the iron gets hot, let it glow, don't be afraid of the sparks. Avoid all sensational instrumentalities, all attempts to stir up mere animal excitement, but preach the Gospel; preach it much, preach it often, preach it with fervent, burning zeal, as if you believed your hearers were in real danger, and then if excitement comes let it come. You are not apt to be overmuch burdened with it.

REVIVAL OF INTEREST.

Our neighbor, the Southern Presbyterian, speaks of the continued discussion of the subject "How shall we reach the masses?" as a sign of reviving interest, and would rejoice to see the agitation of the various questions involved become general. In the friendliest spirit and in the kindest tones our contemporary intimates that there is danger that zeal may hurry the Church into the adoption of measures which would prove mischievous.

We are glad, heartily glad, that there is a prospect or possibility of zeal in the matter, for as yet the zeal has not been evoked. We most heartily endorse the sentiment of moderation expressed, and agree with our neighbor generally, indeed, in his positions, but Presbyterians by nature, and by education, do not incline to radicalism. In their case it will, it so seems to us, be easier to abate or control any tendency to extremes than to break the lethargy which enfolds us. With pleasure we give this extract from the Southern Presbyterian, and wish we could give the article entire. What is said of the necessity of earnest and believing prayer we heartily endorse. "It may be that a full and free discussion shall result in the conclusion that all the measures which have been proposed to secure greater success are either dangerous or certainly inexpedient, if not unlawful. And yet, if it results in awakening a deeper concern and a more solemn sense of responsibility, it will be sure to arouse the ministry and the Church to more zeal and energy in the working of our system as it is. Perhaps here is the solution after all. No system will succeed that is not faithfully worked; while even an imperfect system may be conducted with so much fervor and industry that it will accomplish wonders.

On one point all will agree, that the subject calls for much earnest and believing prayer. In our perplexity we need divine guidance. If we are in error, even in our practice, we need the Spirit of God to show us what is right and best. Under any circumstances we need a baptism of the Holy Spirit upon our whole Church—on our ministers, our elders, our deacons, our parents, our Sabbath Schools—upon all our efforts and services. Not by human wisdom or ingenuity, not by devices and machinery, not by learning and eloquence nor by untrained and unsanctified zeal, not by any form of human might or any degree of created power, but "by my Spirit, saith the Lord." More prayer, then, is the great desideratum—the first requisite. Are our people praying? Is there a real and profound sense of our deficiency and need, and of our entire dependence on God, and is it manifesting itself in the prayer-meeting, at the family altar, in the closet? We have been asking one another these important questions bearing on our success. Let us all turn them into appeals to Jehovah."

JAMES LENOX.

In our last issue we noted the death of James Lenox, but only to refer in the most general terms to his princely benefactions.

The lives of such men as Mr. Lenox are worthy of special record, not only because of the deeds done but rather because of the motives of the doing and the spirit and character of the donors. By the presentation of such examples to the youth of our land demonstration is made that vast wealth, by the grace of God, may consist with profoundest humility and with earnest love for the Church of God.

The immense wealth of Mr. Lenox was gained principally by the rise in value of real estate in the city of New York. For the last forty years he lived a retired life, devoting himself principally to the collection of rare books and works of art; a few books he published but for private distribution. While thus retired from the world he did not withdraw his sympathies. His private benefactions were immense, and to objects of public interest he gave lavishly. The Lenox Library will perhaps do more to perpetuate his name and memory than any other institution founded by his liberality, though it carries to posterity in less degree the savor of love that accompanies other benefactions. He was an ardent Christian and a thorough Presbyterian, intelligent and loyal. The Presbyterian of Philadelphia says:

"He may be said to have founded the Boards of Publication and of Church Erection of our Church through his benefactions connected with the semi-centennial celebration of the founding of the Presbyterian Church in this country. His relations to the Board of Foreign Missions were not less important in its beginning, and continued through constantly benevolence to the end of his life. When the Mission House was proposed at No. 23 Centre street, New York, it was a great undertaking, far greater than the effort to build any of the palaces that stand now as monuments of the Church's present liberality. A few noble men and women laid the foundation of the house that looks now so unpretentious, and almost below the pride and needs of the Church to-day. In 1839 Dr. Janeway gave in payment for the lots $2,000, James Lenox gave $1,450 and afterwards $3,750, in all $5,200. His gifts through the collections of the First Presbyterian church of New York to this Board were about $5,000 a year, and from $10,000 to $15,000 a year of personal gifts. It is estimated that his gifts to the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, the Phillipps Memorial Church, the Presbyterian Home for Aged Women, and to the Lenox Library have amounted to over $2,000,000. In addition to this he built two spacious library buildings for Princeton Theological Seminary, and two handsome houses for the use of Professors in that Seminary. Princeton College shared also in his generous gifts. Indeed, the whole of his abounding liberality cannot be told, for much of it he modestly concealed from human sight. It was a noble life, filled with good deeds, and ending in peace and submission to God's will."

The modesty of Mr. Lenox was remarkable. His gifts were never for the public eye, and only such are known as could not be concealed. His name goes down to coming generations associated with those kindly deeds which make the memory blessed.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN REVIEW.

The January number of our Review has just come to hand, near the close of February. Its contents are as follows:

I. The Freedom of the Will in its Theological Relations. By the Rev. Prof. John L. Girardeau, D. D., Columbia Theological Seminary, S. C.

II. Rationalism in the Church versus Rationalism Without. By the Rev. Samuel M. Smith, Washington, N. C.

III. Election. By the Rev. J. F. Gibert, Abbeville, S. C.

IV. The Conversion and Restoration of the Jews. By the Rev. Edward Martin, St. Charles, Mo.

V. The Sabbath of the State. By the Rev. Prof. R. L. Dabney, D. D., LL. D., Union Theological Seminary, Va.

VI. The Diaconate.

VII. Critical Notices.

VIII. Recent Publications.

In article VII. are notices of "A Critical and Doctrinal Commentary upon the Epistle of St. Paul to the Romans." By Wm. G. T. Shedd, D. D., a New England work which contains seventeen Orthodox lectures. The Life of General Albert Sidney Johnston, by his son, Wm. Preston Johnston, &c.

Article I., is especially interesting to the Theologian.

Article II. pleasingly illustrates the fact that we have a ministry able to vindicate the Supreme authority of the Scriptures, as against the rationalism of ecclesiastical regeneration, women preaching, etc.

Article V. maintains the Sabbath of the State as "an institution of natural theism and social morals."

Article VI. is very practical. That the proper trustees of a church are its deacons, representing a co-operation of communicants, and that deacons may (though not of right) as well as elders assist in distributing the elements, are points considered. It is not a function of the eldership to distribute the elements of the Supper: the communicants themselves assist.

The Review ought to be sustained by our great body of intelligent elders and laymen.

A meeting of great interest has just been closed in the church at Henderson, Ky. Dr. J. W. Hoyt, of Nashville, Tenn., has been assisting the pastor, Rev. D. O. Davies, holding two services daily, and preaching with rare plainness and power for more than two weeks. God gave a blessing. The church has been much refreshed and encouraged; and thus far there have been more than forty additions.—St. Louis Presbyterian.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

With regard to "Aramanoby vs. Allemande," which has been a matter of good natured discussion between two of our brethren, both learned in such matters, we are glad to be able to take it all on the broad shoulders of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN. Rev. Jethro Rumple, in his article in January last, quoting Lawson, said, "As to the consonants 'l' and 'f' I never knew them in any Indian speech withal." The types made it "l" and "k." The change referred to in the article was "r" into "l," not "a" into "l."

We seldom see a brighter face or a more sprightly make-up than that presented by the Gastonian Gazette, which has just entered the field of journalism. Geo. W. Clark is editor and publisher. We wish him success.

Our thanks for the very kind terms in which the Orphan's Friend commends us to the Presbyterian public.

Rev. Dr. Charles Phillips has so far improved as to have been able to visit Mr. E. J. Hale in New York. In a letter of the latter to Hale's Weekly a graphic account of the visit is given, as also of Dr. Phillips' travels around the city on the elevated railroads.

History repeating itself has again elevated a Jew in Egypt. The Khedive has raised an Austrian Jew, named Julius Blum, to the rank of Pasha and Assistant Secretary of State. This will recall to mind the advancement of Joseph in olden time. It is said, indeed, that no Israelite has, since the time of Pharaoh's favorite, reached so high a position in Egypt.—Christian at Work.

We are to have the Salvation Army among us. The London Weekly Review gives us this item:

"A proclamation has been issued from the headquarters of the Salvation Army, Whitechapel Road, announcing the immediate advance of the Salvation Army on the United States. The expedition will sail on the 15th of this month, and will be commanded by Gen. Railton, who had been recently appointed to make a desperate attack on North Wales, where matters are in a very bad way. It is not announced what part of the United States will be selected as a landing-place, but possibly Gen. Railton will be heard of before long in the neighborhood of New York.

The Old Believers are a religious sect which has been excluded from all the privileges, such as they are, accorded to all other denominations in Russia. It is said that at this very time there are three persons in prison who have been confined over twenty years—one as long as twenty-six years. The Weekly Review has this to say of the matter:

"A disgraceful story of religious persecution in Russia has been made public by a leading St. Petersburg journal, which in consequence has incurred the displeasure of the authorities. There is a numerous sect in Russia called Old Believers—descendants of those who, when the National Church was violently reformed in the seventeenth century, refused to give up their old creed, and who thus became objects of persecution and oppression by the government. Their religion is of the Puritan type, and closely resembles Presbyterianism. They are stated to be a moral folk, sober and honest in their dealings, and very tenacious of their religion—a class of people quite above the ordinary run of Russians. It is hardly credible, in these days of enlightenment and religious liberty, that men should be imprisoned for five and twenty years on account of their religious belief; and yet that is what the Golos asserts has happened to three leaders of this sect, and they are still languishing in prison, apparently forgotten by the authorities. The paper, for thus reminding the government of these unfortunate men, has been prohibited from printing advertisements for a month. Could not something be done by the British government, which is so continually held up as the champion of religious freedom, to procure the release of these prisoners for conscience sake?

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

We are advised that Rev. R. B. McAlpine has accepted the invitation of the Goldsboro church to become its pastor. He preached in Goldsboro on Sabbath last, and will supply the church until the call is formally placed in his hands by Presbytery.

FURTHER FROM THE BAHAMAS.

Capt. W. J. Potter writes from Spanish Wells, Feb. 15:

Dear Brother: I arrived at Harbor Island about the middle of January, and up to this time have visited but three settlements, for they are thickly populated. I do not wonder at your admiring the work of colportage, for it is a great means of winning souls to Christ. The people seem to be greatly awakened: some have been converted and I trust many more will be brought into the fold of Christ.

The climate here is very delightful. The white sandy beaches look as if snow had been falling here, where it has never been known to fall. Traveling with me I have a converted young man about 18 years old. He has a great desire to come into this work for Christ. I hope he will be commissioned to work in these Islands. Ask your people in your prayer meetings to pray for me in my work, for I greatly need their prayers. Prayer, you know, unlocks the door of heaven.

PETERSBURG, VA.

A friend writes:

"The Old Street Presbyterian church, Petersburg, is enjoying a season of special religious services, conducted by the Rev. Dr. Pryor of Nottaway Court House, the Nestor of East Hanover Presbytery. The Doctor preached for his old charge, the Second church, the evening before commencing at the Old Street, a sermon brimful of the consolations of the gospel. Text Joh xxxvii: 21, "And now men see not the bright light which is in the cloud." Such a stream of comfort from one sermon is seldom brought forth as the Doctor poured out to the congregation on that occasion. Some who came with hardened hearts went away greatly comforted. Dr. Pryor has been preaching this blessed gospel for nearly fifty years and yet preaches with as much vim and earnestness as ever. May his bow long abide in strength.

"Dr. Witherspoon of the Tabb Street church, who has been assisting Dr. Armstrong of Norfolk in a series of meetings, returned and preached on Sabbath morning and evening to his own church. It is understood that Dr. Armstrong will soon conduct similar meetings for the Tabb Street church. Dr. A. is considered in Petersburg one of the best sermonizers in the whole Church."

CONCORD CHURCH, (CABARRUS)

Rev. L. McKinnon sends this capital record:

"The Presbyterians of Concord have paid the remnant of their church debt. Their house of worship and parsonage are now entirely free from debt. They have built both their church and parsonage within the last eight years, and during the same period have twice voluntarily increased the amount of their pastor's salary."

We are advised that a protracted meeting is in progress, at Hopewell church, Pender county. Religious services commenced on Friday last and at time of advice were still in progress. There is considerable interest manifested. Rev. Colin Shaw and Rev. Geo. W. McMillan assisted Rev. D. B. Black in the earlier of the meetings, and Rev. B. F. Marable was expected on Monday, to remain probably until the close. Rev. Colin Shaw preached at Burgaw on Sabbath night last to a large and attentive congregation, and Rev. B. F. Marable preached on the same day at Black River Chapel.

We are pleased to note all revival of interest in our church.

RELIGIOUS INTEREST IN ASHEVILLE, N. C.

A lady, one of the PRESBYTERIAN's best friends, writes us from Asheville:

I give you some cheering news of the religious meetings going on in our town. This is the fourth week, and the interest seems not only unabated, but increasing. It is held in the Baptist church, under the care of the resident Baptist minister, Rev. Mr. Dixon, formerly of Chapel Hill. A goodly number have professed their faith in Christ; twenty or more have been immersed; the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches have had several accessions, and there have been some very interesting cases of reformation, and of return to "their first love" by backsliders. An unusual solemnity seems to pervade the community. The church is crowded to overflowing, there being from 500 to 700 people present at night; and the prayer meetings twice a day are very largely attended. We trust and believe it is a genuine work of the Holy Spirit. Pray that He may not be grieved and withdraw His blessed influence.

WHAT NEED IS THERE OF THE PUBLICATION ENTERPRISE?

The question is asked honestly by some, and the doubt implied hinders the full and hearty support needed to make the work efficient.

1st. Our Church needs it because it cannot afford to commit the preparation of its Sabbath school literature—lessons, etc.—to other hands. We must teach God's truth as we understand it. The necessity of guarding the instruction of the Sabbath school is only second in importance to the protection of the pulpit against erroneous doctrine. Nothing can so impress the absolute need of this agency as a familiar acquaintance with the mass of Sabbath school literature, much of it unsound in doctrine, that is bidding for patronage in every corner of the land.

2d. Our Church needs the power of the press. Every Church—every ism known to the time—uses this power diligently and persistently. The press speaks oftener and to a larger audience than the pulpit. Shall it speak in the name of the Presbyterian Church, or shall it be silent? Shall the Church use, or neglect, a power which becomes every year more efficient for good or for evil? As a Church we have unquestionably a work to do in the preparation and publication of a sound religious literature. Shall we do it? Or in other words, shall we have a Publication enterprise?

3d. We must fight error with the weapons it most affects. The land is full of broad Church, ritualistic, rationalistic, infidel, and licentious literature. Has our Church no mission here? Shall it content itself with exorcisms from the sacred desk against these spirits of evil, or shall it provide and distribute a wholesome literature rich in the truth of the blessed Gospel? Let us not excuse ourselves by saying that others have done and are doing all that is needful, and that we can enter into their labors. There is a field we only can reach, and a constituency to which, and for which we are responsible. We must shield and save our own from the baleful agencies now so active. And we can do it most effectively in this way.

4th. The missionary feature of the Publication work is greatly needed in our Church. Feeble churches, missionary fields, and struggling Sabbath schools, greatly need the help, which for three years past we have been compelled to refuse. Our evangelists, as they go from one weak church to another, should be able to scatter the leaves of life broadcast among a destitute people. The colportage work should be everywhere revived. Every minister in the Church should have it in his power to use this agency.

The work is important; it is urgent; it is a necessity.

We ask, with the chairman of one of our Presbyterial committees:

"Who of us can be content that our beloved Church should be doing nothing at such a time as this—should stand idle, because helpless, while the devil is using the mighty power of the press to crush her enterprises, to invade her own households, to ensnare her people, to pour contempt upon her Lord!"

This great enterprise has been lying almost dormant during three years past, except as to its Sabbath school literature. The question for our churches to answer at the collection next Sabbath is, Shall it not now be revived? Can we afford longer to delay? H.

Rev. F. A. Thompson, of Spring Hill, Tenn., is now assisting Rev. T. M. McConnell in a meeting at Westminster church, Nashville, Tenn., and preaching with great earnestness and acceptability. Five or six persons had already (last Friday) professed faith in Christ, and others are interested. The meeting will be continued this week.

REV. WILLIAM BRANCH CRAWFORD—SKETCH OF HIS LIFE AND LABORS.

BY REV. W. T. HOWISON.

The intelligence of the recent decease of this honored servant of Christ has fallen sorrowfully upon the hearts of a multitude of friends and brethren throughout our Presbytery and Church.

Death, relentless and unsparing, has again visited our Southern Church; and this time a young man, strong and robust, has fallen. Rev. Wm. Branch Crawford, Stated Clerk of Onachita Presbytery, died at his residence, in Washington, Ark., in the early morning of November 15, 1879. On the following Sabbath, November 16th, at o'clock P. M., a large congregation assembled in the Presbyterian church at Arkadelphia, to attend the funeral services and to testify their respect and esteem for the deceased, who had been partly raised there. He was a zealous and faithful minister, and has left to his people an example of sincere and unaffected piety, which will be remembered and cherished. He was one of a class of men and ministers that bear witness for Christ of the beautiful fruits of the Christian religion.

HIS EARLY LIFE.

Mr. Crawford was born September 19, 1851, in Marion district, S. C. It is not known to the writer in what church his parents held their membership at that time. He was the eldest son of Rev. A. L. Crawford, now of Mocksville, N. C.; long known and loved throughout the bounds of Onachita Presbytery. His public profession of faith in Christ was made while his father was pastor of the Arkadelphia church. His heart and mind were early turned to the gospel as his future life-work, and the needful preparatory education was provided for him. He was sent, with many prayers and hopes, to Davidson College, N. C., where he pursued his literary and scientific course of study to his graduation, which he accomplished with success, obtaining the second distinction in his class. After pursuing his theological studies at Columbia Theological Seminary for three years, he was licensed and ordained to preach by the Presbytery of Harmony, in October, 1875.

HIS MINISTERIAL LABORS.

His first field of labor was in South Carolina, with the churches of Midway and Bethel. He was installed pastor over these in December, 1875. In May, 1876, he came to Arkansas and married Miss Frank Stewart, the youngest daughter of David Stewart, who was for a number of years an honored elder in the Arkadelphia church.

While at Arkadelphia he received a call from the church at Washington, which he accepted, and did not return to South Carolina. Of this church he was the admired and successful pastor for more than three years. He was installed pastor of the Columbus church for one-fourth of his time, in October, 1878. The Marlbrook church also shared his labors during 1879. Under his ministry these churches were unusually prosperous, and grew in membership and influence. And the churches of the surrounding country received the benefit of his labors as he had opportunity.

HIS PREACHING.

In his preaching Mr. Crawford was remarkable for his simplicity and directness. His composition was plain and unadorned; always conspicuous, and never inelegant; and exhibiting rather the fruits of study as modified by the individuality of his own mind than any display of learning. His hearers were always impressed by the sincerity and fervor of his spirit. His manifest desire to instruct them in the way of salvation commanded their respect. His manner in the pulpit showed that his aim was to honor his Master more than himself, and he aptly illustrated the saying of the Apostle, "I seek not yours, but you." He never "served God with that which cost him naught." For he was diligent in all his preparations for public service, and his sermons were rich and abundant with gospel truth, and his exhibition of God's love in Jesus Christ were impressive. The truth from his lips accomplished the purpose of salvation, without any extraordinary manifestations. These, it will be perceived, are the facts in mere outline of his labors.

HIS CHARACTER.

His was naturally an amiable disposition. This, refined and elevated by grace, made him a devoted husband, a loving father, a faithful friend, an earnest and sympathetic pastor. He was esteemed by his churches as a model man, and his blameless life, his consideration for all classes of men, his fidelity to the duties of his sacred office, and his wise pulpit ministrations, all combined to clothe him with an influence and power for good. His name is still an ointment poured "forth" among his surviving people. His inner life and spirit, as revealed to his friends, bring to view the sources of his intellectual and religious activity. These are to be found in his abiding sense of duty, which seemed always to constrain him in his daily walk with God. I do not know that I can better close this notice than by quoting a few sentences used in my sermon at his funeral:

"To his fidelity, patience and unwearied industry; to his unambitious and unselfish services in the Church, his people and brethren in the ministry bear emphatic testimony. And the Church and Christianity are enshrined by his life. He was a steadfast man, not so much a brilliant genius, as a man of thorough conscientiousness. * * * Now that he has entered into his rest, we thank God for the manifestation of the power of divine grace afforded in his life, and mourn that we must go on our pilgrimage without his companionship.

Though his death was sudden, yet was he ready. The mental wanderings of the last days seemed to indicate that the dying preacher still preached—still had the burden of souls resting upon him. He would go through the different parts of the service of the sanctuary, and repeat passages of God's Word with a spirit and unction, that showed that he had had an experimental acquaintance with the truths.

"Are there not aspirations in each heart
After a brighter, better world than this?"

Following him as he followed Christ, we shall one day meet him and greet him, receiving from his Lord and ours the commendation, 'Well done; enter into the joy of thy Lord!'"

COLUMBIA SEMINARY.

Has been sorely afflicted in the death of Mr. J. F. Mayne, one of the Senior class. His fine intellect, generous heart, cheerful spirit and earnest piety made him a favorite with all, and gave promise of great usefulness as a minister. For some time he had been in feeble health, but his death was sudden. He was taken sick on the night of the 19th, and on the morning of the 21st his spirit had gone. That night there was a funeral service at the Seminary, and in the morning his body was sent to his parents in Gadsden, Ala., under the care of one of his classmates. It is the first death in the Seminary since the spring of 1861, when Mr. Brooks of Virginia died of pneumonia.

The financial condition of the Seminary is much better than it was last fall. The losses of last year caused the expenses to exceed the receipts by over $200 per month. This caused the directors, in November last, to inform the churches that they could not see the endowment for paying current expenses, and hence they would suspend the exercises next May if they (the churches) did not contribute enough to enable them to meet the deficiency. This action was severely commented on by some at the time, but its wisdom has been clearly vindicated, and now those who most strongly condemned are among those who most heartily approve and praise it, as the only course that could have saved the Seminary from serious injury. The advice, "Tell the bright side and conceal the dark side, for no one cares to pay for a dead horse," is seen and felt to be wrong in principle and ruinous in practice. Since December 1st nearly $2,500 have been contributed for current expenses, about $3,500 have been given to increase the endowment, and over $7,500 have been paid by James Adger & Co.

The following students expect to graduate in May: Messrs. S. E. Bishop, A. M. Fraser, D. E. Frierson, J. A. McLees, L. H. Robinson, J. M. Seabrook and C. L. Stewart of South Carolina: Messrs. J. T. Plunkett, C. M. Shepherd and R. A. Webb of Tennessee; Messrs. F. J. Brooks of Virginia, B. D. Grier of Alabama, J. L. D. Houston of Arkansas and A. M. Sale of Georgia.

It is an unusually fine and promising class. Those who know them feel assured that the churches that secure their services will indeed be fortunate, especially as of late there has evidently been a work of the Holy Spirit among them, causing a more thorough consecration of themselves to the service of Christ. NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Natural Science and Religion. Two lectures delivered to the Theological School of Yale College, by Prof. Asa Gray. $1. Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York, 1880.

These lectures come from an eminent scientist, a professed Christian, upholding the Bible, and at the same time a moderate evolutionist. They constitute an invaluable contribution to religio-scientific discussion, in that they show how far one accepting the whole Bible as God's Word, can accept development hypotheses, meet difficulties of Christian faith inhering in them, and avoid or rather combat and destroy all infidel arguments, supported by these prevalent scientific theories. Prof. Gray may indeed minimize the divergences of certain scientific and religious beliefs, and he rather broad in stating the essential contents of Christianity, compatible with evolutionary conceptions. But his lectures are sensible, timely, instructive and very helpful to the Christian student.

Faith and Character. By Marion R. Vincent, D. D., pastor of "The Church of the Covenant," N. Y. Pp. 376. $1 50. Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York, 1880.

This is a volume of twenty sermons delivered in regular pastoral work by a distinguished Presbyterian pastor. His aim is to help men to clearer views of the divine Saviour, of Christian manhood, and the dignity and sweetness of Christian duty. We have read a number of the sermons, and heartily commend the book, as containing the best selection of sermons we have seen for many a day; with no sensationalism, but earnest, orthodox, practical, pleasantly written, fertile in illustration, sensible, varied, and calculated to develope Christian energy, and build up in holy faith.

The Monthly Bulletin of the N. C. Board of Health, compiled by Thomas F. Wood, M. D., Secretary, is at hand and deserves a much more extended notice than we can give it. It furnishes information as to prevailing diseases of men and of domestic animals, condition of public buildings, sanitary condition of country towns, all of which is capital data for the work of the Board and ought to be studied by our citizens generally A postage stamp sent to Dr. Thos. F. Wood to pay postage will get the Bulletin.

The Nursery: This capital little monthly, published by John L. Shorey, Boston, comes up regularly. It is a grand thing for the very little children.

St. Nicholas for March contains the following: Buttercup Gold; The Swan Song; Longtinde One Hundred and Eighty; The Lazy Pussy; The Teakettle Light; Crocus; Babie Stuart; "Its such work to go up, up, up! But such fun to go down, down, down!" Jack and Jill; Riding on the Rail; A Naughty Boy; Among the Lakes, and many others. $3 a year, 25 cents a number. Scribner & Co, Broadway. New York.

His cheerfulness and patience during a long and peculiarly trying sickness gained for him the deepest sympathy and respect. Over a year ago he professed his faith in our Lord Jesus Christ, and was received into the membership of the Second Presbyterian church of Wilmington, and up to the close of his life he manifested the graces of a true Christian.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

PASTOR.

In his 88th year, near Washington, Hempstead county, Ark., at the residence of his son, on the 11th day of February, 1880, Col. WILLIAM A. CARRINGTON.

He was born in Oglethorpe county, Ga., on the 7th of October, 1792. His parents returned to Cabarrus Co., N. C., where his father had been raised, and the subject of this sketch was about eight years old. When he was about twenty years old he began to teach school, and in the two or three years he was taught the neighborhood schools he acquired an accurate knowledge of the arithmetics and fell into his hands, and, writing a beautiful, bold hand, he made keys to each one as he taught them.

His inclinations and tastes led him early in life to enter into mercantile pursuits. He began business for himself at Lexington, N. C., and afterwards, with his brother-in-law, Edwin M. Holt, Esq., commenced manufacturing with his mercantile pursuits, in Alamance county, N. C., until 1752, when he sold out and came to this State.

He was married to Miss Nancy M. Holt in 1827, by whom he had six children, only one of whom survives him. She died in 1841 and he never married again. He was a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church at this place for twenty-eight years, and how long he was an office bearer in the church in North Carolina the writer has no means of knowing. As a Christian he was humble and faithful in all his duties—always in his place in church when able to be there, and never failing to attend his Presbytery when appointed to do so.

In politics he was a Whig, and for many years the personal and political friend of Governors Graham and Morehead, and at one time the business partner of the latter in mercantile pursuits.

Col. Carrigan, coming into life so soon after the close of the Revolutionary war, his educational advantages were necessarily limited, but these were amply compensated for in his case by those principles of virtue and moral rectitude, which are so characteristic of the descendants of the hardy Scotch-Irish stock of Western North Carolina, wherever found throughout the Sonth and West.

As a business man he was eminently successful in all of his undertakings, having been taught this great truth at his mother's knee, viz: "To work as if he was going to live always and live like he was going to die to-morrow." Although his children were all taken from him but one, and for the last few years he has been blind, yet he was never heard to complain, his language was "God has been so good to me all the days of my life."

He never took his bed until Sabbath before he died on Wednesday, although he had been slightly paralysed for some time before. His sufferings were not great, and at 10 o'clock on Wednesday he went quietly to sleep in Jesus. A. N. C.

Benefactors.

When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were sceptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.

FOR BRONCHIAL, ASTHMATIC and Pulmonary complaints, "Brown's Bronchial Troches," manifest remarkable curative properties. Like all other meritorious articles, they are frequently imitated, and those purchasing should be sure to obtain the genuine "BRONCHIAL TROCHES."

It is the intrinsic merit alone, of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, that has gained for it great popularity.

There is not the least doubt that the terrible frequency of late years of Paralysis, Insanity and the worst forms of organic disease is mainly attributable to the quantity and constituents of the medicines of the day. Take Simmon's Liver Regulator, a purely vegetable medicine, containing all the virtues of Calomel without any of the injurious tendencies so justly dreaded by mankind. It will be found prompt to start the secretions of the Liver, and give a healthy tone to the entire system, without salivation or any danger. When used as a Cathartic it in no wise disorders the system, nor does it produce any nause or sick stomach when about to purge. It is so mild in its action as not to interfere with business or pleasure. Beware of imitations gotten up on the popularity of Simmon's Liver Regulator.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and Throat and Lung, Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative power in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. SHERAR, 149 Powers' Block, Rochester, New York.

15 Pounds Gained in Three Weeks, and CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

Messrs. Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GENTLEMEN:—Please send me twelve bottles of DR. A. JAMES' CANNABIS INDICA, one each of Pills and Ointment, for a friend of mine who is not expected to live; and as your medicines cured me of CONSUMPTION some three years ago, I want him to try them. I gained fifteen pounds while taking the first three bottles, and I know it is just the thing for him.

Respectfully, J. V. HULL.
Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

This remedy speaks for itself. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. There is not a single symptom of CONSUMPTION that it does not dissipate at once, and it will break up a fresh cold in 24 hours. $2 50 per bottle. Address CRADDOCK & Co., 1032 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

OUR PAPER.

We do not forget that the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN is read not only by Ministers, who by reason of training and study are specially fond of profound discussions of religious philosophy, but by both sexes, and by all classes and conditions of persons. Consequently it is our aim to present such a variety of moral and religious reading that the paper will commend itself to all as a popular vehicle of such information and instruction as not only ought to be read, but as will be read by young and old, rich and poor, clergy and laity, learned and unlearned. We present no elaborate prospectus. Any who may desire to know more of the paper, are referred to its friends, who may be found in almost any community, or we will gladly send sample copies on application.

OUR PREMIUMS.

We invite special attention to the premiums we are offering with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN for the ensuing year:

To any subscriber, the paper one year, and Kitto's Cyclopedia ($5 00 edition) for $4 75.

The paper one year and Smith's Bible Dictionary ($4 50 edition) for $4 50.

The paper one year and Cruden's Unabridged Concordance for $4 00.

To any one sending us THREE new subscribers at $2 65 each we give
SMITH'S BIBLE DICTIONARY,
OR
THE LIFE OF ST. PAUL

As a premium for TWO new subscribers, at $2 65 each, we give
CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

To every New Subscriber at $2 65 we will give a MAP OF PALESTINE, 28x42

We have sent this Map to a large number of persons and feel justified in saying it gives entire satisfaction. The publisher's price is $1 00.

The Cyclopedia and the Bible Dictionary are very cheap—exceedingly cheap. And
CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE,
COMPLETE—UNABRIDGED
Being an index to every important word in the Scriptures and the Apocrypha—with full definitions of the Theological and Scriptural meanings of words, and having the texts indicated with the respective meanings. We say this Concordance—the best probably in the world—is a marvel of cheapness. No Christian family—no other family—should be without it.

WE SPECIALLY OFFER
The Paper one year with the
CONCORDANCE,
To any new Subscriber for $3 50.
In all cases we prepay postage.

WILMINGTON MARKET
DURING WEEK
ENDING MARCH 2.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE We quote market firm at 44 cents, throughout; on Thursday a sale was made at 44½ cents.

ROSIN—On Wednesday and Thursday sales were made at $1 15 for Strained and $1 20 for Good Strained. On Friday sales as above, and later in the day one sale at $1 22½ for Good Strained. Saturday sales at $1 17½@1 22½, respectively. On Monday prices advanced to $1 20 for Strained and $1 25 for Good Strained. Sales of Extra No. 2, at $1 35.

CRUDE TURPENTINE—Hard $1 55 and Yellow Dip $2 55 throughout.

TAR—On Wednesday, $1 10; Thursday price advanced to $1 15 and closed at $1 20; Friday $1 20; on Saturday and Monday receipts were placed at $1 15.

COTTON—Sales have been at 12½ cents for Middling during period of report.

CORN—No cargo arrivals; cargoes of good white corn would probably bring 68 cents.

TIMBER—By the omission of a very important word, our last report was confused. Premising by saying that receipts have been exceedingly light during the past week we re-produce last week's report as giving a fair statement of the market: The sales have been at prices ranging from $5 00 to $12 00, and extra sizes and lengths—ship timber—will bring a higher price. During the late freshet 5,000 000@6,000,000 feet of timber have been received and readily sold. Prices are now 35 to 40 per cent. higher than at the corresponding season last year. The demand continues good, and heart timber would be readily taken on the basis given above.

An Important Personal Item.

Charles S. Prentice, of Toledo, Ohio, went to Paris and thence to England to be treated of Bright's disease, and after the best physicians of both countries had done what they could for him, gave up in despair and returned to America to die. Here he received further treatment from other skillful physicians without benefit, and while "listlessly lingering in pain and anguish," heard of the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, took it, and was completely cured in a few weeks.

THE PACIFIC
GUANO COMPANY.
This Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was chartered in 1865.
The stock was taken by a few of the largest and wealthiest merchants in Boston and New York, who still direct and control the Company.
The Works, situated at Woods' Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., are the largest and most complete of the kind in the United States.
The Company owns several large deposits of Phosphate, which it works, and having acid chambers, manufactures its own Oil of Vitrol.
The Company employs and consults with several of the leading chemists and most progressive vegetable physiologists in the country.
With all these advantages—viz: long experience, ample capital, large works, splendid machinery, extensive deposits, and the best scientific ability, the Company can and does offer a Fertilizer at the lowest possible price.
By reason of the liberal policy of the Company, as well as the intrinsic value of its principal brand, SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO has become, unquestionably, the most popular Fertilizer in the United States, its sale extending from Maine to Texas.
It would be a work of superogation for us to do more than simply call attention to the fact that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO will be offered this (the fifteenth Spring) season for sale at all points in North Carolina, because there is no manufactured Guano as long, as widely, and certainly none more favorably known, than this brand.
We therefore will devote but a few lines to a description of this popular article, preferring that others should testify from their own practical experience as to its value.
It is proper, however, that we should call attention to a comparative analysis of Fertilizers sold in North Carolina, published in 1878, by Prof. Ledoux, the State Chemist of North Carolina, who places SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO among the very highest grades known.
Such an endorsement of SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, confirmed as it is by Hon. L. L. Polk, the Commissioner of Agriculture, under whose auspices the analysis was published, is certainly worthy of note.
This year SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is equal, in every respect, to what it was in 1879.
It is manufactured by the same Company, under the same formula, using the same materials, and hence must give the same splendid analysis as that published by Prof. Ledoux.
It is in fine physical condition.
It is packed in new, clean bags, each bag containing 200 pounds.
The analysis is stenciled on each bag, as required by law.

FOR THE FAMILY

Contented John.

One honest John Tomkins, a hedger and ditcher,
Although he was poor, did not want to be richer;
For all such vain wishes to him were prevented,
By a fortunate habit of being contented.

Though cold were the weather, or dear were the food,
John never was found in a murmuring mood;
For this he was constantly heard to declare,
What he could not prevent he would cheerfully bear.

"For why should I grumble and murmur?" he said.
"If I cannot get meat I'll be thankful for bread;
And though fretting may make my calamities deeper,
It never can cause bread and cheese to be cheaper."

If John was afflicted with sickness or pain,
He wished himself better but did not complain,
Nor lie down to fret in despondence and sorrow;
But said that he hoped to be better to-morrow.

If any one wronged him and treated him ill,
Why, John was good natured and sociable still;
For he said that revenging the injury done
Would be making two rogues where there need be but one.

And thus honest John, though his station was humble,
Passed through this sad world without even a grumble;
And 'twere well if some folk, who were greater and richer,
Would copy John Tomkins, the hedger and ditcher.

—Miss Taylor.

Little Blue Jacket.

"My grandfather's clock was too long for the shelf,
So it stood ninety years on the floor," sang a small, piping voice, in broken English, nearly drowned by the harsh notes of a hand-organ.

"Mamma, come, look! There is a little boy, a monkey, and a man with an organ." And Sulvie's mamma went to the window to see the little boy whose childish voice was now repeating the chorus—

Never to go again, when the old man died.

There stood the group, the man evidently a native of fair Italy, grinding out at rapid speed the discordant notes of the organ, gliding without pause from 'My Grandfather's Clock' to 'Pop goes the Weasel," the monkey dancing to the gay tune, while the boy sang, in great less haste, the foolish words:

The priest h kissed the cobbler's wife.
Pop goes the weasel.

The young minstrel was dressed in an old, ragged suit of blue, his pinched face wearing a haggard look, such as no innocent child of nine or ten years should ever have.

"Poor little Blue Jacket!" said Mrs. Marsh. "Here, Sulvie;" give him these pennies, and ask him whether he wants something to eat."

"Thankee; me no wants nothing to eat."

The man smiled a grim smile, and struck up another tune, the monkey in his grave fashion waltzing around the pavement, among the crowd of children, who always miraculously congregate around an organ and monkey.

"Mamma, he did look hungry, didn't he?" said Sulvie.

"Yes," answered Mrs Marsh, "and I fear he was afraid to say so before the man."

Little Blue Jacket came often before the window and sang, always saying. "Me no hungry, as he looked askance at the man; and once while the man had turned his head to jerk the monkey back from the middle of the street, Blue Jacket took a piece of cake from Sulvie and hastily put it in his pocket.

One evening, late in the fall, when winter gives us warning of his approach by violent gusts of northeast winds, that howl and sigh like weird spirits, while the rain dashes against the window-panes and pours on the roof, making wild, sad music to those comfortably housed, and God alone knows how sad to those homeless ones who rove the streets of our crowded cities—there was a timid ring at Mrs. Marsh's front door-bell, hardly noticed at first amid the noise of the storm. Then a louder peal, followed by the exclamation of the family, "Why, who can that be, such a night?"

The door was opened, and there stood a little drenched figure, hatless and shoeless.

"Why, little Blue Jacket, what do you want?" asked Mrs. Marsh.

"Let me in, please. Please send me no way. He get me if you do," the tears and sobs of the boy being dreadful to witness.

Taking him by the hand, Mrs. Marsh led him into the sitting-room, where the bright gaslight and cheerful fire made a pleasant picture.

"Who is this?" inquired Mr. Marsh.

"O, papa!" exclaimed Sulvie, "it is little Blue Jacket. Don't you know I have so often told you about him?"

Blue Jacket had crouched near the fire and was crying piteously.

"Come, my boy, tell us what is the matter," said Mr. Marsh, in his kindest tones.

"Don't send me away. Me will die. He so bad, he beat me so hard." And the old torn and soaking wet blue jacket was thrown open, disclosing the bare skin, all scarred and red and purple from whipping.

Tears filled the eyes of the kind family, and Mrs. Marsh went up-stairs and got a suit of clothes which had belonged to her little boy, Frank, who several months before had left his earthly home to dwell with God in the heavenly home above. Blue Jacket was soon arrayed in the clean, neat suit; and a nice, warm supper was eaten by the half-starved child. The tears and sobs ceased, and smiles lit up the pinched face.

"Now, Blue Jacket, tell us what has happened, and what brought you here to-night in such a storm?"

The child looked around in a scared, nervous way, as though fearful some one he was afraid of would hear his story. "He beat me bad. Me lost a penny one lady gave me—he often do so—and me so hungry and tired, and he make me tell people me no want to eat. He beat poor Jocko, too—he the monkey—and he tired, too, and no want to dance. And me run away and come here. You kind to me; ask me to eat when me sings in the street. Me like you"—looking at Mrs. Marsh—"you like my mother in Italy. She die, and me come over the water with a man and the organ. He whip me so much." And again the sobs burst forth.

Blue Jacket was put in a warm bed and tucked in by Mrs. Marsh, whose motherly heart was touched by the story of the friendless boy. He told them next morning where the wretched hovel he called home was. Mr. Marsh went there to see what he could learn of the man, and whether the tale of Blue Jacket, whose real name was Givo Lugi, was true. The man was gone, and nothing could be heard of him.

A consultation was held as to what was to be done with Blue Jacket. It was thought best to put him in the Home for the Friendless, where he would be educated and well taken care of. He is a bright little fellow; so the matron tells his kind friends, the Marshes. Once in a while he is permitted to visit them, and he is so contented and full of glee, and tells Mrs. Marsh confidently he means to be a good man, just like Mr. Marsh, and will do all he can for boys and monkeys who have to travel around with bad men who play on organs.—Christian at Work

Holly.

Holly is a name which is often, but wrongly, considered a corruption of the word holy. The holly tree is called "Christ's thorn," in Germany and Scandinavia, from its putting forth its berries at the supposed period of the year when Christ was born, and from its time-honored use in decorating Christian churches. This tree, according to a certain legend, was that in which the Almighty revealed Himself to Moses in a flame of fire, by which it was not consumed. Likewise it was supposed to have formed the wood of the cross on which our Lord was crucified; hence it was known as the Lignum Sanctæ Crucis. Many have been the traditions and superstitions connected with this beautiful tree. By the Romans it was dedicated to Saturn, whose feasts were held at Christmas time, and sprigs were sent to friends with good wishes for health and happiness. The Persians sprinkled their children with a decoction from the leaves, to endow them with wisdom. According to Pliny, the flowers were an antidote for poison. Our own Druids used to deck private dwellings with the boughs, to offer thus a shelter to sylvan sprites, to whom none was afforded by the leafless oaks. Holly leaves are sometimes of an ivory white, and when young are of a beautiful pinkish color.—Eclectic Magazine

Captive Light.

A little reflection will show that if a means could be found for storing up light, as heat or electricity can be stored, the invention would be of almost infinite application. To discover means of this kind has been the aim of an English chemist, Mr. W. H. Balmain, formerly of University College, London, and latterly manufacturing chemist of St. Helens, Lancashire, for a period extending over forty years, and the result of his researches were protected in a patent No. 4,152, 1875, for "luminous paint."

The exact nature of the luminous ingredient of the paint is kept a secret, but it is said to be wholly extracted from the common chalk of our cliffs Probably it is the sulphide of calcium, and is prepared by mixing lime and sulphur in certain proportions. The paint can be made with oil or other transparent liquid, according to the purpose for which it is designed. The physical nature of the storing process appears to be that the waves of light breaking upon the molecules of the sensitive salt start them into vibration continuing long after the motive light is withdrawn, sets up a succession of ether waves which affect the eye as light, much in the same way as the blow of a bell clapper gives rise to waves of sound A sensitive surface of the paint exposed to daylight, or the more powerful beams of the magnesium wire or electric are for a sufficient length of time, will continue to emit light for four or five hours after. Of course the "stored light" grows fainter as the time grows longer. After exposure to the sunlight of a window for a few minutes when taken into a dark place it is seen to glow with a violet luster, which is whiter as the darkness increases, or according as the exposure is lengthened. An amusing optical delusion can be performed with it. A half crown is placed on the painted surface before it is exposed to the light and kept there the whole time; when the latter is taken into the dark room or closet, the coin is withdrawn. Nevertheless its position is distinctly marked by a black disk surrounded by the luminous field of the paint, and it is easy to make any unsuspecting individual mistake the sham shadow for the substance. We call it a sham shadow because it is really the ghost of a shadow, that is, a shadow which exists after the body which occasioned it has disappeared

Much interest has recently been excited in the product, and many applications of it are proposed. Clocks with dials rendered self-luminous in this way have been some time since introduced by another maker from France, but we understand that a royalty is paid on these to the proprietors of the English patent. The Lords of the Admiralty have been making experiments with it in a darkened room at Whitehall, and have expressed themselves in favor of it for lighting up the compartments of iron-clads, or for the powder magazines; and two compartments of H. M. S. Comus have been ordered to be painted with it For life belts and buoys it will of course be an acquisition in rendering them visible by night A lantern capable of enabling a person to read or work in the dark can be made by framing a few square feet of painted surface; and the superintendent of the West India Docks has ordered lanterns for use in their dangerous spirit vaults. The virtues of these lanterns in explosive mines, petroleum stores, and cellars, are too obvious to be dwelt upon. Mr. Towers, who has just supplied the German navy with his speed indicators, and is now also engaged in adapting them also to several English war vessels, notably H. M. S. Northampton, has decided to have the dials of his apparatus illuminated in this way so as to enable seamen on the darkest night to read the index. Mr. Hollingshead, the enterprising manager of the Gaiety Theatre, is in treaty to secure the sole right to apply the paint in the production of theatrical effects, and it is probable that the process will soon come into conspicuous use as a medium for advertisements. —Engineering.

Hyacinths.

"We have a hyacinth which, set out last fall, has begun to blossom before it began to run up; it blooms from the bulb. What is the matter?"

It simply shows that you have an inferior root. Hyacinths generally want to be treated as we treat them out of doors. When you plant them you should keep them in warm, moist darkness until the roots are well developed; then bring them into the light. If they are good, sound roots you will have the right flower. Often a root is enfeebled; perhaps it has blossomed once in the open ground. Dutch hyacinths seldom do well after once blossoming. The fact is, a great many hyacinths do not blossom because they are not meant to blossom by the seller, who takes a hot iron and sears them near the root. If an exquisite new carnation or pink is brought out, and if you send to any of the great dealers of London or Paris for a paper of one thousand carnation seeds, and you pay ten dollars for it, what is it? They take common pink seeds and bake them, and as likely as not put one hundred of the fine kind into nine hundred of the baked pink seeds; you can't tell the difference. The result is that if you are very careful you will get one hundred carnations; the rest will not come up. That goes on with all carnations; they don't want to increase the fine ones too fast and lower the price. They increase them themselves but they do not want them increased outside. Establishments will sometimes send out one good bulb and two poor ones; the poor ones will be of feeble growth, and the good one magnificent. Hyacinths, at the best, are apt to be disappointing. They are raised in Holland under high stimulation, and when put into common garden soil they do well for once, but fall off the second year, and never return to their second state of beauty. A tulip will do well for a hundred years if you take a little pains with it. Hyacinths are difficult to manage; it is well to buy new ones from year to year, and throw them away after a year or two.—Christian Union.

A remarkable minister had at one time a church in Clipstone, England. His name was the Rev. John Mack, and he had been originally a weaver in Scotland, his native country. One day in Glasgow he met with a recruiting sergeant, who induced him to believe that if he joined the army he should have plenty of time to read, and thus led him to accept the fatal shilling. His enlistment caused intense grief to his God-fearing parents; but while on service he became a decided Christian. His regiment happening to be stationed at Leicester, he took the liberty of calling upon Robert Hall. For a few moments the illustrious preacher looked at the soldier, but spoke not a word. Seeing Mr. Hall was smoking, Mack took out his pipe, lit it and began to smoke too. When Mr. Hall did speak he was all kindness. Having listened to his visitor's life story, he pressed the soldier to dine with him, and to take his place the same evening in giving the address to the prayer meeting. The congregation as well as their pastor were amazingly interested. Mr. Hall, at the close of the service, introduced Mack to the leading members, and on the following Sabbath requested him to occupy his pulpit. The immediate consequence was that the friends purchased Mack's discharge, though the Colonel, well aware of his value, threw every obstacle in the way. Mack entered the college at Bristol, and, after a brief curriculum, was settled as the minister of the church at Clipstone. Sent by the Missionary Society as a deputation to Scotland, he sought out his only surviving parent at Glasgow. The poor old mother was living in a very humble abode, and failed to recognize her son, refusing at first to believe that this grave and fine-looking minister could possibly be her own child. But he remembered that once, when he was a boy, teasing his mother by eating up the potatoes as fast as she pealed them, she had given him a tap and unintentionally wounded his wrist with the knife she was using. Whenever she afterwards saw the scar she used to stroke his hair and in very tender tones say to him, 'Never mind, my bonnie bairn, your mither will ken you by that when ye are a man" He turned back the sleeve of his coat, and looking earnestly in her face and pointing to the mark, said, "Mither, mither! dinna ye ken that?" She looked at him for a moment, and exclaiming "My bairn! my bairn!" rushed into his arms Then together they lifted up their voices and wept. On the following Sabbath he had to preach in the church in Glasgow which attended. She chose a seat whence she could best see and hear her son. The beadle came to her and intimated that a more retired pew would be more suitable for her. "Dinna ye ken that I am the preacher's mither?" Hoo was I to ken that? But if ye are the preacher's mither, the best seat in the kirk is nane too guid for ye." So long as she lived, her son was able to add to her comforts and to brighten her declining days. Mr. Mack's son is the well-known publisher at Bristol. Mr Trestrail declares that Mack was in humor and wit quite the match of Robert Hall, and that he had also a marvelous power of pathos.—Scottish American Journal

How the Phrase Originated.

This is the origin of the phrase, "I acknowledge the corn:

In 1828 Andrew Stewart, a member of Congress, said in a speech that Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana sent their haystacks, cornfields and fodder to New York and Philadelphia for sale.

Wickliffe, of Kentucky, called him to order, declaring that these States did not send haystacks or cornfields to New York for sale.

"Well, what do you feed?" asked Stewart.

"Why, horses, mules, cattle and hogs."

"Well, what makes your horses, mules, cattle and hogs? You feed $100 worth of hay to a horse. You just animate and get upon the top of your haystack and ride off to market. How is it with your cattle? You make one of them carry $50 worth of hay and grass to the Eastern market. How much corn does it take, at thirty-three cents a bushel to fatten a hog?'

"Why, thirty bushels."

"Then you put that thirty bushels into the shape of a hog, and make it walk off to the Eastern market.'

Then Mr. Wickliffe jumped up and said: "Mr. Speaker, I acknowledge the corn!"

Those Diamonds.

News of the present whereabouts of the magnificent diamond necklace which was presented by the Khedive of Egypt to Mrs. Fitch, daughter of General Sherman, seems to have been obtained from a diamond merchant by the Cincinnati Enquirer. It will be remembered that this necklace was deemed worth $200,000, and Congress remitted the duties, $20,000, for the non-payment of which it was long detained in the New York Custom House. "After this," says the informant, "The necklace was sent to Washington and, with General Sherman's sword, deposited in the United States Treasury for safe keeping. Upon further enquiry, Lieutenant Fitch ascertained that the yearly taxes on the diamonds in St. Louis county, where he then resided, would be much more than his salary, and he once more found them an elephant on his hands. His father-in-law, General Sherman, took pity on the boy and returned the necklace, with thanks, to the donor in Egypt. Upon receiving them, the Khedive wrote the general saying that it was not his desire that the diamonds should be given to any one member of his family, and, having learned that he had four daughters, it was his wish then that the diamonds should be mounted in sets and divided equally between them. These daughters are Mrs. Fitch, nee Minnie Sherman, Ella Sherman, Lizzie Sherman and Rachel Sherman. The necklace was then returned to the Sherman family and mounted in four magnificent pendants, four pairs of splendid solitaire earrings and eight rings. These four ladies are now the happy possessors of four complete suits of diamonds, the value of each suit being at least $75,000. This makes each of them rich in her own right through the generosity of Egypt's late ruler."—Interior.

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

POWERS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

No. II.

3. There is a provision in the Book of Order forbidding a constitutional rule from being established or repealed without the concurrence of a majority of the presbyteries. The design of this provision is to prevent hasty and ill-considered legislation and give stability to our law. Now it strikes us that by so much as a moral law is more important than a rule of procedure, by so much do both of these considerations apply with greater force to our legislation on moral subjects, "questions of doctrine and discipline." If the Assembly may decide these questions authoritatively, in the sense of making law, by deliverances in thesi, then we are in danger of having a body of laws, adopted hastily and without consideration, without any stability, but subject to all the fluctuations of public sentiment from year to year. We are in a position to be blown about by every wind of doctrine. If the constitution is the law then we have a law that is stable, our standard interpretation of the Bible, uniform, fixed, agreed upon. Our feet are planted on a rock, and not on the shifting sand of public opinion. We are subject to a law that every ruler in the Church has subscribed to as in his belief containing the system of doctrine taught in the Word of God. We are not subject to a law that either is or by any possibility may be made up of the hobbies of individuals. And I cannot believe in that interpretation of the clause under consideration that would make us subject to such a law.

4. What strikes the writer as a curious idea advanced by some is that the Assembly, in answering overtures on moral questions, acts not as a court but as a legislature, so that its answers are to be considered not as the obiter dicta of a court but as legislative enactments, and so authoritative and binding as law. We had always supposed that the business of a legislature was to make laws to be applied, whereas the interpretation and application of a body of laws already made were the special functions of a court. If, then, the power claimed for the General Assembly to lay down the law on questions of doctrine and discipline is confined, as we suppose none will deny, within the limits of the Bible and the Constitution, being only a power to interpret these, then how can it be said that in interpreting them it acts as a legislature and not as a court? Our body of laws is, all ready, made and delivered to us by Christ, the Lawgiver. What it needs is to be interpreted, and this is certainly the business of a court.

Still, by some who do not hold this view, any allusion to the practice of civil courts is considered out of order, and a confession of ignorance of the great fundamental difference between them and church courts. The function of civil courts is only judicial, it is said, whereas church courts have also a didactic function. This distinction is not a true one, although, of course, a complete parallel cannot be run between the civil and ecclesiastical courts. Civil courts do have a didactic function, at least the supreme court has. The statutes of all the States provide that in certain cases the executive may apply to the supreme court for instruction on points of law, as was recently done by Gov. Garcelon in Maine. The court answered him by deliverances in thesi, that is, by giving him the benefit of its opinion on the abstract questions presented. He did not act upon the instruction and was not bound by it because it was given in thesi, and not upon the merits of a particular case. The judicial decisions of the supreme court are binding in the particular case decided, and quoted as law in all similar cases. Its abstract deliverances are not binding. The common sense ground of the distinction is that it rarely ever decides a judicial case except after a full hearing of the argument on both sides, whereas the instruction it gives in the exercise of its didactic function is given without argument. Now if this is a good reason for the distinction made in the deliverances of civil courts, it is equally good in the case of church courts. We all know that the deliverances of the General Assembly are often made without any argument on either side, sometimes even in the midst of great hurry and confusion, whereas it never decides a judicial case until a full hearing has been given to both sides. And though the parties may agree to submit the case without argument, such cases are the exception and not the rule. Moreover a solemn charge is given to the members of the court, and other formalities appointed, intended to impress them with the solemn responsibilities resting upon them in the vote they are about to give. It is according to reason, therefore, and common sense and justice that a distinction should be made between the force and authority of in thesi deliverances and judicial decisions.

For these and many other reasons the writer has found himself unable to adopt the interpretation of the clause under consideration put upon it by those who are seeking to upset the deliverance of 1879.

II. The other interpretation which we hold to be true for the same reasons we hold the other to be false, is that the Assembly has power "to decide in all controversies respecting doctrine and discipline" in the ways provided therefor in the constitution, namely, by review and control, by reference, by appeal and complaint. The other courts may pass upon them but cannot decide them. The Assembly decides them, because from its own judgment there is no appeal. We will notice in conclusion some difficulties that have been suggested as connected with this view:

First. We are met with the objection that the Council of Jerusalem, acting as the supreme court of the Church, gave an authoritative decision of questions of "doctrine and discipline" by a deliverance in thesi. To this we reply, that that council differs from our General Assembly in so many other points it would not be surprising if it should be found to differ from it in this also. (1.) It was not a body composed of presbyteries, but of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem. (2.) It was not a permanent court like our Assembly, meeting on its own adjournment; it met only once, and pro re nata at that, during the whole period of history embraced by the book of Acts. (3.) Its powers were not limited by a written constitution.

Again, the matters passed upon by that Council, with one exception, were not moral questions, but questions of temporary expediency—things which the Apostle Paul afterwards, in his epistles, puts under the head of Christian liberty—which Christian people might be dissuaded from on the ground of charity and the preservation of their own good name, but which one Christian was not allowed to judge another in, and abstinence from which could not be demanded as a matter of law and discipline.

And let it be distinctly noted that on the only moral question that came before them they did not undertake to specify. They merely reiterated the general command of God against fornication, without undertaking to specify in what particular acts fornication might consist. The interpretation as well as the application of the law in particular cases, they left in that matter to the church sessions, thereby setting a good example to courts of review and control in all succeeding ages.

Second. A practical objection to our view is that it will not secure uniformity of discipline in the churches: that if sessions are left to interpret the law in the first instance for themselves, one will interpret one way and one another, so that the force of discipline in one congregation will be broken by the lack of it in another. To this we reply that in the matter of uniformity, which is certainly desirable, the element of time is just as important as the element of space; that if one session interprets the law one way and one another, one Assembly may interpret in one way one another; so that in seeking to gain the uniformity of space by giving the Assembly power to declare law for the whole Church we would lose the uniformity of time. In other words, our law, instead of being fixed and stable, as we have it in the Constitution, would be liable to constant change.

Moreover, uniformity of discipline is something which in the nature of things it is impossible to secure. The lack of it comes from two causes: One is the difference of opinion among sessions as to the meaning of the law; the other is the difference in their fidelity. Both of these causes would operate just as strongly under a government in which the Assembly's deliverances were considered law, as they do on the supposition that the Constitution is the law. Sessions would differ as much about the meaning of the one as of the other.

In fact, of all the things that mortal men are called on to interpret, about the most enigmatical is an average deliverance of the General Assembly. Ever since it began to make deliverances about this matter of worldly amusements especially, it has been called on time after time, first to explain what it meant, and then to explain its explanation, until at last, in 1879, it made a deliverance which everybody understands, a plain denial of its power to lay down the law in the matter, and now we are not agreed about that. Where is there any hope of uniformity in this quarter?

As to the fidelity of sessions it is vain to hope that the Assembly could make any laws that would prove a substitute for that where it is lacking. One of the good things said by the author of Ecce Homo is that Christ never condescended to legislate for a lukewarm church. Though he foresaw the time when the love of many would wax cold and faith would be hard to find, still he deemed the spirit of love and fidelity so essential that he left no directions as to what should be done in its absence. Neither can any form of legislation be invented now that will answer as a substitute for the fidelity of church sessions. There is no hope whatever that this much desired uniformity of discipline can ever be secured until all sessions think alike and all are equally faithful, and that will hardly be before the millenium, and then we will have no further need of discipline.

Moreover, discipline executed by a session performing the duties of a sheriff under the orders of the Assembly, enforcing laws which they themselves did not believe to be the laws of Christ, would fail of all moral effect and accomplish none of the ends which discipline is intended to secure.

In advocating these views we have not advocated Independency nor Congregationalism, nor anything of the kind. We have not denied but affirmed the proposition of the Book that "the lower courts are subject to the review and control of the higher courts in regular gradation." We acknowledge that this is a difficult question, and admit the possibility of our being in error. But we believe these views to be correct, and therefore offer them for the consideration of those who may be called on to decide the matter for us in the next Assembly.

MINISTERIAL SOBRIETY.

Mr. Editor: A man may possess valuable, and even exalted traits of character, and yet be destitute of those which qualify him for a particular office. This is too obvious to need illustration. To no office, however, is the remark so strictly applicable as to that of a minister of Christ. That those who sustain this office should be perfect, is not to be expected. But it often happens that so many are their imperfections, so difficult and responsible the duties devolving on them, and so narrowly is their conduct watched, that we need not wonder if some, even of those whose piety is unquestionable do little good in their ministry. I have seen such toil through life, abundant with labors, and yet accomplish comparatively little. The reason was, that some foible or frailty peculiar to themselves, and which would not have disqualified them for any other office, was observable in their character, and furnished matter of continual reproach.

In writing a letter of advice to a young minister, Paul was careful to enumerate the qualifications necessary to success in his important work. Among them he insisted that a bishop should be "sober"—meaning thereby that he should have his heart full of his great work, and his feelings so balanced by considerations of eternity, as to be in a state of habitual seriousness. I propose, in this paper, to consider some of the causes which tend to prevent sobriety of character in the minister of the Gospel.

Before I proceed further, I wish to say, once for all, that in speaking of a minister as grave and "sober," I do not mean that he should be morose and crabbed, that he should mope about with a long face and a sombre look, never smiling, but with a sardonic grin, and thus rendering his presence unpleasant and repulsive; but I would have him a man with a frank, open countenance, genial in his manners, free and easy in his conversation, as well as instructive; and understanding and preaching all the properties of life with grace and dignity. He should be a Christian gentleman:

1. The peculiar habits of the minister are the first cause of the deficiency of which I care to speak. The period intervening between the commencement of preparatory studies and his licensure or his ordination cannot usually be less than eleven years; that is, four in the school or academy, four in the college and three in the theological seminary. I do not feel called upon to say how far habits of education in the school and college may be an excuse for a want of sobriety in after life. That they greatly influence the whole life, there can be no doubt; and I could not rationally account for the deficiency of ministers, of which I speak, without turning the eye of the reader back to the circumstances of their early years. But let this pass. During these eleven years, as things have been in my day, but little bodily exercise is commonly taken; so that by the time he has completed his education, the stomach begins to complain of weakness and indigestion. The whole system responds to these complaints. "Propter stomachum homo est quod est," as old Burton has it, is not far from literal truth. By the new and pressing duties of his office, he is driven again into the study. He must write new sermons—must read much—must think much—must preach, and do it all, time or no time, at his disposal. Some people, poor, silly fools, think it a small matter to write a sermon; nay, that it is very easy. "Why, he walks across his study, scribbles a little on a bit of paper, throws it into the fire and begins again the same thing." But all this while there is an agony of thought and feelings like the pangs of parturition, which suspends digestion, prostrates the spirit, and deranges the whole nervous system. The same process is acted once every week, perhaps every day. The result is that ministers become in many instances, nervous men, dyspeptic, hypochondriacal, &c. This is a very natural result of their situation, as well as a very common one. Besides all this, let the minister have a small salary, a growing family, but little economy, and an increasing debt. Then let him be in constant dread of difficulties between himself and his people, and you have a nervous man, easily moved. He who in his strength would laugh at the rattle of a spear, now trembles at the shaking of a leaf. There is more rigidity of nerve in one laboring man, than in an army of such poor sufferers.

Now the point I would come at is this: The same set of nerves which may be easily depressed may be, and are as easily excited. And he who, in his study, feels bowed down under depression of spirits, may, when out of his study, be easily exhilarated by society and conversation. The pendulum oscillates to either extreme with great rapidity. The result is that men thus situated exhibit extremes of character: a depression which is not becoming a Christian minister, and a hilarity, which is thought to be still more unpardonable. In these moments of recreation the tongue is prompt in conversation, the ideas flow rapidly, memory is vivid, and the feelings are hurried into a state of delicious excitement. In these moments too, many a frivolous or injudicious remark is dropped, and the effect of many a good sermon is destroyed. Nor is this because his heart is so wicked; for if this same man, at this same hour, were unexpectedly called to a scene of suffering and sorrow, no one could show more sincere sympathy, and he would be as ready to pour out his tears as he is now to laugh and joke. I am not undertaking to palliate the light-mindedness of a minister because his nerves are shattered, or his bodily system is out of order, and therefore the string of the harp will readily pour out music too melancholy or too gleesome. But I am aiming to develope the true cause of the want of ministerial sobriety. I am confident that much depends upon the state of health. If ministers cannot, by exercise or otherwise, have what Juvenal calls "mens sana in corpore sano," we may look in vain for sympathy or unvaried consistency of character.

Among the habits of the ministry I should also mention its continually recurring and most responsible services. In order to perform these services properly and profitably, the feelings must be solemn and elevated. Let a man during the same week, preach and pray repeatedly in public, go to the sick bed, console the mourner by sympathy and instruction, meet his church at the communion-table, preside at his Bible class and impart instructions, attend inquiry and other meetings; and who can do all this, week in and week out and not feel a severe and unnatural draught upon both body and soul? The consequence is that when he has a short respite from these heavy responsibilities and anxieties, there is a re-action in his soul, which throws it to the other extreme. Oh, how woeful are the instances (I remember them now with bitter but unavailing regret) both in number and aggravation, in which a minister has more than destroyed all the impressions of his preaching and exhortations by a want of sobriety immediately afterwards!

2. The love of applause is another cause of the want of ministerial sobriety.

Goldsmith says that "oratory is the most glorious of all arts, because it brings its triumphs and applause with it." The orator enjoys it, even while he is addressing his audience. But most men are too indolent to seek to shine in this way. The road is too long and too hard to travel. It is only one here and there who aim to attain eminence in this line, and those few had a sort of aptitude for it I am not sure that the adage, "Poeta nascitur, orator fit," is strictly true. By the way, can any of my brethren or any one else tell me where that adage comes from? But I am digressing. To shine in conversation, and to command the admiration of the social circle is a much easier business than being an orator. Thousands excel here who have not the time or patience to study in order to thrill an audience by genuine eloquence. The consequence is, that many are tempted to split on this rock. In our reading we meet with anecdotes, and ludicrous facts, and funny stories, both on the pages of history, and in the publications of the day. In our intercourse with our fellow men too, we of necessity learn many more which have never appeared in print. In this way, a man, if he pleases, may soon become a walking jest-book. He who has great opportunities to learn these things, will be very apt to communicate them. It is thus easy to draw the eyes of a circle to you, to cause them to listen and admire, laugh and applaud, and go home and repeat the strange stories they have heard. Pride is thus flattered by attention, and we are led to go on telling "good stories" and amusing others, at the expense of that respect which is due to the ministerial character. How often have we seen a company silent, "conticuere omnes, intentique ora tenebrant" while the minister was indulging his wit, and telling sweet stories. It is the same spirit of pride which sometimes though less frequently, causes clergymen to dress with great particularity, thus drawing upon themselves the incongruous appellation of "dandy preachers," which the poet rebukes with such just indignation:—indulging

> "A silly food conceit of his fair form,
> And just proportion, and fashionable mein,
> And pretty face—in presence of his God."

3. The low state of piety is another, and perhaps the greatest cause of the deficiency in question.

"As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God;" and few things are more unlike the leading of the Divine Spirit, than that state of feeling which may be denominated light and trifling. In the biographies of Jesus Christ by the four evangelists, we never read of jesting, or even smiling. The mighty weight of man's salvation lay heavy upon him, and he never exhibited (so far as we know) a feeling of levity. The man who has any weighty concern upon his mind, does not readily admit the higher feelings. The reformers were uniformly grave men. It would seem from their example that if the mind of the minister were deeply impressed with eternal things, there would be little room for levity. The serpent could not find access to the heart, if the heart were full of deep concern for the everlasting salvation of men.

I might prolong my remarks on this head, but I trust it is needless. I will only add, that if the ministers of Christ had that faith in eternal things which so eminently distinguished the Prophets and Apostles; if they would habitually look upon their ungodly hearers, as if they saw the anguish of the great day, when there would be fewer seasons of deep mourning over the impropriaties of their lighter hours.

> "Starless, hopeless gloom > Falls on their souls, never to know an end,"

D. L.

While we wrangle here in the dark, we are dying and passing to the world that will decide all our controversies; and the safest passage thither is by peaceable holiness.—Baxter.

WHAT IS THE REMEDY?

The readers of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN have been entertained by a series of editorial articles entitled—"What is the Matter?" It has been conceded by all to be a fact that the Church has been outstripped by other denominations in numerical growth. This fact has stimulated thoughtful investigation of the cause or causes. Some have sought an explanation in causes which exonerate the church from all blame, as for example,—the natural distastefulness of sound doctrine. The present writer will not pause to consider how much merit this explanation has, but he is satisfied that it does not furnish an exhaustive answer. The editorials in question have not sought to exonerate, and we believe they have found an echo in the breasts of the many. But whatever may be the cause, every loyal Presbyterian is deeply concerned to know the remedy. We do not arrogate to ourselves the ability to prescribe it;—but since we have been called in consultation, we may at least suggest.

A greater personal consecration of the ministry is urged by the writer of What is the Matter?—and to this as a duty every minister will doubtless respond with a fervent amen; but we cannot receive it as a remedy. However devoted the ministry, they may still in the future as in the past be constrained to exclaim—"Who has heard our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" We doubt if there can be found any more earnest ministry than in our own communion. None will think the statement exaggerated that we have some pastors as devoted as can any where be found and yet their churches exhibit the same numerical inferiority as do other pastorates. We are far from thinking that this numerical inferiority is attributable to a comparatively lower degree of spirituality and consecration on the part of our ministry;—and if in this respect they be the equals of others who have outstripped us in numbers, the cause of our leanness must be sought elsewhere. Nor can we think that a consecrated ministry is ever fruitless;—and upon the hypothesis that over a large area of territory the consecration of the ministry of two denominations is, in the aggregate equal,—their labors equally abundant,—and their preaching equally scriptural,—if then their success be largely unequal, we must think the inequality more apparent than real;—that the one party has not reaped all it sowed. Now there was a time in this country when the labors of the Presbyterian Church were as abundant as those of the Methodist or Baptist churches,—nay, more—a time when we had more laborers in the field;—there never was a time when we did not think our preaching as scriptural, to say the least, as theirs;—the only conclusion then to which we Presbyterians can come is, that we have sown what others have reaped. I say, admitting equal consecration, and as pure a Gospel, there is no other conclusion than that we have failed to gather and retain the fruits of our labors. And this conclusion we must hold the more strenuously the more we insist that the Gospel as proclaimed by us is clearer, freer, fuller, and more complete. There is but one other alternative explanation—that urged by others—that our preaching does not present as clear, as full, as free, as finished a salvation. This alternative we reject as easily disproved, and therefore fall back upon the first conclusion that the radical trouble is:—We do not ourselves harvest and retain the fruits of our labors. This is what is the matter. Now for this, what is the remedy? Make the PEOPLE to love the Church.

HURRIED IMPENITENTS.

It is of the utmost importance to give proper instruction to sinners when they become concerned on the subject of religion. The fact that they "present themselves at the mourners' bench or the inquiry room," shows that they "are not in a condition of mind to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," or are doubtful concerning their religious state, and desire to have their doubts removed. If upon examination and upon their own testimony, the minister finds that they have not exercised saving faith, he should lead them to see from the teachings of the Holy Scriptures, that they are not penitents, and that if they have the kind of sorrow for sin which the Bible enjoins, they would also have a saving faith in Christ.

The nature of true repentance, as well as of saving faith, should be carefully explained to them, and they should be impressed with the importance of the immediate exercise of both, and with the fact their failure to exercise either is owing to the state of their hearts which they cannot correct, and which can be corrected by the Spirit of God alone.

While it is "true that without repentance there can be no belief of the gospel" of a saving nature, it is also true that without faith there can be no true repentance.

We must not only "sympathise" with our impenitent friends, and "quote the promises" and "assure them of God's willingness to save," but we must endeavor to convince them that their "duty to wait on the Lord, until He manifests Himself" does not mean that they shall delay for a single moment to perform the required duties of faith and repentance; especially when at that very moment, by His outward call, and by the moving of His Holy Spirit, God is seeking them, and by their refusal to believe and repent, they are resisting that Spirit. In other words, they should be convinced that they are helpless, and guilty in their helplessness, and that their help cometh only from the Lord Almighty.

ANOTHER VIEW.

Some fearful souls, says the Christian at Work, worry much more than they ought over the imagined progress of the Roman Catholic Church. There is more of the mythic than the real about it. The fact is, for every pervert from Protestantism to Romanism there are a dozen secession from Romanism to Protestantism. Mr. Montague Russell Butler has compiled a pamphlet entitled, "A Record of Modern Priests, Monks, Nuns and Theological Students, who have left the Church of Rome," which contains the following paragraph:

"It is alleged by some that only the unimportant and ignorant members of the Roman Church come over to our side. In the list of priest seceders, however which is now published, are the names of a prince-bishop, two vicars-apostolic, a vicar-general, two abbots, a prior, two canons, a university chancellor, a synodical examiner, a missionary apostolic, a chaplain magistrate, a provincial physician, three superiors of convents, four knights, a college founder, a librarian of a papal college, a prefect of studies, a private censor, a licentiate in divinity, fourteen professors of divinity, two professors of moral philosophy, two professors of philosophy, a professor of Greek and Hebrew, a professor of canon law, a professor of controversy, a professor of rhetoric, a professor of belles lettres, twenty-four doctors of divinity, philology and theology, three members of the Holy Inquisition, including the qualificator and secretary, and the members of the papal staff: Chamberlain, prefect of the guard of honor, capellano cantore, pontifico and librarian.

FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST.

No better, no simpler definition of faith has been given than that of the late Horace Bushnell: "It is an act whereby one person, a sinner, commits himself to another person, a Saviour." If we lost our way and met with a trustworthy guide, we know what it means to trust ourselves to his knowledge and guidance. We know what it is to have our children trust themselves to our wisdom and love. It is just the same, this religious faith; we commit ourselves, lost and ignorant, to one who loves us, and knows, even to Christ; what princes and peasants must do, if they want the pardon and the adoption and the eternal blessedness.—Presbyterian.

GOOD ADVICE.

A parishioner once sought advice of Dr. Alexander. He was under a cloud, and could find no comfort in the discharge of religious duty. The Doctor said to him: "Do you pray?" "I pray," he replied, "that the Lord would lift the light of his countenance upon me, and grant me peace." "Go," said Dr. Alexander, "and pray God to glorify His name, and to convert sinners to Himself." The prescription met the case.

SHADOWS.

A little word—soon spoken,
In petulance and pain—
A golden link once broken
And never whole again.

Upon the brow a shadow,
Upon the lip a play,
The wealth of El Dorado
Can never buy away.

A shaft of sin and sorrow,
From heart to heart of love—
And O, the sad to-morrow
And the one heaven above!

O why should the true-hearted
Be to its own unkind,
Why should sweet love be parted
And scattered to the wind?

O why to all so smiling
Save to the one alone—
All other hearts beguiling,
But that we call our own?

O mystery of loving—
O wilful, tearful way,
That lingers in the shadow
And trifles with the day.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from exchanges:

The late Mr. Torr, M. P., who died worth a quarter of a million, bequeaths £10,000 towards founding a Liverpool bishopric.

It is arranged to hold a Synod of Bulgarian Bishops at Tirnova next May, in order to deliberate upon the proposal for an amalgamation of the Bulgarian Church with that of Russia.

The Samoan Islands have been entirely Christianised. Out of a population of forty thousand, thirty-five thousand, or seven-eighths, are connected with Christian churches.

The Presbyterian says: "It is reported that the Rev. Theodore Monod, the distinguished Protestant pastor of Paris, France, who came to this country along with his distinguished father the late Rev. Dr. Frederick Monod, in 1857, was converted while here, studied theology in the Western Theological Seminary, Alleghany, Pa., and was licensed by the Presbytery of Alleghany City, will visit this country early this spring to tell what France needs and is prepared for.

It having been stated erroneously that Miss Helen Gladstone, sister of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, who died on January 16th at Cologne, remained to the last in communion with the Roman Church, and also that she closed her life in a religious house, the Guardian is requested to make it known that neither of these statements is well founded.

The Spanish Government has ordered the restoration to the parents, with a view to its re-interment as a Protestant, of the body of a child at Bilbao, whom the priest compulsorily buried as a Catholic, on the ground of his having baptised it prior to the father's conversion to Protestantism.

The Rev. J. G. Williams, who is just appointed the first chaplain to the shipping in Portland Roads, has served in the mercantile marine for fifteen years, two of which were in command of a steamship. The Missions to Seamen Society furnishes him a sailing cutter and other boats.

The Roman newspapers assert that the Vatican, acting in unison with the Propaganda Fide, sent on Saturday to the Roman Catholic bishops in England certain instructions containing its final concessions for the admission of Ritualists into the Catholic Church. The Pope is said to have granted every possible facility for their reception, and the negotiations on the subject are reported to have made considerable progress.

A dispatch from Egypt states that a large and handsome block of buildings is rising up near Shepherd's Hotel, at Cairo, on land given by the Khedive to the American missionaries for a school and church, and one of the most effective incidents in the Viceregal tour was his reception a week ago of Dr. Hogg's Christian school children at Siout.

We understand that a communication has been received from the Austrian Government to the effect that the Emperor intends to give full effect to the promise which he made lately to a deputation from England that freedom of worship should be granted to the religious bodies which have suffered persecution at the hands of the provincial authorities.

The Pope's long expected Encyclical on the Divine institution of matrimony has been published. His immediate design is to remove marriage from all civil jurisdiction whatsoever. Tracing its history from Patriarchal to Apostolic times, he shows that Christ elevated it into a sacrament which only His Church could administer. The attempt made under various guises by the modern spirit to rob the Church of her right either to impose or to dissolve the marriage tie must be resisted by the whole Catholic world. His Holiness then indicates the conditions under which the separation of husband and wife may be sanctioned by the Church, and concludes by exhorting the universal Episcopate to communicate his teaching to the faithful for their welfare in both worlds.

The determination of the promoters of the Salvation Army to extend the field of their energetic operations to the United States of America being about to take practical effect, a meeting was held on Thursday night last week at the headquarters in Whitechapel Road, in order that the officers who are going out might receive encouragement and be invested with their regimental colors at the hands of Mrs. Booth, the wife of the founder and general superintendent of the movement. The emigrants are eight in number, including Mr. Railton, the "general commanding the foreign force," six "captains," and one "private." These captains are simply young female converts, attired in no more martial uniform than a black dress and a black straw hat, with a red ribbon having "Salvation Army" inscribed upon it. The flags were two in number, bearing each in conspicuous characters the device of "Blood and Fire." In bestowing these upon the captains, Mrs. Booth delivered an impassioned address, setting forth the objects of the undertaking, after which the young women themselves spoke a few words in the same strain. Mr. Booth displayed great activity during the proceedings, offering up prayers and delivering discourses while powerfully arousing throughout the enthusiasm of his hearers, who would give utterance with intense fervor and energy to exclamations, such as, "Hallelujah" and "Glory be to God." The whole proceedings presented a scene of almost frenzied excitement, the generalissimo being at times, and especially while certain hymns were being sung, unable himself to direct the ardor of his rank and file.

LEO XIII.

The present Pope is said to be the very counterpart of Pius IX, and, unlike him, a hater of the world, its crowds and the din of applause. He is described as a "silent, solitary spirit, addicted to study and meditation, a hater of vain twaddle, a contemner of personalities, fond of grave conversation, looking at everything from an elevated point of view, seldom laughing, sparing in words, reading and writing almost incessantly." Those endless encyclics and allocutions by which Pope Mastai wearied rather than edified his contemporaries were composed by Monsignor Floramonti, and in later times by Monsignor's Nocella and Mercenelli, upon some meagre notes jotted down by the Pope in the Italian tongue. Leo XIII. allows no man to body forth his conceits, or to develop his views. He sits at his table for hours and writes down every word with his own hand. When at work he brooks no disturbance; he walks along with hasty steps in his garden, "busy with the lofty thoughts which are to leave a mark on his Pontificate."

JOHN McLAURIN - Editor.

WILMINGTON, N. C.:

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1880.

BOLD BLINDNESS.

There are some persons who make merit of reading both sides of every discussion. They claim, justly perhaps, breadth of view growing ont of a catholic spirit which desires to examine and weigh well the defensive of every position before pronouncing any verdict upon it. Their fundamental maxim is: There are two sides to every question. As a rule this is trne, and perhaps the proverb is as universal in its application as any other. It certainly were well if the charity contained in it were extended as generally to persons as to principles. Like maxims in general, however, this wise saying cannot be blindly followed; like all of these crystals of the world's universal sense, the jewel has its flaw; and here as elsewhere if any man applies indiscriminately his precept to practice he will run against some stnbborn experience with such force that the jar will tend to shake his faith in it into collapse. There are many questions which have, and in the very nature of things can have, but one side. It is well to remember this in our day, when nothing is deemed too sacred for the hammer of iconoclastic criticism. Reverence is a rarity; men discuss the most solemn themes with virulent blasphemy, or with an airy flippancy that is scarcely less revoltiug. It is one of the inevitable concomitants of our boastful freedom of the press, of religious opinion, &c. The press and the platform are sometimes prostituted to the expression of views which are almost sufficient to make the blood curdle in the veins.

Hence our warning. Beware of any such charity as would give a bearing to these exponents of blasphemous infidelity, atheism and immorality. Where there is any doubt as to truth, by all means "read both sides;" but where there is and can be no doubt, what possible advantage accrues from a study of the necessarily false side. Is it any increase of knowledge to fill the mind with sophisms, perhaps plausible and forceful, advanced in the interest of that which is destructive to all virtne? As well inhale noxious gas into the lungs or take poison into the stomach npon the plea of increasing your experimental knowledge of these things. Some of these men are exceedingly acute, and by dallying with them yon may raise a spirit which yon cannot exorcise; they may, in their ability snperior to yours, suggest donbts and difficnlties which will give yon great pain and anxiety. It is blind boldness to expose one's self to the danger where there is nothing to gain by it. Why leave the large mass of instructive, interesting and profitable reading to feed on this garbage, whether led from cnriosity or a false idea of charitable catholicity of view?

Even where there is no possible danger of unsettling the faith, there is the not inconsidorable danger of defiling the miud and heart. Just as some things taken into our system, though not dangerous, leave at least a bad taste in the mouth, so many of these pnblications, thongh their arguments may be silly, trifling and soon forgotten, yet cling to our memories in the form of some hideous blasphemy couched in striking epigrammatic language, a word or sentence, and worry and pain us by occurring to our miud when meditating upon sacred things. It is ofteutimes as if an iron heated in the very flames of hell had seared our memory. While the pain may pass away, yet the scar remains a disfigurement, and we feel as if we were defiled.

OUR DUTY TO THE COLORED PEOPLE.

Home missions have long held an undisputed place in the heart of the Church. Nor can less be said of foreign missions. But shall we, as a Church, be indifferent when the claims of the two are combined—when both fields speak to us with one and the same voice?

And yet do they not thus present themselves in our work amongst the colored people? They appeal to us as a home mission field, geographically, but morally and in a race point of view they appeal to us as a foreign field. They are at our doors, and yet, like the Chinese, the Hindoos, the Indians, they belong to a race different from ours—one of the races deepest sunk in sin. Then is there not a two-fold call to us as a Church from this people—so near at hand and yet so far away?

Perhaps most of our readers will admit that there is; bnt let us not be content with admission; let us perform the duty which this admission implies—that of carrying a pnre gospel to this people. In so doing we find the way already open. The Assembly realized its dnty, and wisely, at its first step, established a school for the training of a colored ministry—the Tuskaloosa Institute, so favorably mentioned by a recent correspondent.

We repeat that this was a wise step; for, as in all foreign fields, we are only able to reach our negro population thoronghly and successfully through a native ministry. It is generally confessed that our own ministers do not reach them, that they naturally turn to preachers of their own race; indeed, it may well be called a law of races, that each race as a whole must receive the Gospel from a ministry of its own. The missionary is only the forerunner of an army of nativo ministers who are to carry on the work he begins.

The Tuskaloosa enterprize is at present almost all our Church is doing for these millions at our doors. It is something, and yet how little! Not as much is annually contributed towards defraying all the expenses of this Institute (which, so far as we are concerned, is to train a ministry for such vast numbers) as many of our comparatively small churches find it needful to raise in order to give the Gospel to their own communities.

Should not all our churches, as the Assembly enjoins, annually contribute something to this work? Is it not a solemn duty that God lays upon us, and the neglect of which is sinful?

It will not do to say that the blacks ought to attend the preaching of the whites. The fact is patent to all that they do not, that they instinctively turn to preachers of their own race, and, under God, it depends on no in great measure whether those preachers shall be as ignorant as those to whom they preach, or instructed in the things of the Gospel, workmen thoroughly furnished, and fitted to be a blessing to their race and to their land.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

We do not believe that the methods employed by the Salvation Army, as it is called, will result in permanent good. Further, we do believe that these fanatical methods, in a large scope of view, do immense harm; bnt our readers will like to know what it is, and what its friends and others say of it, and so we give the following:

"The Salvation Army," queer as it is in its make-up and methods, is now recognized in England as an evangelical agency of considerable power. Its leader is named Booth. He has been at work for fourteen years, although in a comparatively obscure way until two or three years ago. He is tall, dark, spare and angular, with shaggy and grisly beard, piercing little eyes and enormous Roman nose. He is nervous, earnest and bold. He has none of the gifts or graces of the style of oratory which is admired in refined circles; but is a powerful speaker in his rongh way when he has an audience of working people in sympathy with him. His followers are managed in military fashion. There are one hundred and twenty-five corps, with a station for each, and one hnndred and eighty officers. They endeavor to preach the Christianity of the Bible, and to be in harmony with all gospel Christians, while they make no organic union with any. Booth respects all the sects. He issues his orders to his officers, and expects implicit obedience, which he generally gets. His book of orders and regulations is a volume of more than one hnndred pages, going into detail as to everything the officers and members of the Salvation Army are expected to do. The 'Hallelnjah Lasses' are considered fully the equal of any of the male forces in efficiency Among the factory people and the colliers in the coal mining districts the labors of the Army have been most successfully put forth. An official gazette called the War Cry is issned more or less regularly. It bristles with martial expressions, and is full of the notion of marching ou the devil and annihilating his forces. With all that is qneer and odd with Booth and his co-workers, he seems to be honest and practical, as well as desperately in earnest in regard to the conversion of the poor, for whose good he labors."

The New York Independent has this to say:

"We have received as a supplement of the Christian, of London, a report of the work of the Salvation Army for 1879, written by the Rev. William Booth, who has succeeded, we snppose, John Allen as captain of this remarkable army. It is dated from 'The Headqnarters of the Salvation Army, 272 White Chapel Road, Londou E.' The report notices that one of the most valuable gains of the past year has been in the deepening of the 'military spirit' of the soldiers of the Salvation Army. Councils of war were held in various places, and less than 5,000 persons spent the whole of at least one night in united prayer for the divine aid and blessing. It appears that the work of the Army is among the most ignorant and degraded classes. We read that, enteriug Scotland for the the first time, two large congregations of the 'lowest description" were gathered in Glasgow, and many of 'the worst' were led to Christ. "In Lancashire large congregations of the roughest sort have been added to those already gathered in Manchester and Liverpool; and, in spite of the most violent ruffianism, many of the most desperate have been subdued by the power of God.' In Nottingham and vicinity six distinct congregations were gathered from the public houses; in Cheltenham and Leamington many of 'the rough and ignorant' were converted; the colliers of Dipton, Willington and other places were reached, and 'many signs and wonders were wrought in Jesns' name;' and the laborers of Bridlington, Lyun, Northampton, West Bromwich, and Jersey also fell as 'glorions spoil before fnrious attack directed against them.' It is hoped that some among the Freuch-speaking population of Jersey may be prepared for 'an early descent on the Norman Coast.' The Lord enabled the Army to add more than fifty districts to those previously occupied, and 'valley after valley in South Wales has been so flooded with holy influences that the character of the whole population has been changed. The charge-sheets of police courts have been greatly reduced, the liquor traffic has almost snspended, and whole counties have been roused to spiritual concern.' As showing the permanent character of the work, it is stated that during the year second or third stations were opened in seventeen towns previously occupied. The Army encountered opposition of the most violent nature in some places. Several officers of the Army were imprisoned, and some were beaten and bruised and almost killed by mobs. Still, though the peculiarities of the work afford ample material for hostile comment, there were stronger and warmer commendations by the press than ever before. The report states that there are 125 corps and stations, and 179 officers wholly employed in the work. There were 4,000 voluntary speakers and 100,000 services were held. The contributions received amounted to $25,495, while the collections from the congregations reached $60,000. Some $40,000 a year is required to pay rents. A weekly paper, called the War Cry, is issned, which gives 'the latest news of the war from all parts of the country'."

DEATH OF A MINISTER.

The Brownsville (Texas) States says:

"A postal card from Mrs. C. O. Garrison of Cleburne, Texas, bnt formerly of this place, brings the sad intelligence of the death of her father, the Rev. B. D. Thomas, which occnrred on the 8th ult. We have no particulars of the afflictive event."

The St. Louis Presbyterian adds:

"Mr. Thomas at one time labored in this State at Ashley and at Cape Girardeau. He was a very great sufferer, especially in the last months of his life. He departed most triumphantly."

THE LECTURE.

By invitation Rev. Dr. J. R. Wilson, on Monday night last, delivered a lecture before the Wilmington Library Association.

From the very few words used in the inimitable presentation of the speaker to the audience, we borrow a thought which aptly sums the effort: The theme was "Success;" the discourse its exemplification.

Any effort of ours to do justice to either the speaker or the theme could only exemplify failure and we are content to claim for our prudence this meed of praise: Snccess.

The manner, the style, the things said, the things unsaid were all appropriate elements of the harmonious whole. The lesson taught rises oven above the accessories by which it was conveyed: that success in life depends not on wealth or fame, but in standing in our lot, exercising our gifts, and using our opportunities in promoting the welfare of our fellow men, serving our Maker, and maintaining that cheerful contentment which comes from supreme and loving trust in God.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

An exchange notes as the meanest man, one who bought a mouse-trap, carried it home, caught the mouse and then returned the trap and got the money refunded because he did not want the trap. We have known persons—not many, we are pleased to say,—who, after receiving our paper one, two or three years, and being urged to pay, have notified us by the postmaster, "Don't want it."

The following, which first appeared in the Covenant, of Philadelphia, has since appeared in the Christian at Work:

In Texas, the Presbyterian women are preaching, as the new book of discipline provides that nothing shall be called an offence or admitted as an accusation which cannot be proved to be such from the Scripture, as interpreted in the standards of the Church.

There is no foundation for the above. We make bold to say that, positively. The Texas Presbyterian knows nothing of it.

John Ruskin sent a challenge to the Bishops of England to defend the lawfulness—that is the morality—of usury, meaning any compensation in kind or otherwise for the use of money. The Bishop of Manchester offended against Honest John's ideas by investing in interest-bearing bonds, and the challenge was specially directed to him. Mr. Ruskin made his proposition far too broad, and the Bishop unhorsed him at the first tilt.

A correspondent who has been taking the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN from the start was almost tempted to stop it this year because of lack of mail facilities. He writes:

You will be surprised to hear that there is a scope of country thirty miles in extent, from Fayetteville to Montpelier, in the western part of Cumberland county and upper end of Robeson, and twenty-eight miles across, without a postoffice.

Let the people interested move in the matter and make their applications to the Post Office Department. The postmaster at Fayetteville will cheerfully furnish all information necessary, and it will be our pleasure to aid in any way possible.

We notice that the Romanists want to insert the hand, which has drawn so much money from the city treasury of New York, into the national treasury at Washington. St. Ann's Infant Asylum asks Congress to appropriate $5,000 for its support, and we would not be greatly surprised if it would get what it asks for.—Presbyterian.

Let us hope that our contemporary is altogether mistaken in the estimate he places upon the intelligence and the sense of right of our lawmakers. We are not ready to believe that the American Congress is ready to sell out to Rome.

The claim that Roman Catholic schools are superior to those of Protestants has not a shadow of foundation in truth; yet the mere dogmatic assertion of that claim, oft repeated as it is, imposes upon Protestants and leads to their patronizing Roman Catholic institutions. Only one thing is sure: that a child sent to a Romish school will be almost certainly led into the Romish Church.

A Romish paper speaking of the perversion of a Protestant young lady says that "The influences of convent education have wrought this change of views, and if her family object to the way she has taken, they have themselves to thank for it."

We certainly agree with the Romish paper in that statement. Protestant parents would do well to read up on Romanism before trusting the souls of their children to its charge.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

From the Gastonia Gazette we learn that at a meeting of the congregation of New Hope church, on the 29th ult., Mr. Wm. Rankin was unanimously elected deacon. The deacons elect now are Messrs. John R. Reid and Wm. Rankin. Rev. J. J. Kennedy is pastor of the church. The Ladies' Missionary Society of this church reported at their last meeting that they contributed twenty-one dollars last year to foreign missions and have on hand articles to be sold for the same cause.

SUSTENTATION IN FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

The Committee of Home Missions in Fayetteville Presbytery consists of Rev. Martin McQueen, Rev. David Fairley, and Elders B. Fuller, Joseph McArthur and Dr. Hugh A. McSwain, with the chairman.

This committee will meet in Fayetteville on Thursday, the 11th of March ensuing, for acting on applications from feeble churches for aid in supporting their ministers. These applications must come from the sessions of the churches, and should state:

1st. What part of a minister's time is desired.

2d. What can the church propose to pay.

3d. Whether the amount raised has been by a fair effort and is in proportion to its ability; and

4th. What aid is needed to secure preaching.

The committee can appropriate only what the churches furnish for Sustentation by collections during the months of January and February, after deducting 15 per cent. for the Assembly's treasnry, according to the direction of Presbytery. Let every church in our bounds then take up its collection for this object during the period mentioned, and forward the contribution promptly to Rev. J. P. McPherson, Treasurer of Presbytery, by the first week in March. At least three charges will need full and liberal contributions to the Sustentation fund must be made if we help efficiently our feeble organizations.

A GREAT NEED.

We greatly need a short and safe statement of the faith and polity of our Church. For the want of it the Church is much misunderstood and sadly misrepresented. The "Confession of Faith," though invaluable, does not suit for popular distribution. The average enquirer after the Church will not read it, and hence many valuable men have been lost to the Church for want of information as to its teaching. The "Book of Church Order" and "Shorter Catechism" bound together, would make the book that we greatly need. It would be short, safe, and could be distributed at a cost a little above that of a large tract. Will not some of our Presbyteries overture the Assembly to give us this book? T6.

THE MINUTES OF SYNOD AGAIN.

In the querulous note about the Minutes which I wrote in January I promised to speak further of them, and explain the delay in their publication. It was to me a matter of real regret and pain to parade the emptiness of the treasury and the delinquencies of the presbyteries; but the complaint brought forth prompt and pleasant fruit. The consciences of some are relieved, the printers are paid and the Minutes are distributed. Other consciences are yet burdened (or very hard!) which I hope will be set at ease at the spring meetings of the presbyteries. By this time I doubt not the Minutes have been received by every session, possibly read by some one in every church. Had money been in the treasury, and had the Clerk been ready, they could have been distributed by the 1st of December instead of the 1st of February. The Minutes this year entailed as is apparent much more work and care, and, consequently, delay in their preparation than usual. Presbyterial duties engaged me part of the time. The clerks of presbyteries responded with promptitude and pains to the repeated and troublesome demands upon them. I was truly sorry for them. Had the church sessions answered simply and plainly the circulars addressed them, and promptly, much delay would have been obviated. The manuscript was ready for the printer December 11th, and it was promised that the Minutes should be ready for distribution December 25th. But matter for the press from delinquent churches kept coming in to the very last. Indeed some was received as late as December 22d, and in all styles and conditions: in pencil, hurriedly written, in all varieties of ink, and on all varieties of paper, and much of it on postal cards. To copy entailed delay, to print from such copy was uncertain and tedious. And so it was through no fault of the printers, there was delay of more than twenty days.

It was Byron, I believe, who said that fame consisted in falling on the field of battle and having one's name spelled wrong in the next morning's Gazette. I crave the indulgence of many who I know have shaken their metaporical fists at me for spelling their names wrong in the list of elders and deacons. I did the best I could with the lights before me. Many names are omitted, I doubt not. My attention was called to such omissions in a church recently visited. Fortunately, the report of that session is before me in the manuscript furnished. And the missing name is missing there too. In another case, where indignation at the offence and pity for the inefficiency of the offender were duly shown, because a letter was omitted, I was fortunately, also, able to confront the injured party with his own "handwrite" and the printer followed copy to a dot.

There are, however, many mistakes. Though considering the fact that the printers had not done such work for the Synod, and that so much of the matter consisted merely of names, I think it will be conceded that the work is admirably done. It has been funny and painful to try and make out some of the names, to which we were all entirely unused. The names printed are the result of careful study. I would be very glad if any one who knows of errors, especially in the names of elders and deacons, and the postoffices, and especially who feels personally aggrieved because his name is spelled wrong, and who does not wish it spelled wrong in the future, would write me a postal card calling my attention to the page and the error.

The manuscript copy of the different presbyterial clerks was followed. Hence the Presbytery of Mecklenburg appears so differently from the others. The postoffice address of the church was given and the list of elders and deacons of each church. The printers, seeking uniform appearance, in the first proof furnished me, printed, as in the preceding presbyteries, a postoffice with each name. As I happened to know in some instances that the wrong address was thus given, I had the form reset, giving the postoffice with the name of the church, and naming the clerk of session when it was stated. In consequence of this change, and to save trouble, as any one who has had printing done will understand, the order of the names had to be changed, and it thus happens that the name which appeared first in the manuscript was printed last. I would not mention so slight a thing, bnt to explain how it was that in almost every instance the oldest, most venerable and honored elder in each church came at the end of the roll after many who were his juniors, and to save Bro. Johnston the reproach, if any should be uttered, for such a violation of order.

If anybody has read this comparatively trivial and largely personal communication thus far I thank them for it, and shall not keep him longer from more profitable employment.

APPEAL.

Who will give the project of building a Presbyterian church in Waynesville, Haywood county, substantial encouragement? The little band of Presbyterians are few in number and poor in purse. They feel that the way is open for building up a flourishing church. An eligible site has been given and lumber enough to build the church promised, and we hope soon to announce the beginning of work on the church edifice. May we not hope for generous and liberal aid from friends abroad? Will not every Presbyterian in the State give us one dollar? Let the good work begin. Charlotte has promised something handsome. Let us hear at once from generous friends in Wilmington, as we know we will. Let Raleigh, Newbern, Goldsboro, Concord, Hillsboro, Milton, Chapel Hill and Greensboro all do their part, as we know they will, and a host of country and village churches, we feel assured, will respond liberally to our appeal.

Will we the little down and give help us to build a church in our charming mountain town? Send us your pennies, dimes and half-dimes, or any greater amount you can. There is need for every dollar that can be obtained.

We beg every Presbyterian to give at once a fitting response to our call, and let us raise funds sufficient to build a church of which we shall all be proud, and we will most cordially invite all who desire to visit a delightful summer resort in the very midst of the grandest mountains of Western North Carolina, to come to Waynesville and worship with us in our new church. A hotel at our sulphur and chalybeate springs on the edge of town to accommodate one hundred boarders, and other houses, will be ready by summer. Send contributions to

ROBESON COUNTY BIBLE SOCIETY.

PHILADELPHUS, N. C., Feb. 25th, 1880.

The fifty-eighth annual meeting of the Robeson County Bible Society will be held at Lebanon church, on Saturday, the 3d day of April next, commencing at 11½ o'clock a. m. Rev. J. H. Coble, principal, with Rev. D. A. McRae, his alternate, were appointed to preach the annual sermon on that occasion.

Auxiliary societies will please have their delegates in attendance.

A. D. BROWN, Secretary.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Among the able articles in the Contemporary Review for February (George Munro, publisher, New York,) we note The Pedigree of Man, combatting evolution; Prof. Mivart's continuation of Animals and Plants; Contemporary Life and Thought in Turkey; The Indian Famine; The Irish Question, and The First Murder and First City, with tracing in profano myths.

We had occasion recently to refer to the Meekness of Christ, published by I. K. Funk & Co., for 10 cents, being No. 2 of their standard series, and to No. 3 of the same series, Macaulay's Essays, containing eight of these world-renowned papers, for 15 cents. We have now these books before us. They are printed in new, clear type, paper covers, and are most surprisingly cheap. Our clear conviction is that the publishers deserve to rank as public benefactors for placing such literature in the easy reach of all who will read.

Littell's Living Age is one of the very best literary publications of the day. The numbers for the weeks ending February 21st and 28th respectively have the following contents: The Progress of Taste, and The Successors of Alexander and Greek Civilization in the East, Quarterly; Fucinus, a Lost Lake and a New Found Land, Nezo Quarterly; Sir Humphrey Davy, Temple Bar; Some Hints on the Teaching of Latin, Macmillan; An Imprisoned Princess, Leonora Christina of Denmark, Fraser; The Civil Code of the Jews, and the German Army, Pall Mall Gazette; Revolutionary Laughter, and Children of the Pantomime, Graphic, and other prose articles, besides the usual amount of poetry.

Lives of the Leaders of Our Church Universal, from the Days of the Successors of the Apostles to the present time. The Lives by European writers from the German, as edited by Dr. Ferdinand Piper, Prof. of Theology in the University of Berlin. Now translated into English and edited, with added Lives by American writers, by H. M. Maccracken, D. D. $3. 1879. Presbyterian Publishing Co., J. L. Shotwell, agent, Richmond, Virginia. This full title page explains what this important volume of 874 pages purports to be. One hundred and twenty-five lives of Christian leaders, in different epochs of the Church, in various lands, are ably and compendiously written by fifty-two distinguished European authors and thirty American. Among the latter are Prof. Alexander of Union Theological Seminary, Va., Drs. Jeter and Pendleton of Virginia and Drs. Beard and Summers of Tennessee. As the result of immense labor, covering nearly thirty years, by many of the most eminent men in that period, such as Neander, Krummacher, Monod, Lorimer, Tholuck, Hodge, &c., we have the cream of many volumes of biography made accessible to all. After a general inspection of the book and a special reading of several lives as specimens of the execution, we think it will prove a treasure in every household for instructing our youth and elevating their forming character, and an indispensable addition to the library of every one who would attain to some respectable knowledge of the noble instruments God has used in building up His kingdom since Apostolic days. Study of such lives gives inspiration to Christian endeavor, and light in arduous and trying periods of labor. The volume is well indexed.

ECLECTICISMS.

TRIALS NECESSARY.

Christian Intelligencer:

How constantly, in the great Drama of Redemption, the scenery shifts to the Wilderness; and what is true of the whole is true of the individual life-actor. We must follow our Beloved there; well for us, if we go down through the wilderness leaning upon Him. We will not escape temptation by being alone. But we must be much alone if we would escape it. Satan leads us into temptation, God guides us through it, if we will pass through it holding His hand, and holding in our hand His Word, like Christian in the Valley of Humiliation.

THERE WILL COME LIGHT.

Interior:

Science may shoot out like a comet and seem to be going heading away from Christ forever, and so may philosophy and any projection of human thought, but it will come back as swiftly as it went, in due time, and this, with the exception only of those which disappear, are lost forever—are seen no more. All that remain revolve around Christ. This is not rhetoric. It is the truth which is contained in the name given to Christ as the Sun of righteousness; as it is the truth of history, present and past. With an absolute faith in Christ no sinning man fears the result of the perturbations of science, or the swift, brilliant flight of philosophy away from Him. They will right themselves and come back to Him, or they will pass out of sight, out of mind, and thus be wholly lost from the influences which bear the minds of men.

THE WAY IT IS.

The Methodist:

If a rascal professes to be a minister the fact usually gets into print to the discredit of the ministry. And yet last year the total list of ministerial criminals was set down by an enemy at only fifty. A mathematician makes this one-thirteenth of one per cent. of the total number of ministers. But one-half of the list were not ministers at all; and three-fourths of the list were not charged with immoral conduct.

WILL BE HONORED.

Central Methodist:

Every true man will honor those who are firm in their convictions, if they are respectful and charitable in their enunciation. Only the man who is too cowardly to express his views, fearing to cross public sentiment lest he lose favor, is held in universal contempt, himself only excepted.

NOT SPECIALLY.

Richmond Christian Advocate:

Bar rooms open on Sunday, are not set down as persuasives to virtue. From the gallows the frequent confession comes, "Whiskey ruined me." The figures show that strong drink is the cause of the bulk of crime. The liquor shop, therefore, is not an institution to be specially encouraged for the common weal.

TO GAIN NOTORIETY.

N. Y. Tribune:

The readiest way for a mediocre man to gain notoriety is for him to proclaim himself an infidel and attack the Bible. His blows may be as feeble as a hen's pecking, but they are sure to attract notice, because of the holy and tender regard in which the object that he assails is held by the noblest part of the race.

A FIELD ALWAYS OPEN.

Central Presbyterian:

A great many Christians lament that there is no Christian work exactly suited to them. There is one field of Christian endeavor that is always open, and what grand results would follow if it were thoroughly worked! That field is their own household—their own little ones who are dearer to them than life. Who can teach religion to children like their own father or mother? what can the teacher (secular or Sunday school) do in comparison with what the father can do, if the proper relation exists between him and his children? But there are many, many Christian fathers who never mention this subject to their children; there are many, many Christian firesides where it is a prohibited topic. There is a vague reliance that it will all come right; but alas! in very many cases it does not come right, and the children grow up, and go out into the world with little instruction and little exhortation from the father's lips.

HE NEEDS COMPASSION.

United Presbyterian:

The loss of property is a kind of trial that brings more pain than any of us know. We call money trash and filthy luc e; yet even when the heart is not set upon it the life depends upon it to such an extent as to make its withdrawal a real affliction. After a man has grown fixed in a kind of life amidst an abundance of means, it is like a revolution in his spirit, as well as outward circumstances, to be brought to the condition of dependence. He needs compassion and Christian help.

THE UNANSWERABLE TESTIMONY.

Baltimore Presbyterian:

To believe that the mighty God, even Jehovah has spoken, and called the earth "from the rising of the sun to the going down thereof," we have only to obey the voice heard by Augustine, "Tolle Lege,"—Take. Read. It is inspired, because inspiring. It is its own best interpreter. From Genesis to Revelation, it is all ablaze with celestial light. The Spirit of God in the soul bears in unanswerable testimony the Spirit of God in the Bible, and every devout reader will sooner or later say, "Thy word, O God, is truth."

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

It was the First Presbyterian church of Raleigh, N. C.,—not of Wilmington, as some of our exchanges have it—upon which it has been determined to expend $2,500 in enlarging and beautifying.

The Presbytery of Memphis has transferred Rev. A. M. Watson to the Presbytery of Orange, and refused to place a call from the church at Columbus, Ga., in the hands of Rev. Eugene Daniel of Memphis.

Rev. Dr. M. D. Hoge arrived in Rome on 24th ult., en route for Palestine.

Rev. W. E. Burke has entered upon his labors with the churches of Prescott and Marlbrook, Ark. His post office address is changed from Montgomery City, Mo., to Prescott, Nevada county, Ark.

The church at Corpus Cristi, Texas, has been encouraged by the addition of three members upon profession of faith and two by certificate.

The churches of Madison and Oakland, in Florida, we learn from correspondence of Rev. H. M. Anderson with the Central Presbyterian, were formerly in the midst of settlements of rich planters, and were quite flourishing, the latter particularly so. In the changed condition of political affairs Madison has become the stronger. Oakland has been sustained mainly by the pious activity of the only remaining elder, now eighty years of age, who has employed Sabbaths in which there is no preaching in pastoral work, going from house to house. On the 22d ult., Oakland was greatly encouraged by a transfer of twelve members by certificate from Rock church, in Greenwood, S. C. In Madison church a series of meetings was held lately which resulted in two persons being received by profession and three by certificate from a sister denomination.

Bunker's Hill church, Berkley county, W. Va., which was destroyed during the war, but rebuilt within the past year, was rededicated on Sabbath, 22d February.

From the Christian Observer:

In Georgetown, Texas, four years ago, Rev. W. F. Gillespie commenced his pastorate with ten members. Now there are upwards of sixty members, three having been received on the 15th ult.; a house of worship has been built and the church is ont of debt. Mr. Gillespie devotes half his time to the church. During the time above referred to, members have been dismissed to two new churches organized in the county.

Rev. J. C. Barr writes to the Central Presbyterian that the First Presbyterian church of Charleston, W. Va., has enjoyed a season of refreshing. At the communion the third Sabbath in February, seven persons were received into the church. The pastor secured the assistance of Rev. W. F. Wilhelm on Monday night following, and continued the meetings until Tuesday of the following week. Under the deeply impressive sermons of brother Wilhelm the interest increased, until the whole congregation seemed to be thoroughly awakened. Twenty-eight persons have united with the church, and others still contemplate doing so. No means were used but the ordinary ministration of the ordinances of the Lord's house, and earnest prayer.

The postoffice address of Rev. R. W. Shive has been changed from Lonoke to Austin, Lonoke county, Ark., and the address of Rev. Audrew McElroy from Tuskaloosa, Ala., to Newman, Ga.

Items from the St. Louis Presbyterian:

A business note from Rev. Neander M. Woods, of the Second church, Norfolk, Va., says: "I have had a season of interest in my church of late. Dr. Thomas Wharey gave us some fine sermons. Five persons made profession last Sunday (22d ult.,) and four joined us on certificate.

The church at Boonville, Mo., Rev. O. W. Gaus pastor, has been the scene of much religious interest during the winter. We learn that about twenty persons have been added to its membership since the meeting of the Synod there in October.

Items from Southern Presbyterian:

We learn from a correspondent that the church at Sholbyville, Tenn., of which the pastor. Three gentlemen—heads of families—and one young lady, have been received into the church on profession of faith; others appear to be serious."

The University of Mississippi, at Oxford, has been visited with a revival season, during which sixty or seventy students have professed faith in Christ. Since last November forty-seven communicants have been added to the Presbyterian church at Oxford, and eighty to the churches of the four other denominations in the place.

Items from the Central Presbyterian:

A meeting of several weeks continuance closed at Hat Creek church, Virginia, on the 19th of February. Rev. C. M. Howard assisting the pastor, Rev. A. B. Carrington. A large number of persons have professed conversion, and will unite with the church.

Communion services were held at Union church, Lexington Presbytery, three weeks ago. There has been preaching from day to day since. Rev. S. W. Watkins, Rev. B. C. Walker, and Rev. J. W. Rosebro, assisting the pastor, Rev. J. N. Campbell. The church has been greatly revived. Six persons have been added to its communion; fourteen, at least, have professed conversion and will unite in due time. There are many inquirers and a general awakening throughout the congregation. About thirty have united with this church since the beginning of Mr. Campbell's pastorate less than a year ago.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Dr. Charles C. Parker, pastor of the Presbyterian church in Parsippany, N. J., died of acute pneumonia on February 15th—aged 65.

REFORMED (DUTCH) CHURCH.

During the years of hard times the membership of the Reformed Church has largely increased. At the close of the war the number of members was 52,000; it is now over 80,000.

LUTHERAN.

A contribution of $5,000 to the Lutheran Asylum for the Aged and Infirm, in Germantown, Pa., has enabled its friends to nearly finish it.

REFORMED EPISCOPAL.

The First Reformed Episcopal church, Madison Avenue, started six years ago without a dollar, under Bishop Cummins' care, and since his death has been under that of Rev. William T. Sabine. Its house of worship cost a hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and its annual expenses have averaged eleven thousand dollars. Of course it has had to carry a large debt, which it has just cancelled.—Presbyterian.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

Mrs. Elizabeth Somarindyck died recently at Glen Cove, L. I. She left the St. Paul's Episcopal church at Glen Cove five thousand dollars; Church Charity Foundation of Long Island four thousand, and the Foreign Missionary Society of the Episcopal Church seven thousand.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

The ground was broken yesterday for the extension of the large clothing store of R. B. Andrews & Co. to Wilmington street. The extension will be of brick, two stories in Height, and a handsome front will be built on Wilmington street. The completion of the addition will give the store a depth of 220 ft. making it one of the largest in the State.—Raleigh Observer.

Mr. John M. Worth will leave here on Monday next for Round Knob, on the Western North Carolina Railroad. He and his brother, of fish hatching notoriety, Steve Worth, have recently bought a place improved by Col. Colemau, the first civil engineer on the road, and will open a first-class hotel for the accommodation of summer pleasure and health seekers, and besides will use the waters of Mill Creek in the process of fish hatching.—Fayetteville Banner.

Among quite a number of valuable ways in which different portions of the sunflower are utilized in Lithuania, is the making from the seed receptacles a species of blotting paper, and from the inner part of the stalk a fine writing paper.

Rev. Wm. R. Atkinson, principal of the Charlotte Institute for young ladies, encouraged by the popularity the measure has given Peace Institute at Raleigh, has employed the services of Mrs. Campbell, of New York, to give a series of lessons in cooking to the pupils of his school.—Southern Home.

Mr. L. H. Yeargan has presented the Second Presbyterian church with an elegant carpet to cover the entire floor of the church. It is of rich material, and the figure is a beautiful red coral in a black background. The design is specially gotten up for the church, and will be a handsome and useful adornment to Dr. Atkinson's graceful little church.—Raleigh News.

The Professor of Chinese at Harvard College has one student, an Austro-American, who thinks of going to China to engage in business.

Mrs. Maj. W. A. Hearne, at the National hotel, has a very interesting and unique relic of early Carolina times. It is a shapely Japanese, or Chinese vase of fine glazed chinaware, adorned with pagodas, etc., in blue and gilt. It was brought to Newbern in the days of Gov. Tryon, more than one hundred years ago, and may be of even greater age.—Farmer and Mechanic.

Ole Bull, the distinguished violinist, will be all the more esteemed since he refused an offer of $500 to appear at the Globe Theatre, Boston, at a Sunday evening concert, to which he is conscientiously opposed.

The U. S. ship Constellation, now at the Brooklyn navy yard, is at once to be made ready for transportation of supplies to Ireland.

The town of Urfa, in Asiatic Turkey, situated on the supposed site of the Scriptural city "Ur of the Chaldees," has been almost destroyed by fire. It had about 30,000 inhabitants.

The case of a deaf-mute cow is reported by a Russian veterinary surgeon. A cow, twelve years old, of Algava breed, belonging to a Russian nobleman, never showed signs of hearing, or believed. Seeing the other cattle bellow, she tried to imitate them by stretching her neck and head, and opening her mouth, but she could not produce any sound.

The sense of vision of this cow was found to be unusually well developed.

Since 1865, Indians in Texas have killed 407 men, women and children, wounded 70, carried off 86 women and children, stolen 43,392 cattle, 20,521 horses and mules, and 2,430 sheep, besides many other depredations. Since 1874 there have been 150 bands of hostile Indians in that State.

Thirty-four years ago a large pot of butter was suspended by a rope in the well on the farm of Abraham S. Mylin, in Lancaster, Pa. The rope broke, and for thirty-four years the butter rested securely in the bottom of the well. One day last week the well was cleaned, and the butter was again brought to light. It was found to be as white as snow and hard as stone.

Dirt has been broken, and the foundation partly laid, for the large cotton factory now under construction by the Messrs. Oates, of this city. We rejoice to see such improvements going up. It argues well for the future of Charlotte, and will give bread and employment to our idle poor.—Southern Home.

The Greensboro Patriot, under its present editorial management, that of R. T. Fulgham, Esq., has improved in appearance and in spirit astonishingly.

Several papers have announced that a party of capitalists will soon start a sassafras distillery in or near Oxford. Well, it costs just four dollars to begin work. It really seems that one capitalist might make the start.—Orphan's Friend.

Havana cigars are likely to advance in price for a rather odd reason. Since last October straw paper has gone up 75 per cent., and it is a fact that many of the so-called Havana cigars are made from the article, which is manufactured chiefly in New York State. The straw paper is taken to Cuba, saturated in a decoction made from the stems and refuse of the choice Havana seed leaf, and when properly treated with flavoring extracts, licorice root, senna, etc., makes a filling for cigars. Besides it burns with a pure white ash precisely like that of the genuine leaf, unlike that yielded by any other material. Specimens of prepared paper seen in New York are described as closely resembling the leaf in appearance, taste and flavor.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Ladies' and children's boots and shoes cannot run over if Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners are used.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16, 1880.

E. H. WARNER & Co.—Dear Sir: –I write to say that after having taken your Safe Pills and finding them all that is claimed for them in your circular, I cheerfully recommend them as the best Pills in the market.

JOSEPH PRATHER,
409 M Street, Washington, D. C.

Purge out the morbid humors of the blood by a dose or two of Ayer's Pills, and you will have clearer heads as well as bodies.

A WORD OF CAUTION.—Simmons' Liver Regulator or Medicine manufactured by J. H Zeilin & Co., like all standard and really valuable articles, has met with a degree of annoyance from impostors and mercenary adventurers. The popularity and world-wide fame of the Regulator has induced unprincipled parties to place spurious compounds called by some garbled part of our title or name on the market. A majority of these enterprises have died a natural death, but others are periodically cropping out. To those who have not yet learned the great worth of the Regulator this word of caution is necessary To the invalid it may be a question of life and death. Ask for Simmons' Liver Regulator, and look for the signature of J. H. Zeilin & Co., and the large red Z on their clean, white wrapper. Accept no colorable imitation or substitutes however plausibly recommended.

Benefactors.

When a board of eminent physicians and chemists announced the discovery that by combining some well known valuable remedies the most wonderful medicine was produced, which would cure such a wide range of diseases that most all other remedies could be dispensed with, many were sceptical; but proof of its merits by actual trial has dispelled all doubt, and to-day the discoverers of that great medicine, Hop Bitters, are honored and blessed by all as benefactors.

MARRIED.

☞No notice of a marriage or death will be inserted unless accompanied by a responsible name, which is wanted not for publication but as a guaranty of good faith.

On the 26th of February, 1880, in the M. E. church, Pike, Cumberland county, by Rev. Mr. Hardison, Mr. A. D. DAWKINS and Miss ELIZA BENETT.

On the 26th of February, 1880, at the residence of John Harris, Esq., near Pittsboro, by the Rev. P. R. Law, Mr. CHARLES SHAW and Miss ADDIE POE.

On the 4th inst., in Gaston county, by Rev. J. J. Kennedy, Mr. W. L. HUFFSTETLER and Miss LIZZIE J. ORMAND.

On the 3rd inst., in Sampter, S. C., Mr. ROBT. ARROWOOD, of Gaston county, N. C., and Miss MARY LOUISE DICKSON, daughter of the late Rev. Flinn Dickson.

Feb. 24th, in the Presbyterian church, Clarkton, Tenn., by Rev. J. W. Lupton, Rev. J. F. CANNON, of Leesburg, Va., and Miss MARY H. LUPTON, eldest daughter of the officiating clergyman.

DIED.

☞Obituary notices must be paid for in advance. The first ten lines are inserted free. The excess over ten lines is charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. Correspondents can ascertain what an obituary will cost by counting eight words to a line, and multiplying each line by ten cents.

On February 28th, in Orange county, Mr. HUGH WOODS, in the 80th year of his age.

Mr. Woods had been a member of Little River Presbyterian church for 48 years, and an active, efficient ruling elder for 44 years. He had long been the Clerk of the Session, the duties of which office he performed faithfully and correctly. "He has died in a good old age, an old man and full of years." He will be sadly missed, not only by his bereaved family, but by many others who knew and loved him.

In Alma, Ark., February 18, 1880, after a brief illness, in the 71st year of her age, Mrs SUSAN C. ALEXANDER, relict of the late Robert M. Alexander, for many years a resident of Mecklenburg county, N. C.

Mrs. Alexander was a faithful Christian, full of charity, active in all good works; her confidence in the Bible was remarkable, and her whole life a beautiful commentary on the teachings of our Saviour. She frequently repeated in her lucid moments the words of the hymn,

"The hour of my departure's come;
I hear the voice that calls me home;
At last, O Lord, let trouble cease,
And let Thy servant die in peace."

She quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

BEN DECHARD.

On Saturday morning, March 6th, 1880, JOSEPH MARTIN, third child of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ewart, near Caldwell's Station, N. C.

He was an interesting child, and one whose departure is mourned by many relatives. Cut off after a short illness of only one week, he has gone to that better land and forms one more tie to draw his relatives' thoughts and affections from the cares of this world of sin to fix them upon heaven. Then, oh! grieving mother, weep no more. Think only of your darling as resting safe on the bosom of Jesus and be reconciled. This tender flower is only removed from the stifling air of earth to bloom in the pure air of Paradise.

A FRIEND.

At his home, near Jackson Springs, in Moore county, on Sunday evening, the 15th of February, Mr. DANIEL McKENZIE, in the 75th year of his age.

He was a man of prominence, influence and usefulness in his neighborhood and in his church—Mineral Springs—in which he exercised the office of ruling elder for many years. He will be greatly missed in the social circle, at the house of mourning, in the prayer meeting, in the Sabbath school and in the church. The faith in which he lived did not desert him in the hour of death. He expressed himself ready to depart and be with Christ, and the providence of God in his departure says to us who remain—"Be ye also ready."

PASTOR.

In Morganton, N. C., on the 17th of February, little MAUD, a twin daughter of Col. S. McD. and Mrs. Jennie P. Tate.

Although but a little over five years of age, she had long been noted for her brightness, and frequently caused surprise by the sageness of her remarks. From the very first she seemed impressed with the belief that her illness would prove fatal; but so far from being alarmed she more than once expressed a desire to go. The writer cannot believe that this was the result of any romantic turn of mind, but rather the working of the Holy Spirit, gently preparing her for heaven.

R. B. A.

In Newton, N. C., on the 16th of February, Mrs. CAMILLA GAITHER BELL, relict of Mr. Thos. A. Bell, in the 70th year of her age. She was the daughter of Mr. Lebetious Gaither, deceased, a ruling elder in Tabor church, Concord Presbytery.

Having made a profession of religion early in life, she remained a consistent member of the Presbyterian church until her death. She was an invalid for many years, but latterly had enjoyed better health than usual. This, however, did not cause her to be less faithful: on the contrary, those who knew her well marked her rapid growth in grace and preparation for her heavenly home. A fall on the ice was the cause of her last illness, during which she several times expressed an earnest desire to depart and be at rest. Now that her wish has been granted, a circle of devoted friends deeply lament their loss.

A BREECH-LOADING REPEATING RIFLE FOR $6.50. THE IMPROVED "CHICHESTER."
Weight from 5 to 8 Pounds. Length of Barrel 22 Inches.

The many readers of this Paper will no doubt remember, during the past six months, having seen our advertisement of the new celebrated CHICHESTER RIFLE, accompanied by flattering editorial notices in the New York "Tribune," "Atlas," "World," and other leading newspapers throughout the country. In response to a universal demand from all quarters, we decided to materially improve our rifle, and as now offered it is the most complete weapon of the kind in existence. [illegible] CHICHESTER [illegible] CHICHESTER RIFLES are WARRANTED and GUARANTEED [illegible] The CHICHESTER will never be sold at the immense profit asked by the manufacturers of other fire-arms [illegible] We GUARANTEE the CHICHESTER to be equal in MATERIAL and WORKMANSHIP to any Rifle in the World. [illegible] BEAR IN MIND this is no old-fashioned paper cartridge army gun [illegible] It is a BRAN NEW REPEATER, using regular Metallic Cartridges of 22, 32 and 38 calibre, which are sold everywhere. FIRES SEVEN TIMES [illegible] CHICHESTER [illegible]

WE WILL SEND ONE CHICHESTER SEVEN SHOT REPEATING RIFLE as described above, to any address for $6.50, carefully boxed [illegible] RIFLE CO., W. N. [illegible], Treasurer, 31 Montgomery Street, Jersey City, New Jersey, U. S. A.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATERS
For Gout.

Case of Dr. P. W. Young, of Oxford, N. C., during the late War a Surgeon of the Confederate States Army.
OXFORD, N. C., January 29th, 1880.
COL. THOMAS F. GOODE:—Dear Sir: In the month of August, 1879, prostrated by a severe attack of Gout, with which I had then suffered for several months, and in such a condition that I scarcely hoped ever to be able to resume active professional life, I visited the Buffalo Lithia Springs. I was without appetite; my digestion was imperfect and painful, my nervous system shattered, and the victim of neuralgia in all its forms; my spirits so greatly depressed and so feeble that I could walk but a short distance without assistance. The first noticeable effect of the water was upon the secretion from my kidneys and skin, both of which were acting very imperfectly and failing to properly depurate the blood. The secretion from the kidneys had been for months scanty, high-colored, of high specific gravity, very acid in its re-action, and depositing upon standing a very large sediment. With the re-establishment of a healthy state of these two important secretions, the great depurators of the blood, my convalescence was soon and rapid—my appetite returned, my digestion became perfect, and my nervous system regained its tone. I became more cheerful and hopeful, and gradually regained my strength. My general health is now perfect and I have resumed the active practice of my profession. For my restoration, under a kind Providence, I feel that I am entirely indebted to the Buffalo Lithia Waters.
Respectfully, P. W. YOUNG, M. D.

THE PACIFIC
GUANO COMPANY.

This Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was chartered in 1865.

The stock was taken by a few of the largest and wealthiest merchants in Boston and New York, who still direct and control the Company.

The Works, situated at Woods' Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., are the largest and most complete of the kind in the United States.

The Company owns several large deposits of Phosphate, which it works, and having acid chambers, manufactures its own Oil of Vitrol.

The Company employs and consults with several of the leading chemists and most progressive vegetable physiologists in the country.

With all these advantages—viz: long experience, ample capital, large works, splendid machinery, extensive deposits, and the best scientific ability, the Company can and does offer a Fertilizer at the lowest possible price.

By reason of the liberal policy of the Company, as well as the intrinsic value of its principal brand, SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO has become, unquestionably, the most popular Fertilizer in the United States, its sale extending from Maine to Texas.

It would be a work of superogation for us to do more than simply call attention to the fact that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO will be offered this (the fifteenth Spring) season for sale at all points in North Carolina, because there is no manufactured Guano as long, as widely, and certainly none more favorably known, than this brand.

We therefore will devote but a few lines to a description of this popular article, preferring that others should testify from their own practical experience as to its value.

It is proper, however, that we should call attention to a comparative analysis of Fertilizers sold in North Carolina, published in 1878, by Prof. Ledoux, the State Chemist of North Carolina, who places SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO among the very highest grades known.

Such an endorsement of SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, confirmed as it is by Hon. L. L. Polk, the Commissioner of Agriculture, under whose auspices the analysis was published, is certainly worthy of note.

This year SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is equal, in every respect, to what it was in 1879.

It is manufactured by the same Company, under the same formula, using the same materials, and hence must give the same splendid analysis as that published by Prof. Ledoux.

It is in fine physical condition.

It is packed in new, clean bags, each bag containing 200 pounds.

The analysis is stenciled on each bag, as required by law.

FOR THE FAMILY.

To-Morrow.

"To-morrow never comes!"
Said my little child one day.
"To-morrow is so long to wait,
So very far away."

"To-morrow never comes!"
I've thought it o'er and o'er,
To-day is all that we can claim,
We must not look for more.

"To-morrow never comes!"
Although before our face,
The shadow of another day
Is always on our race.

But when we try to overtake,
We find the shadows flown,
And then it is to-day again
And our to-morrow's gone.

We have a little space
Dealt out, in which we may
Do all our work for God and heaven,
And that is called to-day.

O! why then should I wait
For time which may not be?
To day will come again in turn,
But may not come to me.

Lord! make me strong and wise;
And let me not delay
To do the work Thou sendest me,
While it is yet to-day.

Not Ashamed of His Colors.

BY MRS. ANNIE A. PRESTON.

Boy wanted. Enquire at No. 1 Exchange street. Private office.

Everybody in the large manufacturing town of Handsborough and its vicinity knew that "No. 1 Exchange street" was the large wholesale and retail china and glass warehouse of Lowell, Clark & Co. Everybody also knew that a situation in that old and respectable house was the most desirable one that could be had in all that region, and at the same time the most difficult for any boy or young man to secure.

Among a group of bright, handsome lads who were reading that advertisement in the Handsborough Morning Journal on this fair autumn morning, was Tom Harding. "Just like Major Lowell to advertise in that short way, with no particulars," said he. "He will just enjoy having half the boys in this town, and in a dozen other towns about here, answering that advertisement in person. It will then give him a chance to question, then quiz, and then discharge them with a long lecture. And the Major will remember everyone of them who had the hardihood to come before his awful majesty, and will call him by name should he happen to meet him at any time during his mortal life. I want a job bad enough, but I won't go near him."

Nevertheless, that afternoon Tom Harding did walk along down to No. 1 Exchange street in company with his cousin, Ernest Sawyer, who had seen the laconic advertisement in a copy of the Journal his father took at his home in Hudsonville, twenty-five miles away, and had come up to Handsborough at once on the noon train to answer it in person.

"I came in the baggage car with my brother, who is the baggage-master," said Ernest. "I am a sort of extra hand for the railroad company so it did not cost me anything to run up. I should like the situation first-rate; father knows Major Lowell, but I suppose there isn't much chance now, it's so late in the day, for one thing."

"Not a shadow of a chance," said Tom, "but as long as you are here, we will run down there and see the show. I have heard of a dozen boys already who couldn't get the job. I saw two or three of them; they looked crest-fallen enough."

"Hallo," said Tom, as the two boys were walking along arm in arm, "what sort of a badge is that you are sporting on the lapel of your coat? You can't be a Free Mason; you're not old enough for that."

"Oh, no!" replied Ernest, laughing and turning around so that his cousin could get a better view of the bit of bright blue ribbon with its modest silver pin bearing the words, "Dare to do Right."

"Thunder!" cried Tom. "It will be as much as your neck is worth to walk through the streets of this town among the roughs with that temperance banner waving on your person. I advise you to take it right off."

"My brother told me I had better remove it as we were coming up," said Ernest, "but I have as good a right to carry my colors in sight as, for instance, that fellow has to carry his," and the strong, intelligent-looking lad nodded towards a large, very obese, bull-necked, low-browed man, with a small red nose, and purple, blotched cheeks, standing in the door of a dingy "restaurant" the two boys were just then passing.

"Ha! ha! Jack Wood does carry his colors pretty conspicuously, that's a fact. Hurrah there! Now for some fun. See that little man trying to stand there just inside the door? His money is all gone, and, 'Big Jack' is going to clear him out."

"That is rather rough treatment, however," said Ernest, as the burly saloon-keeper hurled a slight, very intoxicated Irishman down the steep, wooden steps. The latter stumbled, fell, then gathered himself up and tried to walk along, but his motions were so unsteady that the people passing upon the sidewalk were continually running against him. Presently a porter who was very carefully carrying a large basket of china-ware came along. The intoxicated man was just in the act of pitching down in front of him, when he was quickly and deftly seized by Ernest and set upon his feet again. The lad then gave the porter's heavy burden a steadying hand at the same time with flashing eyes and resolute mien bidding the rabble, which had now gathered about the Irishman, begone and let the poor, intoxicated fellow alone.

Ernest was not a very large boy for his age, but his bold, determined manner and the decided way in which he doubled up his fists and struck an attitude of defense, caused the sidewalk to be instantly cleared.

Just at this moment a fine-looking, elderly gentleman came down the steps of the large store on the corner opposite.

"Well done, my lad; well done," said he. "You not only saved the poor drunken fellow's head, but you rescued that package of china of mine from a general smash. I have a passion for china, and these beautiful and delicate wares that pass through my hands are just like flesh and blood to me. I must confess that I was in a fever of excitement when I looked up yonder and thought that lot, which was on its way to my best local customer, Esquire Russell, must surely have a tumble on the stone pavement.

"And what is this blue temperance badge, and the motto 'Dare to do Right,' worn by a boy in the streets of Handsborough for?" asked the old gentleman who had now approached the lad and was examining the ribbon and pin. "I advertised for a boy that I wanted in our store this morning. I have had a stream of applicants already, but I have found no boy who exactly suits me. Some were too weak and dainty, some were too ignorant and some knew too much, and so on, and so on. I—"

"This boy is my cousin, Ernest Sawyer, from Hudsonville, Major Lowell," spoke up Tom, who had remained in the background somewhat during the fracas and when the Major first addressed Ernest, but who now came forward boldly enough. "He came up on the cars this noon to answer your advertisement, and we are on the way to your store, sir."

Ernest was duly hired by Major Lowell, has since been promoted, and is now in a fair way to become a member of the prosperous and well-known firm of Lowell, Clark & Co. Through his influence there are many young men in Handsborough to-day who are not ashamed to let their Christian as well as temperance principles be known by their walk and talk—in other words—are not ashamed to wear their colors.

"I Must Do More for my Mother."

"Is there any vacant place in this bank which I could fill?" was the inquiry of a boy, as with glowing cheeks he stood before the president.

"There is none," was the reply. "Were you told that you might obtain a situation here? Who recommended you?"

"No one recommended me," was the answer; "I only thought I would see."

There was a straightforwardness in the manner, an honest determination in the countenance of the lad which pleased the man of business, and induced him to continue the conversation. He said, "You must have friends who could aid you in obtaining a situation. Have you advised with them?"

The quick flash of the deep blue eyes was quenched in the overtaking wave of sadness, as he said, though half musingly, "My mother said it would be useless to try without friends;" then recollecting himself he apologized for the interruption, and was about to withdraw, when the gentleman detained him by asking him why he did not stay at school another year or two, and then enter into business life.

"I have no time," was the instant reply, "but I study at home, and keep up with the other boys."

"Then you have a place already?" said his interrogator. "Why did you leave it?"

"I have not left it," answered the boy quietly.

"Yes, but you wish to leave it. What is the matter?"

For an instant the child hesitated; then he replied with half-reluctant frankness, "I must do more for my mother."

Brave words! talisman of success anywhere, everywhere. They sank into the heart of the listener, recalling the radiant past. Grasping the hand of the astonished child, he said with a quivering voice, "My good boy, what is your name? You shall fill the first vacancy for an apprentice that occurs in the bank. If, in the meantime, you need a friend, come to me. But now give me your confidence. Why do you wish to do more for your mother?"

Tears filled his eyes as he replied, "My father is dead, my brothers and sisters are dead, and my mother and I are left alone to help each other; but she is not strong and I want to take care of her. It will please her, sir, that you have been so kind, and I am much obliged to you." So saying, the boy left, little dreaming that his own nobleness of character had been as a bright glance of sunshine to the busy world he had so tremblingly entered.—S. S. Times.

A Hunting Adventure.

While traveling in India an English officer once spent a night in a small village, the inhabitants of which were much alarmed by a large panther which lurked in the jungle just beyond their houses. They begged the officer to kill it before he proceeded on his journey. He succeeded in finding and wounding it the next morning, but before killing it had a terrible struggle, which he describes as follows:

"Having warned the village shikaree to keep close behind me with the heavy spear he had in his hand, I began to follow the wounded panther, but had scarcely gone twenty-five yards when one of the beaters, who was on high ground, beckoned to me, and pointed a little below him, and in front of me. There was the large panther sitting out unconcealed between two bushes a dozen yards before me. I could not, however, see his head, and whilst I was thus delayed he came out with a roar straight at me. I fired at his chest with a ball, and as he sprang upon me the shot barrel was aimed at his head. In the next moment he seized my left arm and the gun. Thus, not being able to use the gun as a club, I forced it into his mouth. He bit the stock through in one place, and whilst his upper fangs lacerated my arm and hand, the lower fangs went into the gun. His hind claws pierced my left thigh. He tried very hard to throw me over. In the meanwhile the shikaree had retreated some paces to the left. He now, instead of spearing the panther, shouted out and struck him, using the club as a spear. In a moment the animal was upon him, stripping him of my shikar-bag, his turban, my revolving rifle and the spear. The man passed by me, holding his wounded arm. The panther quietly crouched five paces in front of me, with all my despoiled property, stripped from the shikaree, around and under him. I retreated step by step, my face toward the foe, till I got to my horse, and to the beaters, who were all collected together some forty yards from the fight.

"I immediately loaded the gun with a charge of shot and a bullet, and taking my revolver pistol out of the holster and sticking it into my belt, determined to carry on the affair to its issue, knowing how rarely men recover from such wounds as mine. I was bleeding profusely from large tooth wounds in the arm; the tendons of my left hand were torn open and I had five claw wounds in the thigh. The poor shikaree's arm was somewhat clawed up, and if the panther was not killed the superstition of the natives would go far to kill this man.

"I persuaded my horse-keeper to come with me, and taking the hog-spear he had in his hand, we went to the spot where lay the weapons stripped from the shikaree. A few yards beyond them crouched the huge panther again. I could not see his head very distinctly, but fired deliberately behind his shoulder. In one moment he was again upon me. I gave him the charge of shot, as I supposed, in his face, but had no time to take aim. In the next instant the panther got hold of my left foot in his teeth, and threw me on my back. I struck at him with the empty gun, and he seized the barrels in his mouth. This was his last effort. I sprang up, and seizing the spear from the horse-keeper, drove it through his side, and thus killed him."

The Vatican.

The Vatican, then, is an immense and irregular pile of buildings, erected at different times, and with little attempt at architectural unity. It consists of countless halls and rooms, and these surround courts with colonnades and fountains. Many of them are lighted from above; but others, especially in the library, look out on sunny garden spaces where are close-clipped hedges, trim flower-beds, and orange and lemon trees laden with golden fruit. The halls given up to the statues and pictures—and there is half a mile of them, according to Murray—are cold and stately in their effect, and, despite a scaldino here and there, they will chill one to the marrow of his bones in half an hour. The Etruscan and Egyptian museums beneath are gloomy, but the library halls are warm and bright. Their walls are adorned with frescoes, their doorways and columns are of marble in all varying tints. The book cases are of rare woods, some paneled and carved, some painted with fruit and flower designs on a white or gold ground. These are all you see, the books being invisible. Rare, marble tables hold presents made the popes by kings and emperors in the last century: Sevres vases from the king of Prussia; malachite from Prince Demidoff, splendid candelabras from Napoleon I; little Prince Louis' baptismal font seat by Eugenie so long ago; rare illuminated missals whose covers are adorned with embroideries of gold and gem; a wonderful fald-stool from Tours, a mass of delicate carving in light brown wood, all ferns and wandering vines and bell-flowers, and lace like canopies over ivory saints six inches high which jewel the sides; all these are but a little of the beautiful things you see. You walk through hall after hall filled with rich and rare and curious articles, and get from every window glimpses of garden green or silvery fountain. You look back from the last hall down a vista so long that you cannot distinguish objects at the other end. The whole effect is of bewildering richness and beauty. But all these museums are much alike, I suppose, to ignorant eyes. The first one seen always stays in your memory as biggest and best.—Good Company.

Etching on Glass.

An article from the pen of William Gruene, of Berlin, on the process of etching drawings or letters on glass, in relief or opaque, has lately appeared in the Dresden Glasshutte, which, says the American Pottery Reporter, we have translated and present to our friends, the glassmakers of America. As is well known, indestructible drawings on glass are made by a cold chemical process, by etching with diluted fluoric acid, first covering the places not to be eaten away with an acid-resisting material. The fluoric acid dissolves the glass without affecting the appearance of the parts protected. In consequence the drawing or design appears slightly opaque. The desired effect is then obtained by mechanical means. The elevated parts are ground rough, so that the alternate rough and smooth portions form the picture. The drawings must be etched deep, in order to avoid the deep lines in the mechanical work. It is necessary that all parts which are to become opaque must be covered with the coating, in order to avoid their destruction by the fluoric acid.

The new process described by Herr Gruene avoids all the difficulties surrounding the present process of etching, and enables the workman to stamp, mark, and ornament glass as if it were paper. The principle applied is as follows: The quality of the fluoric acid used is the same as in the old process, but the drawing is no longer made with a substance absolutely proof against the acid, but with another, protecting the glass only to a certain point of time, thus showing in the drawing the elevated marked opaque appearance. For such a covering almost all the lacs, oil varnishes, greasy printing dyes, etc., except the solutions of asphaltum, gutta percha, and caoutchouc, can be used. If applied thin, they yield to the concentrated fluoric acid, even after a few seconds, no matter how firmly dried they may have become. If the substances for covering are used simply for the above named purposes, they yield only a very feebly marked design, partly marked and partly blank; but if dusted after application with a finely pulverized powder of metal, copal, or any other substance capable of rendering longer resistance to the fluoric acid, the opaque drawing is obtained directly. This is the essential point of the invention.—Scientific American.

Milton's Youth.

Milton lived in a time when "learning" was held of more account than original gifts, and it was at twelve years of age that he entered upon a system of self-development which was to prepare him for the great work he believed himself destined to achieve. When a boy of twelve he seized learning he tells us, with such eagerness, that he scarcely ever went to bed before midnight, and there is no sweeter picture than that called to the mind by Aubrey of the little enthusiast poring over his books at midnight, while the family are asleep and the maid servant is sitting up for him. As a natural consequence when he was at fifteen, sent to St. Paul's school, he had not—for accomplishments and perhaps for scholarship—an equal of his own age in England. And when, two years later, he went to Cambridge, it is no wonder if the young men were startled by the advent of this peculiar kind of student, with his fair hair, brilliant complexion, and large and lustrous eyes, of that hue which at one moment is called gray, at another blue. Though his features were perhaps even then serious, they were of perfect symmetry, while his courageous look, his lithe figure, erect and of about the middle height, seemed to indicate exactly the kind of youth needed at Christ's in the frequent town and gown "rows." It very soon became evident, however, that his appearance belied him. He was a good swordsman undoubtedly, but he had no leisure to exhibit his skill; he was given to late hours, but it was to rob from his sleep time for studying all sorts of subjects in all sorts of tongues. In short, his habits and his morals were eccentric, the first being most abstemious, the second most virtuous.—Athenæum.

Can We See Sound?

It has been demonstrated on various occasions that sound-waves of different quality produce forms of various shapes, but this important fact is shown in a novel and interesting manner by a new instrument which has been invented, called the phoneidoscope. The phoneidoscope consists of a cylindrical L-shaped brass tube, to the horizontal portion of which is attached an india-rubber tube and a wooden mouthpiece. At the termination of the vertical part of the instrument is a blackened brass disc, in which is an aperture. If the disc be now covered with a thin coating of soap and water similar to the preparation used in blowing soap bubbles, and voice or instrument be sounded close to the mouthpiece, a curious effect can be perceived in the soap film at the other end of the instrument. The vibration of the molecules of air in the tube is transferred to the film, and bands of rainbow-tinted color become apparent, varying in form as the voice or instrument changes, and assuming an endless variety of patterns. Change of pitch produces a noticeable alteration in the forms, and the same notes on different instruments are marked by variations in the patterns on the soap solution, the colors in which, as the tenuity of the film increases, becomes marvelously beautiful.—Scottish-American Journal.

As the down train ran into Salisbury last Monday evening it ran over and seriously injured a little daughter of ex-engineer Aldrich. The little girl was in the house when the whistle blew the station blow, and immediately ran out to the track. When the engine was within ten feet of her she stepped on the track and was knocked down. Her skull was fractured on the back part of her head, a gash was cut in her forehead, and two of her fingers were cut off.—Hickory Carolinian.

We learned from a prominent citizen of Jackson, N. C., while here last week, that on a late deer hunt, participated in by several of his friends in the county of Northampton, when the day's sport was about being completed, one of the dogs was found to be under the influence of hydrophobia, and became so, rabid and violent that he fiercely attacked and bit every dog of the pack. The huntsmen were filled with consternation and alarm, and to save themselves, and to prevent the spread of the terrible malady throughout the surrounding country, at once entered upon a war of extermination and slew the entire pack.—Petersburg Index-Appeal.

HENRIETTA, Monroe Co., N. Y., Jan. 5, 1880.

H. H. WARNER & Co.—Gentlemen:—I am a man 67 years of age, have lived in Monroe county, N. Y., most of my life, and believe there is no man of my acquaintance who would doubt any statement I might make. I have been a terrible sufferer of Catarrh of the Bladder for years. Hearing of a number of cures from the use of your remedy, and after taking a few bottles of your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, I was not only relieved, but found myself cured.

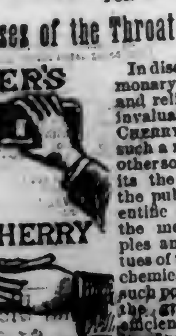
THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.



In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

It does not interfere with cleaning the tubes.
It will not choke up, and requires no cleaning.
It requires no direct dampers to be opened when raising steam (dampers being objectionable, as they may be left open and allow sparks to escape.)
It requires no water to extinguish sparks, which, by condensation, destroys the draft. Besides, when water is used, if neglected, the efficiency is destroyed by evaporation of the water, and the boiler is kept in a filthy condition.
It is simple and durable and can be relied upon.
It can be attached to any boiler.

WHAT IS THE REMEDY?

In our last communication we stated our conviction that the radical trouble was our failure to harvest and preserve the fruits of our labors. And the remedy for this: —— Make the people to love the Church. Show her excellencies.

And at this some pious souls stand aghast. Why—say they—this is sectarianism. Yet —my good brother, it is just because we have failed to make the people love the Church enough horror of what you call sectarianism, that the Church has failed to garner its own harvest. The N. C. PRESBYTERIAN in its articles—"What is the Matter," emphatically called attention to this grievous error of silence under misrepresentation until the world knows not us but our caricature. We have planned to declare the whole counsel of God. In affected reluctance of self-praise, we have robbed God of His testimony to truths which we profess to champion because divine, and actually betray and belittle them as our own personal property rather than the heritage of the saints. We must not make much of them, for being identified with us and distinctive of us, to make much of them were egotistical! The champion of ancient chivalry must not defend the widow's cause, for he would have to defend himself and that were selfishness! We must not avow and expound the excellency of revealed truths which we distinctively hold,—that were sectarianism. These truths have ceased to be the property of God and the Church,—they are Presbyterian property and to make much of them were self-praise! What manner of logic is this:—keeping a good to ourselves is charity; and urging it on the acceptance of others who have equal right to it, is selfishness and bigotry! What a complete reversal of sound conclusions. If this way of thinking result, as it inevitably and reasonably does, in the disparagement of the Presbyterian Church, why need we be surprised. To the praise of our pulpit it may be said that it preaches Christ as the remedy for sin. There is not much—in fact there is very little said in exposition of truths whose reception distinguishes us from other Christians. 'This is just as it should be'—some reader perhaps may say—'The conversion of sinners is our concern'. Let us pause to inquire—What one man of the world did you ever know to express admiration of the Presbyterian Church on the ground of its single-minded devotion to the conversion of sinners? On the other hand does not the world stigmatize us as cold, and hard, and selfish, and bigoted? And is it not true that those pulpits have the credit of big-hearted unsectarianism and unselfish devotion to the work of saving sinners which never omit an occasion for self-praise? "Our glorious old ——"; "See how God crowns our efforts with His blessing";—"we preach the Gospel to the poor";—"we reach all classes"; —"we preach free grace, others do not";—Come with us where you can get and do the most good";—these are samples of constantly recurring self-commendations which obtain ready acceptance at the hands of the masses. We do not think the style commendable nor recommend it for imitation.

But, says one, suppose we are not appreciated. Our object is to glorify God, not self. If we please the Master, that sufficeth. Ah! but are we pleasing the Master? Are we not putting contempt upon His testimony when we shun to declare any part of His will? He says—"all Scripture is profitable." We say —"Not so!—only those things absolutely essential to salvation are profitable. Evangelical Christendom has culled from the Scriptures all that is really for God's glory;—those things which distinguish us from the rest of evangelical Christendom are for our glory. True they may be profitable for us, but they are not for others. I would never invite people to join my Church. People can be saved without receiving election, saints' final perseverance, infant baptism, Presbyterian church government &c &c, and on these indifferent matters expediency suggests silence as the best policy." Then where is our raison d'etre,—why maintain our organization? Is it any wonder that the masses see no use for us, and that therefore we do not reach the masses. What wonder the world accounts us bigoted when we are wedded to a Church without reasons obvious to the world:—stupidity is essential to the idea of bigotry. From our premises some logically reach the conclusion that one Church–is as good as another, since all are aiming to reach the same heaven. Are we then to base our claims to preference on accidental social considerations?;—shall we urge others to unite with us because their parents, uncles, aunts, brothers, sisters, cousins, or friends are Presbyterians?—or because we are rich or influential, or in possession of a good choir, a tall steeple, a big organ, an unencumbered church property, or an eloquent preacher? I once heard a minister say that the popularity of the preacher was the churches best hope of growth! The writer of this can see no other reason for preferring the Presbyterian Church——worthy the attention of a Christian—than her superior scripturalness.

Is it not radically selfish to hold that only such revealed truths are worthy of serious presentation to the public as are necessary to salvation? Is salvation from hell the Christian's sole aim—or the glory of God? If this be not the selfishness of worldliness it is of "other–worldliness." Is there any wonder that such a theory justly exposes us to the charge of carelessness of the poor and ignorant? Salvation is all, and they can be reached by others; we need not be specially concerned for them;—we suit a more cultured class. Who will deny that this is a legitimate inference and that some even urge it?

Is it to be wondered that men respect those churches which insist upon the reception of truths they hold to be divine though admitted not necessary to salvation. The Baptists thus insist upon immersion. They do not claim that salvation depends on it, but they urge it as scriptural, and men esteem those who honor every word which proceedeth out of the month of God. Men are won to esteem others whose loyalty to what they think divine teaching is conspicuous,—and that too in the face of schismatical inferences, and disproportionate preaching of the water which is not necessary to save. The reason assigned for this disproportion finds respect:—"We are the only advocates of an unrecognized duty."

So-called liberalism gets no honor at the hands of men, for the reason that it disparages revelation. Whatever is revealed is profitable;—whatever is profitable should be preached.

What wonder that men see no attraction in a Church which insists only on what is common, leaving its distinctive features exposed defenselessly to caricature and abuse, while others urge their own with all the force of conscientious conviction, and divine commission.

A REVIEW.

The Faith of Our Forefathers, by the Rev. E. J. Stearns, D. D

This book purports to be a review and reply to the "Faith of our Fathers," by the Rev. —now Archbishop—Gibbons. We have read both books in a cursory manner, but we think with sufficient care to enable us to form a just judgment on them. The work of the Archbishop certainly excels in plausibility and sophistry. It is smooth and easy in style, but as a polemical work it is remarkably defective in argument and logic; so much so, indeed, that it carries its own refutation with it in its progress; as the reader is often constrained to exclaim in going over its pages, "Now, that is certainly not so."

Dr. Stearns, an Episcopalian, enters the lists in full armor, his chief weapon being the Word of God. He lays about him with such vigor and point that there is little or nothing left of the Archbishop's system that can hang together. In fact the Protestant doctor gives too much trouble and time to the subject, for

"Thrice he slays the slain."

Presbyterians and ordinary readers and students of the Bible are accustomed to make shorter work of papal pleading, "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."—Isaiah viii: 20.

Let any unbiased human being carefully read the gospels and epistles of the New Testament, and then Archbishop Gibbons' book. Let him first look on this picture and then on that, and then tell us where, in the Scriptures, can be found any warrant for the idolatrous sacrifice of the mass, purgatory, penance, auricular confession, celibacy of the clergy, infallibility, and so on. No two things can be at greater variance than the precepts of the Bible and the teachings of the Roman Church.

But our readers doubtless desire to know something of the way Dr. Stearns manages the Archbishop. Our space will not admit of much in the line of extracts, but here is one from page 3 of the Dr.'s book. He says:

"But I fear that straightforwardness is not a characteristic of the Archbishop; for I am sorry to say I have detected him in a gross and glaring misrepresentation of Luther's teaching on communion under one kind, leaving out in the first line of his citation two words on which the whole hinges, and stopping short of the end of the sentence, when if he had gone on and completed it, and given the next paragraph, his readers would have seen that he was making Luther teach exactly the contrary of what he did teach."

This will do for a specimen, but it is only a sample of systematic course of garbling with which Dr. Stearns charges the Archbishop of a course of suppressio veri suggestio falsi which not the humblest priest, let alone an archbishop, ought to stoop to. It is therefore almost a hopeless business to follow up an opponent who is addicted to such unfairness, to give it no harsher term.

The Archbishop at the beginning of his book gives as one of the characteristics of his church—its holiness. This word "holiness" has been as much and as often misapplied as the word "liberty" has been. Many things and persons have been called holy which ought to have been termed unholy. Every pope, no matter if he was the greatest miscreant that ever lived, has been termed "His Holiness." The most infernal system of spiritual despotism and bodily torture that mankind ever underwent was named the "Holy Inquisition." Had the Church of Rome earned during the dark ages in Europe her claim to holiness what a different world, what a different history we should have had! There would have been no Massacre of St. Bartholomew. There would have been no Autos-da-fe in Portugal, no Inquisition in Spain and Goa, Italy; no slaughter of the Waldenses and Albigenses in the vallies of Piedmont. There would have been no burning at the stake in almost every city of Europe of Christian men and women who testified against Rome. The perpetration of such enormities blots out all claim to holiness on the part of the Roman Church and indelibly stamps her of the earth earthy, showing that she is governed by a cunning, ingenious carnal policy.

We are not of those who fear any considerable turning of our people to the Roman Catholic belief. Upon the whole the tide is making in the opposite direction. In the United States and England a few of the male ecclesiastics of the Ritualistic Anglican Church and a few romantically inclined young women, neither sort known as careful students of the Bible, have gone over so Rome. To such we would recommend the study of 1st Timothy iv, and Revelation xxii. These passages, and many others which might be named, would at least make such persons pause and take heed of the fate they are courting. It would work wonders if some of those would-be perverts could be set down in any of the South American or Mexican States where, until quite recently, Rome has had it all her own way—where there have been few or no Protestants to keep them in check. There, for the worship of the Trinity, you see substituted that of the Blessed Virgin. In Rome you will see the wooden doll or image called the Santo Bambino worshipped by as dense a crowd as can be packed into the church Ara Coeli.

Take the Empire of Brazil. What did our respected Secretary of Foreign Missions and our devoted missionaries reveal to us of the state of morals and religion in our country? It was simply horrible.

But we have out-run our allotted space, and will conclude with an extract from Dr. Stearn's book, at page 166. Speaking of the struggle upwards of papal supremacy he says: "But the growth was slow. Even as late as the end of the sixth century, Gregory the Great denounced him who should call himself Universal Bishop, as the fore-runner of Anti-christ." And in a letter to Eulogius of Alexandria (I, vii: p. 36 cited by Bower, History of the Popes), thus writes: "If you give more to me than is due to me, you rob yourself of what is due to you, I choose to be distinguished by my manner, and not by titles. Nothing can redound to my honor that redounds to the dishonor of my brethren. I place my honor in maintaining them in theirs. If you call me universal pope, you thereby own yourself to be no pope. Let no such titles, therefore, be mentioned or even heard among us. Your holiness says in your letter that I commanded you. I command you? I know who you are, who I am. In rank you are my brother, in your manners my father. I therefore did not command. I beg you will henceforth ever forbear that word. I only pointed out to you what I thought it was right you should know."

Noble old Pope! How he dwarfs the popelings of a later day.

Since those days the papacy has developed wonderfully. The decrees of the Council of Trent and the Vatican Council have beyond any reasonable doubt established the papacy and the policy of the Court of Rome as the Anti-christ of the New Testament.

A SEMINARY DIALOGUE.

The following conversation between two members of the Senior Class may interest some of your readers. Robert is a Virginian, Charley from North Carolina:

"Well, Charley, congratulate me! I have my field of labor ready for me, and my work is all cut out."

"I know you are relieved. An uncertainty is always unpleasant. But where are you going, Robert?"

"As my own Presbytery is supplied in all its posts of labor, I was handed over, by recommendation, to the adjoining Presbytery, where I am to begin my duties at once, as soon as the Session ends. It was so thoughtful in my Presbytery to secure sure and immediate work for me. Have you yet decided, Charley, where you will go?"

"No. I have not the slightest idea."

"I thought that you had been in correspondence with a church in Kentucky."

"So I have been; calls have come, not only from that State, but from Mississippi, Texas, and Virginia. But I don't wish to compromise myself till I find that my own State does not need me, or will not have me; though, Robert, the call from Kentucky was very tempting."

"Then why did you not accept it? Do you expect a better call from North Carolina?"

"Better! By no means. But, though all souls are equally precious, yet I prefer being the instrument, in God's hand, of the conversion of one North Carolina sinner, than of one from any other State."

"Does your State need no young men to build up her waste places?"

"Yes, I hear of several applications being made by outsiders in behalf of other men in our class. But the vacant churches seem less disposed to move in the matter than the professors, who are interested in their students. Instead of the earnest elders writing here first, communications are sent from this place to seek the indifferent elders."

"Why do not your Presbyteries see that you have employment? It seems to me that they should show some interest in their candidates."

"It is just there, Robert, that the difficulty arises. North Carolina is continually complaining that her sons, especially her educated sons, desert her to give their influence elsewhere, just when that influence can begin to exercise itself. I used to join in condemning this unfilial spirit; but now I can see the other side. The Old North State does not hold out to her would-be loyal sons, the hand of sympathy and encouragement. Take for instance, the few of us here, almost ready to begin the battle of life. I don't say that we sons of Carolina are the proper men for service within her boundaries, but I must say that it is not just for us to be censured as disloyal or ashamed of our native State, after waiting for some voice of interest to come to us—some cry of need—some word even of remembrance—while all the time, pressing claims are being held in check, from other sections, where most promising fields of labor are inviting us by name."

"But, Charley, are you not doing yourself an injustice by thus delaying? You tell me that others of us are sought to do the work, which you are justifiable in thinking that you might at least be allowed to attempt. Is not the indifferent silence of your Presbyteries proof that you are not wanted? Their work will be done. They are not obliged to find you a corner in their portion of the vineyard."

"That is all very true; I don't object very seriously to any kind of treatment, except the voice of unjust reproach, amounting almost to condemnation, which will doubtless follow us, when we go where we are wanted, and where we will be likely to be appreciated. North Carolinians love and revere their own State, as much as you Virginians the Old Dominion; but their expressions of affection are apt to be cooled when by her silent eloquence she tells them that she can dispense with their services, then raises a wail when they leave her bounds."

"If you will take my advice, you will accept the first call that suits you, irrespective of State, Synod, or Presbytery; one where you can do the most good—wherever it may be."

"But I love the Old North State."

"But she does not seem to require your affection. I'll tell you what to do, Charley: stay here in Virginia. We will give you a welcome. We have already quite a sprinkling of North Carolina preachers among us, and they are right good fellows, too."

"Well, I will think over it a day or too. I suppose I must give up all idea of State-loyalty, or I might become a ministerial Cassibianca. But I wish the unrest of indefinite uncertainty was over. However, the bell is ringing. Come, Robert, let's go to chapel."

LENT.

This is the season when devout churchmen mortify the flesh. Forty days of fasting, humiliation and prayer. It has a very pious sound, and doubtless in many instances is productive of much growth in grace. But to a looker-on there are some things about Lent in practice which are open to criticism, however promotive to piety it may appear in theory.

There is something very artificial in this fixed period for humiliation, occurring with constant regularity each year, when every member of the denomination, regardless of peculiar circumstances, whether of sorrow or joy, regardless of personal feelings, whether buoyant and depressed, is expected to assume the demeanor of sadness and mourn over present and past sinfulness. There is something of the forced or assumed about this stated inevitable mortification of the flesh.

This idea which might otherwise be considered baseless and merely a prejudice is strengthened by the conduct of the observers of Lent immediately before and after the period of forty days. This is indicated by the derivation of the word carnival Every one knows that it is a very uproarious feast, during which decorum and sometimes even decency is laid aside and general abandon of hilarious gayety ensues; masquerades, with their coincident license and irregularity being common. Carnival is a compound from two Latin words, carni vale, i. e. "flesh! farewell." It is the last, longing, lingering taste or feast before entering the fast. While it is true that this custom is limited to Roman Catholic districts, yet we see the same tendency in kind though very far from the same in degree, among those who observe Lent. It is almost always preceded by some extra gayety —balls, dances, parties, &c.—in the week preceding, and sometimes actually on the very last night before they begin the Lenten season. As if it were something of an effort to utilize the time remaining, and get a good meal of such things before entering upon the period of crucifixion of the flesh. Easter Sunday further corroborates this view. It is the first day after Lent, and it is turned into a day of visiting, big dinners and general rejoicing, some of which would seem to the old fogy Presbyterians as inconsistent with the Fourth Commandment.

Moreover there is a temptation, scarcely to be resisted by weak, sinful human nature, to concentrate into this forty days the self-denial of the three hundred and sixty-five. A feeling that fasting and attending extra services for such a period has earned a sort of license for the rest of the year, or that this mortification of self atones for the indulgence of self at other times. Such a view would doubtless not be stated articulately, but it is exceedingly probable that in the minds of some it exercises no little influence in excusing the worldliness which at other times characterizes these observers of Lent. It cannot be denied by any one that the denomination which observes Lent is more generally addicted to worldly amusements than any of the others, and these outsiders looking on at this manifestation of self-denial may be pardoned for thinking that perhaps it would be better instead of concentrating it, to scatter it a little and spread it over the whole year; perhaps even then there would be some spaces thinly coated.

IDEM.

HOW MUCH WORK?

It is an impression with many people that a minister's life is an essentially easy one. The boy who said he wished to be a preacher because he would have so little to do, expressed an opinion that is widely prevalent, not only among children, but grown people as well. It is entertained under the belief that a sermon or two is hastily collected on Friday or Saturday, and preached without much effort on the Sabbath, the rest of the week being given up to such pursuits and recreations as taste and convenience may suggest. To people who have such impressions the talk of overworked pastors sounds as strangely contradictory as the mention of a dark sun-shiny day or a laborious life of ease.

There are reasons, of course, why such opinions are taken up. In the first place, not many people know how to estimate the exactions of intellectual labor, or to understand the cost of its production. It seems to be an easy thing for a man of some practice and experience to preach a sermon. As they do not see him spend much time on it, they conclude that he does not do so, and then proceed to reflect upon the easy life that is made up of two days of work and five of recreation. In addition to this, the whole ministry is often judged of by the few who do not properly represent it. There are those ordained to preach the Gospel who but poorly remember their vows, and spending their time in idleness or in pursuits that are illegitimate, bring reproach upon the calling that they ought to honor and recommend. It is but according to what is natural in all the relations of life that unthinking people, and especially complaining and fault-finding ones, take these cumberers of the ground as the representatives of their profession, instead of such as are really devoted to their duties in fruitful zeal.

The true minister is always a man of industry. His conscience requires him to spend his time economically in such good work as will help him preach and otherwise make known the Gospel. Laziness, in his eyes, can be nothing but a crime. But even if conscience should fail him, his duties demand that he shall give them all his energy. If he is to succeed, keeping up with his work, neglecting none of the interests asking his care, and attaining to the ends set before him as the aim of his ambition, he cannot do otherwise than spend himself in continuous toil. It is toil, of course, that in his better moods he is glad to engage in. The complainers among them generally belong to that class that does the least. The earnest, living ministry is uncomplaining, except as it laments its shortcomings and bewails its inefficiency, striving meanwhile to do more for the world where it has its mission, and for the Master whom it is sworn to serve. And if people will make up their judgment of the whole profession from those who are faithful and true, they will be led to entertain right opinions of those who are sent as teachers of the truth, as they will also be better prepared to profit by their instructions. And let it be the aim of every minister of Christ to give himself wholly to his work, that, fulfilling the trust committed to him by the Master, he may prove to all who know him that his life is devoted, not only to love, but to the labor of love, for the good of the souls of men.—United Presbyterian.

THE OTHER SIDE.

The London Record, in an article on the reported changes from the Protestant Church to Romanism, turns to the other side, and says:

If a list can be furnished of "Rome's Recruits," it can be met with a record of "Protestant Recruits." We have before us a long list of persons of distinction in the Church of Rome who have quitted it and embraced the truth.

A Prince-Bishop heads the list; superiors of convents, numerous professors and doctors of theology, three members of the Holy Inquisition, and high functionaries of the Papal staff, figure in it. It includes the names of a nephew of Dr. Manning and of a first cousin of the late Dr. Cullen. The fact is that there has been both flux and reflux. Some have quitted Romanism and some have embraced it, among those whose names are so notorious that they are heard of.

But the true way to view the question is to consider whither Rome is now influencing the masses of mankind more than she formerly did. To this an unhesitating negative may be given. He would be a bold man who would assert it of France. He would hazard a very loose assertion who would declare it of Austria or Spain, or of what were formerly the Spanish colonies of South America—colonies heretofore the very hot-beds of the most ignorant and fanatical superstition. A Romish Bishop in the United States openly mourns over the loss of more than a million of Irish, who have in some way unaccountable to him lapsed from the ranks of the "faithful," and who are nowhere to be tracked by their former shepherds. They are confounded among Protestants, if they have not embraced Protestantism. At present they neither worship at Romish altars, nor, what is still worse, do they pay as a compensation for their absence.

Peace does not dwell in outward things, but within the soul; we may preserve it in the bitterest pain, if our will remain firm and submissive. Peace in this life springs from acquiescense even in disagreeable things, not in an exemption from suffering.—Fenelon.

ADVICE TO A YOUNG MAN.

My son, don't be in too great a hurry to accept "advanced opinions." It is "the thing" to be "advanced" in this progressive day and generation, but there's a heap of shallowness in it. Did you never notice, my son, that the man who tells you he cannot believe the Bible is usually able to believe almost anything else? You will find men, my son, who turn with horror and utter disbelief of the Bible and joyfully embrace the teachings of Buddha. It is quite the thing just now, my son for a civilized, enlightened man, brought up in a Christian country and an age of wisdom, to be a Buddhist. And if you ask six men who profess Buddhism who Buddha was, one of them will tell you he was an Egyptian sooth-sayer, who lived two hundred years before Moses. Another will tell you that he brought letters from Phœnicia and introduced them in Greece; a third will tell you that she was a beautiful woman of Farther India, bound by her vows to perpetual chastity; a fourth will, with little hesitation, say he was a Brahma of the ninth degree and a holy disciple of Confucius; and of the other two, one will frankly admit that he doesn't know, and the other will say, with some indecision, that he was either a dervish of the Nile (whatever that is) or a felo-de-se, he can't be positive which.

Before you propose to know more than anybody and everybody else, my son, be very certain that you are at least abreast of two-thirds of your fellow-men. I dont want to suppress any inclination you may have toward genuine free thought and careful, honest investigation, my son. I only want you to avoid the great fault of atheism in this day and generation; I don't want to see you try to build a six-story house on a one story foundation.

Before you criticise, condemn and finally revise the work of creation, my son, be pretty confident that you know something about it as it is, and don't, as a man who is older in years and experience than yourself, don't, let me implore you, don't turn this world upside down and sit down on it, and flatten it entirely out, until you have made or secured another one for the rest of us to live in while you demolish the old one. If ever you should develop into an "advanced" atheist, my son, just do that much for the rest of us.—Burlington Hawkeye.

CHILDREN OF THE VERY POOR.

Oh 'tis a fine thing to talk of the humble meal shared together! But what if there be no bread in the cupboard? The innocent prattle of his children takes out the sting of a man's poverty. But the children of the very poor do not prattle. It is none of the least frightful features in that condition that there is no childishness in its dwellings. Poor people, said a sensible nurse to us once, do not bring up their children; they drag them up. The little careless darling of the wealthier nursery, in their hovel is transformed betimes into a premature reflecting person. No one has time to handle it; no one thinks it worth while to coax it, to soothe it, to toss it up and down, to humor it. There is none to kiss away its tears. If it cries it can only be beaten. It has been prettily said that "a babe is fed with milk and praise." But the aliment of this poor babe was thin unnourishing; the return to its little baby-tricks, and efforts to engage attention, bitter ceaseless objurgation. It never had a toy, or knew what a coral meant. It grew up without the lullaby of nurses; it was a stranger to the patient fondle, the hushing caress, the attracting novelty, the costliest plaything, or the cheaper off-hand contrivance to divert the child; the prattled nonsense (best sense to it), the wise impertinence, the wholesome tales, the apt story interposed, that puts a stop to present suffering, and awakens the passion of young wonder. It was never sung to; no one ever told to it a tale of the nursery. It was dragged up to live or to die as it happened. It had no young dreams. It broke at once into the iron realities of life. A child exists not for the very poor as any object of dalliance; it is only another mouth to be fed, a pair of little hands to be betimes inured to labor. It is the rival, till it can be the co-operator, for food with the parent. It is never his mirth, his diversion, his solace; it never makes him young again, with re-calling his young times. It makes the very heart bleed to overhear the casual street-talk between a poor woman and her little girl, a woman of the better sort of poor in a condition rather above the squalid beings which we have been contemplating. It is not of toys, of nursery books, of summer holidays (fitting that age); of the promised sight or play; of praised sufficiency at school. It is mangling, and clear-starching, of the price of coals, or of potatoes. The question of the child, that should be the very outpouring of curiosity in idleness, are marked with forecast and melancholy providence. It has come to be a woman before it was a child. It has learned to go to market; it chaffers, it haggles, it envies, it murmurs; it is knowing, acute, sharpened; it never prattles.—Charles Lamb.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from exchanges:

The death is announced of Hannes Arnason, Professor of Philosophy at the Theological School of Iceland. He has left 30,000 crowns for granting stipends to theologians who wish to study philosophy abroad, especially in Germany.

The demand for theological works in England is amazing. There were no fewer than 757 new works published last year dealing with the subject. Theology beats fiction; there were 607 new novels.

Father Chiniquy sailed from Sydney, Australia, to New Zealand, about the close of last year. He raised about £5,000, delivered 230 addresses and scattered a large number of books, pamphlets, &c.

The McAll Missions in France, numbering 32 stations in Paris, Lyons, Bordeaux, and Boulogne, have been conducted without church connection until the present time, but they have become so important that a committee has been appointed to take charge of them. This committee has decided to give each mission a church connection; each station will be placed under the direct patronage of some one of the churches. The general meetings will be continued by Mr. McAll and his agents, and in addition to them a Bible-class will be conducted by the rector of the station.

The Warder, a paper published in Dublin, Ireland, states that a "Popular Catechism" has has been published in Chili by the Roman Catholic Church, in which the case against the Presbyterian missionaries is summed up in these Words: "The Protestant doctrines are horrible in theory and immoral in practice, abhorrent to God and to man, vicious to society, contrary to all purity of thought, and devoid of all shame. Neither the Pagans nor the Turks have ever attained to such impiety of doctrine."

Fifteen years ago there were sittings for but 39,000 persons in the Nonconformist churches of London. Now there are 122,000 sittings, and thirty new chapels are building, with a seating capacity of 1,000 each, while the money is in hand for twenty more of the same size.

The total preaching power of the English Methodist connections is given at 38,000 preachers, of whom only some 3 600 are ordained ministers, and the remaining 34,400 laymen. These lay preachers go out from Sunday to Sunday, and preach the Gospel in towns and villages. They are selected for the work by the authorities of their respective circuits, and are forbidden to receive any remuneration.

Iceland, the region of intense natural cold, is full of religious warmth. The Word of God is the text-book of the people. Every home has its Bible, not just as an ornament, nor as the well-kept cherished marriage gift, nor because of some undefined superstitious feeling of reverence, but for daily use. In Iceland the Bible is constantly read. As a consequence, Iceland is without a theatre or prison. There is no such office as sheriff. They own no cannon, and military drill is an unknown science.

A bill has been introduced into the British Parliament which proposes to materially alter the marriage laws. In order to relieve Roman Catholics and Dissenters the bill proposes that it shall no longer be necessary to have the attendance of the district registrar of marriages at the celebration of the ceremony in Roman Catholic and Dissenting places of worship, and provides for the abolition of fees payable to the Registrar on those occasions. Provisions of a permissive character is made in the bill to enable clergymen of all denominations to perform the ceremony of marriage after twelve in the day without the necessity of a special license, and one of the clauses relieves clergymen of the Church of England who may have conscientious objections from the duty of marrying divorced persons. It is further provided that any omission of a technical character in the preliminaries to the performance of the ceremony shall not invalidate a marriage after consummation. The registration of the marriage by the minister officiating or in the register of the place of worship in which the marriage has been solemnized is to be taken as legal evidence, as is the case with marriages performed in the Church of England.

A strong proof of the progress made by Protestantism in France is given in an article describing the "Religious movement at St. Just (Oise)." In the public square of the city is a spacious and imposing church, where, till a few months ago, the Catholics worshipped. As this church is replaced by a new edifice, they do not occupy it any longer, and the municipality disposed of it at its pleasure, and the Protestants have engaged it for their services. M. de Pressense and M. Dhombres have preached there to a thousand or twelve hundred listeners crowding in the hall. As the latter was recently preaching on the distinctive characteristics of Protestantism the large audience listened with great satisfaction, and at every instant they applauded his sentiments. When his discourse was at an end M. Dhombres said: "Gentlemen, I am going to do an act of courage and of Christian fidelity. I invite you to stand up and to join in the prayer which I am about to address to our Heavenly Father;" and lo, the entire assembly stood up, and a thousand Catholics joined in an evangelical prayer, offered with deep emotion in the French language, under the astonished vaults which for centuries have been the witnesses of Roman ceremonies.

THE BURNING QUESTION.

Shall the Western North Carolina Railroad be sold, or shall it not? That is the question which is filling the pages of the secular press; that is the question now ringing through the State from the mountains to the sea. But before the Legislature now assembling to decide that question a greater will arise. Shall the taxes now imposed upon the sale of spirituous liquors be abolished, or so reduced as to be no more than the name? Liquor associations are forming to urge upon the Legislature to place liquors in the scale of taxation on the general footing of merchandise. The plea advanced will be justice, and we accept the plea. If the tax on liquor is unjust let it be abolished; so will respond every citizen of North Carolina. But is the tax unjust? Have the lawmakers here, the lawmakers the wide world over, so misunderstood the commonest principles of fair dealing among men as, without a cause, to lay an onerous special burden on a particular branch of industry? Indeed, they have not. The imposition of this charge is based on the incontrovertible principle that that which, in an especial manner, produces and maintains the large proportion of the expenses of government should yield the income to liquidate those expenses. A fairer principle would be to reduce the expenses by abolishing the cause of them; but with that we have not now to do. Our prisons, our insane asylums, our judges, solicitors, sheriffs, constables, policemen, juries, all these draw their support from the taxes of the people. Rightly enough they must be supported, as for the maintenance of order they exist; but who or what is responsible in the largest measure for their existence? The liquor traffic. This, it will be said, is not argument—it is assertion. But it is assertion stronger than any argument, the assertion of an axiom, founded on intelligent observation, slenderest or most profound. How many crimes, how many violations of law of greater or less degree, occur in which, directly or indirectly, there may not be found the trace of ardent spirits? Does one ever hear of a quarrel, even, between those who never touch the accursed glass?

We do not point to our houses for the poor, nor do we look in upon our asylums, we pass our cemeteries, but we enter our courts of justice: Why such ever recurring questions as these: Do you drink? Were you drinking at the time? How long had it been since you took the last glass of liquor? Who has not heard these questions? And what means it all? That alcohol is the parent of crime! Just this, and nothing more. Why, on days of public commotion, are the liquor shops closed, while all other branches of trade are under no ban? The question answers itself: Alcohol is the parent of crime!

If the liquor traffic does not pay the civil expenses who shall pay them? Where are our temperance organizations while this thing is progressing? Should they not be at work? What is doing is not done in a corner. It is openly proclaimed that a direct effort will be made as we have indicated. At the meeting of the Legislature, called for another purpose, a measure like that proposed might not, probably would not, meet the opposition it deserves and may be hurried through. In the interest of sound morality and good government, we call upon the secular press, for surely they can be independent in this matter, and especially we call upon the religious press, to sound the warning loud and clear. With the people wide awake, and their common sense at play, we have no fear that this great evil can be perpetrated. We cannot believe that the time has come when the people of North Carolina can deliberately consent to have their taxes increased, and ignorance, pauperism and crime augmented that the liquor traffic may be encouraged and fostered.

OUR SOOCHOW APPEAL.

What can North Carolina do? What ought we to do? What will North Carolina Presbyterians do? We have published our brother Rev. John W. Davis' appeal to the men and women of the Presbyterian Church in North Carolina. It is earnest, pointed, practical. "What manner of hearts have ye?" he asks. After years of study of a most difficult language, and the translation of the Gospels and Acts into the Soochow dialect, when they are ready to teach anxious souls the way of life, sore difficulties block their way from need of larger premises for the gospel work. The Committee of Foreign Missions have no funds to appropriate, and Bro. Davis turns to his native Synod of North Carolina for relief in Christ's name.

We have no word of argument. The day for that has passed. But we have a suggestion—a proposition. One thousand dollars will secure the place needed in Soochow. That is two hundred dollars from each of our five Presbyteries. In a few days these courts will be in session to do the Lord's work. Cannot each one arrange a public meeting in the interests of Foreign Missions, and on the spot raise $200, and send it to Baltimore for this holy work? Twenty persons in each Presbytery to give ten dollars each can surely be marshaled, can they not, on that day? But no; we say let fifty or one hundred christian men and women in Orange, in Mecklenburg, in Fayetteville, in Concord, in Wilmington, say, "This appeal of our North Carolina representative in China shall be met promptly. We five hundred will answer by prayer and prove that our prayers mean something by buying these needed mission premises that Christ may be preached to dying heathen, calling for the bread and water of life." Let it be done, North Carolina Presbyterians. Send your money, if you will not be at Presbytery, by your pastor or elder. Be represented in this property in China.

The ladies are always first in moving forward promptly to appeals that move the heart or stir the conscience. Here we give a communication from a lady residing within the bounds of Mecklenburg Presbytery:

"In view of the great need of funds to sustain our missionaries, and to manifest our sympathy in one who has gone from our Synod, Rev. John W. Davis, cannot the ladies of our various churches undertake to raise a sufficient amount to purchase the building so much needed for the successful prosecution of his work? The appeal which he makes should not pass unheeded by us. Had our Board the ability to make this outlay of $1,000 the sum necessary to make the purchase, Mr. Davis would not have addressed to our churches the appeal which appeared in the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN recently.

"We would suggest that a committee of ladies be organized in each church within our bounds to solicit contributions to this urgent call and transmit the same to the editor of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN.

"A FRIEND OF MISSIONS."

A lady writes from Concord Presbytery. The letter was not written for publication, but we use our discretion in inserting in entire:

"A few weeks since I read in the PRESBYTERIAN an appeal from Mr. J. W. Davis, missionary in Soochow, for aid in purchasing a house in which to conduct his school.

"We are a 'feeble folk,' and not able to do much, but I thought some one must make a beginning, and I have succeeded in raising a small amount, which I will forward as soon as I have information as to who is the proper person to receive it. I think the required sum could easily be raised, if somebody in each congregation in our Synod would herself visit every Presbyterian family in her immediate neighborhood, and solicit a small contribution. Please bring the subject before the readers of our dear old PRESBYTERIAN, and I feel almost sure every heart will respond and every purse be opened.

"And just here please allow me to make a suggestion. Besides the many who are friends of Mr. Davis and of missions, there are in every denomination many lovers of the curious, and the idea suggested itself that if Mr. Davis would send over a small collection of curiosities, including coins of various nations, they might aid materially, if sold, in raising the desired amount.

"I do not write this for publication, but place the contents at your disposal."

We will, of course, willingly receive and forward any funds sent, but a better plan will be to forward funds direct, or through the treasurers of presbyteries to Rev. Dr. Richard McIlwaine, Treasurer, box 331, Baltimore, Md., with specific directions as to their application.

DELEGATES TO ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

As heretofore announced the Old Dominion Steamship Company will kindly alter their schedule to accomodate the delegates. The steamer will leave Newbern for Washington early on the morning of the 24th. In order to take advantage of this most pleasant route, delegates must reach Newbern on the train at 10 p. m., Tuesday, as the steamer makes but one trip on this altered schedule.

2. To those coming via Tarboro we would say that the boat leaves Tarboro for Washington at 6 a. m., on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. The extreme dryness of the season makes this route uncertain. If the weather during the week preceeding the meeting should be dry, the boats in all probability will not be able to run further than Greenville, half way.

3. There is a daily stage line between Newbern and Washington, but from personal experience of it we would advise no one to trust its tender mercies except under the spur of dire necessity. It leaves Newbern at 6 a. m., daily.

The first route mentioned is decidedly the most desirable, affording the pleasure of a trip on a comfortable steamer, by day-light, through the sound and up the Pamlico river.

S.

GOOD FRIDAY.

In a week or two—or more or less, for we are not exact in this regard—we shall have before us what the Roman Catholics and what some Protestant sects call Good Friday, and observe as a holy day—a very holy day—for some Protestants do not hesitate to declare it more holy even than the Christian Sabbath.

At this time, as rarely fails at the close of the Lenten season, large numbers of persons are in this city from the surrounding country with their timber and other produce. They may have been many days, perhaps weeks, from home. On what our friends are pleased to call Good Friday, should they have closed their business and be ready to leave, not a dollar could they get from bank. At heavy expense they may be compelled to await the resumption of business, it may be remain over the Sabbath here or en route for their homes, or as an alternative may travel during the Sabbath? Is this right?

When the custom of observing Good Friday began, we do not know, and in this matter, of those who observe it few, we presume, are wiser than we. Its trace would probably carry us well down into the earliest ages of the Christian Church to the time when images and pictures, and gorgeous ceremonies and gilded trappings, and feast days and fast days first came in to attract the heathen and to curse the Church. One thing we know, there is no trace, no suspicion even, of it in the Scriptures.

But if we are not greatly concerned to know when Good Friday originated, we are concerned to know why those Protestant denominations who do not regard the day as sacred, not reckoning those outside of all denominations, should be compelled at least to seem to respect the day, and our concern is the greater because the non-regarders are in the large majority.

Why, in plain words, in Wilmington are the municipal offices closed? The overwhelming majority of our citizens do not regard Good Friday as a holy day. Is there any reason why the convictions of the small minority of our citizens should be specially respected? Many of us would be glad to know if there is anything that entitles the denominations above referred to to the special deference and respect indicated by this attempt at enforcing all of us to observe their religious enactments. We decidedly resent the imputation manifested in this public and authoritative manner, that the views and opinions of Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians are of less importance than those of other and smaller denominations.

Our banks, our exchanges and our schools close their doors and go—a fishing, or a hunting, or—it matters little what is done, the impression made upon the public mind, an impression that will broaden and deepen with time, is that those who regard a certain Friday of each year as a day above days—a Holy Day—are right, and of necessity those who think otherwise are wrong; and if a holy day those who observe it by religious services are better Christians than those who do not. The influence upon us may be small, but upon our children in their estimate of our Church, which should be their Church, it will be most potent.

There is nothing in the way of superiority of wealth; talent or piety, in those who represent Good Friday, to warrant this extraordinary deference to their views. The cause of thus yielding is found in that easy good nature, which delights to call itself liberality, and which, while it may command the smooth words of flattery, utterly fails to secure respect.

A SLIP.

We are requested to say that, by a "slip," the tickets to be issued to the members of Orange Presbytery, over the North Carolina Railroad, were limited to six days. The time is found to be too short, and an arrangement will be made to extend it sufficiently before the members will buy tickets. The extension will probably be to twelve or fifteen days; but a reply to the application cannot reach us in time for publication in this issue.

"I MAKE NO PROFESSIONS."

How common this remark! It is generally offered as a sufficient apology for a godless and perhaps a positively or actively wicked life. When the words are uttered the speaker seems to think that they give him a discharge from all obligation or a species of patent right to engage in any sinful course he chooses to pursue. He criticises very severely an inconsistent member of the church and thinks that he places himself in a bomb-proof when he says: "As for me, you know, I make no professions," uttered with a sense of freedom, sometimes even with boastful self-gratification. The inconsistent church member is certainly guilty; but is this critic the man to cast the first stone, boasting the while that he not only does not do his duty, but does not even make any attempt to do it—is perfectly indifferent to its claims upon him? Such is the meaning of the vindication—"I make no professions."

FAITHFUL SERVICE REWARDED.

At the December meeting of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia, it was remembered that the Secretary, Rev. Wm. E. Schenck, D. D., has just completed a quarter of a century in the service. In all that time he had never been absent a month continuously from sickness, for recreation, travel, or any other cause. This remarkable and creditable record of faithful service to the Church having been mentioned, the Board did the worthy act of unanimously voting Dr. Schenck a leave of absence of six months for a visit to Europe. He and his wife will sail about the 20th inst. for Antwerp, and will make an extensive tour of the Continent, and Great Britain and Ireland. He will examine the great benevolent publishing houses of Europe during this trip. Few men have labored more faithfully for his Church in so prominent a field, or better deserved so handsome a compliment for that devotion.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

We have a large number of communications on hand, and have to beg the patience of our friends. We can, in justice to other interests, devote only a certain portion of each issue to these favors.

We invite attention to the dialogue on our first page between students in the Seminary relative to employment at home. Our presbyteries ought to look after this matter. Recently we published the names of the graduating class; we now again give the names of the North Carolinians in that class: John H. Dixon, Query's; Frank P. Harrell, Lumberton; Lanchlin A. McLean, Fayetteville; Jas. N. H. Summerill, Salisbury.

We publish this as a matter of duty: Mr. Anthony Comstock calls attention of colleges and seminaries to the fact that Mrs. Mattie Kendall, of Lebanon, N. H., is writing everywhere for catalogues, stating that she has a daughter to educate. He says: "This card is supposed to be that of the wife of one William A. Kendall, Jr., who formerly published a weekly paper at Lebanon; that they have only one child, and that the handwriting on the card is evidently that of the husband. For what purpose these cards are sent to all the institutions of learning I do not know, except it be to secure the names of the students; and, as this woman has not a family of children to educate, it seems hardly reasonable that she should send to New Orleans, to Colorado, and throughout the Western States, in this manner, as has been done." The publishers of vile literature have many devices for obtaining the names of innocent boys and girls, whom they may corrupt secretly with their wares. Parents and educators need to be on their guard.

A correspondent writes to the Northwest Christian Advocate:

"What proportion of Methodist preachers who hold a respectable position in the ministry are content to remain there, having no expectation or desire for any Church preferment that will take them out of the pastorate? . . . . And the Methodists once regarded preaching as the chief function of one who was called of God to the ministry. In other denominations, such as the Baptist, Congregational and Presbyterian, the pastoral relation is now looked upon as the most honorable and useful position in the Church. How many prominent Methodist preachers can be found who are not willing to be thought of as candidates for any office within the gift of the General Conference! No Church, it seems to me, can reasonably expect real and permanent prosperity when the great body of those who minister at her altars are more than willing to abandon the work in which they are engaged."

We have lately been throwing the light upon some deficiencies of the Presbyterian Church and we publish the above merely to show that other Churches have their failings; this much by way of comfort to those who are too downhearted as to Presbyterianism. Well, the best way to correct an evil is to bring it to the front and then freely discuss its cause and its remedy.

Through Rev. Roger Martin the Presbyterian churches of Shoo Heel and Centre sent $64 73 to the Irish sufferers. The contributions, Mr. Martin is careful to state in due justice, were made by citizens generally.

Dr. Harvey says, in his work entitled "The Pastor: His Qualifications and Duties:"

The pastor should aim to secure in every family a good religious newspaper. This is a matter of primary moment, for such a paper is an ever-present force, educating religious thought and feeling, and enriching and elevating practical life. Most pastors would be startled, on making the inquiry, to find how few families in their congregations take a religious paper, and how many are taking only trashy, and often morally poisonous publications, the habitual reading of which must utterly neutralize the instruction and influence of the pulpit. The magazine and the newspaper are the habitual reading of the family circle; and the pastor who fails to exercise watchful care in regard to the character of this reading, will often find it one of the most destructive forces at work among his people.

Brother Wood, of the Methodist Advance, says that in Texas the Presbyterian women are preaching. We will ask our brother to give us particulars of time and place. We have denied that statement on what we considered best authority, and we want the bottom facts. Our good brother has been misled by an exchange that rather hastily published an unfounded statement. That's all.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

DEATH OF A MINISTER.

The Palmetto Yeoman, of Columbia, S. C., in its issue of March 10th, contains the following:

"Rev. T. H. Cunningham, for the past six years pastor of Ebenezer Presbyterian Church, of Charleston, died suddenly yesterday of hemorrhage of the lungs, at the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. T. Stenhouse. Mr. Cunningham was a native of Anderson, from which place he went to Charleston. He had just completed his thirty-third year, and was highly esteemed as an earnest and efficient preacher."

We would be glad to furnish our readers with a memorial sketch of the life of the deceased brother, but have not the information at hand.

Rev. J. H. Fitzgerald writes us with regard to the meetings at Durham, N. C.:

Dr Smith commenced the services on the 2d Sabbath of February and preached with great acceptance to the congregation until Thursday. Two persons professed their faith in the Saviour up to the time he left, and several others were known to be inquiring the way of life. A general seriousness seemed to pervade the congregation. Dr. Smith returned the next week and preached on three nights, and Brother Mebane, of Graham, came on the following week and preached two nights, at which time we thought it best to close the unusual services. Some of those who were known to be serious are entertaining a trembling hope, and will, ere long we trust openingly confess Christ. The congregation has been much encouraged in Christian work by the labors of our two brethren.

The Hillsboro Mail says: "The congregation of the Presbyterian church has decided by a unanimous vote not to accept the resignation of their esteemed pastor, Rev. J. H. Fitzgerald.

CHAPEL HILL CHURCH.

On Sunday, February 29th, Rev. James L. Currie was installed in due form, as pastor of the Presbyterian church at Chapel Hill. The sermon was preached by Rev. J. H. Fitzgerald, and the charges to pastor and to people were delivered by Rev. J. S. Watkins. The sermon and the charges, as we see from the notes given by the Chapel Hill Ledger, were most appropriate and instructive, and were peculiarly interesting as being the first services of the kind, after the Presbyterian order, in the community.

An esteemed correspondent remarks in reference to the subject:

"I will only add that never before has our building been so crowded, and never have more earnest words been spoken for the Master.

"We are now really on our feet once more as a church, and everything looks bright before us. The great and crying want at this place has been a resident pastor. No minister, however eloquent and pious, can build up a congregation by spending two or three days in each month in the place and preaching for them twelve times a year. For years it has been the case that the Presbyterians had no one to whom they felt that they had a right to go for pastoral help or comfort or council. Brother Currie pleases everybody; faculty, students and everyone are delighted with him. He is earnest, educated and sympathetic, and has taken right hold of the work. Several families have come into the church and others are coming.

"The main trouble for some time, of course, will be the raising of $500 annually, but with the kindness of friends who recognize the importance of having our church strong and active in this University town, we have nearly all the necessary funds pledged for 1880.

"We know you will rejoice with us in our new life and brighter prospects.

"Yours in the cause, PRESBYTERIAN."

THE LOGIC OF EXTREMES.

The human head was so upset by the Fall that it is hard indeed for it to do correct thinking or right reasoning. The most careful education and grace combined, do not repair the intellectual damage. Hence few men, perhaps none, are able to take a complete view of any moral or religious subject at any one time. Some reason in a straight line without reference to collaterals, others in a circle, and others from pole to pole. The last is the most common mode of reasoning; and I doubt not is the fruitful cause of half our errors. It is after this style:

Whatever is wrong is as wrong as it can be; this course of conduct is wrong; therefore the place of right and safety is that point farthest removed in the opposite direction. It acknowledges no half truth, no mixture of truth and error, no middle ground. To avoid the excesses of one extreme, it plunges into the follies of the opposite. And the chief office of history has ever been to note the oscillations of the great human pendulum.

To verify this truth one only has to turn back a few pages in the history of life. By far the saddest fact in the present aspect of Christianity, is the low estimate placed on the value of the Christian ministry. In this case it is entirely safe to take the world's method of judging the value of an article; i. e., the amount we are willing to pay for it. Look then into the records of any Protestant church, and you will find a vast number of cases in which the pastor is required by the Christian people whom he serves, to live and support a family on a salary of less than $300. And this pastor is also required to be the best informed, the most liberal and the most hospitable man in the community. They put the shackles of poverty upon him, and then demand that he shall live like a gentleman of wealth and leisure, and withal they teach the world to belittle his sacred office, by talking of hiring him to preach for another year. Whence comes this unrighteous paradox? Do we get it from the Bible? If the Bible were a treatise on commerce, it would inculcate no such teaching. Is it the outgrowth of Christianity? Infidelity is more liberal. It is the rebound from one extreme to the other. The reformation found the Catholic clergy sadly corrupt, and laying burdensome taxes upon the people, to be used for the promotion of their schemes of ambition, or for the gratification of their vicious appetites. The strong hand of reform tore away the veil, and exposed the villainy. Then followed an immense re-action against the luxurious and easy life of the ministry which resulted in a general indifference to their support at all. To avoid the sins of the Catholic extreme, the whole Protestant church plunged into the follies of the opposite; and all the powers of grace have not prevented the disastrous results of this reckless logic. Three hundred years have passed and still the error is not corrected. The Reformation has got to reform itself on this subject. The Protestant ministry is to-day the least appreciated, and the most poorly paid class of valuable men in all Christendom.

The Free Church of Scotland is leading a reform in this matter; and perhaps in another century Protestantism will learn that the truth lies in the middle ground between pampering and starving her ministry.

Other instances of this ruinous reasoning, history affords without number; but I wish to note that the Church is still the victim of this often repeated error, and is made to sell the truth for that which has in it a semblance of heroism for truth.

A hundred and forty-five years ago a great religious excitement originated in New England and extended into the Presbyterian congregations in Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey. The leadership of the movement fell into the hands of unwise and reckless men, and as a consequence all manner of indiscretions and follies were committed. Visions, trances and prophetic dreams were common. In the public assemblies people fell into violent convulsions, fits and faintings, and the public worship of God fell to the dignity of an Irish funeral or a Virginia corn shucking. Good men were drawn into the excesses. Gilbert Tennent earnestly defended and President Edwards did not condemn them. This excitement was called the great revival. Up to this date there had been little use for this word in the christian terminology of this country. Hitherto it had meant "an awakening of men to their spiritual concerns," but henceforth it conveyed the additional idea of noise and confusion. The excitement subsided, the revival ceased, and at once there followed in the churches a state of declension, division and spiritual desolation. The description of the condition of the Church at this stage by Edwards is hardly surpassed in pathos by the "Lamentations of Jeremiah."

Similar excitements have occurred at later periods of our history, and sometimes with similar results. Even now may be witnessed scenes in christian congregations which should make any christian man blush for shame. This is one extreme: religion run wild. But what of the effect? With some it is still popular. It is a spiritual condition without which they seem unable to live at all, and hence they press forward as if they feared that they had not reached the outer limit of the extreme. Not so with the most of the Presbyterian churches. They recoil at it, and are driven far towards the other extreme. Many of us stand high up in the North Temperate zone, while others have crossed the line of the Frigid with an inclination still northward. Many of our people are wholly indifferent, while others are utterly opposed to "revivals of religion" altogether. This is not imaginary. One of the wisest and best men of our Synod told the writer of these lines, not long since, that he had no sympathy with any religious meeting where there was any manifestation of feeling above that resulting from the ordinary preaching of the Gospel. But he was asked: Suppose that at the close of one of your ordinary sermons twenty persons were to present themselves, expressing great concern about their salvation, what would you do? Would you not preach for them the next day—a week, or a month, if necessary? No, sir! was his prompt reply, I should close my church and go home. This from a great and good man; and he is not alone in such a conviction. Is it to be wondered at that the question is being all over the Synod—"What is the matter?" Is it at all strange that some of our congregations are as leafless as a lamp-post? Is it a matter of surprise that some of us preach regularly and statedly for a quarter of a century, to a dissolving view? This extreme position has the appearance of a heroic protest against religious fanaticism: but it is an error, a huge error, which has been damaging and disastrous to our Church. It has stood since 1740, and still stands as a mountain in the way of progress. We must abandon it. We must learn that a "revival of religion" does not mean animal excitement, noise and confusion, but an awakening of the souls of men to their eternal interest. We dare not allow the ghost of an error to drive us to an indifferent and half-hearted performance of duty. But while firmly resisting the excesses of enthusiasts and fanatics, let us, with all the energy and power that we have, preach the Gospel to the world, praying ever—"Lord revive Thy work."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Vergil: By H. Nettleship. Series: Classical Writers, edited by J. R. Green. D. Appleton & Co., New York. The spelling of the title is the author's. This series is very valuable to those who delight in classical history.

Appleton's Journal for April gives us the following: The Return of the Princess; The Suez Canal; Health at Home; The Seamy Side; Henry Thomas Buckle; The New Fiction; Middle Class Domestic Life in Spain; Stage Anomolies; Fragments; Editor's Table; Books of the Day. Single number 25 cents, $3 a year. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

Blackwood's Magazine for February is richly stored as follows: The Reign of Queen Anne; Bush Life in Queensland; Mabel's Holy Day; A White Rajah; Reata, or What's in a Name; To Constantinople by the Shipka Pass, Oct. 1879; Jemmy Blinker; British Interests in Ireland. Leonard Scott Publishing Co., New York.

Ceremonial Institutions: By Herbert Spencer. D. Appleton & Co. Contents: Ceremony in General; Trophies; Mutilations; Presents; Visits; Obeisances; Forms of Address; Titles; Badges and Costumes; Further Class Distinctions; Fashion; Ceremonial Retrospect and Prospect. A glance or two convinces us that the book is very readable, and displays much information on the subjects treated. Price $1 25.

D. Appleton & Co. have sent us "The Crayfish," one of their International Series of books. An Introduction to the Study of Zoology. By T. N. Huxley. Eighty-two illustrations. The author says in his preface: "I have desired to show how the careful study of one of the commonest and most insignificant of animals, leads us, step by step, from every day knowledge to the widest generalizations and the most difficult problems of zoology."

In the Missionary Herald for March, Boston, is a capital article on "The Monthly Concert," by Dr. Humphrey of Chicago. The illustrated children's department is charming.

The Bible Commentary. By the Bishops and other Clergy of the Anglican Church. Edited by F. C. Cook, Canon of Exeter. Vol. 2 of the New Testament. St. John and the Acts of the Apostles. Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York. 1880. This is the only volume of this great "Speaker's Commentary" we have examined. The scheme for providing a more accurate commentary for educated English readers, upon the text of the authorized version of 1611, originated with the Speaker of the English House of Commons. Six volumes have been published upon the Old Testament, and this is the second upon the New Testament. The Gospel of St. John has been prepared by Canon B. F. Westcott, D. D., Regius Prof. of Divinity at Cambridge. The Introduction of Acts is by Canon F. C. Cook, and the commentary and critical notes by Wm. Jacobson, D. D., Bishop of Chester. The introductions are able, elaborate and suggestive, reflecting the light of latest investigations, and successfully meeting the assaults of sceptics, rationalists, neologists, and the extreme wing of the Tubingen destructionists. Especially we commend the Introduction to Acts for lucidity, elaborate analysis of the book, and polemic vigor. The comments are generally succinct, but rich, and the fruit of best ancient and modern exegesis and discovery, and introduce in English dress to those not great scholars much invaluable knowledge of God's Word. We regret that Canon Wescott felt impelled to give up John vii: 53 to viii: 11, which many eminent scholars maintain to be authentic, and that the Bishop of Chester, while acknowledging the richness of Calvin's commentary on Acts should be somewhat afraid of that great scholar's "doctrinal prepossessions." Some passages have naturally a rather churchly complexion. But the book is a valuable contribution to the critical and practical exposition of the Textus Receptus, and offers occasionally elaborate scholarly disquisitions on important questions.

Studies in the New Testament. By Chas. S. Robinson, D. D., pastor of Memorial church, New York city. $1 50. Chas. Scribner's Sons, New York. 1880.

Originally the twenty-seven studies now collected here were published in connection with the International Lessons. Dr. Robinson is one of the ablest and most successful Presbyterian pastors in New York; and the secret of his power is manifest in these colloquial expositions. They afford a happy exemplification of a profitable reading of any selected portion of God's Word, in the light of all Scriptural, so that it may become luminous, and illustrate the beautiful harmony and oneness of all revealed truth. Wide scholarship, poetic taste, common sense, and effective enforcement of Scripture, are manifested throughout these studies.

The Sanitarian, for March (A. N. Bell, M. D., Editor, New York), presents another instalment of the proceedings of the American Health Association at Nashville, and sundry discussions of Quarantine and Naval Hygiene. If such literature were widely read, our general health would be greatly benefited.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Changes of Post Office Addresses.—Rev. W. E. Hill, from Point Pleasant, W. Va., to Newbern, Pulaski county, Va.; Rev. R. C. Walker, from Parnassus to Storer's Shop, Augusta county, Va.; Rev. Reuben Lewis, from Holcombe's Rock, Bedford county, Va., to Coleman's Falls in same county.

The Presbyterian church, Salem, Roanoke county, Va., on Sunday, February 22d, extended a call to Rev. S. E. Axson, D. D., of Rome, Ga., to become their pastor.—Christian Observer.

The 4th Sabbath of February was communion day at Hebron church, in Lexington Presbytery. Rev. Alexander Sprunt, of Augusta church, assisted the pastor, Rev. F. H. Gaines. There were eight additions to the church. This gives a membership of 200. Two years ago 130 were reported to the Assembly. There has been a corresponding increase in the size of the congregation, in the Sabbath school, and in Christian liberality.—Central Presbyterian.

An election for elders was held in the First Presbyterian church, Staunton, on Sunday, February 29th, which resulted in the choice of Dr. N. Wayt, Gen. R. D. Lilley, Capt. H. L. Hoover and Mr. H. D. Peck.—Christian Observer.

The church at Washington, Ark., has secured the services of Rev. G. F. Robertson, of Princeton Seminary. He is a North Carolinian, a graduate of Davidson College. He is expected about the 1st of May. That church has lately been deprived by death of its senior elder, Col. W. A. Carrigan, an elder for twenty-eight years. He was in his eighty-eighth year.—S. W. Presbyterian.

The Medical College of Georgia awarded the degree of M. D. to Rev. Dr. R. Irvine, of Augusta, Ga.

The Presbyterian congregation of Winona, Miss., are anxious to build a comfortable house of worship, and solicit aid. Donations may be sent to Mrs. F. M. Shryock, Winona, Miss.

Three persons have been received into the Presbyterian church of Weatherford, Texas, two by certificate and one on examination.

The Rev. Dr. Ferdinand Jacobs, President of the Female College at Laurens C. H., S. C., has accepted an invitation to supply the church of James Island, near Charleston.—Southern Presbyterian.

The Rev. T. E. Smith, pastor of the church at Cartersville, Ga., has accepted an appointment as evangelist in Dallas Presbytery, Texas.—Ib.

The proceeds of a fair for the purpose of raising money to enlarge the parsonage of the Presbyterian church at Pine Bluff, Ark., netted the sum of $425.

Rev. W. S. Johnson, an Evangelist of Dallas Presbytery, reports through the Texas Presbyterian: "The heavy snow storm kept me at home six days longer than I expected, so that I missed the first Sabbath at Weatherford, but I was there on the second Sabbath; then on to Graham where I administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. I received two members on examination, and baptized one adult and one child. Graham is a very encouraging field and I have decided to move there during next month, if possible to do so. Near Caddo, in Stephens county, I found a little group of members hungry. I hope to be able to organize a church there very soon. At Palo Pinto I received a cordial welcome. The Northern Presbyterian minister had left there. The way is not clear for an organization now, but I hope soon will be. At Handley I found our church in trouble; no stated preaching, and some trouble among the members, they sadly need a pastor."

In regard to New Hope church in Palmyra Presbytery, Rev. J. M. Travis writes to the St. Louis Presbyterian: God has again specially blessed my field of labor. The Spirit's power was granted to the people of New Hope church, and the whole community seemed interested in spiritual things. Eight names were added to the roll of our church. Brother John A. Calhoun, of Palmyra, preached the most of the time for us, and with his usual power and efficiency.

A very delightful communion season was observed in the Central church, St. Louis, Mo., on Sunday, 14th inst. The pastor, Dr. Brank, announced that since the previous quarterly meeting celebration of the Lord's Supper, the Session had admitted seven persons on examination and seventeen by letter.

Rev. W. T. Spears writes to the Christian Observer of a profitable meeting of eight days at Florence, Ky., which closed on Sabbath night February 29th. He was assisted by Rev. W. T. McElroy, of Danville, one of the best expounders of God's Word in the Synod of Kentucky. He preached with marked acceptance to the people, as was manifest in the large attendance outside of our own Church. Mr. J. H. Hopper, Sabbath School Missionary, was also present, and did good service in visiting, from house to house, in prayer, exhortation and singing, in all of which he is very efficient. Two young ladies were received into the church on profession of their faith in Christ.

On Wednesday before the third Sabbath in February a protracted meeting began in the Presbyterian church of Bristol, Ky. During the progress of the meeting, which was continued sometime, there were some twenty conversions. Eleven persons were received into the Presbyterian church on profession. Rev. G. A. Caldwell, pastor of the church, was assisted by Rev. J. B. Converse, who did most of the preaching.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. S. S. Murkland died at his home in Farmville, Va., on the 1st inst., in the 73d year of his age. His early life had been spent in the foreign missionary work. At one time he was a pastor in Richmond, Va., and latterly his attention was specially directed to missions in the South. He was father of Rev. Dr. W. U. Murkland of the Southern Church.

It is announced in the Examiner of New York that Dr. Charles S. Robinson and the Memorial church have done the graceful thing of offering the Fifty-third street Madison avenue Baptist church, New York, the full use of its house of worship through the coming summer months.

The new Presbyterian church at Appleton, Wis., was dedicated on the 15th of February. It is a beautiful church, costing $20,000, and is the finest Presbyterian edifice in Northern Wisconsin. The prospects of the church are very fine.—Presbyterian.

EPISCOPAL.

Soon after Easter St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, Rochester, N. Y., will receive an altar costing $8,000, as a memorial presented by a family formerly belonging to that parish.—Presbyterian.

REFORMED (DUTCH) CHURCH.

A new professorship of the English language and literature has been founded by the trustees of Rutgers College. The funds for the support of this chair have been secured to the college by the consistory of the North Reformed church of Newark, N. J., as trustees of the legacy of the late Mrs. Crane. The Rev. Charles E. Hart was elected to this chair, and the trustees also conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.—Presbyterian.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

The late merchants' excursion to Charlotte was a grand success in a financial point of view.

A correspondent writes that in the Cabarrus section, wheat, when not injured by insects—and there has been little injury of the kind—is looking fine, perhaps too fine for thus early in the season.

The United States signal station at Pike's Peak, Colorado, is 14,336 feet high—the loftiest inhabited building in the world.

Early amber sugar cane will be largely planted in Fayette county, Texas, this year. A sugar factory is being established at Lagrange, with a capacity of sixty tons of cane per day.

The retinue the Empress of Austria takes with her to Ireland is enormous. Twenty-five sit down in the steward's room and sixty-five in the servant's hall every day to meals, —ninety in the household. In the stables there are about fifty horses.

Prof. W. E. Hidden of New York, a mineralogist and scientist, is prospecting in North Carolina. He was formerly in the service of Prof. Edison, but is now prosecuting his researches on his own account. He expresses very glowing opinions of the mineral resources of the States.

Davidson College is said to be in better condition than at any time since the war. The financial condition is better, it is growing in popular favor and is doing better work. It has 111 pupils. It is undoubtedly at the head of the list in North Carolina, and has been for a good while.

For two years past or more Dr. L. R. Dickinson, proprietor of the Southern Planter and Farmer of Richmond, Va., has been engaged in systematic forgery of the names of Messrs. Jeter and Dickinson, proprietors of the Religious Herald, of Rev. Dr. Geo. B. Taylor of Rome, Italy, and of Rev. Charles E. Taylor, Professor in Wake Forest College, N. C. Of the persons whose names were used Rev. A. E. Dickinson is a brother and the Messrs. Taylor brothers-in-law of Dr. Dickinson. The death of Rev. Dr. Jeter and the consequent examination of accounts by the executrix rendered it no longer possible to conceal the crime. The forged notes thus far discovered represent $28,000. All the Richmond banks lose something, but the heaviest losses will be upon private individuals. Dr. Dickinson has fled, leaving behind him a confession of his sin and folly, and assigning the attempt to extricate his business from embarrassments as the cause of his crime.

PRESBYTERIAL NOTICES.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet at Laurel Hill church, Richmond county, N. C., Wednesday, April 21, 1880, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The usual blanks will be mailed to all the churches in due time. Let these blanks be carefully filled and sent up to Presbytery at Laurel Hill.

The assessments for the "Presbyterial Fund" are considered due April 1st, and should be promptly paid. Churches which are credited to this fund will be duly notified by the Treasurer. J. P. McPHERSON,
Stated Clerk.
Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 7, 1880.

The Presbytery of Wilmington will meet at Brown Marsh Church, Bladen county, on Thursday, 25th March, 1880, at 12 M.
JAMES M. SPRUNT, Stated Clerk.

Delegates intending to be present at the opening exercises of Presbytery at Brown Marsh and coming via Wilmington must leave Wilmington the day before at 7 p. m. per C. C. Railway, and land at Clarkton, where the Committee of Arrangements will be awaiting their arrival. A. McFADYEN.

The railroads make their accustomed commutation of rates.

The Presbytery of Harmony will meet at Iberaw, April the 7th, 1880, at 8 o'clock, P. M. W. A GREGG, Stated Clerk.

The 220th session of the Presbytery of Orange will be held in Washington, N. C., on Wednesday, the 24th of March, 1880, at 7 p. m. F. H. JOHNSTON, Stated. Clerk.

Delegates and visitors to the Presbytery will be passed by the Richmond & Danville Railroad to Goldsboro and back, round trip, two cents per mile. Tickets must be bought which will be good for —— days from date, and must be endorsed by the Clerk at Presbytery, to be good to return

Presbytery of Mecklenburg will meet at Dallas, Friday, March 19, 1880, at 7 p. m.

Assessments for Presbyterial Fund are due at this meeting. Daily trains on the C. & L. N. G. R. R. arrive at Dallas at 6 p. m. Parties coming by rail must arrive at Gastonia station (and junction) on the Air Line railroad before 5 o'clock p. m. Persons not regular members expecting to attend Presbytery will please report to Maj. N. Matthews, R. W. Landifer, J. K. Marshall, W. F. Holland, Committee of Arrangements.
R. Z. JOHNSTON, S. Clerk.

Concord Presbytery stands adjourned to meet at Davidson College on Thursday, April 8, at 11 a. m. WM. W. PHARR, S. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 16, 1880.
H. H. WARNER & Co.—Dear Sir: - I write to say that after having taken your Safe Pills and finding all that is claimed for them in your circular, I cheerfully recommend them as the best Pills in the market.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and Throat and Lung, Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative power in thousands of cases has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. SHERAR, 149 Powers' Block, Rochester, New York.

15 Pounds Gained in Three Weeks, and CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

Messrs. Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GENTLEMEN:—Please send me twelve bottles of Dr. A. JAMES' CANNABIS INDICA, one each of Pills and Ointment, for a friend of mine who is not expected to live; and as your medicines cured me of CONSUMPTION some three years ago, I want him to try them. I gained fifteen pounds while using the first three bottles, and I know it is just the thing for him.
Respectfully, J. V. HULL.
Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

This remedy speaks for itself. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. There is not a single symptom of CONSUMPTION that it does not dissipate at once, and it will break up a fresh cold in 24 hours. $5.00 per bottle. Address

WHY WILL YOU WHO ARE SUFFERING HESITATE LONGER? The days of healthful life are golden, and they are ceaselessly slipping from you. You cannot afford to doubt. It is folly to delay longer to accept these facts and profit by them. Simmons Liver Regulator is so simple and harmless and yet it has proven itself a sovereign remedy, for Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Sick Headache, Billious Colic, Sour Stomach, Diarrhœa, Billiousness, and other like evils of a disordered Liver and Stomach. How can we find words adequate to embody these facts They cannot be too often reiterated until they have carried conviction to every household in the land? Try it. The first trial will be satisfactory.
"I certify that I have used Simmons Live Regulator in my family for a number of years for sick Headache, Billiousness and Liver Complaints with great satisfaction. B. F. TIGNER."

REMEDY FOR HARD TIMES.

Stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style. Buy good, healthy food cheaper and better clothing; get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of running after expensive and quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does you only harm, and makes the proprietors rich but put your trust in the greatest of all simple, pure remedies, Hop Bitters, that cures always at a trifling cost, and you will see better times and good health. Try it once. Read of it in another column

MARRIED.

☞ No notice of a marriage or death will be inserted unless accompanied by a responsible name, which is wanted not for publication but as a guaranty of good faith.

In Alamance county, March 4th, 1880, by Rev. C. N. oMrrow, Mr. JACOB B. PATTON, to Miss MARY J. ROGERS. All of Alamance, N. C.

Near Lincolnton, on the 10th of March, by Rev. R. Z. Johnston, Mr. WM. BYNUM, of Steele Creek, Mecklenburg county, to MARY, daughter of Jas. H. Marsh, the chair manufacturer of Lincoln county.

DIED.

☞ Obituary notices must be paid for in advance. The first ten lines are inserted free. The excess over ten lines is charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. Correspondents can ascertain what an obituary will cost by counting eight words to a line, and multiplying each line by ten cents.

In Bladen county, on 22d of December last, Mrs. MARY J. CAMPBELL, wife of Mr. W. N. Campbell.

Mrs. Campbell was for many years a member of Brown Marsh church, and was for a long time by a painful disease, confined to her room, but her end was peace, trusting in the blood of Christ for acceptance with God.

In Bladen county, on the 1st of March, Mr. JNO. McCALLUM, aged about 92 years.

For a number of years Mr. McCallum was a member of Brown Marsh church.

"The fathers, where are they?"

On February 23rd, Miss MARY BELL, youngest daughter of the late Richard Thomason of Franklin church, Rowan county, fell asleep in Jesus.

Mary had entered upon her twentieth year, and gave promise of much usefulness. Her adorning was "in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit which is in the sight of God of great price." On Sabbath, in usual health, she worshiped with the people of God in His earthly sanctuary, and on Monday joined the raptured throng around the throne. R. W. B.

IN MEMORIAM.

WILLIAM B. WRIGHT.

The patriarch said: "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust; neither doth trouble spring out of the ground." The apostle amplifies the scope of this truth, and points it as well for the Church of God, as for individual Christians, saying: "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth." May we not lay this consolation to our hearts, as we mourn the loss of a father in Israel, who has been removed by death to join the church of the first-born which are written in heaven?

William B. Wright, a ruling elder in the Presbyterian church, of Fayetteville, N. C., full of years, having passed the allotted period of man's life on the earth, and having served his day and generation, fell asleep on the 12th day of February, 1880, at the age of 77 years.

We would remember him, not only with the affection which he inspired in us as a fellow-worker in the vineyard of the Lord, but with that reverence which a blameless life, added to conspicuous attainments in the knowledge of heavenly things, justly made his due, especially from the Session of this church, of which he was the oldest and most influential member. It is left for others to pay their tribute to his memory as a man and member of society; but we are permitted to lay upon his tomb one offering, not of earthly flowers which fade and die, but a wreath of amaranth, unfading and eternal in its freshness; for we bear testimony to his sincere piety, and his close walk with God; to the honor which the great Head of the church put upon him, by making him, with advancing years riper, and more fit, as a shock of corn fully ripe for the garner into which the Lord of the harvest gathers his sheaves.

We have watched him, as he failed in his great physical strength year by year, and month by month, as the end grew nearer, somewhat as Elisha did the last few hours of his master, and we feel now that it is a fitting close to this last tribute to his memory, to reiterate the sorrowful ejaculation of the prophet as he looked upon the vanishing form of Elijah: "My father, my father, the chariot of Israel, and the horsemen thereof."

WILMINGTON MARKET

DURING WEEK
ENDING MARCH 16.

THE attention of all persons interested is called to the fact that strict personal attention is given to the collection of the necessary information, and the careful preparation of our MARKET REPORT, so as to give a correct general review of transactions and prices, for the week ending each Tuesday morning.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE—On Wednesday sales at 46 cents, and later at 47 cents; Thursday, sales at 47 cents, near close of day at 49 cents; Friday and until close, steady at prices last named.

ROSIN.—At $1 17½ for Strained and $1 22½ for Good Strained, market ruled generally dull until Monday, when price fell to $1 15 and $1 20 respectively.

CRUDE TURPENTINE—Steady throughout at $1 55 for Hard and $2 55 for Yellow Dip.

TAR—Sales of receipts day by day at $1 15

COTTON—The official quotations have been 12¾ cents for middling, but market has been very quiet and at close we report lower to sell.

CORN has been in moderate demand with a fair stock. No change to report in prices.

TIMBER.—There has been great activity occasioned by receipts on freshet. Sales made readily at prices rather in advance, certainly no lower, than those heretofore quoted.

Japanese Crepe Pictures
These beautiful pictures represent Japanese flowers, vines, shrubbery, landscapes, and artistically drawn figures, transferred in indelible colors to Japanese Crepe of the finest texture. Each picture (as our illustration shows) is complete in itself, and contains Japanese writing or characters, describing the locality, names of flowers, figures, etc. They are intended for, and make beautiful and brilliant tidies for backs of chairs, sofas, or lounges, and are suitable for lambrequins, center pieces for table covers, etc.; they can be seen in the parlors of our wealthiest families in New York City and elsewhere, are very fashionable, and will be admired and favorably commented upon by your friends. As we are now selling them at one-third their former price, ladies can beautify and ornament their homes at a trifling expense. Our prices are as follows (each picture being different): 2 pictures for 18c.; 6 for 50c.; 19 for 48c., sent by mail post paid. Send us clean postage stamps, of any denomination, as we prefer them to silver. Address

THE PACIFIC
GUANO COMPANY.
This Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was chartered in 1865.
The stock was taken by a few of the largest and wealthiest merchants in Boston and New York, who still direct and control the Company.
The Works, situated at Woods' Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., are the largest and most complete of the kind in the United States.
The Company owns several large deposits of Phosphate, which it works, and having acid chambers, manufactures its own Oil of Vitrol.
The Company employs and consults with several of the leading chemists and most progressive vegetable physiologists in the country.
With all these advantages—viz: long experience, ample capital, large works, splendid machinery, extensive deposits, and the best scientific ability, the Company can and does offer a Fertilizer at the lowest possible price.
By reason of the liberal policy of the Company, as well as the intrinsic value of its principal brand, SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO has become, unquestionably, the most popular Fertilizer in the United States, its sale extending from Maine to Texas.
It would be a work of superogation for us to do more than simply call attention to the fact that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO will be offered this (the fifteenth Spring) season for sale at all points in North Carolina, because there is no manufactured Guano as long, as widely, and certainly none more favorably known, than this brand.
We therefore will devote but a few lines to a description of this popular article, preferring that others should testify from their own practical experience as to its value.
It is proper, however, that we should call attention to a comparative analysis of Fertilizers sold in North Carolina, published in 1878, by Prof. Ledoux, the State Chemist of North Carolina, who places SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO among the very highest grades known.
Such an endorsement of SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, confirmed as it is by Hon. L. L. Polk, the Commissioner of Agriculture, under whose auspices the analysis was published, is certainly worthy of note.
This year SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is equal, in every respect, to what it was in 1879.
It is manufactured by the same Company, under the same formula, using the same materials, and hence must give the same splendid analysis as that published by Prof. Ledoux.
It is in fine physical condition.
It is packed in new, clean bags, each bag containing 200 pounds.
The analysis is stenciled on each bag, as required by law.

FOR THE FAMILY

Accepted and Will Appear.

One evening while reclining
In my easy chair, repining
Over the lack of true religion, and the dearth of common sense,
A solemn-visaged lady,
Who was surely on the shady
Side of forty, entered proudly and to crush me did commence:

"I sent a poem here, sir,"
Said the lady, growing fiercer,
"And the subject which I'd chosen, you remember, sir, was Spring.
But although I've scanned your paper,
Sir, by sunlight, gas and taper,
I've discovered of the poem not a solitary thing.'

She was muscular and wiry,
And her temper sure was fiery,
And I knew to pacify her I would have to fib like fun.
So I told her that her verses,
Which were great, had come to—bless us,
We'd received just sixty one on "Spring," of which we'd printed one

And I added, we've decided
That they'd better be divided
Among the years that follow—one to each succeeding spring,
So your work, I'm pleased to mention,
Will receive our best attention
In the year of nineteen-forty when the birds begin to sing.

Three Good Lessons.

"When I was eleven years old," said Mr. S—, an eminent American merchant, "my grandfather had a fine flock of sheep, which were carefully tended during the war of those times I was the shepherd boy, and my business was to watch the sheep in the field. A boy who was more fond of his book than the sheep was sent with me, but left the work to me, while he lay under the trees and read. I did not like that, and finally went to my grandfather and complained of it. I shall never forget the kind smile of the old gentleman as he said:

"Never mind, Jonathan, my boy; if you watch the sheep you will have the sheep."

"What does grandfather mean by that?" I said to myself. "I don't expect to have sheep." My desires were moderate. I could not exactly make out in my mind what it was, but he had been to Congress in Washington's time, so I concluded it was right, and I went back contentedly to the sheep.

After I got into the field I could not keep his words out of my head. Then I thought of Sunday's lesson: "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler of many things." I began to see through it. "Never you mind who neglects his duty; be you faithful and you will have your reward."

I received a second lesson soon after I came to New York as a clerk to the late Mr. R—. A merchant from Ohio who knew me came to buy goods, and said, "Make yourself so useful that they cannot do without you." I took his meaning quicker than I did that of my grandfather. Well, I worked upon these two ideas until Mr. R— offered me a partnership in the business. The first morning after the partnership was made known Mr. G—, the old tea merchant, called to congratulate me, and he said, "You are all right now. I have only one word of advice to give you. "Be careful whom you walk the streets with." That was lesson number three.

And what valuable lessons they are! Fidelity in all things; do your best for your employers; carelessness about your associates. Let every boy take these lessons home and study them well. They are foundation stones of character and honorable success.

Lizzie's Year.

"Oh, mamma! did you notice that little fright in the pew before us this morning?" said Lizzie L——, as she stood before the glass in her mother's dressing-room, directly on coming in from church. "Such a large mouth, and queer, pug nose, and dark skin. Didn't you think her a dreadful little Hottentot?"

"What, the quiet child in the pew by herself?" asked Lizzie's mother.

"Yes'm; didn't you think she was terrible ugly?"

"No, dear, I am sure I thought nothing of the kind. I observed that she was still and well behaved; that she paid attention to the minister, found the hymns, and in general conducted herself in a very proper manner during the entire service. I remember saying to myself, "that is a well brought up child, and she must have a good and careful mother."

"Oh, yes! she behaved well enough," said Lizzie; but she looked so homely and—and"—

"Not so very homely, either," said Lizzie's mother. "Her hair, at any rate, was lovely; and her lips, if they were large, were red and rich as a cherry; and I recollect now that when she once looked round at you, her eyes were bright and beautiful."

"Well," said Lizzie, a little beaten from her first position, "she wasn't a bit genteel or stylish in her dress—quite old-fashioned, with no sash at all." And here Lizzie surveyed her own admiringly in the mirror.

"I don't know about that," returned her mother. "I saw nothing that violated any principle of good sense of good taste in her neat plaid dress, and simple felt hat. Nothing gaudy, or tawdry, or showy, or even expensive about her; but all clean, wholesome and simple, and therefore entirely suitable. I am sorry to believe, Lizzie, that your little head is beginning to be filled with the silly vanities of dress, and that you are already disposed to judge others by this most false and foolish standard."

"Oh, mamma, don't say that! I only like to see things look pretty."

"So do I, dear, and so ought every one; but there are a great many ways of looking pretty; and it is much more possible for a child to look so when dressed in plain and simple garments, than when decked out in rich and costly ones: because simplicity is proper and becoming to childhood."

Lizzie made no reply, and her mother went on: "One thing I want to impress on your mind, my child, with more earnestness than ever I have tried to do before, because I perceive in you a growing tendency to criticise and disparage others. Instead of finding faults and flaws in the person, manners and dress of those you meet, I want you to try as honestly and carefully to find something to commend, or at least to speak kindly of. How sorry I should be to know that the people who sat behind us in church this morning had gone home to point out the defects or faults of my little girl's dress, or features, making no mention of what was really pretty or becoming about her."

"But, mamma," said Lizzie, with some hesitation, "you know I am—good looking, and am always fixed nice."

"But every one who sees you might not think so. Your features and dress, Lizzie, which to you or me seem comely and agreeable, might strike another differently, and lead to ill-natured remarks. You would not like that, would you?"

"No, indeed, mamma. I should be very much vexed, and even angry."

"No doubt you would, and with some reason. And therefore, as people cannot see alike any more than look or be alike, it is better to be on the safer side, and instead of finding something to blame or criticise—which one can always do if disposed—discover what there may be to praise, even where there is much that may not please our own taste or fully satisfy our idea of what is suitable or beautiful."

Lizzie looked as if she had never thought much about this subject before; as indeed she had not, any more than a thousand other little girls whose good mothers take great pains to instil useful lessons into their minds, and generous principles of action into their hearts

"But I didn't say it to her, you know, mamma. She'll never know what I thought about her lips and nose."

"I know that, my dear," returned her mother; "but the habit of saying such things is a very bad one, and I don't want you to acquire it. Besides, she did not make her own features or form, and it is still more cruel and hard-hearted to ridicule them than her dress. There are very few faces or features that are perfect, if one chooses to criticise. On the other hand, there are very few faces that are wholly bad; indeed, I have seldom studied one that had not something redeeming about it. If the features are not pleasing the expression may quite transform the plain face into a beautiful one. So may a cross or sorrowful expression change a beautiful face into an ugly one. Try to remember this, Lizzie, both for the advantage of your own face and to help you in forming a kindly opinion of others. Wouldn't you like to make the experiment for one year and see if you cannot find in every one you may meet, something to commend, instead of something to ridicule or disparage? You must write down the cases where you discover nothing whatever to speak well of; and at the end of a year from this day, if we both live, you must make a report to me. Would you like to?"

Lizzie L—— was, and is, on the whole, a very sweet and amiable little girl. She rather liked her mother's proposition, and readily accepted it, being by no means sure that she should not get considerable fun out of it.

She is now upon her last month, and makes a daily note of her experiences in the nice gilt-edged diary which was one of her late birthday presents. She says she is not going to read it to anybody till the year is out, not even to her mamma.

For one, I am quite desirous to know how her account sums up. I hope Mrs. L—— will invite me to pass a day with her about the time "Lizzie's Year" expires.—Canada Presbyterian.

Celluloid

Celluloid is one of the most remarkable of modern inventions, and bids fair to be not less extensively or variously used than vulcanized rubber. It is produced by mixing gun camphor with a pulp of gun-camphor, and subjecting the combination to a high degree of pressure and heat. The result is a hard product of extraordinary toughness and elasticity. It can be made plastic again, and moulded into any required form. Any color can be given to it by the use of coloring matter during the process of manufacture. The uses to which celluloid is put are numerous, and are constantly increasing. It is extensively used as a substitute for ivory, which it resembles so closely that it is sometimes difficult to detect the difference. It is said to equal ivory in strength and elasticity, and not to warp or discolor with time. It has proved a good material for piano and organ keys, backs of brushes, looking glass frames, handles for knives, forks, umbrellas and many other articles. It is much cheaper than ivory, and is claimed to be better for decorative purposes. It is also used with much success to imitate tortoise shell, malachite, amber, pink coral and other costly materials. In imitation of tortoise shell it is made into combs, napkin rings, match boxes, etc Imitations of pink coral jewelry are made and sold at prices much below those of the genuine. The same is true of imitations of malachite and amber. Mouth-pieces for pipes, cigar holders, etc., are common. It is also used as a substitute for a porcelain in making dolls' heads. The frames of eye glasses, opera glasses and spectacles are made of it More recently it has come into use in combination with linen, cotton or paper for shirt bosoms, cuffs and collars. The material has a hard, glistening surface like that of newly laundried linen; is elastic and impervious to moisture, and when soiled can be renovated with a moistened sponge.—Scottish-American Journal.

Flowers for Cuttings.

All that is necessary is a saucer half filled with well-washed sand to hold up the cuttings. Pure water is poured in, enough to cover the sand; and then the little cuttings, half an inch or more long, so that each may have about four of the terminal leaves, are set in the sand immediately on being cut off, the leaves touching so that they help to hold each other up. The dish is then placed in full light, but not in hottest sunshine at first, and where the air will be rather moist and still. In a greenhouse where the syringe is used daily the air is always moist. In a room an evaporative dish of water or a wet cloth will serve to temporarily humefy the air.

All the soft stemmed plants, such as verbena coleus, petunia, sage, cuphea, heliotrope, ageratum, etc., are easily grown in this way, and if a cutting is lifted out of the sand, in about ten days, more or less, it will be found to have thrown out little white roots, and is then fit to plant (with care not to break or dry these roots) in a pot of fine mould, and with a day or two more of shelter it will have become an established plant. Many plants that become woody shrubs, as fuchsias, alcysia, myrtle, oleander, etc., can be grown easily in the same way taking them at the right season, and waiting on their rooting a little longer. In the case of fleshy and firmer stemmed plants like geraniums, it is a good plan to snap off the pieces to be used as cuttings but still leaving them attached slightly. While hanging in this way the slender union prevents them from wilting until the large wound can cicatrize or callous over. This will be in about ten days, when the cuttings can be set in pots of moist sand to form roots. Such cuttings may be of some length if desired.

To grow cuttings of roses and other woody shrubs which root less readily than the above, a little frame is made in an entirely sheltered corner open to full light from the North and East, and cuttings of firm, half ripe new wood, such as we find in July, are set finely in good, well aired sand and leaf mould, and covered with glass. The soil around is kept moist. Here the cuttings are left undisturbed from July till the next spring, when the young plants can be set out in roomier beds.

A current paragraph states that M. Weidenberg of St. Petersburg, Russia, has found that it is best, in the cases of roses, carnations and other cuttings usually hard to grow, to make the cuttings rather long and allow the lower leaves to remain, covering them with the porous but close pressed mould. The upper leaves may be reduced one half, and this, and the supply afforded from the covered lower ones, prevent the leaves and cuttings from shriveling before new roots are formed.—Exchange.

Victoria on Her Throne.

A PEN-PICTURE OF HER MAJESTY AS SHE APPEARED AT THE OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Her Majesty acknowledges the grave greeting of her liegees by scarcely more than a glance of the eye. The head bent slightly, perhaps, I am not sure. She, too, walks slowly; there is no vulgar hurry about any part of the business. As she rounds the corner of the dais, her face is turned full towards our gallery. It is the business of the courtiers to say that the Queen always looks well. For my part, I thought she had grown gray since last I saw her, and the lines of the temples and about the mouth were cut deeper than ever. It can never have been more than a comely face, and there is nothing, strictly speaking, in the contour, and nothing in the figure, which can be called beautiful or noble. What strikes you, nevertheless, is the air of authority and the air of stern sincerity which sits upon this royal brow and marks the least gesture of the Queen. The sadness of the face is profoundly touching; the dignity with which the burden—the all but intolerable burden of life—is borne, appeals to your respect. She is here, they say, to mark once more her sympathy with the First Minister of the Crown, and with the party which, under his guidance has been leading this country so strange a dance these three years past. But politics are forgotten in such presence; and any criticism one has to offer is put decently aside so long as the woman and the Queen is here.

When she had seated herself upon the royal robes spread over the throne—which she might have worn, one would think—there is a pause, almost solemn, and there is time to observe the gown which the majesty of England has on. The majesty and the beauty of England are face to face, for the Princess sits nearly opposite; and as the Princess is perhaps the best dressed woman in the room, so is the Queen the worst. Her gown is of velvet, with broad longitudinal streaks of miniver or ermine running down the skirt and horizontal trimmings to match about the body. But you need not stop to look at it; the Koh-i-noor glows in her corsage, and a miniature crown of diamonds shines above the stony head. The Princess Beatrice, in blue velvet, stands by her mother's side, with traces of the womanly attractiveness which belong to her sister Louise, now reigning over the hearts of our Canadian friends. There was some manœuvering with footstools and arrangement of trains and the Queen's veil had to be extricated from the netted work of the throne. Then the Queen said, "pray, be seated," and once more came silence.

The Queen wore a dress and train of black velvet trimmed with miniver and a long white tulle veil surmounted by a crown in diamonds, a necklace and earrings of large diamonds, the Koh-i-noor as a brooch, the Ribend and Star of the Order of the Garter and the Orders of Victoria and Albert and the Crown of India. Princess Beatrice wore a dress of pale blue velvet, trimmed with satin, and a head-dress of feathers, with veil and diamond stars; also a necklace of diamonds, a pearl and diamond pendant, ear-rings and brooch, with the orders of Victoria and Albert, the Crown of India and the Saxe-Coburg and Gotha family orders. The Princess of Wales wore a dress of dark vanille velvet draped with pale vanille and silver brocade and bordered with dark fur; corsage to correspond; also a tiara of diamonds, feathers and veil and diamond ornaments, with the Orders of Victoria and Albert, the Star of India, St. Catherine of Russia and the Danish family orders.

Ben Adhem and Ben Selim.

Ben Adhem had a golden coin one day,
Which he put out at interest with a Jew;
Year after year awaiting him it lay
Until the doubled coin two pieces grew,
And these two, four; so on till people said,
"How rich Ben Adhem is," and bowed the servile head.

Ben Selim had a golden coin one day,
Which to a stranger asking alms he gave,
Who went rejoicing on his unknown way.
Ben Selim died too poor to own a grave;
But when his soul reached heaven, angels with pride
Showed him the wealth to which his coin had multiplied.

Beaconsfield.

Lord Beaconsfield is said to be greatly beloved by his intimates and retainers. As a host he is amiable, but not companionable. He seldom joins in conversation, but sits nursing his own thoughts, and if addressed, replies with some mystic truism. Sometimes he consents to play a game of whist with the royal family, and plays execrably. Hughenden, his country-seat, is said to be a pretentious villa, to which numerous additions have been made. It is shut in by trees that have been planted by royal personages to commemorate their visits. The rooms are somewhat glaringly furnished; on the walls hang numerous pictures of the Premier's friends. There is a large collection of books, and amongst them many which are presents from the Queen.

SECULAR NEWS.

Next season Statesville will be a point of considerable importance as a cotton market. The lika of cotton that will be put into the ground in this county this spring was never thought of here before.—Statesville Landmark.

An estimable lady of our acquaintance was waked up one night by a rat nibbling at her finger, and though many years ago, and now an old woman, the mortal fear has never left her, and to this day she still goes to sleep with a broom in her hand.—Reidsville Times.

We have noticed the seasons for forty-five years, and never saw, during all those rounds, a single failure of a fruit crop on leap year.—Concord Register.

Dr. E. H. Porter, of Pender county, we learn from the Wilmington Star, will run a Clement's Attachment and rice mill, with his grist mill, cotton gin and various machinary for picking and cleaning pea nuts. He also expects to to try the manufactory of smoking tobacco at the same place.

The Milton Chronicle says: A monument to the late Rev. John Kerr, and also his son the late Hon. John Kerr, was erected at Yanceyville on Saturday last.

Humorous.

As a specimen of the doggerel with which editors are pestered, the following is given by the editor of the Methodist Recorder, Pittsburg:

What homage Should we mortals bring in view of things thats Past
Tis he that grants us Sweet relas.
When carping cares oppress
tis he alone that gives us peas
When raging storms distress.

To be sure.. And beans, too. But peas are poetically better than beans or potatoes, or cabbages; in time of "raging storms." The closing stanza is this:

Delightful land of holy rest
O sweet Cellistral plains
tis tended by Divine behest and pure effulgence reigns.

Out of pure respect for the manufacturer of this poetry the editor of the Recorder omits his name and leaves him to prey on the other religious papers.

The New Governess—"Now, I suppose you know that there are three times as much water as land upon the surface of the earth." Tommy—"I should think so, indeed! Look at the puddles!"

A Good Account.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness and suffering, costing $200 per year, total, $1,200—all of which was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters, taken by my wife, who has done her own housework for a year since without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit." Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

WHAT IS THE REMEDY?

Cause the people to love the Church, but only because it has been and is the ground and pillar of the truth,—the faithful guardian of truths repudiated by others. This can be done only by preaching these truths;—by showing them to be divine, obligatory, and practically profitable. Doubtless too these distinctive truths which others denounce ought for that same reason to be often preached. Now we are aware that such advice as this at once conjures up in the imagination of some the picture of an ecclesiastical Ishmaelite,—his hand against every man, and every man's hand against him. But loyalty to truth and asperity need not be associated. It is a sad case if divine revelation cannot be advocated when opposed, without rudeness and rancour. "The servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle towards all men—in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." It is a sad contradiction to suppose that the unrepentant sinner may in meekness be instructed by the Christian teacher, while brethren in Christ cannot defend their convictions without heat and vituperation. We need not asperse our opponents as either knaves or fools because they follow not us. That is poor preaching which is not pervaded by the spirit of Christian love and marked by Christian courtesy. If denominational advocates were to put away all bitterness and wrath and clamor and evil-speaking doubtless the common salvation would be further advanced and the unity of the faith more nearly realized. Unfortunately we have heard discourses of which the text was an insinuation of insincerity:—'a better to obey God than man.'

And when we say that the distinctive teachings of the Church should be made often prominent, it is not meant to deny that undue proportion may be assigned them. There are occasions when they should not be brought forward, as for example, when one is occupying the pulpit of another denomination. At times too, of great religious interest the minds of men should not be diverted from that is for salvation to that which is simply confirmation. But on ordinary occasions these distinctive truths should occupy more prominence than would be otherwise necessary were it not that others repudiate, misunderstand or misrepresent them.

Far from advising that undue prominence be given what the multitude understand by doctrinal preaching,—that is—distinctive denominational teaching;—so far from making bitter sectarians of our people, we would have them love the Church, because her Christian liberality is a very distinctive feature; and because, more than others, she subordinates the non-essential to the essential, and all her non-essential teachings conserve the essential. By non-essential we mean, not that which may be discarded as useless, but which, though revealed, is not absolutely necessary to salvation. The great doctrine of the Reformed (Presbyterian) Churches is—salvation by faith alone. Not forgiveness of sins, not even justification merely, but salvation, present and eternal. It is all too obvious that many do not preach it. It is by many smothered under legalism and formalism. It is with us the most conspicuous doctrine;—not overshadowed by questions of church order or ceremonial rites. For this reason our people should be taught to love their Church,—because it subordinates the non-essential to the essential. Not methods of conversion nor sever, nor Church, but salvation by faith alone is inscribed on our banners. The doctrines of man's total depravity, God's free grace, the saints' security, &c., are alone compatible with this, and alone exhibit it in its completeness, symmetry and grandeur. Government by Presbyters is the divinely chosen one; therefore the best conservator of this most precious truth and for this reason should be carefully inculcated. We love the Presbyterian Church because more than all others she gives essential truth its rightful prominence.

Her relations to other evangelical denominations are defined and regulated by consistent maintenance of the great doctrine—Salvation by faith alone. Her charity is scriptural, making no sentimental surrender of any part of God's revealed word, on the one hand, nor on the other narrowing the sympathies of God's people. She believes in the communion of saints. Giving prominence to salvation by faith alone. She regards every true believer as baptized into Christ and a member of his body, the Church. All therefore, without exception, who give creditable evidence of faith in Christ are entitled to recognition by the visible Church,—whether they believe in apostolic succession or Presbytery, much water or little. Our advocacy of the Presbyterian church is not an advocacy of sectarian narrowness but of comprehensive charity, and our charity is the direct outcome of a consistent signalizing of the great fundamental theology—salvation by faith alone. Whoever then contends against narrowness and illiberality ought to love and venerate the Presbyterian Church.

But we protest against a mis-named charity which refuses to exhibit the excellency of such teaching and to recommend it to the affections of our own people, and the outside world;—which prefers to submit in silence to misrepresentation and calumny;—which suffers tamely to have our young people alienated by charges of narrow-mindedness and bigotry, while strangely enough they are converted into propagandists of high churchly exclusiveism,—which surrenders as nothing worth the attention of men, revelations which we hold to be divine;—which refuses pre-eminent consideration and love to the Church which signally and consistently exalts the great fundamental truth of salvation by faith alone;—we protest against the so-called charity—monstrous charity which does all this in pretence of liberality and modesty.

Cause the people to love the Church.

FORSAKEN AND CONDEMNED.

An incident occurred recently in the prison work of the writer, which may convey a useful lesson to other minds, as it greatly impressed his own.

In the regular course of my visiting I reached one cell just as a prisoner was remanded after trial. I had never met him before, and it was certainly a sad sight to see a young man, so fine looking, well dressed and gentlemanly in his appearance, compelled to stoop and enter such a place, while the keeper locked the low grated iron door, and walked away to his station.

I immediately stepped forward, and, making known my office as chaplain, I found him very ready to converse. He had an intelligent countenance, and spoke with the fluency and grace of an educated man.

He said, "I have just plead guilty to forgery in the third degree, but the judge and district attorney are willing the sentence should be suspended, and that I should be discharged if a certain friend would appear and give evidence of my previous good character. The matter is to be decided to-morrow. Now," continued he, "will you do me the great kindness to see this friend, and take him my card, and ask him if he will not appear in my behalf?"

He further told me that he was a graduate of ——, one of the leading colleges in one of our great cities, and also of —— medical college in the same place, but he had been in a distant part of the country, and acknowledged that on his return he had been drawn into evil associations.

"I have troops of young friends," said he, "and they got around me and led me along with them into drinking and other fast living, and it was under the influence of liquor that I committed the act for which I may now have to suffer"

The forgery, he said, consisted in an order drawn upon a certain gentleman and purporting to come from another, for the small sum of five dollars. He said that he had several times sought the gentleman at his office to repay it, but failed to find him. And when he was first arrested he again offered to refund the money, but his offer was refused, as the gentleman was determined to make an example of him.

These explanations were accompanied with expressions of deep regret for the follies of which he had been guilty. Of course I acceeded to his request, and the same afternoon found the friend at the office of the young man's father, now deceased. He was an elderly gentleman and had been for many years in the employ of the Father. He expressed his earnest desire to serve the young man, and felt that he was placed in a very embarrassing position.

"But," said he, "I cannot perjure myself. Will it be necessary for me to testify under oath in court?"

I answered, "I presume not, as the trial is concluded, and all that is required of you, as I suppose, is to testify to the general character of the young man, for the satisfaction of the judge"

"But," said he again, "the young man has been living a very fast life, and I believe that it was his wild course of life that preyed upon his father's mind, so that he lost his fine practice. He had an income of many thousand dollars per annum, but his business was very much run down before he died last spring. Moreover this is not the only offence of which the young man has been guilty."

"But," said I, "you will at least see the young man to-morrow, before the trial comes off, and do what you can in his behalf?"

With this plea I left him. But the next afternoon, as I was leaving the prison, I met the young man as he was conducted back from the court, manacled to another man.

"I have got five years in the State prison," said he, with a sad countenance.

"Indeed," said I, "I am sorry to hear it."

So, not knowing how soon he might be sent off, and thinking I might never see him again, I followed him back into the prison, where he was to be placed in one of the "condemned cells" until his removal. I advanced and took his hand, and expressed my sympathy.

"Oh!" said he, "what a fool I have been! And now I must suffer for my folly!"

His lip quivered as he spoke, showing that he was deeply moved.

I asked him, "Did not your friend appear in your behalf?"

"Yes," said he, "and the lawyers got at him and pestered him so that the old man got up and ran right out of court!"

* * * * * * * *

I had already had religious conversation with him, and saying what I could to counsel and comfort him, I bade him good bye. But I could not help carrying away with me the sadness of the young man's situation.

His folly and guilt were manifest enough. With every opportunity for wealth and distinction, and a useful and honorable career in society, he had sacrificed all for the sake of a brief course of sinful and foolish pleasure! But his disappointment also was bitter indeed. He had made confession and professed regret for his offence, and was ready to make reparation. (And some think that such repentance should entitled a man to forgiveness, without anything more, at least before God.) And he had a very confident hope that, through his friend's appearance in his behalf he would be discharged.

What, then, must have been his feelings when he saw his friend fail him, and felt himself forsaken in the critical hour of his need! And what must have been his feelings when the sentence was pronounced, which he thought averted, that doomed him to a felon's servitude, and a felon's cell, and a felon's park, and a felon's society, for five of the best years of his life!

My mind immediately reverted to a friend who will not fail his own in the great hour of their trial. He says, "I will not fail thee nor forsake thee."

We all must plead guilty. And our only hope of acquittal in the great day when sentence must be pronounced is in His mediation. Can we depend upon him? Who can doubt it? But it shall not be on account of our previous good character. He will secure our acquittal as innocent, though confessedly guilty, on account of his own righteousness.

Who, then, will venture forward into the presence of the Judge to meet his final sentence without some assurance from That Friend of His unfailing intercession?

Another reflection: If the young man's folly was great in the sacrifice he made, greater still will be the folly of those who sacrifice the glorious hopes of life eternal, and risk a dreadful and eternal doom for the sake of a few years of worldliness and sin!

And if the young man's disappointment and grief were great, greater still will be the disappointment and grief of those whose hopes of forgiveness fail them, and they find themselves in the trying hour forsaken and condemned!

STRENGTH IN WEAKNESS.

In a country home not far away, there lay a little sick girl—an only child—who was sorely afflicted in body, but was strong in faith and love to her Saviour. One night when she was very, very ill—so that even the power of speech seemed to have left her, and the sorrowing parents and friends watched by her bedside, fearing and believing it to be their last sad vigil—about midnight they were startled to tears by the sound of a sweet, clear voice from the sick bed, singing in sweet and touching notes the beautiful hymn of Dr. Palmer, commencing—

"My faith looks up to Thee,
Thou Lamb of Calvary,
Saviour Divine!"

She sang it through, repeating the last verse several times, and then sank into a quiet sleep. It was her favorite hymn while in stronger health, and now in her sickness it helps to comfort and sustain her, and now that she is better, she wants all God's children, old and young, to learn to sing the hymns that were so blest to her in her weakness and affliction:

"Upon a bed of lingering pain a feeble child reclined.
One hand and side were paralyzed, and the sweet blue eyes were blind,
The little face was pinched and drawn, the lips were pale and thin;
Yet from this feeble tenement the glorious light within
Burst forth in sweetest music, as on the midnight air
A voice as of an angel rose, rich, and full, and clear,
And startling in its pathos, its sweetness and its strength,
And the words, "My faith looks up to Thee," resounded through the length
And depth and height of all the air, around, above, beneath.
And heaven itself seemed brought so near that e'en the feeble breath
Of this dear lamb could reach beyond the sullen stream of death.
The anxious watchers sat entranced, and listened to the voice,
Which sang in notes so sweet and clear, and bade them all rejoice."

WHAT IS THE TROUBLE?

In a late number of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN, a correspondent attempts to answer the question—"Why is it that other denominations have so far outstripped us in numerical growth?" We are persuaded that his solution is defective. He thinks that our comparatively slow growth is attributable to our failure "to gather and retain the fruits of our labors." The sovereign remedy is—"Make the people love the Church."

We freely admit that our Church is not as diligent as she should be in gathering and holding fast the fruits of her labors. But this does not begin to account for our slowness in numerical growth. A large majority of those who are added to other churches have never been reached by our labors at all.

If this statement be true, we must look for the main cause of our trouble elsewhere than in our failure to gather the fruits of our labors. Again, our observation has led us to believe that the number of persons who join our Church, attributing their conversion to means of grace used by Methodists and Baptists, exceeds the number of those who leave us to join them, after experiencing conversion through instrumentalities used by us.

But granting that this statement is incorrect, we could not find an adequate explanation of our numerical inferiority in the opposite view.

The remedy prescribed by our brother does not appear to us to be sufficient.

In the first place we demur to the implication that our people do not sufficiently love their Church. Presbyterians love their Church as dearly and devotedly as other denominations love theirs. If their love for our Church were increased ten fold, we doubt whether our numerical growth would be much more rapid than it is now.

If we had gathered and retained all the fruits of our labors, we would still be behind some of the other leading denominations in numbers. We propose to state some of the reasons which appear to account, at least partly, for our falling behind some of our sister churches in numerical strength.

I. Our extreme liberality. We gladly fraternize with the different branches of the Protestant Church. We acknowledge them as members of Christ's visible body and admit the validity of their ordination and their baptism, though we differ widely from them on many important points.

While we are firmly persuaded that the Presbyterian form of government is scriptural and pouring or sprinkling is the scriptural form of baptism, yet we cannot go out into the world saying we have the only valid baptism. For we are willing to admit that we are not infallible. We allow that others have a right to think as well as ourselves. Therefore we do not preach denominationalism as strongly as some other churches, nor make as much headway by attacking others. On account of liberality we cannot hold our members with as tight a grasp as some other churches. The Baptists who unchurch four-fifths of the christian world and inetill into their members the idea that no one can be a member of Christ's visible church unless he is immersed, easily retain their members. High Church Episcopalians, who teach that Episcopal ordination alone is valid, rarely lose one of their members, for similar reasons. A High Church Episcopalian marries a Presbyterian lady. He says to her: It is impossible for me ever to join your Church, for I am persuaded that you have no Church and no ministry. You have a religious society, which means well." The Presbyterian wife says: "I am convinced that the Presbyterian church is modeled after the primitive church, and corresponds with the teachings of the Bible, still I am willing to admit that your Church is a Church of Christ." Under these circumstances, there is nothing left for the lady to do but to join the Episcopal Church, if she is determined not to be separated from her husband. If we hold fast to all of our members, we must abridge our liberality. Had we not better lose some of our members, than instill into our people High Church principles, bigotry and intolerance? Let us do all in our power to endear the Church to them, and at the same time teach christian charity and tolerance.

II. A second reason why we are behind some other churches in numbers may be found in the fact that we are more prudent and cautious in admitting members, and are more careful in the use of the means of grace. We do not hurry persons into the Church under great religious excitement, and we avoid using such machinery as is calculated to work upon the mere animal feelings and produce only a temporary faith. We have no record of large numbers converted over again every year or two. The high standard which we hold up for the christian life makes the Church distasteful to the large numbers who wish to be saved without denying themselves and taking up the cross.

III. We believe in an educated ministry, and therefore have failed to pour into the country large numbers of ignorant preachers, as some other denominations have done. On account of paucity of ministers, we have failed to push our denomination and occupy fields which were open to us.

Besides, we are opposed to a secularized ministry and seek to discourage our preachers from uniting any worldly vocation with their ministerial work. Hence as a general thing, they are entirely dependent upon the Church for a maintenance. This is not the case with all of our sister churches, which gain an advantage over us so far as mere numbers are concerned in taking a different view. Again, preachers who are sent out from the ranks of the poor and uneducated live on less salary and endure more hardships than those who have had greater social and educational advantages. They also get more easily into the sympathies of the poor and ignorant.

IV. Our doctrines have been misrepresented and caricatured. Calvinism is made to mean fatalism. It is maintained that we destroy man's free agency and responsibility. Predestination is represented as cutting off all from any hope of salvation except the favorites whom God arbitrarily calls. It is said that the Calvinist's God is a monster of cruelty, and is calculated to repel rather than attract the enquirer.

The masses who hear these representations of our doctrine from the ignorant teachers believe them and are thus filled with prejudice against our church. This prejudice presents a formidable barrier in the way of our church extension.

V. A considerable portion of our church members have some cultivation and refinement, and the laboring classes which constitute a majority are not attracted, because they do not find congenial society. "Birds of a feather will flock together." It is not altogether our fault that the more ignorant and uncultivated are not drawn into our churches. We have often known them to resist the kindest and most strenuous efforts made on their behalf. The careful observer of human nature will note the fact that pride and envy are as potent in the lower as in the higher strata of society.

VI. Our system of pastorates confines the minister so closely to his charge that he has little or no opportunity of doing much evangelistic work. We have but few in our Church who work outside of pastoral charges. When our young ministers go out from the Seminary, they generally settle down in some church and build upon another man's foundation. It must be admitted that we have fallen far behind in evangelistic work. Without an enlargement of this important work we need not expect to make very rapid progress.

VII. In our zeal to discourage great religious excitements and too much machinery, we have gone too far in the opposite direction and have failed to persist in our efforts to gather in souls by protracted services.

We sometimes fail to utilize religious impressions, and lose many an advantage through neglect.

Such are some of the reasons which in our judgment have caused us to fall behind some of the leading denominations around us in numerical strength. But we console ourselves in the thought that size is not always grandeur.

WHOSOEVER.

"Whosoever," Lord 'tis spoken,
Word of Thine can ne'er be broken,
Sure I need no other token
Of my soul's security.

Cometh to Thee! Lord I need Thee,
Hungry come to Thee to feed me;
Now I come! Thou hast received me.
All in all in Thee I find.

Nowise cast out! What a blessed

SIX MONTHS' WORK AND ITS RESULTS.

Hardly a year has passed since a rumor, at first hardly credited, and when credited, received partly with indifference, partly with contempt, passed from house to house in the quiet "City of Oaks." Mothers in Israel shook their heads and the fathers followed suit.

"She can learn all she needs at home," said the mothers. "She'll take to it when her time comes, just as a duck takes to water," added the fathers, and both thereupon dismissed the matter as settled.

In the meantime the "she" referred to, the average daughter of average parents in both city and country, neither "learned at home," nor "took to it naturally," save in exceptional cases, and a field of work waited for whoever should demonstrate the fact, that old fashions might not always be the best fashions—that as no man ever practiced law or undertook book-keeping without some preliminary training, so no woman could safely assume the myriad duties devolving upon the mistress of a house, without some distinct sense of what such duties involved. To most young girls it is all an unknown country. They leave school with a smattering of the languages and the ologies in general, and as much music as can be superadded, but that physiology or chemistry have any relation to their daily lives, as a rule never enters their minds.

Dinners have been and dinners will be, they vaguely believe, with no thought that their own brains must be used in so ordering said dinners that the best results may come from the materials furnished. That live thought can come only from varied food, perfectly prepared, that man is much what he eats, that these bodies of ours must be temples of the Holy Ghost, and that the sanctuary is defiled when ignorance or indifference to the laws of food brings on indigestion and dyspepsia and its train of evils. None of these things are ever dreamed of.

"She can learn at home," it is true, but the mother dreads to burden young shoulders with the load of petty cares and anxious planning that has weighed down her own, and puts off the evil day, till suddenly the girl comes to womanhood, a home opens before her, and she leaves the old nest, only half-fledged, and with small strength for the new flight.

To bring about a wider knowledge, to prove that household science, including cooking, could be taught even to young girls, became, in September, 1879, the work of the Raleigh Cooking School. Success was problematical. A belief—almost a prejudice—born of old conditions made personal labor seem repellant and lowering, yet the miseries inflicted by the "tricks and manners" of migratory servants, and the sense of helplessness before them, brought a few at once into the first class formed for ladies. Led at first by curiosity, interest grew slowly but steadily, till to-day nothing is more popular than a course of these once objectionable lessons. Not only in the school as described in a communication sometime since, but in the city as well, the results have been beyond any expectation. In all quarters schools are making inquiries as to the system, and Charlotte, having waited just long enough to test the thing fairly, has, through the Rev. Wm R. Atkinson, arranged to have a course of object lessons the last of March.

No work to be done by women for women, exceeds this in importance or in far-reaching effects, and recognizing the necessity for extending it as widely as possible, the Superintendent of the Raleigh Cooking School, while still making Peace Institute her headquarters, will in the coming year go from point to point, to organize new schools, and will be open to correspondence on the subject from any part of the South. Her experience as a house-keeper at the South has given a knowledge of Southern needs not otherwise attainable, and the Raleigh school proposes to hold toward the South the same relation as that of New York does to the North. Whatever may be its future fortunes, the seed is already sown of a tree whose branches will shadow a wider people than that of to-day, and true women everywhere, must hail the sowing, as not the least work to be done by women for women.

HELEN CAMPBELL,
Superintendent Raleigh Cooking School.

THE BIBLE.

The Bible, aside from the factor of divine agency in its authorship, is the insoluble enigma of the literary world. It well may be. It must be. Think of it! It is the oldest book upon the earth, still read among men; going back beyond the Roman or the Greek literature; going back farther than any other, in parts of it, towards the time when the waters of the deluge subsided from the hills of Western Asia; farther than any other towards the morning of creation, when the sons of God shouted for joy. Yet its vitality continues, and its power over the human mind remains unwasting.

It is a large book. It sets its stately front for two millenniums along the lines of chronology, history, biography, philosophy, and human science. It challenges assault at ten thousand points. It says to science, "Search the strata beneath, and the stars above, and find a God more equal to the problems of the universe than Him whom I reveal!" It says to philosophy, "Find anything in human nature, any power or any passion, any mean inclination or sublime possibility, of which I do not give the manifestation and the explanation!" Thus challenging assault, and opening its line along the whole extent of it to any endeavor to overthrow it, it remains the most remarkable of books.—Rev. Dr. Storrs.

CLING THE CLOSER.

We heard a comforting and delightful sermon recently from the text, "And a little child shall lead them." The minister used this illustration: We take our little child in our arms out of the bright gas-lit parlor, to carry it to its bed. The hall is dark, and almost unconsciously the tiny arms tighter, the head nestles closer in its trust, because we have come away from the light. So God, for the sake of having us cling more closely, sometimes carries us in the dark. Perhaps it is loss of property, or the going out of dear ones forever from the home, or the weary struggle for bread, or the coldness of those who have been valued friends. Perchance we have been misjudged, or harshly criticised, or unappreciated. God is carrying us in the dark. Do we cling closer and trust more fully?

The so-called miraculous cures and apparitions alleged to have taken place in Co. Mayo continue to find many believers amongst the Roman Catholic peasantry. Pictures of the occurrences are sold extensively in Dublin and other towns, and seem much prized by the "faithful."

Pomare, the Queen of Tahiti and Moorea, died last September, in the 70th year of her age. When she was born missionaries had just come to the South Sea Islands, but not a single convert had been won to Christ. When Pomare died she had been many years a faithful Christian, more than 300 islands had become wholly Christianized, and on nearly all the rest Christian workers were making known the Gospel.

In several places in the West of Ireland it has been found impossible to unite Protestant and Catholic clergy, even in the Divine cause of charity. Jealousy and strife appear even here. The priests, in some instances, refuse to act on relief committees unless the ministers of the Irish Church Mission are prevented from doing so, the agents of this society being especially obnoxious to the Roman Catholic clergy. In some cases they consented to act together if a guarantee were given that none of the funds should be used for proselyting purposes.

There are signs that the childish fiction that the Pope is but a person in velvet fetters in the Vatican will soon be dispensed with. As a fact, Leo XIII frequently drives incognito through the streets of Rome. On Christmas eve, for example, his Holiness, accompanied by Cardinals Di Pietro and Nina, slowly traversed the Corso, examining the windows set out with toys and presents for children, with a very natural interest. He then went to the Church of the Gesu and prayed awhile before he returned to the silver dungeons at the other side of the bridge of St. Angelo.

The Russian Church is, it appears, making many converts in Japan. The great influence which is now exercised in that country by the Russian mission, is chiefly attributable to the universal respect with which its chief, Father Nicholas, is regarded in all parts of the country, even in distant regions where no European has hitherto set foot. Father Nicholas is thoroughly conversant with both the Japanese and Chinese languages, and he is supplied with ample funds by the Russian government. The American bishops meet with much sympathy among the higher classes, but their influence is said to be inferior to that of the Russian missionaries in the country generally. As for the Roman Catholics, they are decidedly unpopular. The other day the people broke the windows in the house of one of their missionaries, who had interfered in the family affairs of a Japanese.

The Rev. J. Ellam, vicar of Herne Bay, has written to the Archbishop of Canterbury on behalf of the Burial Board of that place, asking his Grace if he would be willing to consecrate a portion of the new burial ground, and to leave the chapel unconsecrated, so that it might be available for Nonconformists as well as Churchmen. Mr. Ellam explained that the burial ground was being provided in consequence of the Secretary of State having given notice that he was about to apply for an Order in Council to close the churchyard in June next; that the Burial Board were aware that if they built a chapel and it was consecrated for the use of Churchmen they were required by law to build a second one for the use of Nonconformists, unless relieved of the obligation by a three-fourths majority of the vestry, and that they did not wish the Nonconformists to be put in this position of disadvantage; while, on the other hand, they did not wish to build two chapels if it can be avoided, both on account of the additional expense, and also because it seemed to them an undesirable embodiment and perpetuation of the differences between Churchmen and Nonconformists in the last resting places of both. The Archbishop of Canterbury has sent a courteous reply to the Burial Board, through his chaplain, stating that he cannot say positively whether he can follow his inclination to acquiesce in the plan suggested until he has consulted his legal advisers, but that a further reply would be sent.

"I, ALEXANDER."

This was what the present Emperor of Russia wrote in answer to the question, "Who is to pay all these?" One of his majesty's aides-de-camp, who owed a great deal more than he could pay, had drawn up a list of his debts, and having in despair dashed off the above question at the foot of the paper, had fallen asleep in his chair. The Emperor, happening to pass through the room, and seeing the document, generously took up the pen and wrote "I, Alexander," and left the room without disturbing the sleeper. When the latter awoke he found himself all at once freely released from his obligations. Unconverted reader, this is the way God freely releases you. There is no condemnation to those who accept a pardon in the name of Jesus Christ, who, by His death on the cross, paid the debt we owed to justice, and now we are released debtors.

NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbyterian.

JOHN McLAURIN . Editor.

WILMINGTON, N. C.:

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24, 1880.

PRESBYTERIAL AUTHORITY.

Recently a correspondent of the Homiletic Monthly asked the editors of that journal what remedy there was for a minister whose charge failed to pay the amount, in itself not a great deal, which they had promised for his support. The querist states his difficulty in this wise, as nearly as memory serves us: "The amount paid is entirely inadequate to support myself and family, even with the strictest economy. If I go in debt and fail to pay, beside the humiliation to myself, my usefulness is sadly impaired. I cannot resort to the civil courts, for public sentiment is such that if the plan were available to the recovery of my dues, the relations between my charge and myself could not be cordial, and my usefulness as a minister of the Gospel, at least to those for whom I labor, would be lost. I should have to leave my field, and where should I go? There is no place awaiting me."

The reply not unjustly characterizes the promise to pay and the failure to perform as dishonest, and not dishonest only, but mean, inasmuch as advantage is taken of the impossibility of a resort to legal means to collect the debt. The inquirer is stated to be a Presbyterian minister, and the adviser says there must be something radically wrong in a system of church government that does not provide an adequate remedy for a case such as is stated.

Nothing is to be gained by denying facts or by blinking them, and we admit that cases such as are above indicated do too frequently occur in the Presbyterian Church, but it is not because of the system of government, for precisely the same state of affairs, so far as nonpayment of obligations is concerned occurs in other denominations, we believe we may safely say in all other denominations. The episcopal power vested in a presbytery is not less real than that vested in an individual, nor properly exercised can it be less effective.

We are not prepared, from lack of thorough information, to institute a contrast between the degree of effectiveness, resulting from the actual exercise of the power, which is attained as between the Presbyterian Church and others. The normal relation of a minister to any congregation, under the Presbyterian form of government, is that of pastor. No other relation is recognized in our standards. Presbyteries institute the relation and require the solemn obligation of an adequate support to the pastor, previous to forming that relation; and further, the right to require the performance of the obligation is claimed and undoubtedly resides in the presbytery.

Both the authority and the power, we reiterate, are as great in Presbyterianism as in any other form of church government. But the subject in its practical aspect is one which should thoroughly engage the attention of our church courts. Do our presbyteries exercise the power of review and control, in this and other matters, to the extent that due efficiency of our system requires? Have not our courts too often overlooked failures of congregations to come up to the measure of duty? Is not the pastoral relation sometimes dissolved without such exercise of authority, as occasion requires? These are questions which we would submit to our presbyteries.

The stated supply system of our Church, born doubtless of what seemed to be the exigencies of times and circumstances, has done much to impair presbyterial authority in the matter we are considering, for it virtually admits that authority which demands for its due efficiency unfailing exercise. The grouping of churches in one pastorate might do much to remedy the evil referred to, yet after all that can be said as to ways to avoid the difficulty, the fact remains that the true way is to confront it manfully, and employ those means faithfully and firmly which are amply provided.

THE CHALMERS CENTENARY.

Something more than a fugitive paragraph is demanded in treating of the recent celebration in Edinburgh of the centenary of Dr. Chalmers' birthday. If there is one Scotchman of the nineteenth century whom the world at large regards as the equal in genius and fame of Sir Walter Scott, that man is Thomas Chalmers. There is no grander figure in that great historical portrait gallery where Wallace, Bruce, Buchanan, Knox, Burns, Scott and Hamilton stand forth in all the distinctness and glory of life.

Wallace and Bruce saved the imperiled political liberties of Scotland; Chalmers rescued the Church from the thraldom of use and tradition, and gave it real freedom and a revived energy. As Buchanan pierced the night of mediæval ignorance and mysticism, and let in a flood of light on the scholarship of his age, and as Knox in the name of his Master scourged the money changers and those that made commercial use of the temple of the Lord, so Chalmers, in a far later day, with equal prescience and power, and as one having authority, performed a mighty work of intellectual, moral and religious reform. A great preacher and teacher, he was also a born leader of men. His whole nature was kingly, revolting though it did against the faintest trace of usurped authority and the hauteur of long-vested privilege. But with all his earnestness, his courage, his eloquence, Chalmers' leadership was catholic and temperate. As time wears on the scars of the great conflict in 1843, one by one, disappear.

Space would fail, and opportunity otherwise does not offer, to treat here of the character and services of this illustrious Presbyterian. In the last number of the London Weekly Review which we have received an interesting account of the proceedings at the centenary appears. From this we learn that Mr. Burns, Moderator of the last Free Assembly, gave "a capital general sketch of the character and career of Chalmers," and that the other speakers were Principal Cairns, Dr. Horatius Bonar, Mr. Wood of Elie, Dr. Lindsey Alexander representing the Scottish Congregationalists, Prof. Chalmers of London and Prof. Watts of Belfast representing the English and Irish Presbyterian Churches, Mr. Taylor Innes, Principal Rainey and Lord Moncrieff, who moved the resolutions. Sir Henry Moncrieff was chairman of the committee of arrangements, and read "the exquisite letter of Mr. Gladstone, which was listened to by the vast audience with evident admiration."

FAILURE OF THE SOUTHERN PULPIT.

Some years since we were called to serve on a jury of inquest over the body of one supposed to be dead. Twelve men duly marshalled by the coroner, were standing over the human form and deliberating as to the cause of decease, when one of the jurors exclaimed: "The man is not dead." So it was, and all the testimony, all the reasoning dissolved before that one stubborn fact.

Prof. David Swing devotes several pages in the North American Review to the subject which heads our article. But the whole tissue of ingenious sophisms, historical misstatements, adroit perversions of truth, bald-faced lies falls before the fact, potent to all who care to see, that the Southern Pulpit is not a failure. False premises is a fatal defect in all attemps at logical reasoning, and here we might dismiss the subject; but from the Professor's standpoint, not only is the "Southern Pulpit" a Failure, but the Northern pulpit as well. One who knows how utterly outside of all evangelical religion Prof. Swing stands, needs not to be reminded of this. A few, and they shall be very few, extracts from the language of the article will illustrate this.

Of course slavery is charged with having been during its existence the only, at least the staple theme of Southern pulpit eloquence, and pulpit labor. A few extracts will serve our purpose of exposing the falsehoods, as absurd as they are venomous, upon which Dr. Swing's article is based:

"Three shapes of humanity lay before the parson of the cotton States—the slave-holders, the poor whites, and the slaves. Immense merit attached to the first class; the last class lay far over toward the animal world, and salvation followed this law of decrease, and was offered with some zeal to the first families, was often suggested to the poor whites as being desirable, and died away wholly before it reached the ears of those whose complexion was of a dark or mixed character. * * * It fails utterly to grasp the meaning of the Christian religion. It assumes that the sole purpose of Christianity is to save the soul from sufferings after death, and to secure for it a certain great positive happiness in a second world. * * * Let us assume that the doctrines of "orthodoxy" are true: they are not the whole of Christianity, but, on the contrary, they are only for the most part the divine side of theology, and in preaching them the Southern pulpit has generally omitted its own business to attend to that of the Almighty. * * * It is easier thus to mark the simple facts of current history than it would be to determine the quantity of guilt or reproach which should rest upon the Christian ministry of the South who lived amid the facts."

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

The Christian at Work expresses sound sentiment in the following:

"A contemporary asks: 'Who began the anti-slavery movement in this country?' Don't know and don't care any more than we are concerned as to the problem when the Icelanders came to these shores, or as to whether the Evangelist or Presbyterian Banner did the most for Presbyterian union. Church work lies before, not behind, brethren."

The following from the New York Herald reminds one of the widow's two mites which were cast into the treasury. Can it not be said of this little girl that she "hath cast in more than they all:"

"WILMINGTON, N. C., March 10.

"To the Editor of the Herald: I send you twenty-five cents to help the poor, starving Irish. I sold my knife, and this is what I got for it. I wish it was more. A little girl. KATE DEROSSET."

The Heathen Chinee is peculiar. This from the Independent:

"Oh! those sly heathen Chinee! Rev. O. C. Wheeler, D. D., (he got his D. D. last year from a California college that appreciated his services as a baggage master of the Central Pacific Railroad) is a great enemy of the Chinese, and wants a law passed that there shall no more of them be allowed to reside in our cities than there are Americans residing within the walls of cities in China. He is greatly shocked by an illustration which he lately met with of the depravity of the San Francisco Chinamen. He saw a Chinese cigar manufacturer pasting labels on his boxes on which was printed 'The Chinese must go.' Asking the Chinaman what he did that for the reply was, 'Sand lot man, he read that, buy the box, smoke my cigar.'"

The communication on first page from the chaplain of the Tombs in New York city will be found to be interesting. We clip the following from the Christian at Work in regard to his work:

"The present chaplain, Rev. Sidney G. Law, is a member of the Presbytery of New York, long known to a number of this ministers, and for many years a settled pastor of a Presbyterian church. The importance of the work done by this Tombs mission cannot very well be over-estimated. The Tombs is the principal receiving prison of this great city, and more prisoners probably pass through this prison than through any other, the annual average commitments being about 38000. Not all of these are criminals, but many are young men who have fallen before a first temptation and who may be saved from the dreadful school of a criminal prison. The Society is entirely unsectarian, and the services of all its officers are rendered gratuitously. Its receipts the past year, all voluntary contributions, were $1,316 60, its expenditures exceeding this by $223. The Society appeals to the christian and humane for contributions, and also for donations of magazines, books and papers, secular or religious."

The following from the St. Louis Presbyterian:

"The Baptist Flag continues to catechise us. It does not seem to be overmuch pleased with our answer to its recent queer question, but says simply 'It is such as we expected.' We doubt that. We are of the opinion that the Flag expected a far different reply. However, it comes at us again, saying:

"'We ask the St. Louis Presbyterian another question, as follows: In case a Baptist pastor should invite you to preach for his congregation, without any explanation, would you regard said invitation as a recognition of your ordination and ministerial character, as valid? We hope for an answer.'

"Most undoubtedly. How else could we regard it? In our judgment and according to Presbyterian doctrine, ordination is a prerequisite to the exercise of ministerial functions. If, therefore, a Baptist pastor, or an Episcopal rector, were to invite us to preach in his church we should say that he concurs with us in recognizing the validity of our ordination."

What else could our St. Louis brother answer? And yet we warn him that he is driving our Baptist friends—aye, brethren—to the wall, and forcing them into thorough non-recognition of the Pedo-baptist ministry.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

Early on the morning of the 17th inst., Mrs. Carrie Watkins Payne, wife of Rev. C. M. Payne, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Wilmington, N. C., closed a sweet Christian life by a peaceful death, and entered the heavenly rest. Sympathy for the bereaved pervades this entire community among Christians of every name, and the sad news will extend throughout the Synod.

HENDERSONVILLE CHURCH.

MILL RIVER, N. C., March 15.

Dear Brother: At a recent communion in the Hendersonville church three persons united with the church. Three others desired to join but were providentially prevented from attending. No special services. Congregation steadily increasing.

Yours, S. T. MARTIN.

A friend writes from Statesville, N. C., March, 17th: On last Saturday, the 13th, a committee of the Young Men's Christian Association of this place went to Troutman's and organized an Association. Although the weather was very inclement, about ten young men joined. They seem to be in earnest, and while the place is small and the numbers are few, let us hope that they may do much good for the Master.

Rev. Dr. Charles Phillips is now at Lebanon, N. J., on a visit to relatives. His health, we are pleased to hear, is greatly improved. As soon as he is sufficiently restored, we hope to treat our readers with articles from his pen.

Rev. R. Z. Johnston writes from Dallas during the session of Mecklenburg Presbytery of "a most enjoyable time." This place, which had the honor of Presbytery for the first time, was literally crowded.

AN AMENDMENT.

In a recent number of the Missionary there appears the following letter from "a friend in South Carolina:"

"Would it not be well for Dr. Wilson to ask all our ministers to make a special contribution of $5 each for Foreign Missions, in order that $5,000 might be raised to send out three more missionaries this spring. &c?"

Now there are not many of our poorly-paid and hard-working ministers who could respond to this call without feeling—and some of them most keenly—the pinchings of want at home. Many are already so straitened because of insufficient and irregularly-paid salaries that they are compelled to deny themselves the happiness of giving as liberally to this cause as their hearts would dictate. I am not a minister but I have been "behind the scenes," and know this to be the case with many who could and would do much more for the extension of the Master's kingdom abroad if the Church at home were more prompt in paying these laborers who are surely "worthy of their hire."

I would therefore propose, as an amendment to the suggestion contained in the above letter, the following: Let every minister and elder in our Church make a special contribution this spring of $1 each for Foreign Missions in addition to what he usually contributes to this cause. If this is done the weight of the burden will be lifted from the shoulders of our ministers, which the generous brother in South Carolina proposes they shall bear alone. The amount raised will be greatly increased, and the promised blessing which is sure to follow cheerful giving will be extended to many more hearts.

Let our own Presbytery of Concord begin the good work and respond as one man to the call. M.

THE LAST MEETING OF SYNOD.

It may seem somewhat late in the day to be speaking of the last Synod. But earlier opportunity has been denied me, and no one else has said what seems to me might well be said. I do not affirm, however, that what I may say will be well said.

It was certainly a pleasant meeting. All of these ecclesiastical assemblages are pleasant because of the social enjoyment. This, I think, all will judge to be one of the pleasantest. One reason, I verily believe, is because Dr. Wood insisted on having divine worship daily and nightly. The Synod was spiritually refreshed thereby. The absorbing business of the body was per force laid aside, and opportunity was afforded of worship repeatedly. It was a real delight. So seldom is such an opportunity offered of hearing brethren here and there, of joining in the precious songs of Zion, in uniting in the sacred approach to the king with thanksgiving and supplications, that it makes this meeting in Statesville memorable. I have a theory (not copy righted, and possibly an infringment on everybody's patent) that preachers and elders are mortal and sinful, and need preaching as truly as any others. The proclamation of the gospel is profiting to them, as it is to all, even the ripest of God's saints, and it is certainly enjoyed by them. I believe it is no loss of time in our ecclesiastical courts to spend much time in religious worship. It gives spiritual power. If needed, let us meet earlier and stay longer, but let much time be given to this refreshing, becoming and delightful service.

It was the first time under the "New Book" that a meeting had been held, and the slight changes in the reception of corresponding members and visiting brethren commended themselves to the better judgment of all. I have long thought that our Presbyteries and Synods were too cold and informal, that is indifferent, in their notice of those who attend out of courtesy or interest. While too much ceremony would be tiresome and embarrassing, I think we now have just enough.

The most interesting discussion perhaps was the accidental one on Thursday afternoon, about a colored ministry and Tuskaloosa Institute. I was glad elders took the floor repeatedly; not that it need be remarkable, but it is unusual. Brother Hill's report was capital on the subject of the education of a colored ministry. It seems to me it ought to have seen the light. Dr. Wilson's eloquent remarks about Tuskaloosa will not soon be forgotten.

Quite a ripple was created by an inquiry as to "Woman-preaching." It was an unexpected question, and the action of Synod was not by way of formal action at all. Of course but one opinion was held, could be held, as to the scripturalness of it. What the Word said was too plain. But the hesitation or the discussion was as to the the propriety, the dignity of saying anything about it. Perhaps the Synod could hardly have done less under the circumstances.

It was an omen of progress that the Synod appointed an "Agent of Evangelistic Labor." Too long has this most important department of church energy been shelved among many other items claiming the attention of the diligent and laborious Agent of Sustentation. It is beyond question what the Synod needs, and what the Synod has sadly neglected—the work of evangelization, as distinguished from the work of the settled pastorate. I think the report on that subject brought in by a special committee was passed over too lightly, if not treated cavalierly, perhaps that is too strong a word. It was late Friday afternoon, and we were all tired, that's a fact. But I did think so important a subject, and the views of brethren present and absent, demanded most respectful and earnest attention of the Synod. Many of us hoped to hear an animated discussion, a thoughtful consideration of this whole subject, and see some signal of advance along the whole line. However we expect much from the special Agent of the Synod, and that this as a "co-ordinate department" shall in the future receive the attention it deserves.

Does it seem a little sorcheaded and querulous to observe that it appears to me there is almost too much of routine and too little of animation, of earnest conference, and comparison of views, of progressive movement in the meetings of Synod? The great branches of enterprise are duly brought forward by the different Agents and Committees. But how often do their reports fall on listless ears, are adopted by formal votes, and the opportunity for action is lost! People get in such a great hurry to return. Hardly two days of conference are granted, before the members are sensibly dismissed. And so it happens that from one reason or another, the Sunday School work, the Publication interest, this cause or that, gets but a partial and hurried consideration.

Perhaps the Committee on the State of the Church will help us.

The Agent of Education got in some good work; and he was ably seconded by Professor Blake. Who that heard his ringing and telling speech about Davidson College will soon forget it? All that is needed, is just such an exposition at every meeting of Synod. "Turn on the light."

All agree that the new rule about the Synodical Missionary Meeting Friday night, works well. I have thought, however, that the collection required by the rule should be optional with the Committee of Devotional Exercises. Every thriving church does its utmost for Foreign Missions. Take for instance the church at Statesville: It was singled out for special commendation, and deservedly, by the Agent. And yet notwithstanding all their efforts, and the self-sacrificing zeal of their ladies especially, this congregation was called on for an extra collection at Synod. I know it was given cheerfully, and with prayers too. But sometimes it might be a burden. And the willing horse should not be too freely ridden. Let the Committee of Devotional Exercises decide.

Absenteeism! Well, I cannot do that subject justice; not meaning to intimate that said article has been duly meted to the topics adverted to.

It has been pleasant to recall the meeting. I think its influence is felt for good throughout the churches. I have not said all that might be said, but surely enough.

NOTES OF MECKLENBURG PRESBYTERY AT DALLAS.

Preliminary services were held in the church Thursday night, March 18th.

Rev. J. P. Cammon, having arrived that day, preached an appropriate sermon on the Holy Spirit, after which Mr. H. C. Dixon, drawn elect, was installed.

The weather seemed to promise rain and storm. But Friday brought sunshine and a pleasant temperature, and joy to the anxious families who were expecting to receive guests. About 5 o'clock, as the sun went down, assuring us of a bright day to follow, vehicles came in from the muddy highways with familiar faces, and the train rolled up to the station crowded with the members and visitors, and all were soon introduced and assigned homes, as previously arranged in a printed directory, the committee of reception making all parties feel welcome.

Rev. W. M. McGilvary of Rutherfordton, preached a very interesting sermon, full of thought and appropriate meditation, from Matt. v: "Ye are the light of the world," impressing the doctrine that Christ's Church has a work to do in this world; every member, especially every office-bearer, is a light-bearer.

Bro. Gammon was appointed to preside over this meeting, and says he is an extemporaneous moderator.

Sixteen ministers and 21 elders, representing 36 churches, were present at roll call, and many friends from the country and from over the border (from our sister Presbytery of Bethel) are present.

Reports from most of the churches are in and referred. This church (Dallas) reports 33 members now.

Very solemn and interesting memorial services were held at 11 a. m. Saturday, when Bro. McIlwaine read a biographical sketch of our late brother, Rev. John Douglas

Mr. J. L. Williams, a candidate in Columbia Seminary and son of our deceased brother, Rev. J. C. Williams, preached his trial sermon Saturday night to a large congregation. Presbytery has taken order to examine him for licensure.

Revs. G. D. Parks and W. E. McIlwaine and Elders H. M. Parks and Dr. J. A. Rudy have been elected to represent Presbytery in the General Assembly at Charleston.

Committees are working on important subjects, and reports will be in on Monday.

Preaching on Sunday by Revs. Harding, Cook, Robinson and R. A. Miller, and sacraments.

A service for the young people was conducted in the afternoon of Sunday by Revs Martin and Pharr. Neighboring churches in the country were served by Revs. McDonald, McIlwaine and Alexander, and Bro. Kirkpatrick preached at Gastonia Station Sunday night.

Presbytery has never met at Dallas before, and perhaps not more than a half dozen of the ministers of Presbytery were ever here before. The session is one of much interest, and the hospitality of the village is abundant; brethren seem to be enjoying it, and working earnestly. R. Z. J.

DEBT PAYING.

The following from a correspondent appeared recently in the Christian Observer:

"There is one great evil in this country which we think the pulpit and the press ought to denounce more frequently than they do—that is, the habit of getting in debt and making no effort to pay. Can a man be a consistent christian and not strive to pay all his debts? Can a man be a christian and not be honest? Is a man who does not try to live within his means and pay his debts an honest man? If so, we do not understand the Bible. Should men who habitually disregard their financial obligations be allowed to remain in the Church? We think not, and think that a man's being a member of the Church ought to be a letter of credit in any part of the globe where the Christian religion prevails But it is not the case; far from it, as there are even some ministers whose sermons do no good because they are preached by men who are not considered honest by even men of the world. Whisky is pronounced the great evil of this country, and it is a great curse; but we doubt whether it does more harm to the cause of the Church than the lying and dishonesty of sober church members, whose promise to pay is not worth the paper it is written on. The Church is not the place for fraud and dishonesty. PAY."

The above article reminds me of a question which I heard asked in a congregational meeting not long since, viz: "Are they members of the church?" The class of persons referred to were delinquent subscribers to the minister's salary. When the deacons reported a number of subscribers in arrears some one in the congregation promptly inquired as above.

We cannot, of course, tell what thought was most prominent in the mind of the interrogator, but we may suppose it was rather a question of surprise. What, members of the Church not paying what they promise! It cannot be. Such conduct is highly unbecoming mere worldlings. But for members of the Church, men professedly of those whom Christ died to redeem and purify unto himself, and who take the Bible for their guide book and standard—for these not to pay their debts, unless providentially prevented, is wholly unaccountable. And how much more unaccountable when you remember that the delinquency has respect to the sanctuary.

Can it be that members of the church neglect to pay what they promise for the maintenance of the house of God, which they profess to esteem above their chief joy! The thing is so inconsistent that there must be some mistake in regard to the matter. Perhaps the persons in questions are not members of the church, or perhaps they have paid and the deacons have failed to give the proper credit. It cannot be that members of the church would allow their minister to serve them from year to year at his own charges, and that, too, when they had solemnly pledged themselves for a certain portion of his support. Why, upright worldlings would not think of treating in this manner the laborers who had ploughed their fields, reaped their harvests, or performed for them the most menial service.

Or perhaps the questioner may have in his mind the remedy to be applied, "Are these members of the church?" Then let them be called to an account by the authorities of the Church. Is not a breach of lawful promise a violation of the ninth commandment? Is not "unfaithfulness in contracts between man and man" thus "withholding from our neighbor what belongs to him?" breaches of the eighth commandment? Surely the Church should not hesitate to discipline its members for doing what God expressly forbids. This should be done, not only for the sake of morals and religion, but for the good of the delinquents themselves. Indulgence to offenders, whether they be children or men, only encourages them to go from bad to worse. How many men who to-day have no standing or influence by reason of their unfaithfulness in business matters, might have been saved as useful men had they been dealt with in the proper manner in the outset of their downward career! Doubtless hundreds of families are great sufferers to-day because proper corrective remedies were not applied at the nick of time. How sad is the condition of those persons whose promise to pay is not worth the paper upon which it is written! For such a condition is not the result of mere poverty. If a man is know to be faithful in his business matters he can get credit for whatever he asks, though he be poor. There is something far worse than poverty behind the scene, where men have lost the confidence of their fellow men. "Are they members of the Church?" IVANHOE.

A meeting is in progress in the Presbyterian church of Cynthiana, Ky., in which Rev. Mr. Triplett is being assisted by Rev. J. M. Evans of Augusta. Great interest is manifested. There have been sixteen additions, thirteen on profession, with large congregations and many others interested.—Christian Observer.

ECLECTICISMS.

INGERSOLL'S GROUND.

Interior:

Mr. Ingersoll has boldly chosen his ground. It is the ground of no compromise with the God of Christianity. Perhaps he is doing some service even to the church by making it plain that to stand with him is to fight against Christianity and all the good it contains. On an issue like this so clearly made, and so boldly maintained, the young men of this generation need have no difficulty which of the two to choose, the Bible and immortality with God, or helpless despair and death with Mr. Ingersoll. In view of such an issue, let every young man decide for himself the question, Who is on the Lord's side?

LEADING CAPTIVE SILLY WOMEN.

Lutheran Observer:

Most Protestants, when at Rome, go to see the Pope from curiosity, or because it is the fashion; and some are so impressed by the "odor of sanctity," and the pomp of his surroundings, as to become downright flunkeys; while others are so soft, sentimental and shallow, as to be won by the flattering courtesies of the holiness, and are thereby allured into Romanism. These are generally imaginative young ladies, who think it is "so nice" to be blessed by the Pope, and to go through the usual genuflexions, and ecremonics, and fripperies of Roman worship. It gives these empty and idle creatures a sort of religious employment, with a fashionable sort of sanctity about it; and the spectacular trumpery and displays are just suited to their tastes and capacities. None know better than Romanists how to "lead captive silly women."

SPIRITUAL TEACHING.

United Presbyterian:

What is true of a minister and congregation is true of the whole ministry in the entire Church. It is spiritual teaching that will secure blessing and power. The instruction in philosophies has its place, and current subjects of practical importance demand attention, just as, also, affairs of ecclesiasticism must not be omitted; but the real foundation for success is in presenting Christ, and in urging a devout dependence upon the Holy Spirit. The wit, eloquence, practical earnestness, capacity for organization—all the traits and acquirements that may be employed in the work will utterly fail in the end if they are solely depended on, or if they are given precedence in the life and work. It is not by might nor by power—by human agencies, management, skill, culture, industry, and certainly not by sensationalism, rudeness, vulgar wit and sacrilege, "but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

THE CHINESE NEW YEAR.

The inhabitants of the Celestial Empire have been indulging in their annual season of merry-making and festivity. The 10th of February is their New Year's Day, and for the half-moon that follows—that is to say till the 25th of the month, when the great Feast of Lanterns takes place—they endeavor as best they may to prolong the scenes of mirth and jollity inaugurated on the last night of the old year. It is perhaps unnecessary to say that the months in China are lunar, consisting of twenty-nine or thirty days as the case may be, so that the date of New Year's Day alters considerably from year to year, especially in the interval between the leap years, in which a bissextile month is introduced to rectify the calendar. The new moon always occurs on the 15th of the Chinese month, and it is somewhat remarkable that the illuminations of the lantern feast should occur on that day rather than at a time when in the absence of a moon they would, according to our ideas, produce a greater effect. The other principal fetes of the Chinese year are the Festival of the Dead, occurring about Easter, and corresponding to All Souls' Day in Paris, inasmuch as the fashion is to visit the tombs and cemeteries; the Feast of Dragons lasting for five days during the fifth month, when grand boat races take place on all the lakes; and finally the Feast of the Moon, on the 15th of the eighth month, which is celebrated by a great gathering of relations round each family circle, the idea being that each household should then be "full," like the moon in autumn. One of the characteristics of the festival which is now being celebrated is that this is a sort of public vacation, the seals of the State being temporarily shut up, and the functionaries released from their arduous duties.—London Review.

GLADSTONE AND CHALMERS.

The following is the letter of Hon. W. E. Gladstone, which was read at the Chalmers centenary:

"My dear Moncrieff,—I wished to have written to you at leisure, but I have to-day observed or reminded myself that the occasion arrives to-morrow, so I must write in haste. However, I do not know whether in my last letter I exhausted, at least verbally, the stores of my admiration for Dr. Chalmers, or whether I allowed it to be taken for granted, what I can now truly say, that there are hardly any words of admiration that could be employed concerning him to which I should scruple to subscribe. My knowledge of him was in a very early period of my manhood, when it was my father's wont to spend his winter in Edinburgh. I have a certain number of his letters, and I remember how they were always subscribed by him 'yours respectfully,' or 'yours most respectfully,' and that I was utterly at fault in the attempt to find any words in return which would duly mark our several positions. He was indeed one of nature's nobles, and most of the qualities which stamped him with that character were obvious, almost glaring, to all who came across his path. I do not mean merely his rich and glowing eloquence, but his warrior grandeur, his unbounded philanthropy, his strength of purpose, his mental integrity, his absorbed and absorbing earnestness. They might not be aware of his singular simplicity and detachment from the world, of which I remember to have been deeply struck on a particular occasion. He sometimes gave me the honor of a walk with him, and one day he said he wished to make an appointment of this kind with me, when during our walk he would explain to me fully his situation with respect to the emoluments of his professorship, the Chair of Divinity. If I remember right, the Chair, when he was appointed to it, was believed to have a large endowment; but a point of law was, I think, subsequently raised, which, if affirmed, would have swept away the whole. After forty-five years I may state this inaccurately, but what I remember clearly is that the question was a very grave one, and I think it materially affected the prospects and even the status of himself and his family. The day came and the walk began, and lasted, I suppose, a couple of hours or more. At our starting he opened one of his favorite and engrossing subjects, probably that of evangelizing the country by means of manageable districts, each with its church and minister. Having begun, he forgot all about his endowment and his status. The conversation held fast by the original theme till we were within a few yards of my father's door. He seemed then to recollect himself, and he said, 'If you will allow me I will send my man of business to call upon you, and he will acquaint you with all the particulars of the question which has been raised.' Such was the impotence of mere to lay hold of his great, stately and heavenly mind. After having thus given you a piece of him, which I think has internal evidence of being genuine, I will not detain you with anything more, but wishing you all success in rendering honor to whom honor is due, I remain yours, &c.

W. E. GLADSTONE."

THE FERRY BILL.

The famous Section 7 of the Jules Ferry bill in the French Senate has been defeated by a majority of 148 to 120. This Section forbade the employment as teacher of any person belonging to a society forbidden by law; a skillful device for excluding the Jesuits from all educational work. The Clericals and Conservatives combined against it, enforced by a number of leading Republicans who regarded it as inconsistent with the essential principles of liberty. The rumor of the consequent resignation of Jules Ferry lacks confirmation; and the latest reports indicate that the Clericals and the administration are equally embarrassed by the result. A law nearly half a century old forbids the presence of Jesuits in France; the government now promises to put this law in force, and it is reported that already, in apprehension of the revival of this law, which has been practically a dead letter, the Jesuits are prepared to remove to Spain. The Clerical organs, on the other hand, appear to fear that, by combining with Republicans on the broad platform of a universal right to teach, their party has done more injury to the Romish Church than could have been done by the passage of the law. Very likely.—Christian Union.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Many Presbyterians are moving to Weatherford, Texas. The church there received three persons—one on examination—week before last. So says a correspondent from the Texas Presbyterian.

Items from St. Louis Presbyterian:

We regret to learn that Rev. H. P. S. Willis met with a fall at his home in Rockport, on the first day of January, by which his hip was so injured as to confine him to his bed and room for more than a month. With the aid of his crutches he is getting about, and since the fourth Sunday in February has been able to preach in a sitting posture. He improves rapidly and we trust will soon be entirely well.

The first church, St. Joseph, of which Dr. Campbell is the pastor, is arranging to provide a house of worship in the Southern part of that city. The contract has been let for a building 40x60 feet, to cost about $1,000. The work will be begun at once. This is good news.

We learn that much interest has developed in the church at New Bloomfield, Rev. Frank Mitchell, pastor. Quite a number of persons had confessed Christ, and the special services were still in progress at last accounts. We shall expect to hear more particularly from our good friends there.

At the monthly meeting of the ministers of Louisville, Ky., two weeks ago, there were upwards of fifty persons present, and they resolved that hereafter they would not furnish the notices of religious services for publication in any Sunday paper.

Rev. E. D. Junkin, pastor of New Providence church in Lexington Presbytery having received a unanimous call to the Presbyterian church at Houston, Texas, has gone thither on a visit.

Seven persons were received into the church at Churchville, Va., recently. Four by letter and three on examination. Rev. A. S. Moffett, the pastor, was assisted by Rev. Wm. Hoge, of Lebanon, in meetings held in connection with the communion.

At the First Presbyterian church last Sunday, March 14th, Messrs. Jno. W. Alby, Hugh F. Lyle, Arista Hoge and C. B. Somerville were elected deacons. There were thirteen additions to the congregation, three upon certificate and ten upon profession of faith.—Staunton Vindicator.

At Charlottesville, Va., two young gentlemen were received into the Presbyterian church on profession of faith at the late communion, and several persons by certificate.—Central Presbyterian.

Eight persons were received into the communion of Bethel church, Augusta county, Va., on Sabbath, 7th inst. Other additions were expected on the next Sabbath.

The Rev. Joseph L. Stevens was installed pastor of the John's Island and Wadmalaw church on Sabbath, February 29, at noon. The Rev. Wm. F. Junkin, D. D., preached the sermon of great power, and charged the pastor; and the Rev. John R. Dow, who had been for thirteen years pastor of this field, delivered the charge to the people. It is an interesting fact that two licentiates have recently been ordained who were once children of the John's Island church, viz: Rev. J. J. Chisolm of Harrodsburg, Ky., and Rev. J. L. Stevens. There are evidences of improvement on all the islands May they be made glad according to the days wherein they have been afflicted, and the years wherein they have seen evil.—Southern Presbyterian.

Quite an interesting meeting occupying several days was lately held at Taylorsville, Ky., by Rev. M. H. Houston in charge, assisted by Rev. J. H. Morrison.

About ten miles west of Covington, Newton county, Ga., is Bethany, a Presbyterian church, from which focus radiates a pleasant neighborhood. The evangelist, Mr. Bachman, has come and gone. During his stay daily morning prayer meetings and evening sermons were kept up and attended with great interest by all denominations, and we have reason to believe that God has poured out his converting grace, and that many have "come to Jesus" and experienced his pardoning love. For nearly or quite forty years Bethany has been a growing church, but the original members have been heard to remark that just such a regenerating series of meetings have never been held in our church. Great good has been done. Sixteen united with the Presbyterian Church on profession of their faith. Bethany is revived, there can be no doubt.—Christian Observer.

Rev. J. Y. Allison writes from Monroe, 24th, to the Southwestern Presbyterian: We are all pretty quiet up here, waiting for the Lord to come and bless us. We are encouraged in our efforts to purchase a parsonage, having on hand for that purpose $600, raised during the last fifteen months. This does not include a liberal donation by one of our worthy elders, who holds the property, and will contribute one-third of the value. So we hope to succeed after a while. Neither have we any festivals or concerts, but all raised by voluntary contributions and a public collection on the first Sabbath in January, which realized $117 20; and another on the first Sabbath in March, and got $123 40. The festivals do not net much more money than that, and certainly cost more trouble, with less certainty of propriety.

Here is another item of interest, concerning our Sabbath School. One of our zealous ladies seeing some Chinamen among us, thought that it would be about as cheap to evangelize them here as in China. So she invited them to come to Sabbath School. They accepted the invitation, and seem very grateful for the attention. They take great interest, at least one who can speak English pretty well. We hope that good may grow out of this. Pray for us and them! They also attend prayer-meeting and the Sabbath service. We have to teach them English. This may be our main hold on them, but we will not complain of that. May not good be done in other places in this way?

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. Wm. H. Cooper, of the Presbytery of Long Island, died on the 24th ult., aged 72.

Rev. Wm. H. Talmadge, a member of the Presbytery of Sacramento, died lately. He had been in ill health for some time past.

Rev. James L. Scott, a member of the Presbytery of Allahabad, died at Dehia Doon, on January 3d. Many years ago he was a missionary, but was compelled by declining health to return to this country. About two years since he returned to India. He was in the sixty-seventh year of his age.

Dr. John Hall's church has raised his salary from $10,000 to $15,000.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

In the United Presbyterian Ministers' Association in New York city two of the brethren, by appointment, read well prepared papers, one on either side of the question of the use of instrumental music. The general discussion developed the fact that out of thirteen members present only three favor the reception of the prohibitory clause in the Book of Government.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The Presbyterian and Congregational churches at Hastings, Nebraska, united in idle meetings for two weeks, when Rev. C. F. Clapp came and remained with them ten days. The whole place was moved on the subject of religion as never before, and there were over a hundred conversions. Thirty-one were received to the membership of the Congregational church.

METHODIST.

Rev. J. L. Swain, a Methodist Protestant minister of Buncombe county, N. C., was killed by a falling tree on the 4th inst. So we learn by the Central Protestant.

The collection for missions in the Baltimore conference amount to $8,155, being $1,000 more than last year.

It is said that of the 132 ministerial delegates elected so far to the Methodist General Conference, eighty are presiding elders, nineteen editors and other non-itinerants, and only thirty-three pastors.

FRIENDS.

The whole estate of the late Gideon Frost of Glen Head, L. I., has been bequeathed for the endowment of a Friend's college at Matsuck, L. I., which was founded by the testator in 1877. The amount bequeathed is estimated at $200,000.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

There was a grand reception of Southern excursionists in Cincinnati last week, on the completion of the new railroad line.

Trinity College has 125 students.

Another large batch of emigrants left Greensboro the other day for the West.

Mr. John D. Sprunt, of this city, will locate in London.

A fire among certain manufactories of Troy, N. Y., destroyed $400,000 worth of property.

The following is the Railroad Joint Committee: From the Senate—Leach, of Davidson; Davidson, of Buncombe; Erwin, of McDowell; Dorteh, of Wayne; Graham, of Lincoln; Mebane, of Caswell; Bryan, of Pender (Democrats); Graham, of Montgomery; Everitt, of Forsyth; White, of Perquimans (Republicans). From the House—Carter, of Buncombe; Cook, of Franklin; Brown, of Mecklenburg; Cobb, of Lincoln; Covington, of Union; Bryson, of Swain; Lockhart, of Anson; Richardson, of Columbus; Vaughn, of Alleghany; Bernard, of Pitt; Davis of Catawba (Democrats); Clark, of Craven; Davis, of Madison; Ellison, of Wake; Scott, of New Hanover (Republicans.)

The Boston Journal has been burned out.

In his campaign speeches Mr. Gladstone denounces Austria.

A great movement in this country for the purpose of freeing Ireland from English rule has just come to light. A convention in its interest will be held before long in Philadelphia.

The following, under date of the 22nd, is the latest concerning the relations between Russia and France: A Paris dispatch says that Prince Orloff departed without paying any official visit to or leaving his card with President Grevy or Premier De Freycinet. Persons in position to judge assert that Russia has eagerly seized the opportunity for showing her coolness to France in order to relieve the blunder of Gortschakoff's famous open advances to her. Matters were so managed that the extradition of Hartmann was refused, whereupon an offended air was assumed. Now that the nightmare of the Franco Russian alliance is dispelled Bismark can offer Russia his hand.

Dr. Pritchard, president of Wake Forest College, will deliver the annual address, and Rev. Dr. Sprunt, of Kenansville, the annual sermon, before the Societies of the Warsaw school, at its commencement May 13 and 14, as we learn from the Brief Mention.

The State Conventions of the Democratic party will be held to select delegates to the Cincinnati Convention as follows: Alabama June 2, Arkansas June 2, Connecticut April 28, Florida June 10, Illinois June 10, Indiana June 9, Iowa April 7, Kansas May 28, Kentucky June 17, Louisiana April 12, Massachusetts held last fall; Michigan June 8, Missouri May 26, Mississippi June 2, Nebraska March 31, New Hampshire May 5, New Jersey May 19, North Carolina June 17, Ohio May 16, Oregon April 7, Pennsylvania April 28, South Carolina June 1, Tennessee June 1, Texas April 20, Virginia May 19. West Virginia holds no State Convention to elect delegates to the National Convention, but leaves it this time to each congressional district to elect three delegates, and these nine are to elect a tenth. Wisconsin, May 12.—Richmond State. [As we have seen no list of Republican Conventions we are unable to give that information.]

It is now said that Gen. Washington pronounced the word corps as if it had an "e" at the end.

Twenty-nine newspapers are now published in this country exclusively by colored men—twenty-two in the South and seven in the North.

Francis Murphy continues to have large audiences at his temperance lectures.

The railroad matter is still under consideration in the Legislature.

The sense of a meeting of Wilmington citizens, held on Monday, was that under the circumstances no obstacles should be offered to the sale of the Western North Carolina Railroad, but certain amendments to the proposition were suggested, and opposition expressed to "the construction of further parallel roads."

At Lincoln, Pa., at exercises in the public school the falling in of a floor on the 21st, killed five persons and wounded twenty or twenty-five.

The first through car to Port Royal S. C., over the Cincinnati Southern railway, with the Port Royal delegation from the recent celebration, arrived there Sunday, thirty-four hours from Cincinnati.

The Herald's Irish relief fund aggregated Saturday evening $308,137 20. The frigate Constellation is rapidly loading with supplies, and it is expected to get off by Thursday next. Eugene Kelly & Co., New York bankers, announced that they have remitted so far $170,589 15. Bishop Ryan, of Buffalo, New York, has collected in his diocese $15,101 which is to be sent to the Catholic bishops and archbishops of Ireland.

Says the Goldsboro Messenger of Monday: "We hope to see a large audience at the Presbyterian church to-night to hear the lecture of Rev. J. Henry Smith of Greensboro on 'Little Things.' The object is for benevolent purposes, and we feel quite sure that all who attend will enjoy a rich literary treat."

THE PACIFIC
GUANO COMPANY.
This Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was chartered in 1865.
The stock was taken by a few of the largest and wealthiest merchants in Boston and New York, who still direct and control the Company.
The Works, situated at Woods' Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., are the largest and most complete of the kind in the United States.
The Company owns several large deposits of Phosphate, which it works, and having acid chambers, manufactures its own Oil of Vitrol.
The Company employs and consults with several of the leading chemists and most progressive vegetable physiologists in the country.
With all these advantages—viz: long experience, ample capital, large works, splendid machinery, extensive deposits, and the best scientific ability, the Company can and does offer a Fertilizer at the lowest possible price.
By reason of the liberal policy of the Company, as well as the intrinsic value of its principal brand, SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO has become, unquestionably, the most popular Fertilizer in the United States, its sale extending from Maine to Texas.
It would be a work of superogation for us to do more than simply call attention to the fact that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO will be offered this (the fifteenth Spring) season for sale at all points in North Carolina, because there is no manufactured Guano as long, as widely, and certainly none more favorably known, than this brand.
We therefore will devote but a few lines to a description of this popular article, preferring that others should testify from their own practical experience as to its value.
It is proper, however, that we should call attention to a comparative analysis of Fertilizers sold in North Carolina, published in 1878, by Prof. Ledoux, the State Chemist of North Carolina, who places SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO among the very highest grades known.
Such an endorsement of SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, confirmed as it is by Hon. L. L. Polk, the Commissioner of Agrienlture, under whose auspices the analysis was published, is certainly worthy of note.
This year SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is equal, in every respect, to what it was in 1879.
It is manufactured by the same Company, under the same formula, using the same materials, and hence must give the same splendid analysis as that published by Prof. Ledoux.
It is in fine physical condition.
It is packed in new, clean bags, each bag containing 200 pounds.
The analysis is stenciled on each bag, as required by law.

FOR THE FAMILY.

A Crown of Days.

BY MARY E LAMBERT

It is said, when an earthly babe is born,
A beautiful angel prays
For the boon to cherish and love through life,
And to garner its precious days,
To weave in a crown, for the child to wear,
When heaven has opened its portals fair.

A starving child gave a portion of bread
To a beggar in its way;
When the angel gathered a fallen crumb,
It sparkled with purest ray;
And the angel whispered, "A diamond rare
To set in the crown for the waifs to wear!"

And the angel smiled as a youth's slight arm
Supported a falling brother,
For in love, and in charity divine,
Earthly ones uphold each other.
And the angel said, with a song of praise,
"See! I have found two of the precious days!"

And the angel saw, through the passing years,
That the life of self-denial
Made many a beautiful, golden day,
For faith glorified each trial.
"He sleepeth!" they said, and the angel fair
Placed the jeweled crown on his silvered hair

The Wonderful Mother.

The winter of the year 1709 was one of extreme cold. Never was a colder winter known in Europe. In France many people froze to death in their beds, not only among the mountains but even in the villages and cities The hottest fire was not sufficient to keep a room warm. While the stoves were red hot the water would freeze but a few feet from them. The trees in the forest and by the roadside became so frozen that some of them burst and made a noise as if a small mine had exploded.

Sparrows and crows and jackdaws sometimes fell down dead while flying in the air. Large flocks of sheep and cattle froze in the barnyards. The bats, which usually sleep during the winter, were awakened out of their torpid slumbers, fluttered around a little while, and fell dead on the ground. The deer in the forest could no more run swiftly, but crept slowly out of the woods and came near the dwellings of men. Finally spring came, and a multitude of them were found dead in the woods. The little lakes and brooks and rivers, after they had been thawed by the sun, emitted a very unpleasant odor, because nearly all the fish in them had been frozen to death. The people suffered from extreme poverty, for the cold had destroyed many of their means of support. The wheat that had been sown in the autumn, their sheep, fowls, fish and vegetables that had been buried in the ground were completely destroyed by frost

During this winter a poor little Savoyard boy was wandering the streets of Luneville, in Lorraine. He was a pitiable orphan. His older brother, who had taken care of him, had now gone on a message to the city of Nancy to earn a few francs. But he suffered the fate of many travelers, and was frozen to death. Many of the passengers on the stage and on horseback were frozen to death, though covered with furs and cloaks. The drivers lost their lives, and still held the reins in their stiff hands

The little Savoyard boy wandered from house to house to get a little employment or a piece of bread. He was glad to blacken boots or shoes, dust clothes, clean dishes in the kitchen, or do anything that would give him a sou. But when night came on his suffering became intense. He had slept with his brother in a carpenter's shop, where the two had covered themselves with an old foot cloth, on which they piled shavings very high. They lay very close together, and by this means managed to be protected from the severity of the cold. But now he was alone, and he would certainly freeze if he should attempt to sleep in the carpenter's shop. The wife of a hostler took compassion on him. She showed him a little sleeping place in one of the stalls in the stable where the horses of a certain prince were kept In this stall there was an iron cage, in which a large brown bear was confined, for the beast was very wild and angry. The little Savoyard boy, who had come in the darkness of the night into the stable, neither knew nor cared for any wild beast that might be by. He lay down upon some straw, and stretched out his hand to pull more. As he stretched out his hand he put it in between the wires of the cage in which the beast was, and found that a large pile was there. Thinking it was better to get in where the straw was, he crawled up to the cage, and squeezed in through the iron bars. The bear grumbled a little, but did no violence. The little boy offered to God a prayer, which his departed mother had taught him, and then committed himself to the keeping of his Heavenly Father. He asked protection from the cold, and he was protected both from the cold and from the wild beasts.

The bear took the little stranger between her paws and pressed him near her warm breast, and against her thick skin, so sof and comfortable, that he who had not slept for many nights with any comfort now forgot all fear, and soon fell into a sweet, deep sleep.

In the morning the boy waked up with renewed strength and crept out of the cage, and went forth to the city to attend to his business and to seek his daily bread. At night he returned to his strange mother. Beside the bear there lay a great many pieces of bread which had been brought from the table of the prince, but the bear had eaten all she wanted, and these were left. So the little Savoyard helped himself to all he needed. He then lay quietly down between the paws of his thick-clad mother, who pressed him to her as she had done before, and he slept there as if in the warmest feather bed.

In this way he spent five nights without anybody knowing it. On the morning of the sixth night he overslept himself, so that when the hostlers went round with lanterns in the early morning to attend to the many horses in the stable, they saw the boy lying between the paws of the great bear. The old bear grunted a little as if she were very much offended at any one seeing her taking care of her little favorite. The boy sprang up and squeezed through the stage, to the great astonishment of the bystanders.

This strange affair became widely known, and created much wonder throughout the city. Although the modest little Savoyard was very much ashamed that anybody should know that he had slept in the arms of a bear, he was ordered to appear in the presence of the prince, to whom he told his recent experience. The prince appointed a day for him to come again. The boy came, and in the presence of the prince and princess, and many people of rank, he was requested to enter the cage where the great bear was. She received him as kindly as ever, and pressed him to her breast.

The good prince now understood that the bear, or rather God, working providentially through the bear, had been the means of saving the little orphan boy from death. No person had taken care of him, none had shown any sympathy for him, and yet in the very coldest night of that remarkable winter this rough beast was the means of saving his life, the providence of God preserving him.

This circumstance led the prince to contemplate divine providence in a higher light than he had ever done before; and so should it lead us to remember that God sometimes uses the most unexpected means as the instruments for the consummation of his purposes. The little Savoyard afterward led an honorable and useful life, nor did he ever forget how God had spared him in his great need.

"The Lord that delivered me out of the paw of the lion, and out of the paw of the bear."—1 Sam. xvii: 37.

"I laid me down and slept; I awaked, for the Lord sustained me."—Ps. iii: 5.—Good Words.

The Child Jesus.

"I wonder what the Lord Jesus really did when he was a child?" said Willie, one Sabbath evening just before Christmas day.

"So do I," said Katie, "and I wish the Bible had told us more about Him—whether He ever went to school or not, whether He ever played, or whether He was always quiet and thoughtful."

"A good many people have felt the same wish," Aunt Kate answered, "but as God has not seen fit to tell us more, you may be sure there is some very good reason why we should not have our curiosity gratified. Still, we do know something about the childhood of our Lord and the few notices we have may teach us a great deal"

"He didn't go to school, I suppose," Katie said, "because the Jews asked, 'How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?'" (John vii: 15.)

"Did Jesus never learn His letters?" asked Polly, with some surprise.

"Well, the Jews did not mean that Jesus had never learned the alphabet," Aunt Kate said, "but that he had not been taught in any of the schools of the rabbis, and they were surprised, not at His being able to read, but at His knowing so much about the Scriptures. Whether He went to school at Nazareth or not I can't say, for the Bible tells us nothing about it."

"At any rate, I suppose He used to help Joseph, who was a carpenter, in his shop, and by that He must have been something like other boys."

"I have no doubt that in a great many ways Jesus was like other boys, only we can never think of His being idle or disobedient, or anything else wrong. Very likely He did work at Joseph's trade, for the people called Him the carpenter's son; and St. Mark tells us that once they asked, 'Is not this the carpenter?'"

"And don't we know anything else about the Lord when He was child?" asked Polly.

"Yes, there is another text which surely you will remember, that tells us what He did after Mary had found Him disputing with the doctors in the temple."

"He went home with Mary and Joseph, and did what they told Him"

Katie had found the place in St. Luke and read, "And He went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them, but His mother kept all these sayings in her heart. And Jesus grew in wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and man."

"And so," said Aunt Kate, "though we hardly know anything else about the Lord's childhood, we do know that He was always obedient and gentle, setting an example to the boys and girls of Nazareth and not only to them but to all children in all parts of the world."

"I don't wonder that everybody loved Jesus when He was a child," said Willie, "for He must have been so good. But then it was easy for Him to be good, and it's very hard for us"

"Yes, but, Willie, you know that He was once a child and had to pass through all the temptations of childhood and knows how hard it is for you to be good, and if you ask Him He will help you so that you may be like Him, and as you grow bigger and wiser you may increase in favor with God and man.' And as we think of the Saviour let us remember why He was born into this world and lived and died for us. It was to make us pure and holy and to save us from our sins. Come, let us thank Him for His love." and Aunt Kate prayed.

We are never too young to learn what is useful, nor too old to grow wise and good

MISCELLANEOUS.

Burns.

When Burns was really serious, how many phases of emotion has he rendered into words which have long since become a part of the mother tongue! What husband ever breathed to his absent wife words more natural and beautiful than those in

"Of a' the airts the wind can blow?"

Then, who did blighted and broken-hearted love mingle itself with the sights and sounds of nature more touchingly than in

"Ye flowery banks o' bonnie Doon,
How can ye bloom sae fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds,
And I sae fu' o' care?"

Where is the wooing match that for pointed humour and drollery can compare with that of Duncan Gray, when "Meg was deaf as Ailsa Craig," and Duncan "spak o' lowpin o'er a linn!" These are lines that for happy humour none but Burns could have hit off. Many more of his love songs are equally felicitous, but there is a limitation. It has been remarked, and I think truly, of Burns' love songs that their rapture is without reverence. The distant awe with which chivalry approaches the beauty it admires is unknown to him; it was Scott's privilege above all poets to feel and express this. Perhaps Burns made some slight approach toward this more refined sentiment in his love song after the manner of the old minstrels;

"My luve is like a red, red rose
That's newly sprung in June—
My luve is like a melodie
That's sweetly play'd in tune."

And again in that early song of his to Mary Morison.

But besides those effusions of young ardour in which he generally indulges, how well has he conceived and depicted the sober certainty of long-wedded love in calm and cheerful pathos in "John Anderson my Jo, John!"

But besides the one emotion which was paramount with Burns, how many other moods has he rendered? What can be simpler, easier (one might think), to compose than such a song as "Should auld acquaintance be forgot?" Yet who else has done it? There is about this song almost a biblical character, such as we find in the words of Naomi, or of one of the old Hebrew patriarchs. For, as has been said, the whole inevitable essential conditions of human life, the whole of its pain, natural joys and sorrows, are described, often only assumed, in the Old Testament as they are described nowhere else. In songs like Auld Lang Syne Burns has approached nearer to this biblical character than any other poet I know. Again, if wild revelry or bacchanal joy is to find a voice in song, where else has it found one to compare with that of "Willie brewed a peck o' maut?" Certainly not in the "Nunc est bibendum" of Horace. The heroic chord, too, Burns has touched with a powerful hand in "Scots, wha hae," The greatest living Scottish writer has said of it, "As long as there is warm blood in the hearts of Scotchmen, or of man, it will move in fierce thrills under this war ode, the best I believe that was ever written by any pen." To this oracle I suppose every Scotchman must say Amen. And yet I have my own misgivings. I think that it is to the charm of music and old associations rather than to any surpassing excellence in the words that the song owes its power. Another mood is uttered, and a strange wild fascination dwells in the defiant Farewell of Macpherson the Highland Reever, who "lived a life of strut and strife,

And died of treachery," and to those last words Burns has added this matchless chorus:

"Sae rantingly, sae wantonly,
Sae dauntingly gaed he;
He played a spring and danced it round
Below the gallows tree."

Last, I shall but name "A man's a man for a' that," which, though not without a touch of democratic bitterness, embalms in words of power, not to be matched out of Shakespeare, the sense of the native dignity of man and of the essential equality of all men:

"The rank is but the guinea stamp;
The man's the goud for a' that."

That is a word for all time.—Professor Shairp.

Why the Sky Appears Blue.

"Why is the sky blue?" is a question, says a recent number of the Academy, which has often been asked, but never satisfactorily answered. Helmboltz offered an explanation which depended on the reflection of solar light by particles in the atmosphere. These particles being very minute would reflect preferably the shortest waves of light, namely blue waves, while they would allow the longer waves, corresponding to green and red light, to pass through them; just as a log of wood floating on the surface of still water would throw off the tiny wavelets caused by a falling drop in its neighborhood, while the same log in long ocean swells would be tossed to and fro without noticeably impeding the progress of the waves

Dr. E. L. Nichols (in the Philosophical Magazine for December) has propounded another view, which has much to recommend it. According to Young and Helmholtz's theory of color-impression there are in the eye three sets of nerve termini, one set chiefly influenced by the red, another by the green, the third by the violet rays. The impression of color is the resultant of the intensities of these three effects. The impression upon these nerves is not directly proportional to the intensity of the ray, the different nerve-termini being subject to different laws. For very feeble rays the "violet" nerves are very sensitive, while the "green" and "red" nerves scarcely act at all. As the light increases in intensity the "red" and "green" increase in activity, while the "violet" nerves become tired and dazzled For rays of dazzling brilliancy the "red" nerves are in their most sensitive condition. Thus, of the simple colors, as the brightness increases, red and green change to yellow, blue becomes white. Daylight at ordinary intensities affects the three sets of nerve-termini equally; the resultant impression is whiteness. Now daylight is simply the light of the sun weakened by manifold diffuse reflections. The direct rays of the sun, as we let them fall upon any colorless object, appear also a white light; but on attempting at noon on a clear day to gaze into the sun's face the impression is of blinding yellow. It is not that the direct rays differ in composition from diffuse daylight, but that the "violet" nerves cannot transmit the action of such strong light The moon, with enormously less illuminating power than the sun, seems bright, and is far brighter than the open sky. In passing from the intensity of the moon's rays to those reaching us from a corresponding bit of the open sky, we may, perhaps, take a step as great as that between the brightness of the sun and moon. In general, white light will appear bluer and bluer as its intensity diminishes, and this law will apply to the skies; as the light they reflect becomes fainter and fainter they will increase in blueness, even though the light by the process of reflection suffer no change in composition.—Scientific American.

The New Temple at Moscow.

Among the sacred edifices visited by the Czar during his stay at Moscow none was likely to yield him greater interest than the Temple of our Saviour (Khram Spaseetelya), which is now rapidly approaching completion. The building was commenced so far back as 1833, and was designed in commemoration of the French expulsion from Moscow. Nearly 4,000 laborers for a month were employed in digging out the ground for the foundations, and considerable energy was displayed in building the base; but, after a while, operations languished, and the work has gone on, by fits and starts, until it has now reached a stage when the architect can promise its completion next August, in readiness for the celebration of the 25th anniversary of the Emperor's coronation. The height of the structure is 288 feet, and the style of architecture is the Russo-Byzantine, the building being in the shape of a Greek cross, surmounted by five cupolas, one at each corner, and a larger one, or dome, in the centre. The roof and the framework of the cupolas weigh 1,800 tons, and the gilding on the latter has already consumed more than half a ton of gold-leaf. Above the centre cupola is a massive bronze cross, which can be seen from every part of Moscow. The bronze frames of the windows, each nine yards high, weigh nearly three tons, and the hinges of the bronze doors have to support 5½ tons of metal. Inside, the walls are gorgeously decorated in the usual style of Russian churches, and contain a number of jasper pillars, each of which cost upwards of £2,000. The total cost of this wonderful building is estimated to exceed 20,000,000 roubles, or £2,500,000 sterling. But this is not all. Recently the architect reported that a block of houses in proximity to the temple was detrimental to one of the aspects, and as a mere matter of course, the Synod voted £200,000 to demolish the buildings, and to construct in their place a terrace. It must not be forgotten that this is the second great cathedral which Russia has raised during the last sixty years, the famous one of St. Isaac's in St. Petersburg, having been commenced in 1819, and consecrated in 1858, after an expenditure of thirty-six million roubles, or £4,500,000. A third cathedral, not quite so large, is also rising at Nijni Novgorod, and will involve an outlay of two millions sterling before completion. Nine millions in sixty years upon cathedrals seems an enormous expenditure for three cities —London Weekly Review.

SECULAR NEWS.

Fred Becton caught a salmon trout last week weighing four and a half pounds, supposed to be one of the ninety thousand put in the Neuse by the government a few years ago.—Kinston Journal.

Mr. L. M. Ironmonger, one of the most successful truck farmers in this section, shipped 10,000 radishes to New York yesterday on the steamer Newbern —Newbern Nut Shell

We understand that the City Infirmary, under the management of Dr. W. W. Lane, heretofore alluded to in these columns, will, by consent of the Collector of the Port, be opened in a few days in the U. S. Marine Hospital in this city, until a building more suited to the purpose can be procured.—Wilmington Star.

Both houses of the Iowa Legislature have passed a constitutional amendment, which will now go to the next Legislature for ratification, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors, including ale, wine and beer, and authorizing the enactment of suitable regulations and penalties for the enforcement of prohibition.

Mrs. Susan Goss, an invalid and a very aged lady, was burned at Union Factory last Saturday. She had been left alone in the house, and when found her clothes were in flames, her fingers and arms were burned to a crisp, from which fatal injuries she soon expired.—Asheboro Courier.

The report comes down from the mountains that "Mud Cut" has risen in its might to prevent the progress of trains on the Western North Carolina Railroad; it is a fact known to those familiar with the peculiarities of this curious place that the mud does actually rise from pressure of the superincumbent mountain.—Charlotte Observer.

The Danville tobacco market is sending out circulars to the effect that the average price per hundred in that market for February was $10 66. Winston beats that. The average here was $10 97; 31 cents per hundred ahead of the great Virginia market.—Winston Leader.

Tomatoes have been received, nice large ones, says the Hickory Carolinian, by Messrs. Hall Brothers, of that place. They were from Nassau, via Wilmington.

It is stated that the Duke of Bedford derives £100,000 per annum, and the Duke of Devonshire £56,000 per annum from tithes.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor, to the whole system.

TALBOTT'S PATENT SPARK ARRESTER

The Invention of the Age.

It does not destroy the draft.
It does not interfere with cleaning the tubes.
It will not choke up, and requires no cleaning.
It requires no direct dampers to be opened when raising steam (dampers being objectionable, as they may be left open and allow sparks to escape)
It requires no water to extinguish sparks, which, by condensation, destroys the draft. Besides, when water is used, if neglected, the efficiency is destroyed by evaporation of the water, and the boiler is kept in a filthy condition.
It is simple and durable and can be relied upon.
It can be attached to any boiler.
No planter should be without one of them. Insurance companies will insure gins and barns where the Talbott Engines and Spark-Arresters are used at same rate as charged for water or horse-power.

RELIGIOUS EXPERIENCE.

MR. EDITOR: Every intelligent and serious ...dent of the biography of pious people must ...e been struck with the similarity of religi... experience, among truly converted per... in exceedingly different circumstances. ...similarity does not respect the order of ...ings or emotions, nor the intenseness or ...racy of feeling, but it relates to the gen... characteristics of the new moral state, ...which real converts are brought. On ...ing minutely at the spiritual condition of ...duals who have derived their religious ...from the Scriptures which they have ...with seriousness and self-application, or ...the plain preaching of the Gospel which ...have heard from these pastors or other ...d God, it will be found that genuine ...anity is everywhere the same. Whether ...new convert be learned or ignorant, pol... or crude, rich or poor; whether he de... his religious impressions from Owen or ...se, Edwards or Whitefield, Samuel Da... Asahel Nettleson; or whether, without ...man teacher, he took up the Bible in ...r mother tongue and studied it with ...s desire to understand the plan of ...ption, to be delivered from sin, and to ...the favor of God; when he comes to ...s his views and feelings plainly, with... embarrassment from early associations, ...ount of his spiritual experience, his ...s and fears, his successes and hindrances, ...s and sorrows, will agree, in all sub... points, with the experience of true ...s in every age.

...is subject were candidly considered by ...who deny the existence of experimental ..., or of regeneration by the Holy Spirit, ...would find facts, which would be utterly ...ance with every other system but that ...Gospel. They would find the mechanic ...bench, or the farmer at his plow, or ...chant, the lawyer, the doctor—men ...ery class and condition, from the stupen... intellect of Bacon, to the child who had ...that he was a sinner and that God is gra..., agreeing in a certain something, which ...ssate in calling "experimental religion" ...the religion of the heart." That this ...ord thing arises from a reality, and not ...any false theory superstitiously commu...ated from teacher to pupil, from the pas...'s flock, or from one convert to anoth... is manifest from the fact that in number... instances this perfect agreement exists ...out any such communication. It is man...so also from another fact of a most interest... character, namely: that those who enjoy ...experimental religion, though their know...ge, mental cultivation and manner of life ...diversified in a thousand forms, can un...stand each other on spiritual subjects im...diately. They can all speak the language ...Zion. And yet thousands of men who have ...ely and nice discernment on other sub..., and who have heard evangelical preach... all their lives, cannot understand this ...uage at all. Now and then one of this ...cription becomes a converted man, and he ...instantly feel the force of motives which ...never before had any influence with him, ...can perfectly understand at once what ...previously been unintelligible.

...A second remark I make is this: that per... who have thus been "renewed in the ...irit of their minds" and are the subjects of ..., act in the most natural manner—in ...manner to which genuine benevolence ...ll prompt them when they use all proper ...ans to bring others to the knowledge of ...th. There are some who think it very ...ge that a man who professes to have been ...ught from darkness to light should think ...th while to communicate his change, or ...ession of it to others. But nothing can ...more natural or more proper. Every such ...feels a great solicitude for the welfare of ..., for the extension of divine truth, for ...e awakening of careless sinners, for the ...rmation and consolation of Christians, ...d for the final triumph of Christ over every ...my. Feeling thus, he is constrained to do ...t he can to promote these great objects, ...d nothing which he can do seems more ...onable than to give his own deliberate and ...decided testimony, to tell what the Lord has ...e for his soul.

...In the third place, it is an obvious remark ...ar a conversion to the true Gospel from any ...perstitious Church "having a form of god... ...ess without the power," or from any form ...nominal Christianity gives great offence to ...e adherents of error. So it was in the days ...our Saviour, and so it has been ever since. ...it was in Germany at the period of the ...formation, and in England at several dis... periods in the sixteenth, seventeenth and ...eighteenth centuries, and so it is in England ...d in our own country at the present day. It is owing to this "offence of the Cross" that so many calumnies are often put forth respecting any new convert, whose example, it is feared, may prove contagious, or whose testimony is calculated to produce any considerable effect. But it is very easy to see the reason of all this. The friends of truth perceive it. The enemies of truth and its calumniators perceive it. The Scriptures lead us to expect it and fully explain its cause. Let every man who is disposed to circulate injurious reports concerning those who may have relinquished his own way of thinking for what they deem a stricter and purer faith, examine well into the nature of the disposition which he cherishes. It may be that he will make some important discoveries in regard to the character of his motives, and the nature of the cause which he is opposing.

The views now presented on this subject may do something towards explaining the reason of the opprobrium which has always been cast upon the Church of God by the ungodly, whether of the "the Church" or of the world. The formidable array of the enemies of truth has, in all ages, included not only the openly wicked and abandoned, but a large proportion of the cultivated intellect, the philosophy, the science, the literature, the wit and the eloquence to be found among the ungodly. Many individuals who have entertained a most thorough antipathy against the very idea of spiritual religion, and have cherished the most contemptuous feelings towards its professors, have possessed great intelligence, and have discharged many offices of life, in public and private, with great urbanity and integrity. To persons of this class "the preaching of the Gospel has appeared to be foolishness," as it did to the Greeks. When speaking of experimental religion they invariably mistake and misrepresent it, and that has arisen from two causes: first, they know nothing about it; and, second, they are under the influence of a certain instinctive hatred of true religion without being conscious of it, or if conscious of it they rarely acknowledge it. Hence it comes to pass that some of the worst libels upon the Church of God have been written by men of gentlemanly manners and deportment, of fair reputation in the eye of the world, of keen and cultivated minds, of liberal education and endowments, professed preachers of "the Church," and decorated with the title of doctor of divinity! WHAT IS THE REMEDY?

Make the people to love the Church. Only so, can they be induced to work for it. What we need more than anything else is the active labor of the whole membership.

In this, I think we will find a radical cure of all the specifications made by the author of What is the Matter? Get the people thoroughly enlisted and they will work out a remedy for many of the evils of mal administration. The editor speaks of the inadequate education of our ministry. Their scholarly training he finds no fault with, but he thinks exclusive attention to books from an early age has thrown them out of sympathy with men and the common affairs of life. He would have them in sympathy with the farmer and housewife. (Our brother can talk fowls and fodder, but we happen to know he can't talk flowers:—he calls them weeds!) Unquestionably a preacher should not be a bookworm. Some such preachers we have seen. But suppose our people were all deeply interested in their Church, and because it is a conspicuous witness to the blessed truth of salvation by faith alone, would not the evil dwindle into insignificance. Could they entertain an intelligent love of the Church for such a reason without being spiritually minded, Bible searching, energetic Christians. Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh—and conversation could travel far before it flagged. Would there not be sympathy between those who had so much in common,—an experimental knowledge of the heart's deceitfulness,—of God's infinite sovereign grace, a common heritage of hope,—an anchor sure and steadfast. Between Presbyterian people and preacher there is no common ground of churchly sympathy except what is found in a common spiritual experience. There are no humanly devised aids to conversion, no magnified rites, no consecrated ground, no sacerdotal pretensions. If the Presbyterian be an earnest churchman, he must be a good Christian. If not he will certainly be "cold." If our people love the Church for the truth's sake he who ministers unto them the bread of life will be a welcome companion though he be not a cyclopædia of secular lore.—True all this requires a high degree of spirituality, but this is that higher consecration recommended for the people also, which the author of What is the Matter urges on the ministry.

Would not the love of the Church as a living witness of precious but neglected truth cure that other evil—'controversy among ourselve.' "Is it not remarkable'—asks What is the Matter—'that we who are so pacific and patient toward others should be so warlike among ourselves." Well! I do not think it wonderful that a people who think it not worth while to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints,—the great truth of salvation by faith alone, unencumbered by legalism, formalism, prelacy, sacramentalism, sacerdotalism, &c, but toward all these encumbrances are charitably' pacific and patient,—I do not wonder that they should be graceless enonld to fight anything. Other denominations harmonize all their internal strife by supreme devotion to their characteristic principles—Those distingnishing principles for which they hotly contend, and which differentiate them from others, are often matters of relatively small importance—matters of church government or ceremonial. So intently engaged are they in pressing these things upon the acceptance of the world that they often drift without observing it, or with real indifference, from the fundamental teachings of the word. We have the very artillery of heaven with which to storm the world;—no carnal weapons, ours, with which to batter down the strong-holds of satan,—but our time is too much occupied in nice discussions between ourselves of the composition of the powder.—Great truths we hold——ruin utter in Adam, redemption complete in Christ——to humble simple pride, to bow the stubborn will, to win the love and engage the energies of men,—but instead of forcing the world to give ear to these things we expend the best tallents of the Church in subtile discussions between ourselves of metaphysical nicetics which ordinary mortals cannot discern., or discerning care not for. As Brother Fancette once tersely put it — "we are always mending nets, and have no time to fish."

To conclnde—we want the active co operation of the laity. This can be had only by showing them scriptural reasons for loving the Church. The world, too, must be made to see them.

No donbt there are other matters upon which we might profitably bestow atttention. We might consider how best to bring the variety of the talents and gifts of the ministry in contact with the mind and heart of the Church; how best to preserve the rights of the people in the choice of a pastor without forcing them into a false attitude of rebellion; how best to prevent party strife: I am for Paul, and I appollos, and I for Copias; how best to protect, economize and prolong the usefulness of the ministry without forcing them into the false position of unprofitable and discarded servants; how best to secure the ministry sure and constant employment. These things are worthy of earnest attention, bnt the most pressing need is the earnest cooperation of the laity—To secure this,—show them good reasons for loving their Church.

OLD SCOTTISH DIVINES.

Perhaps the prejudice against read sermons lingered longer in Scotland than in any other district. Until very recently the use of any manuscript would have been fatal to the cordial acceptance of any candidate.

"He's a grand preacher," whispered an old spinster to her sister on hearing a young minister for the first time.

"Whist! Bell," was the reply, "he's reading."

"Readin', is he?" said the enlogist, changing her tone, "paltry fellow! we'll gang hame, Jenny, and read our Book."

In 1762 Dr. Thomas Blacklock, the well known poet, was presented by the Earl of Selkirk to the living of Kirkcudbright. He was afflicted by the loss of sight, but when he was preaching one of his trial discourses an old woman who was sitting on the pulpit stairs inquired of a neighbor whether he was a reader.

"He canna be a reader," said the old wife, "for he's blind."

"I'm glad to hear it," said the ancient neighbor. "I wish they were a' blin'."

His blindness, however, did not serve Blacklock, for exception was taken to him on account of his loss of sight, and he was compelled to resign his living.

As anecdotes of them occur in the old biographies they must often seem a strange race, those old Scottish preachers and pastors. Mr. Shanks of Jedburg was greatly perplexed by a text; he could make nothing of it, so late at night he started off to Selkirk, a distance of fifteen miles, to take counsel upon it with his friend, Dr. Lawson. He arrived at one in the morning; he had to knock many times at the manse before he was heard. At last a servant appeared, asked who he was, and what in name of all the disorders could have brought him at that hour of the night. The perplexed parson insisted on seeing Dr. Lawson. He had been in bed hours since. "I must see him, however," said he, "and you must hold my horse until I come down." He knew the way to the doctor's bed room. He knocked and entered in the dark. He told his brother minister his errand. Lawson entered into the difficulty of the situation, and although in a somewhat dreamy state he commenced an exegesis upon the text in question, showed the bearing of the context, referred to the parallel passages, and cleared up the whole subject to his friend's satisfaction, who thanked Dr. Lawson, bade him good morning, and then mounting his horse rode back, through the night, to Jedburg. In the morning, about 5, Dr. Lawson awoke.

"My dear," he said to Mrs. Lawson, "I have had a very singular and not unpleasant dream. I dreamt that Mr. Shanks, good man, came all the way up from Jedburg to consult with me about a text that troubled him."

"It was no dream," said Mrs. Lawson; "Mr. Shanks was here, in this very room, and I had to listen to all that you and he had to say."

It was with difficulty she could persuade him to believe it had been so. On going down stairs, however, he inquired if Mr. Shanks had been there during the night, and then in what room he was sleeping. The servant assured him that he had really been in the house, but added, "He is not in the house now, sir. He is at Jedburg long before this time."

STEPS FORWARD.

Every kindness done to others in our daily walk, every attempt to make others happy, every prejudice overcome, every truth more clearly perceived, every difficulty subdued, every sin left behind, every temptation trampled under foot, every step forward in the cause of good, is a step nearer to the life of Christ.—Dean Stanley.

GERMANY'S WEAKNESS.

The weakness of Germany resides, first, in its real isolation as a great power, and next in the discontents of its people. It fought a duel single-handed with France and was victorious; but it could never go to war again without having several enemies to contend with, and consequently large odds against it. If it fought Austria, France would declare against it; if it attacked France, Russia would move; if it quarrelled with England it might possibly have to contend with a coalition of half-a-dozen powers. As to the martial sentiments of the Germans individually, they have no very ardent existence except among the aristocracy, whose members hold the best commissions in the army and fill all the State posts worth having. The ordinary German—the tradesman, professor, peasant, or workman—loathes the uniform he is compelled to wear, and if sent to war returns to grumble that he has wasted his time, lost his health, and earned no adequate remuneration. In some districts of Germany where Socialist papers are much read, military service inspires such horror that every year at the approach of the conscription-day young men start off by the hundred to France or England, or emigrate to America, whence they send tantalizing letters to their friends at home describing the charms of a country that is really free. In the three years that preceded the war with France the annual average of emigrants from Germany was above two hundred thousand; which made Bismarck say with his blunt cynicism to a diplomatist who was bewailing the loss of lives in war: "We shall lose no lives; for we shall lose more men by emigration this year than can be killed on the battle-fields." The German Governmet has often tried to stop emigration, but in vain; for the inducements which the Kaiser's subjects have to leave their poverty-stricken, sergeant-major-ridden land are too numerous.—Pall Mall Gazette.

TRUE HEROISM.

Let others write of battles fought
On bloody, ghastly fields,
Where honor greets the man who wins,
And death the man who yields;
But I will write of that brave man
Who struggles on through years
Against himself, and wins the day
Unstained by human tears.

He is a hero staunch and brave,
Who fights an unseen foe,
And puts at last beneath his feet
His passions base and low,
And stands erect in manhood's might,
Undaunted, undismayed,
The bravest man that drew a sword
In fury or in raid.

It calls for something more than brawn
Or muscle to o'ercome
An enemy who marcheth not
With banner, plume or drum;
A foe forever lurking nigh,
With silent, stealthy tread,
Beside your board each passing day,
At night beside your bed.

All honor then to that brave heart,
Though poor or rich he be,
Who struggles with his baser part,
Who conquers and is free.
He may not wear a hero's crown,
Nor fill a hero's grave,
But truth will place his name among
The bravest of the brave

THE ROLL-CRY.

A soldier mortally wounded was lying in a hospital, his fine frame extended on a couch of pain, never more to rise. This world and its battles were at an end for him. He scarcely breathed, and each respiration was fainter and fainter. All was still. Suddenly the surgeon was surprised at the power of his voice, exclaiming "Here!"

He hastened to his side and asked what he wished.

"Nothing," was the reply; "bnt the roll-cry is calling in heaven, and I was answering to my name."

To his eye the Lord Jesus was present, bending over his pillow, and calling him to glory. In sweet peace he answered to the call.

HALF-WAY CHRISTIANS.

Those who live on the border lines of the devil's dominions, constantly trying to smuggle contraband articles across, are no more fit to judge of the joy of life and the goodness of God than those who dwell in the Arabian desert, or under an Arctic snow-bank, know of the glory of the world. Nine-tenths of mankind walk on the perilous edge of evil, and are constantly torn and pained by the penalties with which a good God has hedged the way to keep them from self-destruction, and wonder all the while that life is such a hard road to travel, and affords so few compensations.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

The movement has been in existence bnt three or four years; yet it has an annual income of nearly one hundred thousand dollars and its organization includes one hundred and twenty corps, one hundred and eighty officers and thirty-two hundred and fifty-six speakers. It holds fifty thousand meetings in the course of a year in one hundred and forty-three theatres and music halls, besides about forty thousand open-air meetings. One estimate of the aggregate of the audiences places it at two million persons.

GIVING HIS DINNER TO THE POOR.

Says the Richmond Abvocate: We have known a venerable man in the ministry, and with name known across this continent, to start to a restaurant for dinner, in this city, bnt meeting a poor woman with the marks of want in her face, he gave her the small silver coin, all he had, and went without his meal. That is charity, and worthy of any saint in the calendar.

CELT OR SAXON.

DID ENGLISHMEN HAVE CELTIC MOTHERS?—ORIGIN OF THE WELSH AND THEIR NAME.

I expected that the Times would publish today a communication from my Celtic correspondent, a letter from whom was the occasion of my recent article on Anglo Saxonism. It was my intention to let my correspondent set forth his own case in his own way, and to make his statement my standing point. But, to my surprise, I cannot find it, although I laid it carefully aside for future use. I apologize to him, and beg him to believe that my readers are deprived of the pleasure of reading his communication through no indifference or carelessness of mine; but although unable to refer to my correspondent's communication, I can state his position, which was, briefly, this: The Britain of antiquity, the Britain of Cæsar and of Snetonius, never became Anglo-Saxon. It passed into the possession and under the Government of the Anglo-Saxons, but its inhabitants never became an Anglo Saxon people. For the Anglo-Saxons, as invaders and marauders, would not number themselves with women, and once established in Britain they took to themselves wives of the ancient British—i.e., the Celtic—race; they established friendly relations with the kinsmen of their wives, and hence the people of England, the product of this intermarriage, is a mixed race, in which the Celtic element, because of the superiority in numbers of the British people to their invaders, largely predominates.

This theory has been since maintained by more than one writer; but its principal advote and its last is Dr. Thomas Nicholas, whose work on the "Pedigree of the English People" displays great ingonnity and research, and has passed to its fourth edition.

That there is in what may now at least be called the English race a large admixture of foreign blood—that is, of blood other than that which for convenience we must call "Anglo-Saxon"—no tolerably well-informed person would think of denying. But a like admixture may be found in the blood of every considerable people in the world, except the Hebrews, and possibly the Japanese. With these exceptions, there is no absolutely "pure" race under the sun. The condition of man, the vicissitudes of human life, forbid it. But the fact still remains that various peoples have various distinctive characters, and that their characteristic traits and qualities are those of a dominant race which has absorbed and assimilated the foreign elements which it has received. Notwithstanding its research and its elaborate ingennity, and the plansibility of some of its arguments, Dr. Nicholas's work has not produced any appreciable impression upon the settle judgments of the world on this question, except in the minds of a few Celtic enthusiasts. As to them, there seems to be no bounds to their capacities and pretensions. Not long ago one of them proved to his own satisfaction, and, doubtless, to that of a few others like minded, that Shakspere was a Celt.

The strongest point in favor of the Celto Saxon Englishman notion is that the British Celts were in possession of the whole island of Great Britain in the fifth century, and that the Jutes, Saxons, Angles and Frisians, whom we call the Anglo-Saxons, were not only invaders but invaders by sea, coming in small vessels, and were therefore not likely to take with them women and children, which have always been regarded as the greatest impedimenta of military expeditions. No other argument used by Dr. Nicholas has much weight.

Even this argument, however, rests upon a misapprehension and consequent misrepresentation of the true state of the case. The parallel which it is endeavored to establish between the Romans, the Danes, the Normans and the Saxons cannot be maintained. The Roman occupation of Britain was a military invasion. The Norman conquest was also a military invasion. The Danish occupation was in a great measure a military invasion, although it was not so purely military either of the others. Bnt the "Anglo-Saxon" occupation of Britain was an immigration. It was an armed immigration, it is true, for it could not be otherwise. In those days, those who sought new homes had to fight for them. None the less was the "Anglo-Saxon" occupation of Britain distinguished from the Roman and the Norman by being an immigration rather than an invasion. Beginning A. D. 450, it continued to A. D. 600 (I use round numbers), and during this century and a half there was a constant stream of emigration from the parent country—very small, at the beginning, it is true, but constantly increasing—and there were, besides, large expeditions at certain periods. There were no less than seven of these expeditions about the years 450, 475,530, 540, 547 and 588. First came the Jutes, and they succeeded in establishing themselves in Kent, which had then and long before the same name which it now bears, as every boy who studies Cæsar knows. Then, in 477, came the Frisians or Old Saxons, and in about twenty years they were well established in Sussex. Then came other Saxons, who went further westward, and after about twenty-five years, they had established a little Kingdom including Dorsetshire, Somersetshire and Devonshire. Then in 530, more Saxons came and seated themselves further northward, giving the name to Essex. Ten years after there came the first of the Angles, and sat themselves down in the country which is now known as the counties of Norfolk and Suffolk, but which was then called, from them, East Anglia. In 547 came the great Angle expedition, which established itself north of the Humber, between that river and the Frith-of-Forth, and forming the Kingdom of North-humber-land. Finally, about 585, came yet more Angles, who went into the interior, and formed the Kingdom of Mercia.

Now, this occupation, although armed and accompanied by great bloodshed, was in no respect like that of the Romans and the Normans; it was an armed immigration. The Anglo-Saxons went into Britain as the Hebews went into Canaan. They not only conquered the land and held it, but they put the previous inhabitants to death or drove them away in order that they might spread themselves over the country, with their wives and their families. They had but a short voyage to make across what they called "the narrow seas," and at that time to people living, as they had lived, within sight of the sea, such a voyage, even in open boats, was so trifling a matter that, a footing being once established in the new and coveted land, women and children would follow as if on a pleasure trip. Nor are we left to learn this fact from probabilities. For it is recorded by the Venerable Bede that the emigration of the Angles and Saxons during 350 years was so general that their country (Sleswick-Holstein and its neighborhood, was left bare of population and desolate.

On the other hand, there is no evidence of any important intermixture of the two races. The British Celts are always spoken of by the Anglo-Saxons as Walas, that is, the strange people; and with these Walas they were always fighting until they drove them into the western and southern part of the island, chiefly into the former, which hence has its name of Wales. For as men are not English because they were born in England, bnt England is England because Englishmen were born there, so Welshmen are not Welsh because they are born Wales, but Wales is Wales because it is the country of the Welsh, or the Walas, or strange people. Nor do Welchmen so call themselves in their tongue, as Germans do not call themselves Germans in theirs. All the evidence yet discovered goes to show that the British Celts were never other than "a strange people" to the Anglo-Saxons. They had certain rights given them, indeed; but this was in Wessex, upon the borders of Wales and Cornwall, where there was direct contact between the new and victorious people and the former possessors of the soil in the region of it into which they had been driven. The country seems to have been very sparsely peopled before the coming of the Anglo-Saxons, and the relations between the colonists and those who may be called the aborigines seem to have been not unlike those of the English colonists of this country with its aborigines. There was probably a somewhat greater intermixtnre of blood between the Anglo-Saxons and the British Celts in Old England than there was a thousand years afterward between the same race and the Indians in New England, bnt not much more.

I shall conclude by remarking upon some evidences of this state of things which I have never seen set forth. The first of these is that the British Celts had no religious influence upon the Anglo-Saxons. Some of the Britons were Christians, bnt most of them were of the Druidical religion. Now if the Anglo Saxons had taken to themselves British wives, it is not possible in the nature of things that the offspring of these unions should not have been more or less of the religion of their mothers. Bnt the Anglo-Saxons retained their heathen religion unmodified until they were converted to Christianity by missionaries from Italy.

Next, if Anglo-Saxon men had taken British wives, it is also impossible, in the nature of things, that the daughters of these Celtic mothers should not have borne Celtic names. Bnt, on the contrary, the women of England, in Anglo-Saxon times, bore only Anglo-Saxon names. There is no appreciable intrusion of the Celtic nomenclature. The conclusion seems inevitable that these Anglo-Saxon girls had Anglo-Saxon mothers.

To this evidence is to be added that of language, which of course has been heretofore considered. There are a few words of Celtic origin incorporated into the English language; not a few in a positive sense; but comparatively very few indeed, when we consider the fact that the Anglo-Saxons went and dwelt in a Celtic country, and that some of the Celts remained there and have remained, almost a nation, until this day. But they continued to be Walas, the strange people. The names of places, indeed, are in many cases Celtic. But that was inevitable. Places retain their names, although the people that inhabit them change. And many of these Celtic names show that the Anglo-Saxons did not know the meaning of the words applied to them, as in the case of the half dozen or more rivers Avon in England, afon meaning merely a river. But if, again, the Anglo-Saxon men had taken British wives, it is impossible, in the nature of things, that the language of the offspring of those unions should not have been largely Celtic; and, indeed, it would have naturally become Celtic with an Anglo-Saxon modification; for the Celtic would be the mother tongue of those people. It is absolutely incredible that Anglo-Saxon speaking people who lived in England for 500 years and more before the Norman conquest had Celtic mothers. Had their mothers been Celts, we should now be speaking, not English, in which a few Welch words are to be found by search, rari nantes in gurgite vasto, but a dialect of the Cymric language.—Richard Grant White in the New York Times.

A PHILISTINE OF GENIUS.

Mr. Froude, the English historian, has sent a javelin after Mr. Matthew Arnold. He has written a book on "Bunyan," for the "English men of Letters Series," and concludes the book with the remark, "the Pilgrim's Progress' will still be dear to all men of all creeds who share in it, even though it pleases the 'elect' modern philosophers to describe its author as a 'Philistine of genius.'"

VIOLATIONS OF TASTE.

There is in the mind of man such an admiration of beauty and symmetry, such a distaste and disgust, in view of what is unnatural or imperfect or maimed, that an unpleasant emotion, excited by one imperfection, easily expels all happy feelings that were kindled by the presence of many things of the other class. We may go to the house of God, with all things favoring the highest intellectual and spiritual enjoyment, and the presence and exhibition of one violation of propriety or good taste, whether contrary to nature or grace, will affect the whole man and mar or destroy the prospect of comfort or improvement for the time.—Herald and Presbyter.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

Canon Ryle has accepted the Deanery of Salisbnry.

The Archimandrite Nicholas, the chef of the Russian Ecclesiastical Mission in Japan, has been appointed Rnsso-Orthodox Bishop of Tokio.

There are not less than 225 separate Protestant congregations scattered through the country from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean, and from Turkey to Persia. There are 176 schools, with an average attendance of 15,500 persons.

The Free Church Training School at Lovedale, Sonth Africa, was founded thirty years ago by Rev. William Govan, with twelve scholars. Now there are 380. Its object is to train native preachers, and to teach the people nseful mechanical arts.

The girls' school in Mexico City, snpported by the Woman's Foreign Missionary, is under the care of Miss Mary G. Forbes and Miss L. A. H. Hennequin. During the past year this school has been established in permanent quarters, and a goodly number of its members have been added to the church.

The Presbyterians have very encouraging reports from their mission work in Mexico. More than five hnndred converts recently sat down together at the communion table in the city of Zitacnaro, situated southeast of the capital, and the two native preachers say they have nearly 3,000 converts in the State of Michoacan.

At a meeting on Sabbath of the "Salvation Army" of Plymonth and Devonport a large crowd of roughs attended, and created disturbances resulting in free-handed fights between the two factions. The Salvationists laid about them with sticks and fists, and for two honrs riot prevailed, the fighting being occasionally suspended while singing, preaching and mock orations were introduced. At length the Salvationists were driven to seek refnge in a house.

There have been a number of articles in the newspapers respecting the pretended miracles in Ireland. It seems that a number of persons who visited the scene of the apparition at Knock, county Mayo, has not in any way diminished. The religious edifice where the miracle is imagined to have occurred, and the cures said to be wrought, is four and a half miles from Claremorris, from which forty public cars ply to the place of pilgrimage, there having been before only three on the road. The railway company occasionally brings a considerable train of passengers to the nearest station, and it is expected that on Lady Day, next month, which is a general holiday in the midland and western counties, the attendance at the spot will be enormous. Our correspondent describes one of the most remarkable features of the scene presented at the chapel, viz., the collection of discarded crntches and walking sticks alleged to have been left behind by people who stated that they had been cured of lameness of one kind or another. There were about a dozen crntches and three or four dozen sticks, which had been left as evidences of the cures effected. In a second letter the correspondent says he asked an intelligent looking woman who was inside the chapel, and who lives at Knock, whether she knew of any person having been cured. She replied, "No; I must tell the truth, I did not see any one cured." Finally, the correspondent adds, "There is this peculiarity about all the cases yet reported—they are all either cases of persons who are alleged to have come from a distance, and whose place of residence is given in the vagnest possible fashion, or they are cases of persons who were suffering from ailments which time and other natnral remedies might have cnred. The lame and deformed who are known residents of Claremorris go ont to Knock chapel, perform the prescribed devotions, and apply the healing cement, but they retnrn day after day uncured.

WILMINGTON, N. C.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1880.

THE LEARNED BLACKSMITH'S EXAMPLE.

We have had time to read only the opening chapters of Prof. Northend's "Life and Labors of Elihu Burritt" (the Learned Blacksmith), published by D. Appleton & Co., New York. These are very interesting. They tell how a poor lad employed every moment of leisure and even kept his mind busy while his body was engaged in mechanical occupations, in the acquisition of knowledge. We were familiar with the story in petto, but Mr. Mr. Northend's narrative lends new interest to a most entertaining and instructive biography. For the encouragement of young men we make a few extracts from the book, which is well worth buying and reading in full. "Having lost a winter's schooling at sixteen, in consequence of the long illness of his father, he resolved to make up the loss at twenty-one by attending for a quarter the boarding school his brother, Elijah Hinsdale Burritt, had established in his native village. As at this time every day he lost from the anvil cost him a dollar in the loss of his wages, his earnest desire for more learning was quickened by the expense of each day's acquisition. He gave himself almost entirely to mathematics for which he had a natural taste, aspiring to the ability to become an accurate surveyor. Before leaving the anvil for this quarter's study he was in the habit of practising on problems of mental arithmetic, which he extemporized and solved while blowing the bellows. They were rather queer in their terms, but quite attractive as an exercise. One was how many barley-corns at three to the inch will it take to go round the earth at the equator?" At the end of the term he returned to the anvil, to do double labor for six months. He carried a small Greek grammer in his hat to con over while at work. In the mean time he gave his evening, noon and morning hours to Latin and French. Thinking that merely "to reside and study in the atmosphere of Yale College" would be an advantage in his self-directed studies, he removed there and went to work on Homer's "Iliad" "without note or comment and with a Greek Lexicon with Latin definitions!" He continued changing his residence to procure work and literary advantages, until he had mastered all the European and several of the Asiatic languages. He had no special aptitude, he says, for language; but his idea was that any man can learn anything to which he gives his earnest attention. He thought there was no such thing as genius.

How instructive is the life of such a man! It teaches the youth of to-day a most timely and salutary lesson. Patience, earnestness, faithfulness, manly self-reliance—these are qualities that must make themselves felt wherever exerted. Let no boy or young man who feels the promptings of duty to enter upon an intellectual life hesitate because of the want of an education or of means to procure one. "God helps him who helps himself," is an old and true maxim. If there be no money and no immediate prospects for school training imitate the example of Elihu Burritt. This is a busy world, and all who live in it must move either forward or backward. The Almighty Maker gave to King Solomon choice of blessings, and the young prince chose wisdom. Then all other blessings were added. So let our young men—each a prince in his sphere if he will—choose that wisdom which is from above, heavenly mindedness, trust in God's plans and power, and whatsoever is right and profitable and wholesome He will add in His own good time and by such agencies and accompanied by such circumstances as please His infinite will. God has given the world human learning for good purposes. Let young men apply themselves heartily in its acquisition, and employ it wisely when acquired.

THE ANCIENT BRITISH CHURCH.

There is no doubt, we think, that the modern English are descendants chiefly of the Saxon conquerors of Britain. But we cannot subscribe to Mr. Grant White's dictum that the Early British Church was a comparatively small affair and that the chief instrument in the evangelization of England was the Monk Austin or Augustine. This concession was made recently by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and called forth a number of refutations from Episcopal writers. We assuredly have not so read history. Columba and others Christianized the Jutes, Angles and Saxons and afterward Austin came in Pope Gregory's name to make Papists out of the converts. After the monk's death Roman practice and doctrine prevailed, it is true. But undoubtedly history does not sanction the preposterous claim made by Romanists and now timidly or carelessly admitted by High Churchmen of the Anglican Establishment. The learned and zealous Archbishop Tillotson said:

"Austin, the monk, did not plant the Gospel in Britain. When he arrived there to convert the nation, and preach the Gospel among the Britons, he did not find the place in heathen darkness, as the Church of Rome pretends. To assert that he did is against all faith and truth of history, (minimize as much as we will), which assures us that Christianity was planted there among the Britons several ages before, and perhaps sooner than even at Rome itself. And not only so, but had got considerable footing among the Britons before Austin, the monk ever set foot in Britain; when Austin, the monk, arrived there, the two great points of his Christianity were to bring the Britons to a conformity with the Church of Rome in the time of Easter and in the tonsure and shaving of the priests, after the manner of Peter, as they pretended, upon the crown of the head, and not of St. Paul, which was by shaving or cutting close the hair of the whole head, as from some vain and foolish tradition he pretended to have learned. The promoting of these customs was his great errand and business, and the zeal of his preaching was spent upon these two fundamental points, in which, after very barbarous and bloody doings, he at last prevailed. And this is the conversion of England, so much boasted by the Church of Rome, and for which Austin is magnified for so great a saint; when it is very evident from the history of those times, that he was a proud, ignorant, turbulent and cruel man, who, instead of first converting the nation to the faith of Christ, confounded the purity and simplicity of Christian religion which had been planted and established in Britain long before."

The readers of the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN will remember that Rev. L. W. Primrose sufficiently demonstrated the Presbyterian and apostolic character of this Early British Church in a series of popular articles published in this journal in the year 1878.

THE RETURN OF MATERIAL PROSPERITY.

The country is slowly but steadily recuperating. The scars of the great panic are healing. On all sides are seen the indubitable evidences of prosperity.

For all such tokens of Divine favor let our hearts be duly thankful. Whether we suffered for national sins or were simply tried in the fiery furnace for merciful purposes, we know not; but we do know that God is our Father, and that His visitations, even when His face is shadowed by a frown, are for our temporal and certainly for our eternal good if we receive them in the spirit of true children.

Some of the signs of a revival of industry in the South are noted in an extract which we make in another place from an elaborate article in the Springfield Republican.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

The facts about the famine in Brizil, merit consideration and call for immediate action on the part of all humane persons. There are now two great famines prevailing—one in the Old World (in Ireland) and one in the New.

The appointment by the Czar of Russia of Gen. Melikoff as dictator is now regarded quite as much as a stroke of wisdom as an evidence of fear. He seems to be steadily overcoming all opposition, from whatever quarter, and by his appeal to the people for co-operation has shown that he certainly of all Russians understands the secret of government. It is to be hoped that his moderation may be effectual not only in putting down the Nihilists but in showing how free institutions are attainable even in Russia. But it is a queer spectacle—learning freedom from a military dictator.

The Legislature passed the Best bill last Friday, selling the W. N. C. R. R. to W. J. Best and three other New York capitalists. Josiah Turner, Jr., member from Orange, was expelled from the House.

The oleomargarine makers in Baltimore became alarmed at the prospect of their business being interfered with by Congress as a fraud on the public, and hastened to invite a tasting committee of Congressmen to make a trial of their "butter." Presto—the tasters pronounced the oleomargarine better than the genuine article! Give us the product of cow's milk and not of some old ox's fat, strained or unstrained.

The London Weekly Review is naturally hostile to Dr. William Chambers' proposal to spend thirty thousand pounds sterling in restoring St. Giles' Cathedral, Edinburgh, if the people of that city will subscribe ten thousand five hundred pounds to build an edifice for one of the two Presbyterian congregations that have long worshipped in St. Giles'. The Review says:

We are sorry to be obliged to say that this whole affair savours not a little of that Presbyterian snobbery which threatens to become a plague both in England and in Scotland. Many "cultured" Presbyterians on both sides of the Tweed have been displaying of late a fondness for Episcopal sentiments and practices. They talk finely of Church music and architecture, of an improved ritual, and the advantage of a liturgical service. Whether their language proceeds from an abandonment of true Presbyterian simplicity, or is little better than a piece of fashionable affectation, it may be difficult to say; but they appear to be sadly ignorant of the genius of that Presbyterianism which is the true glory of Scotland.

At the close of an excellent editorial in the Augusta Chronicle, Mr. James R. Randall remarks:

We have no doubt that a competent person will be found in the ranks of the clergy of the South to fitly answer, through the same impartial medium, the strictures of Dr. Swing, who seems to be a sort of free lance in religion, although a man of vast attainments and one who, right or wrong, has the courage of his opinions. The Southern pulpit has confined itself largely to preaching the Gospel and refused to make a ward meeting of the tabernacle. It is not true that sins of any sort have been condoned by reputable Southern preachers; but they have avoided sensations, in the main, and clung to orthodox methods. We discern in Prof. Swing's attack upon the Southern pulpit a companion piece of strategy to Mr. Bontwell's assault upon the South politically. It is an old trick of the Republican party to array Church and State at the North against this section. The evils springing from such a course and such a mixture have been very dreadful, but the same horrible pressure is to be brought to bear this Presidential year. Mr. Beecher appears on the same rostrum as Mr. Conkling for the purpose of giving a benediction to Cornell and his cause. Prof. Swing keeps Mr. Bontwell company for the same partisan purpose. The political hot-gospellers of the North, who worship God and Mammon at the same time, are angry and envious because the reverend clergy of the South respect their holy calling and decline to drag their vestments in the mire of party strife. The javelin cast by Prof. Swing has fallen hurtless at the feet of the Southern clergy; but this is no reason why some such man as Dr. Palmer or Dr. Tucker or Elder J. S. Lamar should not, with proper charity, but righteous indignation, return it to Chicago, from whence it came.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

The Raleigh News of Last Sunday says: "The congregation of the Second Presbyterian church expect to be able to occupy their new church edifice in about a month."

The Ladies' Home Missionary Society of the First Presbyterian church, Raleigh, N. C., organized about a year since, raised $125 and applied it towards building a Presbyterian church at Wilson, N. C. This indicates that the ladies are working admirably and succeeding well. Mrs. Judge E. G. Reade is President of the society, and Mrs. W. S. Primrose, Treasurer.

WORTHY OF EMULATION.

Three years ago at the expense of Dr. M. T. Savage, a Presbyterian church was built at Scotland Neck, in Halifax county, but it was destroyed soon after completion by incendiarism. A deed for a church, which will cost about $2,000, and which is now nearly completed, with two acres of land, upon which it stands, has been given to Orange Presbytery. The Presbytery instructed the Stated Clerk to extend the thanks of the Presbytery to Dr. Savage for the munificent donation.

Rev. Dr. Wilson has been elected principal Commissioner to the General Assembly from the Presbytery of Wilmington, with Rev. B. F. Marable as his alternate. Ruling Elder Dr. Neil Graham was chosen as the additional commissioner, with John McLaurin for alternate.

During the past two or three months at Peace Institute, Raleigh, a series of meetings has been held, with the gracious results recorded below with other facts in the letter of an esteemed correspondent:

Mr. Editor: Last Sabbath the Sacrament of our Lord's Supper was celebrated in the First Presbyterian Church of this city. It was a season of unusual interest. Rev. J. S. Watkins, the beloved pastor of this church, preached a sermon of great power from the words "But God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Gal. vi: 14.

There were twelve persons to come forward and connect themselves with the church—eight by profession of faith in Christ and four by certificate. Rev. Mr. Watkins has been blessed in the providence of God in a very remarkable degree since he was installed pastor of this church, which was about eighteen months ago. Since that time we have had accessions to our church on every communion occasion, making in all seventy who have joined this church under his ministry. Recently a most glorious work of grace has been in progress at Peace Institute, which has so far resulted in the hopeful conversion of twelve of the young ladies of this school. This work of the Spirit, like all that has been carried on in our midst has been accompanied by no undue excitement whatever, and no one can doubt the genuineness of the work. We feel that it was a special providence that sent Mr. Watkins to labor among us. Truthfully can it be said that there never was a shepherd more beloved by his flock or one more faithful in the discharge of his duties. He seems truly determined to know nothing among us "save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." This church is now free from debt. It gave last year $350 to Foreign Missions, $150 to the Wilson church, and has now already subscribed $2,500 for contemplated improvements. W.

Raleigh, N. C., March 26, 1880.

Dear Presbyterian: During a brief visit in Oxford, I was courteously invited to attend a meeting of "The Ladies' Presbyterian Aid Society," recently organized, and promising to be a genuine "aid" in every respect to the cause of the Church and Presbyterianism in general. The meeting was characterized by cordiality, earnestness, and general unity in the desire to work; and though there is a want of order as yet in the business management, a great deal has really been accomplished in a very short time, as "promptness and dispatch" seem to be their watchword, rather than system or order. They have sold the old manse for $2,500, and contracted for a new and more convenient one, to be erected near the church within the next two months. An appropriation has also been made for repairing the church and for the improvement and ornamentation of the church grounds. Other plans for the aid of Presbyterian work in general have been suggested, and there are certainly brighter days ahead for the little church in Oxford. Some other time, I will tell you what a few earnest Christian ladies there have done, even without a society organization. May God bless and speed them all in their work, and may their zeal inspire others to follow their good example. A.

PRESBYTERY OF MECKLENBURG.

ABSTRACT OF PROCEEDINGS AT DALLAS, N. C., MARCH 19-23, 1880.

Presbytery met with the Dallas church, Friday, 7½ p. m., and was opened with a sermon by Rev. Wm. M. McGilvary, moderator, from Matt. v: 14-16: "Ye are the light of the world," &c.

Rev. J. P. Gammon was elected moderator and Rev. Wm. B. Corbett and C. Scott clerks.

There are 26 ministers and 47 churches on the roll, and 18 ministers and 23 elders were present at this meeting, representing 39 churches.

Satisfactory excuses for absence were heard in behalf of Revs. J. F. Latimer, W. H. Davis, J. E. Morrison, D. T. Towles and Drs. A. W. Miller and S. R. McAboy, and Rev. Wm. N. Morrison.

On motion of session of Sand Hill church, in Buncombe county, the name of that church was changed from Sand Hill to Oak Forest.

Candidates.—Mr. Jas. L. Williams was licensed to preach and sent to labor in Anson county, in care of Committee of Home Missions. Candidate Walter W. Moore was directed to labor in Buncombe county during summer vacation.

Rev. J. Alford, Methodist minister on Dallas circuit, was introduced to Presbytery.

Commissioners.—Rev. G. D. Parks and Wm. E. McIlwaine and H. M. Parks, elder in Providence church, and Dr. J. A. Reedy, elder in Lincolnton church, were elected commissioners to the General Assembly to meet in Charleston, May 20, with Rev. G. L. Cook and Rev. Wm. M. McGilvary and Dr. D. J. Cain of Davidson River church and A. G. Neel of Steele Creek church alternates respectively.

A biographical sketch of the late Rev. John Douglas was read by the Rev. Wm. E. McIlwaine, chairman of committee, and adopted, and ordered to be recorded in book of sketches.

Colportage.—General R. D. Johnston, chairman, reported that the committee had established a depository of books in Charlotte with Messrs. W. & R. Tiddy, and all our churches, ministers and families can there procure the books they want on as good terms as they can be purchased anywhere, by communicating with the chairman at Charlotte. Churches which have not contributed to this cause are earnestly urged to do so soon.

Revs. J. L. Wilson and G. A. Trenholm of Bethel Presbytery were extended courtesies of the floor of Presbytery.

Treasurer.—Mr. Edmund Burwell, Charlotte, N. C., was elected treasurer of Presbytery, in place of Mr. J. C. Burroughs, resigned.

On motion of the Committee on the Minutes of Synod it was unanimously resolved that Presbytery will pay the debt due the Synod of North Carolina, and the Stated Clerk was directed to report the arrears of the churches for the Presbyterial fund to the churches separately, with instructions to forward the same to the treasurer, Mr. Edmund Burwell, Charlotte, before next meeting.

Minutes of General Assembly.—Rev. A. W. Miller, D. D., chairman of Committee on Minutes of Assembly, appointed at last meeting, forwarded a report, which was read, received and discussed, and laid over till the next meeting.

Pleasant Hill church was permitted to employ Rev. A. Luper of Bethel Presbytery till next meeting, and Steele Creek church to employ Mr. J. T. Plunkett, a candidate of Nashville Presbytery, if the way be open.

Reports were received from most of the churches. Those on state of religion were returned to the sessions with instructions. Sunday schools reported in 23 churches; 1,514 Sunday school children; $416 for benevolence by Sunday schools. One Sunday school for colored people at Hendersonville, 60 on roll; one near Hendersonville, 35 attend. One Sunday school for colored people in Mallard Creek church, 40 attend. No statistical reports were presented from the following churches: Providence, Caldwell, Unity, Castanea, Grove, Hiwassee, Franklin, Morrison, Bethel, Bethlehem, Sandy Plains, Swannanoa, Oak Forest, Waynesville. Sessions of these churches will please forward statistics to the Stated Clerk without delay.

Records of most of the sessions were reviewed.

Narrative and Sunday school report sent to General Assembly.

Presbytery will not co-operate with the Assembly's Committee on Home Missions after next meeting, but will forward 20 per cent. of funds raised for this object.

On motion Revs. Wm. F. McIlwaine and Wm. H. Davis were directed to visit and aid Rev. M. R. Kirkpatrick in the Franklin field at their convenience during the summer.

Presbytery selected Morrison church in Macon county as the place for fall meeting, but reconsidered and appointed Lincolnton church as the place, and adjourned to meet with the Lincolnton church on Wednesday, 8th day of September, 7½ p. m.

PRAYER IN VIEW OF THE ANNUAL COLLECTION FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

In the February number of the Missionary the fact was stated, that the prayer of the Church has for a long time been that God would give access to the heathen, and that it had been marvellously heard and answered. It was also stated that much prayer had been offered that God would raise up and qualify men to go forth as heralds of the cross to these darkened nations, and that here too the divine faithfulness had showed itself in conferring upon more of our young men the grace to offer themselves for this work than the Church has means at her disposal to send.

In view of these impressive and stimulating facts the suggestion is ventured that the thing for which special prayer should now be made is, that God would pour out upon His people a spirit of consecration of themselves and their substance to this cause. What is wanted to make the gifts already conferred available for the extension of truth and the glory of God is larger means for sending out men and for more thoroughly equipping those already in the field. And can it be doubted if we ask God for His blessing also, that He will in faithfulness hear our prayer and bestow the gift? We think not. Surely it is for the honor of His name, for the welfare of His Church, for the best interests of Christians themselves and for the salvation of the lost, that this thing shall be done. We have, then, the best reason to believe that if this suggestion be adopted and "fervent effectual prayer" be made, we will be heard and the needed means be supplied. This is God's work in which we are engaged. It is His people who are concerned in carrying it forward and who must supply the means, and we may be sure that in answer to our supplications, He who has all hearts in His hands will dispose His children to consecrate to Him of their substance enough to advance it in those proportions which His honor and their duty demand.

The following specific recommendations seem called for:

1. That this matter be made the subject of special prayer at the ensuing monthly concert, and that it be adopted as one of the usual topics at these meetings.

2. In churches in which the monthly concert is not held special prayer for this object shall be offered during April.

3. That a blessing shall be sought for those who habitually neglect to contribute to this cause, and also for those with whom the collection is a merely a perfunctory exercise. Last year there were 699 churches which made no collection, and in several hundred of the contributing churches the average contribution was about ten cents or under and in many, not more than two or three cents per member. If the Lord will open the hearts of all these to give according as he has prospered them, and those who are already doing what they can shall continue to do so, a brighter day will soon dawn upon the work.

4. That all Christians shall at this time make their offerings to the Lord after earnest prayer for guidance, and looking to God for His blessing upon them and their gifts. It may be that some will find that on account of changed circumstances or imperative obligations which it would be sin to neglect, they will not be able to give as much as heretofore, but who can doubt that this candid and heart-searching dealing with themselves will reveal to others that they have hitherto come short both of their duty and privilege, and ought to do more for God and His Church and the perishing millions of the earth?

The present crisis demands honest and truthful consideration. It can hardly be doubted that the church has sufficient ability (if it be sanctified) to enlarge the work at once. Let us seek this great blessing from the Lord, and while we pray, each for himself and his brother, let every one take heed that he give in simplicity and godly sincerity, as unto the Lord, and not unto men.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Sacraments of the New Testament as Instituted by Christ. By George D. Armstrong, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Norfolk, Va. New York: A. C. Armstrong & Son. 1880. Cloth, pp. 314.

This work, by a learned and popular Presbyterian minister, appears to be systematic, lucid and thorough. Dr. Armstrong writes in a plain, strong style, with little ornament. His appeal is to the Book. His arguments are common sense judgments upon the language and the obvious meaning of Holy Scripture. His work has two general heads, "The Doctrine of Baptism" and "The Doctrine of the Lord's Supper." Each of these is sub-divided into appropriate parts.

In the preparation of this book Dr. Armstrong has been engaged more than twenty years. Dr. Brown endorses it, as "not only carefully but satisfactorily prepared." He says that "the arrangement all through is excellent and the discussion thoroughly 'compacted by that which every joint supplieth.'"

From I. K. Funk & Co., we receive in addition to publications already noticed Farrar's "Life of Christ." Perhaps of all the cheap "Standards" yet printed by this enterprising publisher this will meet with the most cordial welcome. It is the cheapest edition of the famous work issued in this country. The type is clear, and larger than that of most of the popular reprints of the day. Bound in manilla paper covers in two parts, each 25 cents.

Since the book is now generally well-known it may not be necessary to speak of its geniality of tone, its catholicity of judgment, its grace and splendor of diction. Fleetwood may be more quaintly devout, as well as more simple in style, and Geikie may be more accurate in topography and generally more erudite, but Canon Farrar's is the most eloquent, the most popular and in a literary sense the most finished of the "Lives of Christ" yet produced in the English language.

His Majesty, Myself. "No Name Series." Boston: Roberts Brothers. 1880. 16 mo. cloth.

We will not reveal any part of the plot of this capital story. It is perhaps the best of Mr. Baker's novels. [Though it belongs to the No Name Series its author is well known to be Rev. W. M. Baker, a gifted Presbyterian minister of Boston, son of Rev. Daniel Baker, the celebrated revivalist, and a native of Virginia.] The hero, "His Majesty," is Rev. W. H. H. Murray, the sporting preacher and late editor of the Golden Rule. He is an "original," as is also Guernsey, the college genius.

The April St. Nicholas is fairly bedight with spring beauties, both pictures and letter-press. Notable among the former are "Burial at Sea" and "Illumination of St. Peter's (Rome) at Easter."

The April Good Company has articles by Warner, Burroughs, Towle, Thanet and others. It is always good.

The first of the eight papers in the current South Atlantic is from the pen of Rev. D. J. Sanders, pastor of the Chestnut Street Presbyterian church (colored) in this city. He very ably discusses "The Status of the Colored Race, and the Exodus." Another notable article is that on "The Decline of Southern Eloquence," by John S. Long. Prof. Vosmund concludes his interesting series of papers on "Thiers."

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

PRESBYTERIAL NOTICES.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet at Laurel Hill church, Richmond county, N. C., Wednesday, April 21, 1880, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The usual blanks will be mailed to all the churches in due time. Let these blanks be carefully filled and sent up to Presbytery at Laurel Hill.

The assessments for the "Presbyterial Fund" are considered due April 1st, and should be promptly paid. Churches which are credited to this fund will be duly notified by the Treasurer. J. P. MCPHERSON, Stated Clerk.

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 7, 1880.

Concord Presbytery stands adjourned to meet at Davidson College on Thursday, April 22, at 11 a. m. WM W. PHARR, S. C.

All who expect to attend Presbytery are requested to notify Mr. H. P. Helper, Davidson College.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Dr. Moses D. Hoge writes picturesquely to the Central Presbyterian of his trip from Richmond to Rome, and of the sights and delights of the "Eternal City."

There is much religious interest in Miss Baldwin's Augusta Female Seminary.

Items from the Central Presbyterian condensed:

Pulpit of the Point Pleasant church declared vacant.

Within a few months 27 members added to First church, Charleston, W. Va.

Several members added to the church at Kanawha Salines.

Six additions at Alderson.

Only a small balance remains of the debt of the Third (Richmond) church.

Items from the Southern Presbyterian:

Last Sabbath eleven communicants were added to the church at Columbia, S. C.—eight by certificate and three on profession of their faith.

The Rev. Dr. Stacy sends us news of the following sad loss to our Church: "Rev. W. Dimmock, member of the Presbytery of Atlanta, and minister at Carrollton, Ga., died on Friday, March 19. His end was peace."

The Rev. A. J. Witherspoon, Seamen's Chaplain at New Orleans, writes us: "I have had the pleasure of seeing a very successful Bethel revived in the port of Mobile. It had been abandoned for years. It is now doing much good."

Rev. Joseph Evans preached to a crowded house in the Presbyterian church last Sunday. He also preached on Saturday night previous. Rev. D. May preached on Sunday night.—Lumberton Robesonian.

The First church, Louisville, Ky., realized $50 from a festival.

Dr. Witherspoon of Petersburg takes the place of Dr. Stuart Robinson, in Second church, Louisville, while the latter recruits his health in Florida, says the Christian Observer.

Items from Christian Observer:

Curators decide not to close Central University.

Result of meetings held by Revs. L. H. Blanton, J. A. Dickson and J. M. Evans, at Cynthiana, Ky., 29 additions to the church, 26 by profession.

Within a year the new church at Nashville, Tenn., of Rev. T. M. Connell, has reached a membership of seventy four.

Died, February 24th, at Nashville, Tenn., Mrs. Bessie Wilkes, wife of Maj. James H. Wilkes, and only daughter of Rev. James Wilson, formerly missionary to India.

Rev. John L. Hitner has removed with his family to Georgetown, Scott county, Ky. He is engaged for the present in the mission field of West Lexington Presbytery near that point.

At the special meeting of the Presbytery of Louisville, held March 15th, the calls from Mount Sterling and Springfield for the services of Mr. Keller were put into his hands, but inasmuch as the elders from the Big Spring church, though present, had not been regularly appointed and authorized by a formal congregational meeting to represent the church, Presbytery ordered that the church be cited to appear at an adjourned to be held April 5th, and show cause why the pastoral relation should not be dissolved.

The Chronicle says the Second church at Augusta, Rev. Mr. Goetchius pastor, is improving greatly in active membership and general attendance, so that new provisions for seating the congregation will have to be made.

Rev. S. F. Tenny, in the Southern Presbyterian, says the first Presbyterian vine planted in Texas was at San Augustine, in 1838, by Rev. Hugh Wilson.

In the course of a recent evangelistic tour Rev. S. F. Tenny organized a church with one ruling elder and seven members at Beamont, Texas. The next day two were received on profession. Seven children and one adult were baptized. Rev. W. C. Wallace has charge of the work.

Rev. J. R Jacobs writes from Corpus Christi, March 12th: "In past nine months we have grown in membership from 32 to 58—26 additions, 17 of them upon profession of faith and 9 by letter; all but two have been persons fully grown, and these two about grown, 16 of them married persons."—Texas Presbyterian.

(Dr. Atkinson is making efforts to rebuild his churches, says the Southwestern Presbyterian. His people are resolutely co-operating in the work, and have already commenced, hoping to be seconded by the liberality of friends. At Centreville the work is begun, but it is decided not to incur debt; when the money gives out the work stops. At Morgan City everything was wrecked, not even any of the lumber could be saved from the debris. They must start from the foundation. What they aim at there is to get up the walls and roof of the building, so as to have a shelter for worship.

The St. Louis Presbyterian is pained to learn that Rev. A. H. Kerr, D. D., and wife have been in the physician's hands in Memphis for six weeks. He writes that Mrs. Kerr has been relieved, but that for himself "the doctor has done and proposes to do nothing. "I have been," he says, "a paralytic for eight or nine months, and partially so for two or three years. Time and prudence must work my relief."

The Southwestern Presbyterian records the death of a benevolent woman, at the age of 87 years, Mrs. Margaret A. Silliman of Clinton, La., who fell and broke her collar bone and one of her ribs. Her husband founded the female college at Clinton. He gave before the war ten thousand dollars towards building a Presbyterian church at Washington, D. C. He was a benefactor of Oakland College, a large supporter of the Boards of the Church, and a helper in nearly every important work of Church beneficence.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Considerable accessions are reported in the Church papers.

The Presbyterian Journal deeply regrets to learn that the Rev. Dr. John Robinson, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Asheland, Ohio, is at present laid aside, owing to a paralytic stroke received last December.

Rev. A. C. McClelland, Secretary of the Freedman's Committee, is recovering from his long illness.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

The United Presbyterian announces the death of Rev. J. G. Barnes, of Monmouth, Ill., and of Rev. D. M. B. McLean, of Canonsburg, Pa.

BAPTIST.

Ex Governor Brown, of Georgia, has given $50,000 for the endowment of a professorship in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky.

The First Baptist church of Chicago, Ill., under Dr. Lorimer, is on a rising tide of prosperity, over two hundred having been added to its membership in the few months he has been serving as pastor.

15 Pounds Gained in Three Weeks, and CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

Messrs. Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GENTLEMEN:—Please send me twelve bottles of Dr. A. JAMES' CANNABIS INDICA, one each of Pills and Ointment, for a friend of mine who is not expected to live; and as your medicines cured me of CONSUMPTION some three years ago, I want him to try them. I gained fifteen pounds while taking the first three bottles, and I know it is just the thing for him.

Respectfully, J. V. HULL, Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

This remedy speaks for itself. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. There is not a single symptom of CONSUMPTION that it does not dissipate at once, and it will break up a fresh cold in 24 hours. $1.50 per bottle. Address

DIED.

At Wilmington, 17th March, 1880, Mrs. CARRIE WATKINS PAYNE, the beloved wife of Rev. Charles M. Payne, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, leaving to mourn their loss, her husband, parents, two little children and the whole Presbyterian community.

Born 15th October, 1848, this lady became in her youth a member of the body of Christ, His Church; and her christian life amongst us since her marriage, up to six years ago, has been a bright exemplification of all gospel graces.

Her sweetness of disposition and her constant and seldom cheerfulness early endeared her to her pastor and relatives.

She fulfilled perfectly all the numerous and important duties of a pastor's wife, being singularly strong of character, wise as a counsellor and exercising a prudence usually the result of a life-long experience.

The faith of our deceased friend in our Lord Jesus Christ was ever firm and abiding; and her aim and steps in life are best expressed in the words of the Apostle, Phil, iv: 8:

"Whatsoever things are true,
Whatsoever things are honest,
Whatsoever things are just,
Whatsoever things are pure,
Whatsoever things are lovely,
Whatsoever things are of good report."

But this bright life has closed. The Master called for her and she left us for "the city of the Living God the heavenly Jerusalem and an innumerable company of angels—to the general assembly and church of the First-Born—which are written in heaven and to God, the Judge of All, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant." (Heb. xii: 22.)

The deep interest of the brethren, both of our own and other communions was manifested by their attendance, at sunrise, to see the mortal remains carried to the railroad station to be taken hence to Forsythe county.

The Rev. Dr. J. R. Wilson, of the First Presbyterian church conducted a service at the Second church house, which was completed at the grave at Winston by Rev. R. Z. Johnston.

Let us pray for the bereaved husband and pastor, for the mourning parents and relatives and for the motherless children, and say—

"The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away: blessed be the name of the Lord!"

WILMINGTON MARKET

DURING WEEK

ENDING MARCH 30.

THE attention of all persons interested is called to the fact that strict personal attention is given to the collection of the necessary information, and the careful preparation of our MARKET REPORT, so as to give a correct general review of transactions and prices, for the week ending each Tuesday morning.

ROSIN.—The market has been quiet and steady throughout at $1 15 for Strained and $1 17½ for Good Strained. The demand for these grades is good and will likely continue so, but the prevailing dullness in foreign markets under heavy receipts, as well as a general lull in the demand for speculation, do not promise an early improvement in prices. In the medium types, F, G, H, I, there is a good business with an upward tendency, in consequence of a scarcity of these grades. We quote F $1 50. G $1 75, H $2 25, I $2 75. Fine Rosins are nominal. The estimates from reliable sources for the next crop Fine Rosins are an increase of 50 per cent in North and South Carolina tributary to this market, and 33 per cent for all of Georgia. The stock in dealers' hands is light, and the foreign demand seems to be confined to the actual wants of consumers, who are holding off for lower prices.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE.—For several weeks past the market both at home and abroad has been controlled by the Standard Oil Company, which forced the price to 40 cents, at which it remained steady until Thursday, when offerings were declined, and the market continues nominal without any inquiry, although 45 cents would probably be accepted by holders who are anxious to realize.

TAR.—Market has ruled firm throughout and price advanced to $1 40, at which there is a good demand. The receipts have been quite light, and when consumers begin to realize that the production is only one-half of that of last year, there may be a further advance.

CRUDE TURPENTINE.—Market has been irregular with a downward tendency. We quote present prices $1 60 for Hard and $3 50 for Yellow Dip. Virgin is reported at $3.

COTTON.—Under heavy constraint by the Bears in New York, the American market has been much depressed, and prices have steadily declined until nearly a cent per pound from the highest point several weeks ago has been reached, but the Liverpool market has kept remarkably steady under this pressure in New York, and the usually dull season of holidays, which is further depressed this year by the general election now pending in Great Britain. The crop prospects in the far South and Southwest are unusually good, a much larger acreage being planted, but any day may develope a new phase in the market and cause a rapid advance. We quote Middling 12¼ cents, and dull.

TIMBER.—The demand continues active and the receipts, which have been large, have been readily taken. Prices remain unchanged, being from $6 50 to $15, as to quality.

MONTHS & YEARS

Of careful study and investigation, and from knowledge gained by a long and continued course of experimental study, enable me to confidently assert that Nasal

CATARRH CAN BE SPEEDILY AND ABSOLUTELY CURED IN EVERY CASE.

(NO MATTER OF HOW LONG STANDING)

BUT NOT by "Inhalations," "Snuffs" or any other local application alone.

CAUSES OF CATARRH Catarrh is a constitutional disease and depends upon the presence of a Humor in the system. This humor (or catarrhal poison as it is termed) may be either inherited or acquired. Of the diseases which act as causes of Catarrh the following may be mentioned: Scrofula, Rheumatism, Rickets, Measles, Scarlet Fever, Whooping-cough, Influenza, &c. Of other causes of Catarrh may be mentioned: From Catarrh, Bronchitis and Asthma in ancestors. From the effects of ill-digested, ill-assimilated foods, &c. The developing causes of Catarrh are colds. "Colds in the head" develop or produce Catarrh by arousing into action the cause, which would otherwise have remained dormant.

A PROMINENT METHODIST PREACHER,

REV. GEORGE HAVENS, Pastor of the Methodist Church at Centreville, Ind., makes the following statement:

CENTREVILLE, IND., Feb. 19, 1880.

DR. J. K. ROSS: Dear Sir:—For the benefit and encouragement of sufferers of Nasal Catarrh, I will make (the following statement): My daughter Allice, aged 21 years, had been a sufferer from Nasal catarrh, in discharge, dropping into and down the throat, a derangement of the stomach was made, which had resulted in Dyspepsia, and a general impairment of health. Various remedies had been used without benefit. Your treatment was a complete success, and my daughter is now enjoying good health, with an increase of 19 pounds in weight, and a clear healthy skin. Yours truly, GEORGE HAVENS.

MY TREATMENT Is based upon the theory that Catarrh, in itself, is not a disease, but the sequel or result of a disease. The remedies I employ embrace both local and constitutional medicines, with such appliances as each individual case requires, which is ascertained by a personal examination, or from a written description of the patient's symptoms and condition. I furnish to applicants a list of questions which, if answered correctly, will place me in possession of all the information necessary to the treatment of any case. There has been heretofore no cure known for this disease, except in a few occasional or isolated cases. I have discovered a cure, that in my hands, HAS NEVER FAILED

Cures speedy, permanent and absolute.

My treatment

1st. Will accomplish what many others only claim to do.

2d. It does not cure an occasional or isolated case, but will radically and permanently cure in all cases.

3d. My Remedies are not unpleasant to take or use, a matter of no little importance, in view of the pain and suffering caused by some (?) remedies.

4th. My treatment is both LOCAL and CONSTITUTIONAL. My Remedies Antidotes and Eliminates THE CATARRHAL Poison from the System bringing about A CURE by removing THE CAUSE of the Disease.

THE PACIFIC

GUANO COMPANY.

This Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, was chartered in 1865.

The stock was taken by a few of the largest and wealthiest merchants in Boston and New York, who still direct and control the Company.

The Works, situated at Woods' Holl, Mass., and Charleston, S. C., are the largest and most complete of the kind in the United States.

The Company owns several large deposits of Phosphate, which it works, and having acid chambers, manufactures its own Oil of Vitrol.

The Company employs and consults with several of the leading chemists and most progressive vegetable physiologists in the country.

With all these advantages—viz: long experience, ample capital, large works, splendid machinery, extensive deposits, and the best scientific ability, the Company can and does offer a Fertilizer at the lowest possible price.

By reason of the liberal policy of the Company, as well as the intrinsic value of its principal brand, SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO has become, unquestionably, the most popular Fertilizer in the United States, its sale extending from Maine to Texas.

It would be a work of superogation for us to do more than simply call attention to the fact that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO will be offered this (the fifteenth Spring) season for sale at all points in North Carolina, because there is no manufactured Guano as long, as widely, and certainly none more favorably known, than this brand.

We therefore will devote but a few lines to a description of this popular article, preferring that others should testify from their own practical experience as to its value.

It is proper, however, that we should call attention to a comparative analysis of Fertilizers sold in North Carolina, published in 1878, by Prof. Ledoux, the State Chemist of North Carolina, who places SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO among the very highest grades known.

Such an endorsement of SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO, confirmed as it is by Hon. L. L. Polk, the Commissioner of Agriculture, under whose auspices the analysis was published, is certainly worthy of note.

This year SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is equal, in every respect, to what it was in 1879.

It is manufactured by the same Company, under the same formula, using the same materials, and hence must give the same splendid analysis as that published by Prof. Ledoux.

It is in fine physical condition.

It is packed in new, clean bags, each bag containing 200 pounds.

The analysis is stenciled on each bag, as required by law.

FOR THE FAMILY.

A Hint.

Our daisy lay down
In her little nightgown,
And kissed me again and again,
On forehead and cheek,
On lips that would speak,
But found themselves shut, to their gain.

Then, foolish, absurd,
To utter a word,
I asked her the question so old
That wife and that lover
Ask over and over,
As if they were surer when told:

There, close at her side,
"Do you love me?" I cried;
She lifted her golden-crowned head;
A puzzled surprise
Shone in her gray eyes—
"Why, that's why I kiss you!" she said.

A Brave Boy.

It was a stormy evening in January. It had been very cold all day, but toward night it grew warmer, clouds came up rapidly from the northeast, and now it was snowing Freddie Johnson, a bright chubby little fellow of six years, was sitting by the fire, looking at the pictures in the last Nursery, when his papa said, "Come Freddie, I am going to write a letter, which I wish you to take to the postoffice for me. Run and put on your coat and hat. The letter will be ready as soon as you are."

"All right," said Freddie, who was accustomed to obey without asking questions—a rare trait in a little boy.

Now, the postoffice was half a mile distant, and Freddie had never been there alone, though he had often gone with his papa; but he was a courageous little fellow, and very proud of doing errands for his papa, so he did as he was bidden and with his mamma's help was soon muffled up to his chin in overcoat and scarf, and when he came back for the letter looked as if he could defy any storm.

"Here, little Dutchman," said papa, "you see I have wrapped this letter up in paper so that it will not get wet. Now, when you get to the office take the paper off, and drop the letter into the box. Don't stop anywhere but come directly back."

"Yes, sir," said Freddie, and then he whispered to papa, "Do you believe I shall see any dogs?"

"No, dear," Mr. Johnson replied, "the dogs have all gone to bed, I guess. Now good-bye."

Freddy started off bravely. It was a very dark night, and he could only see a little way ahead, but on he trudged, wading through the deep snow, trying to whistle as his uncle Charlie did.

"Hallo, sir, where are you going?" asked a man who met him on the way down.

"Postoffice," said Freddie.

"Aren't you afraid you'll get lost?" asked the man in surprise.

"No, sir," said Freddie stoutly, as he passed on, "papa sent me"

He found the postoffice without difficulty, dropped the letter into the box, and started for home. But we must go back a little in our story.

As soon as Freddie had left the house his papa hastily put on his overcoat and hat, and hurried after him. Walking on the opposite side of the street, and a little behind, he followed Freddie, keeping his eyes on him all the way, to see that no harm came to his dear little boy. When they had nearly reached home Mr. Johnson hurried ahead and was calmly reading his paper when Freddie came in, looking more like the snow man he had built in the yard than like Freddie Johnson. Then what a greeting the little hero received! How his mamma and his aunties crowded around to help him off with his wraps, shake off the snow, and kiss his bright, rosy cheeks! How his eyes sparkled with delight when his papa called him his "brave little boy," and told him that he must hurry and grow up, for he needed in his store just such a clerk as Freddie would make! But it was now bedtime, and with a "good night" all around Freddie went up stairs and was soon sleeping soundly.

Now, children, this is a true story, and to me it has a beautiful lesson. Just as Freddie's father followed him all the way, ready to help if any danger should threaten him, so our Father in heaven watches us wherever we go and whatever we do, and although we cannot see Him we may be sure that He will never let any real harm come to us.—Canada Presbyterian.

I Cannot Undo It.

A little girl sat trying to pick out a seam that she had sewed together wrong. Her chubby fingers picked at the thread, that would break, leaving the end hidden somewhere among the stitches that she had labored so wearily to make short and close; and though the thread came out, yet the needle holes remained, showing just how the seam had been sewed; and with tears in her eyes she cried, "O, mamma, I cannot undo it!"

Poor little girl! you are learning one of the saddest lessons there is. The desire of undoing what can never be undone gives us more trouble than all the doings of a busy life; and because we know this so well, our hearts often ache for the boys and girls we see doing the things they will wish so earnestly by-and-by to undo. Older boys and girls have felt keener heartaches for graver faults. You all know something of the desire to undo, and sorrow that you cannot. And now where is the bright side? Right here: Let us try to do a thing right the first time so we will never wish to undo it. We can ask our Heavenly Father. He never leads us wrong; and anything we do under His guidance we shall never wish to undo.—The Myrtle.

"The Soft Pillow."

Little Annie, before going to bed, lifted up her heart in pray to Jesus and gave herself into his keeping, while Nettie, her sister, was thoughtlessly undressing and jumping into bed without prayer. Annie at once fell asleep and was resting peacefully in the arms of Him to whom she had committed herself, while Nettie was restly turning over. At length she awoke Annie, complaining that the pillow was hard and so flat she could not sleep upon it. "I know what is the matter with your pillow," said Annie, "there is no sleep in it." Little Nettie thought a moment, then crept quietly out of bed, prayed, laid down again and found her pillow softer. She then said to herself, "That is what my pillow wanted; it is soft now," and she soon was sweetly sleeping.

Are there not thousands of other pillows in the world which might be softened by prayer?—Presbyterian.

How to Obtain Sleep.

The following is recommended as a cure for sleeplessness: Wet half a towel, apply it to the back of the neck, pressing it upward toward the base of the brain, and fasten the dry half of the towel over so as to prevent the too rapid exhalation. The effect is prompt and charming, cooling the brain and inducing calmer, sweeter sleep than any narcotic. Warm water may be used, though most persons prefer cold. To those who suffer from over excitement of the brain, whether the result of brain work or pressing anxiety, this simple remedy has proved an especial boon.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Irish Misery.

AN AMERICAN CORRESPONDENT'S HARROWING DETAILS OF THE DESTITUTION.

We drove back to Murrisk, that we had passed on our way to Thorahill. It is a cluster of hovels built higgeldy-piggeldy along the shore and up the sides of the little hill near one of the arms of the bay. There is a rough barrier of stone across the water, which was built to keep the tide from overflowing the sweet water of the little pond that empties into the bay. Without it the people could not drink the water and there are no springs or wells near by. It was badly constructed, and has been partly demolished by the high winds and the tides. It is dangerous crossing when the wind is high. It required the utmost care for us to keep our feet in walking over it.

A woman lay dying in one of these hovels. Father Lynskey entered to administer the last sacrament. As I am not a Catholic, the priest advised me to visit the other cabins while he sought the dying woman. I went into one of them. I shall have to grow half a yard or so before I can truthfully be called a tall man, and yet I had to bend nearly double before I could get through the door. There was no fireplace. There was only a hole in the roof at one end of the room, out of which the smoke made its way at its leisure. A little peat fire was burning on the hearth, or rather beneath the hole in the roof. There was no ceiling, of course, for none of these cabins have a ceiling. There was no floor but the ground—few of them have even a few flat stones here or there. There was no window. The rafters and the furze sticks on which the thatch rests and the walls and everything in the wretched room were begrimed with smoke. There was no dresser for the plates and cups. There were no chairs. There was only one rickety little home-made table. There were only two low rude stools for sitting on. A pig was eating out of a kettle on the floor. Two or three hens were picking up a few grains of meal. Near the fire there was a rude bed, covered with two filthy blankets. There was an inner room. I entered it. It was the children's bed room. Its furniture consisted of three little heaps of rags. There were six persons in this family. The children were ragged and cold. As I took notes in this Irish home the neighbors thronged in until the place was full, and before I could complete my notes I had to ask them to stand away from the little door, for there was no other way of getting light. The woman of the house was clad in filthy rags. She was barefooted. She plaintively told me that she could not go to Mass now, for she had not a decent dress to cover her rags.

This was not the worst hovel. There were others smaller and more wretched, both here and at a similar cluster of hovels called Killenacoff. But it is useless to describe them one by one. Everywhere I saw cows, calves, pigs, horses, asses and hens living in the same room with young mothers and children—in the same damp, dark, slippery, smoky hovels, half stable and half home; everywhere I saw old men and old women ragged and barefooted, and hungry and cold and despairing.

At Killenacoff the good priest offered to expend a sum that had been sent for the twenty-four families of that hamlet to him, in paying them wages at the rate of a shilling a day to build a road for their own use, so that they might earn their scanty meals, and save their self-respect. They gladly accepted the offer. It is to the credit of these starving people that they do not want relief, but work; that they are anxious to be employed, and only accept alms because their families would perish from hunger without it.

I shall tell of only one more visit. As we crossed the "harrier"—Father Lynskey was some distance behind at the time—I saw two little children, with bare red feet and blue lips, sitting at the roadside near what seemed to be the roof of a pig-sty or little stable, for the roof was flush with the road. I noticed that they were rather more tastefully clad (albeit in rags) and that they seemed of a finer organization than most of the children that I had seen. Their faces were clean. A slim, blonde woman of thirty or more, whose face showed traces of early beauty, stood with dejected countenance near them. As I looked a second time at the little creatures the woman spoke to me and said that she had not been able to get any relief and that her children had not eaten a mouthful since yesterday. It was now afternoon!

"Where do you live?" I asked.

"There!"

She pointed to a house that I had supposed to be a little stable. It was built between the harrier and the road. She had put it up with her own hands, she said. I turned to the man who was guiding me.

"Is that true?" I asked him—out of her hearing of course.

"Yes," he answered coldly.

I made my way down to where the door was, followed by the guide and the woman. I had to bend low to enter the hut. It was not fifteen feet by ten. There was no window; there was no fireplace; there was no hole in the roof, even, for the smoke to escape, and only three bits of turf burned on the hearth. A little white kitten, singed and dirty and famished, was crouching near the semblance of a fire. At one end of the hovel was a rude bed and two dirty rags for covering. The straw on the roof was half rotten; when it rained hard, the woman said, the rain came through into the cabin. There was no furniture save a kettle and a table and a stool. "Where is your husband?" I asked. "He is not here," said the man quickly. I gave the poor wretched woman half a crown to buy food for her children.—Dublin Letter in N. Y. Tribune.

Greek Indifference to Color.

In spite of the extraordinary stories told of some painters, art critics are agreed that the pictorial art among the ancient Greeks was far inferior to the other plastic arts. They were ignorant of the more refined artistic uses of perspective; they had no oil colors, and even as late as Alexander's time, black, white, red and yellow were the only colors used in their paintings. The absence of green and blue might be attributed to the want of proper pigments, but it is evident that the ingenious Greeks, if they had really felt the need of such pigments, would have soon discovered them somewhere. Hence the absence of green and blue is more probably due to the fact that they are primarily the colors of nature, and were therefore not wanted, since in Greek paintings nature occupied as subordinate a position as it did in their literature. Looking at the whole matter in a philosophical spirit, we ought perhaps to be thankful that the laws of mental growth retarded the æsthetic development of the color-sense among the Greeks. For, in consequence of their indifference to color the attention of their artists was almost entirely concentrated on beauty of form and proportion, which resulted in making them the greatest sculptors and architects the world has ever seen or perhaps ever will see.—Macmillan's Magazine.

The Indian and the Telephone.

An amusing application of the wonders of the telephone as an assistant detective of crime comes to us from Julian. Several horses were recently stolen in that neighborhood, and suspicion fell upon a certian Indian as the thief. Some one having introduced a telephone up there, the same was being exhibited, when it occurred to the owner of the stolen horses to get the Indian to come in and hear the "Great Spirit" talk. The Indian took one of the cups and was thrilled with astonishment at being apparently so near the Great Keeper of the happy hunting grounds. After some little time spent in wonderment, the Indian was solemnly commanded by the Great Spirit to "give up those stolen horses!" Dropping the cup as if he had been shot, the Indian immediately confessed to having stolen the horses, and tremblingly promised if his life was spared he would restore the "caballos" at once, and he did so.—San Diego, Cal., Union.

A Queen's Conqueror.

Mary, Queen of Scots, "was confessed by every one to be the most charming princess of her time." She had a brilliant complexion, dark eyes, auburn hair, exquisite hands, a fine voice, tall, majestic figure. She was a great dancer, rode well, sung sweetly, accompanying herself on various instruments, spoke several languages, and wrote both in prose and verse.

By the death of her father, James V., she became a queen before she was a week old. She was educated in France and brought up in the Roman Catholic religion. When nineteen years old she returned to Scotland, leaving France with much regret, and feeling no love for her native country.

John Knox, the "great Scotch reformer," was thirty-seven years older than Mary. He was educated at Glasgow University, became an enthusiastic Protestant, and preached with tremendous power.

Only a few days after Mary's arrival in Scotland she sent for Knox to come to the palace, where they had a long talk in her brother's presence. She accused him of attempting to destroy her authority over her subjects, and using magical arts to carry out his purpose. But so completely did his eloquent defence overpower her that she sunk into a silent stupor, from which she was roused by the dinner bell, putting an end to the conversation.

Not long after, Mary gave a splendid ball in honor of the success of a brutal massacre in France. On the following Sunday, Knox preached a sermon denouncing the atrocity and the festivities. Mary was told that "he had spoken in a manner calculated to bring her under the hatred and contempt of her subjects." She sent for him to come to the palace, where she received him, surrounded by her counsellors and maids of honor, and administered a long rebuke.

Knox listened quietly, and then repeated the whole of what he had said in the pulpit. For the only time in her life Mary was compelled to listen to a plain, fearless sermon. As he left the room one of her attendants was heard to mutter, "He is not afraid!"

Not a great while elapsed before he was summoned to her presence in Lochleven Castle. For two hours she pleaded with him on behalf of the nationality of her own religious service.

"Will you allow that my subjects shall take my sword in their hands?"

"The sword of justice is God's," the great reformer answered.

The Queen was very angry, but the next day she sent for him again, and adopting a plan unlike any she had ever before tried, attempted by every art in her power to charm and fascinate him. "For my sake" was the plea, equally unsuccessful.

There was only one more interview between them. She sent for him upon hearing that he censured her marriage with Lord Darnley. "I cannot be quit of ye!" she cried in a passion of anger, "and I vow I will be revenged!" She sobbed and wept, but Knox was as unmoved as before.

"I am sorry to hurt you, madam," he said, "but I should be more sorry to hurt my conscience."

This speech infuriated her, and she ordered him from the room.

On the occasion of her marriage with Bothwell, the supposed murderer of her first husband, Darnley, the nation was wild with indignation.

Some proposed banishment, others imprisonment for life. Knox used his powerful oratory to have her tried on the plain charge of being an accomplice in the murder. There is no doubt that the fiery eloquence of the great reformer was one of the mightiest agencies in bringing to punishment the queen whose beauty and whose tears could never swerve him from his honest convictions.

He died fifteen years before Mary's execution, and it was truly said of him when he was laid to rest in the old church-yard of St. Giles, Edinburgh, "Here lies one who never feared the face of man."—Canada Presbyterian.

How Things are Done With Ease.

When a man speaks with ease, or writes with ease, or paints with ease, or does anything with ease and gracefulness, you may be assured it does not come natural for him to do so. He has been hard at work, fitting himself for this very performance. And his preparatory work has by no means been pleasant to him. He has drudged, because without drudgery he could have no hope of success. "Of all the work that produces results," says a sensible writer, "nine-tenths must be drudgery. There is no work, from the highest to the lowest, which can be done well by any man who is unwilling to make that sacrifice. Part of the very nobility of the devotion of the true workman to his work consists in the fact that a man is not daunted by finding that drudgery must be done; and no man can really succeed in any walk of life without possessing a good deal of what is called in ordinary English pluck. That is the condition of all work whatever, and it is the condition of all success." This is as true in its application to Sunday School work as to any other sphere. No superintendent can fill his place in the teachers' meeting or at the school desk, nor can a teacher do his part before a class, without downright hard work beforehand. There is no substitute for that.—S. S. Times.

Serpent, or Brittle Star-Fish.

Ophiurans, are related to the star-fish, and their rays or arms are five in number, like the common variety, urastir rubens, but totally unlike in general appearance. In the common five fingered stars, the broad bases of the rays form the central body of the animal; but with the ophiurans the arms are long and slender, nearly cylindrical in form, being slightly narrowed toward the extremities; they appear to be attached to, rather than to be growing out of the small disk-like body. The spinous projections, which fringe the edges of these long arms, suggest the idea of five centipedes placed at regular intervals around the disk, and wriggling about with the intention of twisting themselves off if they can; and indeed they often do succeed, or rather the creature throw them off if much frightened, or, to escape capture, it will sacrifice to save the rest. Like some others of this class, it has "suicidal tendencies." It is a very free swimmer, its centipedal arms forming excellent oars.—Ocean Wonders.

Quill Pens.

The earliest pens, such as were used for writing on papyrus with a fluid ink, were made of reeds. Reed pens are still in use in Arabia, as they suit the Arabic characters better than the quill pen. These reeds are collected near the shores of the Persian Gulf whence they are sent to various parts of the East. Quill pens are chiefly supplied by the goose, the swan and the crow—the ostrich, the turkey and other birds occasionally contributing. Crow quills are usually employed in fine drawings, on account of the fine point to which they can be brought. Goose quills are employed for ordinary writing; but swan and turkey quills, being larger, are preferable for copying. Two principal sorts of quills are known in commerce—viz. Dutch quills, which are transparent and glass-like; and Hamburg quills, which are milk-white and clouded. Dutch quills are much esteemed; the Dutch were the first to find out the art of preparing quills for market, by removing the oil which impregnates them, and prevents the ink from flowing freely along the pen. Quills are obtained in the greatest quantities from the countries along the Baltic; Hamburg is still the principal place for preparing and exporting them. Next to the Hamburg and Dutch quills, those of Riga are much liked, especially in England and Scotland. The manufacture of steel pens does not appear to have diminished the demand for quills. In 1855 Britain imported, independent of home supply, 27,500,000 goose and swan quills. The quills used are classified according to the order in which they are fixed in the wing, the second and third being the best. With proper management, a goose may afford twenty quills during the year. In the fens of Lincolnshire, geese are kept in large numbers. During the breeding season they are lodged around the owner's house.

H. H. Warner & Co:

GENTS: I have been troubled with kidney difficulties for the last three years, and in October last had a very severe attack. I then commenced taking your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure and obtained relief at once. I have used two bottles and feel as well as ever, and I shall always keep a supply of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure in the house.

Yours truly, A. CORNWALL.

A Wise Deacon

"Deacon Wilder I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family so well the past season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors running to us so long."

"Why, Taylor the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time and kept my family well and saved large doctor bills. Three dollars worth of it kept us all well and able to work all the time, and I will warrant it has cost you and most of the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time. I guess you'll take my medicine hereafter." See other column.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The Vigor cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The Vigor is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

THE SYNOD AT STATESVILLE.

After writing what I did last week about a meeting of Synod in Statesville, I felt as if I left so much unsaid, that is pleasant remember about it, that I add this postscript.

...tatesville is not the largest place in the ...ld. But the hearts of the people are ...ge and warm, and the Synod was most ...spitably and comfortably entertained; ap...ecation is decidedly pleasant, though it ...y be flattering to one's self-esteem. It ...kes one feel good, generally, particularly ...n and the people in Statesville certainly ...preciated the Synod. The Federal Court ...s in session, and many strangers were in ...wn. Professor Reade, an elocutionist of ...me, was also there. But the Synod was ...tainly the main attraction and thoroughly ...joyed.

...Looking more seriously, I think meetings ...ld in smaller towns do great good, ...ple attend with manifest interest on its ...sions and on the preaching. It is more ...ded in such places than in the larger ...s an influence for good is made and re...ained. We thank Dr. Wood for having ...ch preaching for ourselves, but he had ...me for his own people. It has been pleas...to note that his church has been blessed, ...ecially since the meeting of Synod. The ...ld promise were not absent then. The ...dance, the attention, the delight in or...ises, all indicated a spirit of prepared...s and desire. Those Sabbath services, all, ...asured in memory, and for spiritual ...shment, as I have before observed, this ...ng of Synod in Statesville is to be re...ered. Who would dare say that the ...yers of God's people then, their hope and ...pation and desire, in connection with ...oming of so many of God's servants, had ...t to do with the blessing the Synod ...ed as the congregation enjoyed?

...Statesville has changed vastly since I last ...w. As a youth in college, before the ...r did not seem as lively and active as ...rton markets in the east at that season the year. I observed some people ap...ently doing nothing, (no unusual sight ...where perchance,) of whom I was told, ...cognized the cause of idleness, that they ...e strangers in attendance on the court for ...reason or another. But I noticed many ...r streets pushing out well into the coun...ilded with neat lately built cottages and ...fortable houses. I observed too, several ...e stores, handsomely finished without and ...ll, and crowded with full stocks of ...ds, larger stores and larger stocks than I ...ld would be found any where in that ...t of the world, at least outside of "the ...re London." People do not make such ...stments without reasonable hope of re...ns. So I was glad to see such marks of ...th and progress.

...The "Landmark" shewed its appreciation ...Synod, by publishing daily reports of its ...eedings and distributing them.

...I was so fortunate as to have my abode at ...Statesville Female College, and a great ...d fortune it was; ample verge and quiet ...the burdensome writing imposed on me ...re all relied, as well as delightful social ...oyment. The College is an imposing and ...monious building, commanding a beau...ful and extended view. From its observa...y the dear blue mountains are plainly ...n, and a wide expanse of tilled and un...ered country. The interior arrangements ...e College are admirable, and afford not ...e thorough training of a well equipped ...l, but the comforts of a well ordered ...e. I was not surprised to see how happ...were the young ladies who were so fortu...as to be there.

...I must among other places to the "root ...se." I am sorry I cannot recall the name ...e firm that conducts so vast and novel ...enterprise. An immense warehouse, laded, ...ded, on two or three floors, with all sorts ..."herbs," roots and leaves and blos...s for medicinal purposes chiefly. I went ...ough with Dr. Wood, and conducted by ...Professor Hyams a distinguished botanist ...o was in charge of the business. I have seen ...ger stocks of goods in a christmas store, ...Silversmith's, for instance; but none that ...monished me, and for the time so deeply ...erested me. It is a great industry of which ...was not aware. I felt that I was looking ...er into another world, or way of living; ...ought of Nuremberg, or Tunis, or some of ...ese far-away places.

...Professor Hyams kindly invited me to see ...s Herbarium. Thither I went with charm...little friends, and spent a most pleasant ...noon. As in the morning, so in the af...noon, Mr. Hyams was very considerate of ...ignorance, and patient and forbearing with me. I know nothing of botany, either theoretically or practically. It was a sealed volume which my enthusiastic and learned friend opened to my astonished view. How many specimens of native plants he had in his botanical museum I am really afraid at this date to say. I could not but feel how little I knew. Here was a science, evidently of absorbing interest and of great practical value, of which I knew nothing but the name. (I know some others in the same category.) Yet Mr. Hyams' delineation of the different specimens he shewed me were very interesting and I greatly enjoyed and appreciated the interview. I recognized some specimens of long-leafed pine (Pinus picea so the dictionary says, but I have forgotten what Mr. Hyams called it, and I would take his word before my Worcester!) which came from Bladen. They looked decidedly familiar and homelike.

I enjoyed very much the specimen of "Hyams' Sparkling Shortia," which he shewed. It was re-discovered by Professor Hyams, and he shewed it as his pet and special triumph, with very pardonable pride and satisfaction. Its history is interesting. It was discovered by a French botanist (I believe), a hundred years ago, described and entered on the books. But it has not been seen since its first discovery, and was supposed by some to have become extinct—or that it had been mis-classified or never found in the first place. No specimen of it was to be seen in any museum. And all the scientists have been searching for it everywhere. Professor Kerr (who told me to be sure to see Mr. Hyams' collection) told me he had been on the lookout for it for years. It remained for a resident of North Carolina, among the North Carolina mountains to find the wonderful and precious plant, to confirm the science of botany, to win new honors for himself and his State. Duly authenticated specimens, both living and pressed have been sent to the foreign academies of science in France and England, and in honor of the second discoveries the scientific books have named it "Hyams' Sparkling Shortia." If Mr. Hyams will pardon me, I must say I saw nothing remarkable about the little plant, and I could have passed a whole mountain side of it without a tremor of excitement. It is an ordinary looking thing, about as pretty as wild strawberry or white clover. But I enjoyed the story all the same.

We all think it is time to stop.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

MEETINGS OF SYNOD.

North Carolinians are nothing, if not conservative; Presbyterians are nothing, if not conservative; the Scotch and Scotch-Irish are nothing, if not conservative. So by this three-fold cord North Carolina Presbyterians may be termed "eminently" conservative, "after the most straitest sect." Hence it is that custom becomes unwritten law, and as inviolable, inexorable, and sometimes as inexplicable as the law of the Medes and Persians.

There are some things I would like to say about the Synod. I take this cowardly way of doing it, for I am afraid to say it on the floor of the Synod—there is a lion in the way.

One custom, which has grown into law, is that Synod must meet invariably according to an inevitable relation in the several presbyterics. When that interesting epoch arrives in the synodical proceedings, announced as "time and place of next meeting," the question is asked, Whose time is it? To what presbytery does it go the next time?

The theory is that the Synod, being constituted of five presbyteries, a sort of justice to the organization and to the area covered by the organization requires that each in turn should have the Synod; in other words, that it should be made in due proportion equally as convenient for all the churches to be represented.

When communication was by horse-mail, and delegates went in parties through the country to attend Synod, it was certainly reasonable thus to accommodate different parts of the State. I wonder if the former days were better than these? I have been told some rich experiences and delightful stories of those times.

Now-a-days railroads annihilate space and time, and money, too! and any part of the State is more accessible than the most central point was in those days. Still the matter of expense, especially to feeble churches, now that all are entitled to representation, makes it desirable that each part of the State be equitably chosen.

Is it best that this be done by presbyteries? I answer, No, for the very object to be desired is defeated by this vigerous routine.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville comprises, let us say, six counties, Wilmington eight, Concord twenty, Mecklenburg thirty, Orange forty. I am guessing at the numbers, as anybody can see, but it answers for purposes of illustration. Some are compact in territorial area, others are elongated, to put it enphemistically. I have heard their shape and dimension referred to as "shoe-string," "lizzard," "gizzard," "web-foot," and such unbecoming and un-Presbyterian epithets. Clearly to accommodate the presbyteries and the churches it is not just to be limited by the territorial area which each presbytery comprises. To meet once in five years in such compact areas as Fayetteville or Wilmington is surely not fair to such scattered presbyteries and remote churches as are in Concord, Mecklenburg and Orange.

North Carolinians, Scotch-Irish and especially Presbyterians are just. We may trust them certainly in so simple an act of justice, and we may be sure that in due time and in fair proportion each part of the State will have the honor (and the burden) of entertaining Synod, without compelling each presbytery to take it in turn.

And that word burden suggests the remark that the propriety of a change in the custom is advisable for further reasons. The Presbytery of Wilmington has but two places that can entertain Synod, and one of those not a strong church. The Presbytery of Fayetteville has but one so of Mecklenburg. In the good old days when people went in their stickgigs or horseback, many country churches in all the presbyteries could and did have the Synod. That is impracticable now. Transportation is inconvenient, and the country cousins are a little afraid of city folks anyhow. At any rate, whatever be the reason, the Synod meets once in five years in Charlotte, once in five years in Fayetteville, once in five years nearly in Wilmington. It is certainly a pleasure to meet in each place, and the Synod enjoys it hugely. But our experience in Statesville, where Synod meets once in fifteen or twenty years, teaches that other places would be gratified to have more frequent opportunity of showing their appreciation of Synod.

Let us look at it in another way. Wilmington, Goldsboro, Fayetteville, Charlotte, Concord, Statesville, Salisbury, Morganton, Newbern, Greensboro and Raleigh have all had the Synod in the last twenty years. Of course there is difference in ability to entertain, some being much larger and wealthier churches than others. But we will say all are equally ready to receive the body, all are convenient and accessible, and all have about the same claims.

Then it may be that other places aspire to the honor. It is characteristic of North Carolina, just because it has never done it, therefore it will never do it. But surely that is not just. There are Asheville, Lincolnton, in Mecklenburg—somebody said Lanrinburg—perhaps Shoe Heel in Fayetteville, and in Orange possibly many coming places; those flourishing tobacco towns, Durham, Winston, Reidsville, and also Washington, perhaps Oxford and Henderson. I say, for one, "down with the rule." Let there be a lively competition for the Synod. Let's go where they want us. Don't let us have the dull inflexible rotation, but let us move about with unexpected and bewildering violation of precedent.

I do not mean to intimate that it is ever the case that Synod is not wanted. I sincerely believe that the towns that entertain us most frequently are, and perhaps partly for that reason, really most glad to do so; but if it is a burden let others bear it, and if it is a pleasure let others share it.

As to the honor to the presbyteries, well, I think the presbyteries do not set much store by that. We will let that reason for rotation pass.

I write thus early, because I want the matter brought to notice without any coalition or collusion. I have no ax to grind. For one, I say let us go against "time-honored precedent" and "hoary custom." Synod meets fall in Raleigh. There will very likely be a large attendance, and the old law may be broken in pieces by the ruthless iconoclasts. As Synod meets in Orange Presbytery in 1880, I move that we startle the natives by meeting in the same Presbytery in 1881, that is if we are wanted.

TUM.

P. S. I am not a member of Orange Presbytery.

P. P. S. Perhaps if I had been I would have known better than to have made the suggestion.

HOW MARTIN LUTHER WAS CURED.

Ordinarily the great Reformer Luther was less liable to doubts and gloom of spirit than his friend Melancthon. But he was a man of terrible impetuosity, and when he did fall into a fit of darkness he drove all before him.

At one time, when danger threatened, and nothing seemed to prosper in the mighty work he was doing, he became so despondent that his friends were alarmed. He did not sit and mope as other men do when they are melancholy, for Luther was not one of the silent kind.

It was this fact that made his mood dreadful. He was like a strong steed running with a broken rein. His strange actions and bitter words led some to fear that his great labors and burdens had shaken his reason.

His fellow-reformers and his best friends (some of them rich and powerful ones) shook their heads and said, "We must get Doctor Martin out of the way. He needs rest. Who knows but he'll say or do something to wreck the whole cause?"

This time, however, they were puzzled to know how to manage it. Once they shut him up a year in Wartburg Castle to save his own life. It seemed absurd enough to think of shutting up Luther to save reformation. But they must do something. It was hardly safe now, as it usually had been, to let him alone till his grand faith worked itself out of its eclipse.

Finally they concluded to try a method common among the old prophets, who often taught and rebuked great men by enigmas and parables. Luther's wife, the good and gentle Catherine Bora, was taken into confidence, and her love and solicitude for him made her, no doubt, the best person who could have been chosen to administer medicine to the gloomy man's mind.

The next time Luther went to his house he found it silent. To miss his welcome at the door was a surprise to him, and changed the current of his thoughts a little. Men in sour humors will say there is nothing bright, but they never like to be taken at their word.

He went through the rooms seeing no one till he reached the parlor, and there his wife sat in deep mourning and weeping as if her heart would break.

"Why, Kate, what is the matter?" asked Luther, now thoroughly startled.

No answer but sobs and tears.

"Is the baby dead?" thinking of his youngest child, who had been ailing.

"No—worse than that—a great deal worse—I thought you knew," and then a fresh burst of tears.

"Kate—wife!—what in the world can you mean? Tell me, quick!" exclaimed the astonished reformer.

"O, husband, hasn't the awful news reached you? Haven't you heard that our Heavenly Father is dead, and His cause in the world has all gone to ruin?"

The horrified expression on Luther's face changed at once. He stood a moment looking at his wife, and he began to shake with laughter. He laughed as loud and as long and as heartily as he had ever laughed in his life, and that is saying much, for naturally Martin was a very merry-hearted man.

"Ah, Kate, Kate, my good wife," he said presently, "I read your riddle. God is not dead, but I have acted as though he were. You have taught me a good lesson."

And Martin Luther never forgot the lesson his wife taught him, when she showed him his black fancies in their own absurd funeral dress.

EVEN SO. COME.

BY MRS. M. E. SANGSTER.

Come, Lord Jesus!
The days are long, the nights are slow,
The pulse of life beats faint and low,
The bloom is gone from flower and tree,
What can we do but wait for Thee?

Come, Lord Jesus!
When youth was glad with song and love,
And halcyon was the sky above,
When light the step, the spirit free,
Then less our hearts cried out for Thee!

Come, Lord Jesus!
Ah! voice that soundeth in the room,
Ah! Face Divine that breaks the gloom,
O! tones that chide our strange unrest,
And bid us lean upon Thy breast.

Come, Lord Jesus!
"Yes, child of mine, I come to Thee,
But Thou art all too blind to see,
That pain and loss and ruth and rift,
May each be My most gracious gift."

Come, Lord Jesus!
Come as Thou will, in peace, in strife,
But with us stay in death and life,
Reveal Thyself to eyes that ache,
And bless us for Thy own dear sake.
Even so. Come.

SOMETHING ABOUT AMUSEMENTS.

How the amusements and recreations of our young people may be rendered morally healthful to them is as yet an undecided problem. What to select and what to taboo there is no general consensus of opinion abont in Christian circles. That the young will have some play is as certain as that kittens will frolic and lambs will gambol. Their vigorous nature leads them, we had almost said forces them, to some form or other of recreation. Maturity and age grow out of that playfulness to a great extent, but to youth it is essential. And he would be a wise man who was able to guide the young feet into paths of recreation where they should find no stone of stumbling, no rock of offence.

Extremists deal with this delicate subject, both in the family, the pulpit, and the press. Some allow too much. Others allow nothing, or next to nothing. How to adopt a wise mean between these extremes is the matter of difficulty! In most Christian circles denunciation of amusements is most frequent. But merely to denounce is not to render help in the crisis.

It avails little with the young people to be perpetually saying, "You shouldn't do this." Shew them what they can do which will be healthful and pleasant to them and leave no trace of folly behind. And this leads us to say that we question if the brains of our best Christian men and women and our ministers and editors have been sufficiently exercised along this line of substitution. They have contented themselves with saying "Don't," when they should have contrived some harmless amusement as a substitute and supplanter of one thought questionable. Can it be that with all the ingenuity possessed by Christian men, they cannot discover or invent something which shall take the place of the dance, the game of cards, the theatre? Is the devil richer in invention than the disciples of Jesus Christ? Must we knuckle under to him? Or can we beat him by inventing something as fascinating for the young mind but infinitely purer than his productions?

We believe that the responsibility lies heavy upon parents first, and preachers next, to indicate specific plans for youthful amusement. It is time we were done with negative teaching on this matter, and were able to come to something positive and practical. It might cost thought and application and research and patience, but the expenditure of all these and more will be little compared with the incalculable benefit of furnishing our young people with healthful and elevating amusements. This is a question which surges up against the shore of every family and every church; and the sooner its presence and potency is acknowledged, the better for the young, for the household, for the Church.—Canadian Independent.

THE MISSING LINK.

The alternative lies between belief in man being developed from lower forms of life, or being a special Divine creation. The latter is the doctrine of the Bible, the former is the teaching of Mr. Darwin in his book entitled "The Descent of Man." He distinctly denies that "Man is the work of a separate act of creation." His great theory, by which he evolves man gradually from the oyster to the ape, and from the ape up to the human being, he calls "natural selection," or the survival of the fittest. Now the law of "natural selection" is, according to Mr. Darwin's admission, a slow and gradual process. The following are his own words in the "Origin of Species:"—"Natural selection" can act only by taking advantage of slight successive variations. She can never take a leap, but must advance by short and slow stages." Well, then, in tracing the pedigree of man up to the ape and above it, there is a sudden break in the chain of evolution; nature takes a great leap. The cubic capacity of the brain of the highest apes is thirty-four inches, and of the lowest type of man sixty-eight. Here we have thirty-four inches on the animal side, and sixty-eight on the human, and no links between the two. And though forty years have been spent in searching for traces of these missing links none have yet been found. No semi-human creatures, between the ape and man, have been discovered, though Mr. Darwin asserts that such once existed. There are no remains found in the geological rocks of animals connecting man and the ape. There is also the difficulty that since the beginning of authentic history we have no instance of apes growing into men. We must, therefore, insist that if such a thing does not now occur, it never did occur. We do this in the name of true science, and the uniformity of nature. There is really no satisfactory evidence that man has been developed by evolution from lower forms of life. The chain is weakest where it ought to be strongest; when we come to join man to the ape a multitude of links are wanting altogether. A certain experimental philosopher once undertook to prove that a horse could live without food. But when he had reduced him to a straw in the day, and was just about to give him his first feed of air, the horse unfortunately died. Thus the whole theory broke down at the critical moment, just when he was about to hook the horse on to his first comfortable bait of air he died. So the Darwinian theory of man's descent from the ape breaks down at the critical point; and it is probable, that, like Bathybius, it will be entirely exploded, even by scientific men, in the course of ten or twenty years, disappearing like "the baseless fabric of a vision." It is also fatal to this theory that in the fossil remains of primeval man there are no tendencies towards the ape, and he evidently walked erect from his first appearance on the stage of life.—London Review.

UNTIMELY WORDS.

A frightened child is to be soothed, not scolded. Any rebuke which it deserves is not to be given while it is almost wild with terror. A despondent man needs, for the hour words of cheer rather than words of merited reproof. A clergyman who valued highly his loving wife's criticisms upon his words and manner in the pulpit, asked her not to tell him what she had noticed out of the way, when he was fresh from his exhausting service; but to say all the encouraging words she could to begin with, saving her list of blunders until he had recovered sufficient nervous force to meet bravely their disheartening array. If a husband would find fault with his wife or a wife with her husband, let it never, never be done before others. A rebuke under such circumstances is always untimely. To do it fittingly at any time requires wisdom, tact, and grace. If an author show you a new book of his, or an artist invites you to look at his latest painting, do not first point out the errors your quick eye observes there; but speak all the pleasant words you can of the work before you, and then, unless you have some very good reason for saying something else, unless there is some positive gain to be hoped for through your speaking—keep silent. "He that refraineth his lips"—at such a time—"is wise."

And if you find that you have had trouble, or have made it, through what you have spoken in hearty sincerity to others, do not console yourself with the thought that they were true words, frank words, kindly intentioned words—hence, prudent words. The speaking of untimely words may be a crying fault of yours—a fault to be recognized and battled, and by God's help corrected. The more you think it is not so, the greater is the probability that it is your besetting sin.

LAW AGAINST JESUITS.

The laws in force in France against the Jesuits, which the Radicals talk of invoking if the Senate persists in its rejection of the seventh article, are numerous and rigorous enough. First of all, we have the decisions of the Parliament of Paris of 1762, in which the Jesuits were accused of every crime under the sun, and ordered to evacuate their colleges and other establishments within a week. In 1764, the Parliament pronounced the definitive suppression of the order, the King declaring it to be his pleasure that the Jesuits should have no place in his kingdom or possessions. In 1767 the Parliament pronounced an order of expulsion against the Jesuits individually, and in 1777, Louis XVI. issued an edict more severe than any which had preceded it. In 1790 the Constituent Assembly suppressed all the monastic orders, and in 1792 all the religious corporations were suppressed. By the Concordat of the Year X, some modification was consented to; but no aggregation or association of men or women could be formed under the pretext of religion without the special authorization of the Government. To prove that these decrees and decisions are still in vigor we have only to look at the declarations of the tribunals of the present century. For example, in 1826 the Court of Douai decided a case against some Jesuits on the ground that they had been banished in 1764 and could not inherit, and this decision was confirmed by the highest court in the realm under the monarchy. In the same year all the courts of Paris assembled and declared, by 53 judges against 3, that the above-mentioned edicts were still in force. In 1828, a petition to the Chamber of Deputies invoked the edicts of Louis XV. and Louis XVI. against the Jesuits, and a report in favor of this was carried by a large majority. In 1845, M. Guizot wrote to M. Rossi, the French ambassador at Rome, complaining that the Jesuits, whose order had been specially abolished in France by edicts, were endeavoring to re-establish themselves, contrary to the laws of the State; in May of the same year, on an interpellation by M. Thiers, the decrees against the Jesuits were confirmed by an immense majority, and the Chamber, confident that the Government would see the laws of the State executed, passed to the order of the day.—Pall-Mall Gazette.

MISSIONS IN AFRICA.

The Evangelical Christendom gives some interesting facts in regard to affairs in Central Africa. The members of the Victoria Nyanza Mission report from Uganda that friendly relations with King M'tesa have been re-established, and the services at the palace had been resumed. The jealousy entertained by the King regarding Egyptian intrigue, and his suspicion of the missionaries being concerned in it, has been allayed. The chief hindrance now arises from the Jesuit missionaries. They have arrived in great numbers, and, notwithstanding a promise made by a missionary of the same church, have selected the headquarters of the Church of England Mission as the principal point of attack. They have attended the services at the court, and, in a very marked manner, have shown their disrespect by keeping their seats while all the court knelt. On being asked by M'tesa whether they did not worship our Lord, they replied, with much vehemence and gesture, that they had no connection with Protestant "lies," and they denounced the missionaries as "liars." King M'tesa exclaimed, in bewilderment, "What am I to believe? Who is right? First I was a heathen, then a Mohammedan, then a Christian; now some more white men come and tell me these English are liars. Perhaps, if I follow these new men, other white men will come and tell me these men are also liars." The English missionaries reply to all such accusations of falsehood by invariably appealing to the Bible. They inform M'tesa that he can exercise his own judgment by an appeal to those portions of the Bible which have been rendered into the Waganda language, and point to other passages which can be translated for him at the time. The Weekly Bulletin of the Missions Catholiques, published at Lyons, gives an account of Pere Lourdel's reception at Uganda. He acknowledges the hospitality shown to those of his brethren who were advancing from the east coast, when, ill and weary and travel-stained, they reached the Church Mission station at Mpwappa. "As regards food, it failed us entirely, and we should have died of hunger but for the generous and kind help of the Anglican Mission. Notwithstanding all that separates us, and the little gratification the arrival of Catholic missionaries must have caused them, they received us as real brothers." Mr. Pearson, one of the Church missionaries, writes: "You may rest assured that the work here will not be given up as long as there is a plank left to float on." Some of the Church missionaries have retired for a time, but three remain, and an appeal is made for more men. It is reported that the relations of the natives with the Blantyre Mission, under the charge of the Church of Scotland, have become unfriendly, the station, it is said, having been attacked, with the loss of six lives. The Zanzibar mail, which arrived on February 5th, brought letters from Uyui to December 5th, from Mpwappa to December 24th, and from Mombasa to January 1st. Mr. Copplestone was at Uyui, well, and on good terms with the natives. Said bin Salim was dead. Mr. Stokes had come down to the coast. The four brethren at Mpwappa were well, and Dr. Baxter and Mr. Last wrote encouragingly of the work there. Mr. Cole was busy cultivating the land, and Mr. Price teaching the Wagogo children.—Christian Union.

CONTENDING AGAINST GOD IN PRAYER

It was not a man that wrestled with Jacob, and when Jacob was overcome, and ceased to contend against God, then he prayed and prevailed. When God has conquered us, our wilfulness, our low and carnal and worldly spirit, sometimes by breaking our bones, then we have reached the point of power in prayer. Much of the so-called wrestling in prayer is, in reality, a contending against God, and not prayer at all. So Dr. Howard Crosby explained the subject recently in his Yale lecture, and Murphy, on Genesis, has the same idea. Few passages have been so generally misrepresented as Jacob and his blessing. It is only in complete submission to God that faith is possible, and that we know what we should pray for as we ought.—New Orleans Advocate.

LONDON, March 31.—The Religious Association of France will probably contest in the courts the legality of the decrees of the government against unauthorized religious societies, on the ground that the laws they are based on are obsolete. The Union, Count de Chambord's organ, the Monde, the organ of the Papal Nuncio, and the Univers, Ultramontane, are greatly exasperated, and declare that the Catholics will resist the enforcement of the decrees.

The Pays, M. Paul Cassagnac's paper, says the decrees are only preliminary to a reestablishment of the guillotine for political adversaries, while the Ordre, and the Liberte also, Bonapartists, admit the legality of the decrees.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

Rev. Alex. Murray, of John Knox church, Stepney, and Rev. Wm. Ross, of Embleton, Northumberland, are dead.

Mr. Gladstone has, it is said, undertaken to write an article for one of the quarterlies on Dr. Chalmers and his influence on religious life and theology in Scotland.

Pastor Chiniquy, after a very successful tour through the Australian colonies, has left for New Zealand en route for America. Several conversions from Roman Catholicism are spoken of as the result of the pastor's visit. In all the colonies £4,790 had been contributed to his mission in America, of which sum £2,200 had been given by New South Wales.

The Dean of Arches, on Saturday, admitted the articles presented on behalf of Mr. Martin, in a new suit against the Rev. A. H. Mackonochie's of St. Alban's, Holborn. In these articles all the defendant's offences in respect to ritual are set forth; his disobediences to the monitions and orders of the Privy Council, of Sir R. Phillmore, the late Dean of Arches, and of Lord Penzance, the present Dean; and his refusal to admit the clergyman who was sent to take his place on his suspension. The object of this suit is to deprive Mr. Mackonochie of his living.—London Weekly Review, March 13th.

A correspondent writes:—"In appointing Canon Ryle to the Deanery of Salisbury Lord Beaconsfield has—not unconsciously I imagine—thrown a wet blanket on Ritualism in its most advanced form. The Bishop of Salisbury, it is well known, is one of the most prominent of Ritualistic prelates. He prefers the imposing splendor of the ceremonial of the Church of Rome to the simple grandeur of the Church of England service, and Salisbury Cathedral has consequently become notorious for innovations which have from time to time been produced. Canon Ryle, on the other hand, is a clergyman of a distinctly Evangelical type, a man who has a decided detestation of the High Church formula. How the two clergymen will be able to reconcile their strongly-conflicting opinions is a question which is being widely discussed, and which is occasioning great anxiety among both High and Low Churchmen."

A correspondent in Rome writes:—"The hero of the day is St. Thomas Aquinas, in commemoration of whose death, 606 years ago, the clerical journals appear in variegated borders, with Latin poems and epigraphs and specimens of the saint's Lenten preaching. On Saturday evening Cardinal Parocchi presided over a crowded meeting of ecclesiastics, Italian and foreign, of whom some chosen orators like Talamo, Cornoldi, and Galimberti discoursed in Italian, French, Spanish, and Latin, on the angelic doctor. Their prolutions were admirable in style and elocution, less so in knowledge and ratiocinative force, being echoes merely of Leo XIII.'s encyclical. Aristotle had spoken the last word on scientific method. Aquinas had ennobled and perfected Aristoteleism by religion, and the merits proceeding from both culminated in the reigning Pontiff. Such was the argument enforced with wearisome iteration by the orators who had only a sneer for Bacon and the whole system of inductive research. On Sabbath morning in the Dominician Church of Santa Maria Sopra Minerva, Cardinal Zigliara celebrated mass in the chapel dedicated to St. Thomas, who is represented in Lippi's painting to the right of the altar as triumphant over heresy. Don Saccheri then read a Latin sermon on Aquinas, whose great merit, it seems, was his demonstration that science is but the handmaid of religion, under whose auspices she becomes the parent of Columbuses, as of Dantes, Buonarrotis, and Raphaeles. At eleven the Sala Ducale of the Vatican was thronged with ecclesiastics of the nationalities in characteristic costumes, and at twelve the Pope entered, preceded by his Guard Nobile, who, with drawn swords, ranged themselves around the throne as amid deafening vivas and clapping of hands his Holiness took his seat. Conspicuous in the train of the carding strode Monsignor Howard, eminent among the eminentissimi of the Church Militant. Monsignor Tripepi then read a Latin speech, expressing the joy of the Catholic world at the resuscitation of the Angelic Doctor, after which Leo XIII. spoke in much better Latinity on the theme of his encyclical denouncing Positivism and inductive investigation, and deploring as their Nemesis the social and political evils that desolated alike the cottage and the palace—evils to which the Thomist philosophy supplied a true antidote. That philosophy he enjoined as the proper study of youth in all the lycees and universities of Catholic Christendom. His Holiness concluded amid tremendous cheering, having spoken for exactly twenty minutes, in a strong clear, rather nasal voice, and with visibly tremulous gesticulation. Indeed, he delivered the latter half of his speech sitting".—London Review.

FUNERALS.

Increased attention has been turned of late to the subject of funerals. The scope of discussion has been very wide, and the results thus far have been rather meagre, it must be confessed. Our readers we trust will accompany us in a ramble over the ground, sufficiently long to introduce recent action here and there and sufficiently brief to dismiss them without weariness. The question of funeral attire first obtrudes upon our notice, but while it is the perhaps the most important of all, it is precisely that which is so entrenched in the citadel of fashion that every outpost must be carried before it can be attacked with any prospect of success. We are now only on the skirmish line.

An evil greater far than it appears is the consumption of the time and convenience of ministers; especially is this evil great where a minister in the country is called to officiate within the bounds of a vacant church, perhaps many miles from his home. Every congregation has a proper claim upon its pastor for funeral ministrations, but no vacant congregation can claim—we use the word advisedly—no vacant congregation can claim the services of the pastor of any other congregation, and in the nature of the case no compensation can be even tendered for the expense of time and convenience incurred in a case such as supposed. One way of obviating the difficulty here would be for ruling elders of any church to act. In the absence or lack of a pastor, and when a Presbyterian minister could not be really called in, there ought to be in every congregation ruling elders capable of conducting funeral exercises with decorum. We suppose the propriety of their doing so will not be questioned, but with many the lack of a burial ritual would be fatal. This difficulty Orange Presbytery proposes to overcome by an overture to the General Assembly to furnish, and have bound with our collection of Psalms and Hymns, a suitable burial service for the optional use of laymen.

The St. Louis Evangelical Alliance, an Association of ministers in that city, have unanimously adopted resolutions as to funeral services. They express themselves decidedly and pointedly as to the desirableness of reducing the expense attending funerals. This crying evil, so grievously burdensome to persons of light means needs to have all the moral influence possible brought to its correction. So too Sunday funerals, the Association ask, should be avoided except where unavoidable, and it is advised "that the religious services be held at some convenient time and place, and the interment take place at such subsequent time as may best suit the convenience of the family and that only members of the family, and "specially invited friends be expected to be present at latter, and that the officiating minister be not expected to attend the interment unless in peculiar cases making it obligatory, or when it is perfectly consistent with his other pastoral duties." These things indicate that public attention is being turned to these evils and we may reasonably expect before long to see them materially abated.

QUEER LEGISLATION.

Under this caption the Raleigh Christian Advocate states that the late extra session of the N. C. Legislature reduced the tax on the sale of liquors. When we called attention, a few weeks since, in words as pointed and as earnest as we could command, to the fact that an effort to do this thing would be made, friends assured us that any fears of the passage of the bill were groundless; that in view of the consequences it was simply impossible that the thing could be done. But it has been done, and done so quietly that not one in every thousand of North Carolinians is to-day aware of it. While other States are enacting prohibitory laws or using other means to suppress or control the sale of ardent spirits, North Carolina rolls back the wheels of progress, and passes a measure to foster and protect, and to increase, the sale of liquors.

We are told that the reason assigned for their votes—at least by some—was that it would increase the revenue. But where the tax on an article is largely reduced, an increase of revenue can only result from very great augmentation in the consumption and attending sale of the article; and increased consumption of liquor means more wretched homes, more starving families, more drunkard's graves, more occupants of prison cells—it means more ignorance, want, vice, crime. North Carolinians! are you ready for this?

It is done and words of regret and repining are useless. It can be undone, not immediately, indeed not at all, unless the lovers of temperance, the friends of law and order and sobriety, awake to the fact that there is work to do outside of independent and isolated temperance organizations. Work is to be done in organizing and unifying the temperance element. Liquor dealers work shoulder to shoulder, hand to hand; hence their immense political influence. Work is to be done by the press, if we are true to ourselves and to the interest of virtue and morality.

We expressed the opinion that "with the people wide awake, and their common sense at play the evil could not be perpetrated." We now aver that with the people wide awake and their common sense at play this action can be reversed, and the foul blot removed from our escutcheon.

OUR VACATION.

In response to kind invitations to attend the late session of Orange Presbytery, we demitted for the nonce our editorial functions, turned our back upon the evil communications and the good which surrounded us, and went forth free to enjoy a most delightful and invigorating season of rest.

At Goldsboro, Newbern, and Washington, in restful enjoyment at homes provided for delegates and visitors we all were made to feel most welcome to the boundless hospitality dispensed.

Beyond the meeting of old friends and the forming of new associations of friendship, nothing occurred beyond the usual incidents of travel until we found ourselves upon the fine steamer Newbern, fast leaving the pleasant little city of that name. The journey from Newbern to Washington and from the latter place to the former on return, possessed all the accessories of pleasure—novelty in the scenery, kindliest courtesy on the part of the officers of the steamer, and above all hours of uninterrupted social intercourse with brethren of ourselves, and friends most sincere and helpful of the PRESBYTERIAN. Casting off from Newbern we rapidly descended the ever-widening waters of Neuse until we entered Pamlico sound to track

"Old Ocean's grey and melancholy waste."

Our fellow-travelers were mostly delegates to Presbytery, but ladies were present to grace the occasion, and others accompanied intent on business or pleasure. Had there been necessity we were amply prepared to Currie favor with the authorities, and in any event we had the Law with us. The floral element was represented by the Primrose, and the mechanic arts by Smiths. Never we suppose had our steamer freighted such an embodiment of calvinistic theology as now, but as it was all positive and evenly distributed, like to electricity, there was no special manifestation of its presence.

To most of us the scenes were new and to such there was a sad lack of appreciation of the natural history and gustatory properties of the festive bivalve. One brother whom, not to be too precise, we shall call Smith, had been reading Darwin on primordical existences and made one—and but one—inward application of his protoplasm. The sensation, he agreed with Thackeray, was very like to swallowing a "cold baby." The tumblings of the sea wrought a wondrous change, it was noticed in the deportment of the brethren as was evidenced by the listless eye, the paling cheek and the forced attempt to smile—but we press a tender point. In coming the Pamlico river and ascending the Tar the spirits of all revived and the time was spent joyously in good-tempered badinage and merry jest, until we reached our friends at Washington; and here for days there was a round, as interludes to more serious business, of visiting among open houses, and partaking of fish, flesh and fowl—pie pudding and pig—the tertiary of Mr. Smith.

One is struck on a first view of Washington with the antiquated appearance of the buildings and the natural surroundings, but closer inspection, while it discloses the terrible devastation of the late war, reveals in the nicely-erected and comfortable dwellings much evidence of thrift. Like as with all seaports the amount of business transacted is not apparent to a casual observer, but the exports and imports are considerable.

There are three commodious and comfortable churches, Episcopal, Methodist and Presbyterian. The last, in which the session of Presbytery was held, is specially tasty in its arrangements and appointments for comfort and convenience.

On our return we arrived in Newbern in time to take a short stroll through the thrifty and prosperous city, and visited the factory of Capt. S. H. Gray for the manufacture of grocers' plates. Through the courtesy of master Gray, a very intelligent lad, son of the proprietor, we witnessed and had explained the entire process of cutting the wood from the original stock, and the dividing, pressing and shaping into desired form for practical use. White woods principally are used such as sweet gum, and for three-ply plates the holly. This establishment employs a large number of hands and turns out at present from 40,000 to 60,000 plates per diem. Time did not permit of visiting the cotton factory of Messrs. Geo. Allen and others, which we are pleased to learn is prospering.

Our sojourn in Washington was with our brother of the North State Press, and at home we were while there. With brother Bonitz of the Goldsboro Messenger we spent a few pleasant moments while en route home. All in all we note the trip to Orange as a most delightful episode in editoral life.

NOTES ON ORANGE.

Our impressions of the Presbytery of Orange may be stated briefly, as the promptness of the Stated Clerk has rendered our notes of the business superfluous.

A noticeable feature in Orange Presbytery is the thoroughness with which every measure that may be called is discussed, and the freedom with which all members, clerical and lay, participate in the debates. This spirit of inquiry and investigation is the true spirit of Presbyterianism, and free from carping and quibbling, as in this Presbytery, is to be commended. The Moderator presided with dignity and impartial courtesy, clearly stated the propositions that arose, and forwarded business with all haste compatible with full and free discussion.

The enrolling of Ebenezer colored church at Newbern, under the Assembly's plan, and inviting the minister supplying the church (who was present) to a seat as a visiting member was decided progress and in the right direction.

We were greatly interested in the roll call to ascertain if efforts had been made to secure colored candidates for the ministry, and whether opportunities had been afforded the churches to contribute to Tuskaloosa Institute. The result was gratifying in that it showed that the importance of obtaining candidates is recognized and that nearly all of the churches had taken collections for the Institute or would shortly do so.

The appeal of Rev. John W. Davis, known to our readers as the Soochow appeal, and the effort to build a house of worship at Wilson engaged hearty sympathy and generous aid. Our readers will be kept advised on these subjects.

The subject which raised the liveliest enthusiasm for awhile was the proposed division of Presbytery into East and West Orange. Without acrimony, the debate was earnest and forceful while it lasted. It was adjudged inexpedient to divide, and the eastern portion of the Presbytery, in which lies the largest extent of missionary territory, being opposed to division, the judgment seems wise.

A custom of Orange Presbytery requires at each regular session, the appointment of some member to deliver a sermon before the ensuing regular session on some special topic. Rev. Dr. Smith of Greensboro accordingly preached a sermon on Sabbath Observance. The special topic was expressed by the text, "The Sabbath was made for man," and Rev. F. D. Moore and others who do not know what that means, would have been duly edified and instructed could they have heard it.

Conservatism, but not to an extreme that is unprogressive seems to be the spirit of Orange Presbytery, and the proper relation of the churches and the Presbytery seems to be fully appreciated and observed. Authority and loyalty must be correlatively exercised to insure the greatest measure of success, and this Presbytery exercises authority with that tender regard to the views and circumstances of its churches which fosters loyalty.

EUROPEAN ARMAMENTS.

The subject of war or peace in Europe, bears so interesting a relation to the prosperity of evangelical religion, that we venture to give our readers the following:

The Vienna correspondent of the Standard says: "A large-sized map has just been published at Stuttgart. There is every reason to believe that this has been drawn up under the supervision of the German military authorities. Indeed, the author takes care to mention on the cover that his information is derived from the newest and best sources. The map comprises the greater portion of the Russian Empire, extending as far as the Black and Caspian Seas. The number of each regiment and the locality where it is quartered are given with great precision, and the whole organization and strength of each department of the army is published at the foot of the map itself. The object in view is to show that large masses of troops, and especially of cavalry, are grouped along the Prussian frontier. Either the particulars published in your columns some time ago were a long way behind the truth, or the number of Russian troops on the Russian frontier has been very materially increased since then. In the military district of Warsaw alone there are the Fifth, Sixth and Fourteenth army corps, making together 14 regiments of infantry of the line, 7 brigades of foot artillery, 12 regiments of cavalry, including dragoons, hussars, Uhlans, Don Cossacks, and 6 batteries of mounted artillery. Besides these troops, there is in the same district a detachment of Guards, consisting of one regiment of infantry, 1 brigade of foot artillery, 1 regiment of cavalry, and 1 battery of mounted artillery. There are also 4 regiments of Don Cossacks. In the military district of Wilna there are the Second Third, and Fourth army corps, comprising 14 regiments of infantry of the line, 7 brigades of foot artillery, 12 regiments of cavalry, and 6 batteries of mounted artillery. In addition to these, there are at Warsaw 2 brigades of rifles, 2 of sappers, and 17 batteries of siege artillery. At Wilna there are 1 brigade of rifles, 1 of sappers and 6 batteries of siege artillery. The other military districts are at St. Petersburg, Finland, Kieff, Odessa, Kharkoff, Moscow, Kasan the Caucasus, Turkestan, Orenburg, West Siberia, and East Siberia. A glance at Capt. Von Trotsch's map shows that the cavalry is echeloned closed upon the Russo-Prussian boundary line, and is also concentrated in large numbers along the Russo-Austrian frontier.—Strange to say, the same officer is about to publish, or has just done so, a similar map showing the position of French troops along the Franco-German frontier, but it is not yet to be had in Vienna. I hear that it tends to a similar conclusion—that there are masses of soldiers on the German frontier totally unwarranted by circumstances, and justifying the apprehensions lately manifested at Berlin. If it be true that military precautions of that nature have been taken by the French Government, there is really no ground for surprise, as it is a notorious fact that for a long time past Germany has been making extensive military preparations on this side of the French frontier. Whereas public opinion in this country is well-nigh convinced that Russia is capable of picking a quarrel with Germany, nobody is inclined to credit that France is meditating war, and the mischievous insinuations thrown out the other day by the leading Berlin newspaper found no echo whatever in the Vienna press."

The Dix-Neuvieme Siecle speaks out very candidly about the alleged French armaments: "It cannot be said that we are arming, but it is a fact that we are not disarming, and it would be folly on our part to do so. Our neighbors across the Rhine must be logical enough to feel no surprise at our applying at home the minimum of the system which they recommend to their Austrian allies. We do not deny that this frenzy of armaments is not salutary for Europe, that the game ruins the States which indulge in it. But how can we help it, poor defeated people that we are, in the secondary position in which the treaty of Frankfort has placed us? If a general disarmament were proposed, which would please us greatly, we should still be compelled to tell Germany, 'Apres vous; do you begin.' But that is not the question, and we are doomed to support the purity of our conscience by substantial fortifications. In fact, there is but one power in Europe now in a position to give the signal of disarmament—that is Germany—but far from doing so she piles up armament upon armament, without shrinking from the harshest additions to her taxes, laying an extra duty even on beer, to the chagrin of so many worthy Germans, whose tears of sorrow trickle into their favorite beverage. How much wiser would it be to take the advice of Deputy Bebel. They call him a Utopian at Varzin, yet Deputy Bebel is right, and M. De Bismarck wrong." Deputy Bebel advocates the restoration to France of Alsace-Lorraine. The Republique Francaise, the Temps, and other papers treat the article of the North German Gazette as signifying nothing, but a mere device to secure the passing of the bill which is to make so tremendous an addition to the German army.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

The practice of whispering in church before divine service, or during any intermission, arises from thoughtlessness, but is an evil that can hardly be too strongly condemned. The Presbyterian notes the following:

The Rev. Dr. William Crawford of Green Bay, Wis., preached an excellent sermon on whispering in church, reproving that vice in fit terms. It has been printed, and ought to be very useful.

The labors of Rev. Dr. J. W. Pratt, of our Church, in preaching the Gospel to the masses at Cincinnati, Ohio, are crowned with abundant success. The Cincinnati Gazette says:

"The congregation that attended the religious exercises at Music Hall yesterday was larger by several hundred than any that has yet assembled, and indeed deserves to be entered upon the annals as one of the memorable gatherings of the city. Four thousand circulars containing the hymns and order of exercises were distributed long before the people ceased to come in, and the seating capacity of the vast auditorium was taxed to its utmost; 200, and perhaps more, sat upon the stage, and as many more stood in the aisles. There can be no doubt that fully 5,000 were in the hall at one time, and counting those who left before the conclusion and others who came and went again after a brief stay, this great number was exceeded. Quite a number of our Southern guests were among the listeners, some acquaintances of Dr. Pratt, and they will undoubtedly carry away with them profound impressions concerning this one of Cincinnati's great features. The regularity with which these immense congregations have gathered Sunday after Sunday, the air of reverence which pervades every part of the service, and the sincerity and heartiness with which they participate in the singing of the hymns, render them events of more than local or ordinary interest. It is hardly likely that the originators of the undertaking anticipated a success anything like this magnitude: at least not for a long time to come. Yet in our city of 300,000 inhabitants we now see a congregation gathered every week which outnumbers any congregation in the United States, with the exception, probably, of the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City; and Dr. Pratt is heard every Sunday by nearly if not quite as many people as Mr. Spurgeon in London. And this without a single sensational appeal or any change from the simple services common to all unritualistic Protestant Church bodies.

Dr. Pratt adheres to his first principle of plain Gospel preaching. Yesterday he discussed the nature of religious faith.

The Chinese question seems likely to be solved in a way more creditable to a sense of justice and right than at one time seemed possible. The late elections in San Francisco have shown that when good men and true can be aroused from the apathy which seems in general so strangely to possess them, the turbulent and riotous masses can be overcome and mastered. The result is in the highest degree satisfactory. Law and order have triumphed, and the sand-lot orators have lost, let us hope forever lost, their occupation. The case had indeed become desperate, and revolting against the injustice there was reason to fear that China might retaliate by driving Americans from her borders. In such event all commercial intercourse would cease and all missionary enterprises would necessarily be abandoned. A commission from this country to China will be sent out to adjust this and all questions between the countries. The prospect now is that the Chinese Question will be removed from American politics. There seems to be a growing disposition to draw Chinese laborers away from the Pacific coast to the interior and Atlantic States. The Chamber of Commerce and Cotton Exchange of New Orleans are instituting measures to secure Chinese for the rice and cotton fields of Louisiana. However aside from the purpose of those moving in this matter, the intermingling of these heathen with Christian communities will bring them gradually, indeed, but surely under Gospel influences. In New York city a Chinese mission was begun a year ago at the Five Points. Rooms are open during the evenings of the week for instruction, on Sabbath afternoons Bible instruction is furnished, and in the evening preaching in the Chinese language. Rev. Mr. Jackson and Mrs. Jackson, formerly missionaries in Canton, speaking the Chinese language finently, and said to be otherwise thoroughly qualified for their work, are in charge.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

We learn from the Iredell Gazette that Rev. P. T. Penick has been on a visit to Virginia to conduct a meeting at a church of which he was for twelve years the pastor.

EVANGELIST ELECTED.

Rev. S. C. Alexander was elected to labor as evangelist in the western portion of Mecklenburg Presbytery and General R. D. Johnston and J. L. Brown of Charlotte were appointed to solicit funds to aid him in moving to his field of labor. This committee reported at the late meeting of Presbytery at Dallas, and were continued with instruction to ascertain if sufficient means can be raised to support him for a few years in giving all his time to the work. R. Z. JOHNSTON, S. C.

Rev. E. McNair, D. D., preached the sacramental sermon at Lumber Bridge yesterday to a large crowd. Two ladies joined the church. —Robesonian 31st.

The Moore Index of Carthage, N. C., says: "We learn that the family of the Rev. Daniel McGilvary, missionary among the Laos in Siam, are now in San Francisco on their way home. While all the friends of the family will be delighted to see them we regret the cause which makes it necessary for them to come at this time, it being the protracted ill health of Mrs. McGilvary. They are stopping in San Francisco awaiting milder weather to come over the mountains. Mr. McGilvary will perhaps join his family here in the course of a year."

A North Carolinian residing beyond the State, who will hardly pardon us for even so remote an approach to identifying him, sent us twenty dollars on the Soochow Appeal, and a friend writing on other business sends the following: "Please find enclosed John's dollar for our missionary, Mr. Davis. I told him of his need, so he gave his Christmas present to help buy a place to seat the heathen women and children to hear about Jesus. Cannot one thousand little boys be found who 'think it best to send my dollar,' and let the grown people furnish the ten thousand?"

These amounts have been forwarded to Rev. Dr. McIlwaine for application as desired by the donors.

HOPEWELL CHURCH IN MECKLENBURG.

Rev. W. E. McIlwaine writes under date of the 30th ult.: "As our late communion season at Hopewell, in which the pastor was assisted by Revs. Jas. L Williams, S. H. Chester and Wm. M. McGilvary, eight persons were received on profession of faith in Christ. Among this number, the greater part of which were lambs of the flock, is a young husband in whose soul's interest the pastor has been much concerned for several years."

Rev. J. G. Fackler of Liberty has received and accepted a call to the church at McKinney, Texas. We regret this. Missouri, quite as much as Texas, has need of such men.—St. Louis Presbyterian.

ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

ABSTRACT OF PROCEEDINGS OF 220TH SESSION, HELD AT WASHINGTON, MARCH 24–28, 1880.

The Presbytery was opened with a sermon from 17th Psalm, 15th vs., by Rev. A. Currie, in the absence of the moderator, Rev. C. H. Wiley. There were present 18 Ministers and 9 Ruling Elders.

Eleven ministers were absent, and 46 churches were not represented.

CALLS AND DISMISSIONS.

Rev. D. C. Rankin was dismissed to the Presbytery of Tuskaloosa, and Rev. L. H. Baldwin was received from the Presbytery of Newark, New Jersey.

Calls for the pastoral services of Rev. L. H. Baldwin from the churches of Tarboro' and Rocky Mount were placed in his hands and accepted, and arrangements were made for his installation, at Tarboro', on the 29th inst., by the Rev. H. T. Darnall.

Dr. M. T. Savage, of Scotland Neck, Halifax county, presented to the Presbytery a deed for two acres of land, with a church building erected at his own expense. The gift was accepted and the Stated Clerk directed to convey the hearty thanks of the Presbytery to Dr. Savage.

Rev. J. W. Primrose was directed to visit Scotland Neck with a view to organize a church there if the way be clear, and Mr. Baldwin was directed to preach there one-fourth of his time at a salary of $120 per annum.

A request from Nutbush Church to employ the services of Rev. D. E. Jordan, as stated supply for one-half of his time, at a salary of $280, was laid before the Presbytery. Presbytery, determined, in view of this request, to hold an adjourned meeting at Henderson, on Wednesday before the 1st Sabbath in May, (28th of April,) to consider all questions involved in said request.

The pastoral relation between Rev. J. H. Fitzgerald and the church at Durham was by mutual consent dissolved.

HOME MISSIONS.

The following resolutions were adopted:

1st. That the agent of Sustentation be directed to examine carefully every appeal for aid, according to the cautions laid down by the General Assembly, and to give largest assistance to the most promising field in his apportionments.

2d. That the Presbytery would urge upon the churches now receiving aid, the great importance of vigorous effort to become self-sustaining, and of coming up at the earliest possible day to the help of the Presbytery in carrying the gospel into new fields.

3d. That the agent of Sustentation be directed to make an arrangement, if possible, with Rev. T. U. Faucette to supply Grier's church one Sabbath in the month, from May until the next meeting of Presbytery, and in case he fails to make this or other satisfactory arrangements, that the following ministers be directed to preach one Sabbath each for the same period of time, viz: H. T. Darnall, T. U. Fancette, C. N. Morrow, A. Currie and B. W. Mebane.

4th. That Ebenezer (colored) church, of Newbern, be recommended to Assembly's Committee of Sustentation, and the sum of $100 by asked for in order to complete the church building of that congregation.

The stated clerk was ordered to enrol the name of this church and report it to the General Assembly, as organized under the plan recommended by that body.

Rev. A. A. Scott, (colored) of the Yadkin Presbytery, obtained leave to supply this church, and being present, was invited to sit as a visiting brother.

Rev. W. B. Donb of the M. E. Church, South, was invited to sit as a visiting brother.

Bishop Beebe, of the M. E. Church, South, (colored) being present, was invited to sit as a visiting brother.

The usual reports to the General Assembly on Systematic Benevolence and Sabbath Schools, were adopted and ordered to be forwarded.

The following Narrative on the State of Religion was adopted, viz:

The Presbytery respectfully reports to the General Assembly, that preaching has been regularly maintained in most of its churches during the past year. Many of them, however, have preaching only once a month. The attendance upon public worship, has for the most part, been good. There have been no extensive revivals of religion in any of our churches—in fact there have been additions, by profession of faith, to only sixteen of them, and to only one of them has there added a member greater than nine.

Many of our churches maintain regular prayer meetings, and some are well attended, but the attendance on others is small, and not a few of our churches, especially in the country, have no prayer meetings at all. Some of our churches have flourishing Sunday Schools, but we fear that many others fail to feel their importance.

A few of our ministers preach to the colored people, occasionally, and there are a few colored Sunday Schools, but most of our churches are doing nothing in this direction. We have a colored church at Newbern, which though yet weak and needing help, is we hope, becoming better established.

Our churches contribute to all the benevolent objects—a few of them quite liberally—but we fear that many of our people do not realize the obligation resting upon them to consecrate their substance to the Master's cause. We need to pray with Habbakuk "Lord revive thy work."

The following resolutions reported by the Committee on minutes of the Synod was adopted:

1st. That Presbytery emphasize the recommendation of Synod, as to seeking colored candidates for the ministry, and the support of the Tuskaloosa Institute, for the training of a colored ministry.

2d. That Presbytery reiterate the recommendation of Synod to all our churches and Sabbath Schools to give the preference to the publications of our Publication Committee.

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

Presbytery passed a resolution on this subject, urging its importance, and especially commending the appeal of Rev. J. W. Davis, in regard to the building of a chapel in Soochow, China. Of the $1000 asked for Presbytery resolved to raise $200 by collection during the session of the Presbytery and by an early presentation of the cause by the ministers to their charges at home.

Rev. J. H. Smith D. D., and Mr. Walter Bullock, were appointed to bring in a minute on the death of Rev. E. Hines.

This committee afterwards obtained leave to report to the next meeting of the Presbytery.

Revs. C. H. Wiley and T. U. Faucette were elected commissioners to the General Assembly, together with ruling elders Geo. Allen and W. S. Primrose. Revs. L. C. Vass and D. J. Craig were appointed alternates in the order of names, and ruling elders Saml. Smith and Dr. L. B. Spencer.

The Presbytery overtured the General Assembly to provide and have bound with our collection of Psalms and Hymns, a suitable burial service for the optional use of laymen.

Rev. D. E. Jordan, with ruling elders N. V. Watkins and Saml. Watkins, were appointed a Standing Executive Committee of Education.

Rev. Jas. C. Alexander was re appointed agent of Sustentation, and Messrs. Primrose and Law were retained as Evangelists for another year for one-fourth of their time. Certain points in Chatham and Randolph counties, the Mt. Airy field, the Wilson Church enterprise, and the grouping of various Churches in Caswell, Alamance and Orange counties, were specially recommended to the attention of the Evangelists and the agent of Sustentation.

The committee on the division of Presbytery reported that in their judgment it was inexpedient to divide the Presbytery at this time. Carried.

Reidsville was chosen as the place of the next stated meeting, and the time, Wednesday the 1st of September next, at 8 P. M.

Dr. Smith, delivered, by appointment, a discourse on the subject of the Sabbath, and

Rev. P. H. Dalton was chosen to preach a sermon at the next meeting on Home Missions.

The usual vote of thanks was adopted, when Presbytery adjourned to meet in Henderson on the 28th of April.

Stated Clerk.

MEETING OF COMMISSIONERS.

The Presbytery of Wilmington, at its late meeting, ordered the undersigned commissioners to ascertain and remove, if possible, the cause of prevailing evils in the Black River church.

The elders, deacons and congregation of said church are hereby directed to meet the commissioners on Wednesday before the fourth Sabbath in April, at 2 o'clock, at the usual place of worship. The commissioners will expect a full and unreserved statement of the religious and financial condition of the congregation. There will be services in the church daily during the session of the commission.

THE RELIGIOUS INTEREST IN CHARLOTTE, VA.

For a number of weeks past, a deep religious interest has prevailed in this community, the results of which, it is hoped, will prove both permanent and salutary. Monday, the 9th of February, Rev. Mr. Drew commenced a series of meetings at the Presbyterian church in this village, in connection with the pastor, Rev. R. C. Reed, and continued his labors nightly for some two weeks. The sermons of Mr. Drew were of a high order, striking and instructive, and tended to awaken a profound religious feeling throughout the community. The themes discussed were of a practical and experimental character and the church was thronged with a deeply interested audience, many coming from distant parts of the county. A portion of the time, the meetings were held in the morning as well as at night, the stores being closed, business being suspended.

Owing, as we believe, to other engagements, Mr. Drew was obliged to suspend his labors toward the close of the second week, and the 21st of February, at the solicitation of the pastor, Rev. C. M. Howard, an evangelist, originally, we believe, from Florida, continued the work. Mr. Howard had previously preached in Campbell and in various parts of this country with marked success. From that time until the present he has continued to preach almost every night, except when prevented by unpropitious weather. Some of his methods are peculiar to himself, but such we believe, as have won the confidence of nearly all who have heard him.

Mr. Howard is of slight physique, and in delicate health; he usually speaks in a subdued tone; but his manner is that of a man thoroughly impressed with the importance of the business in which he is engaged. He is quiet but earnest. His method of address is eminently simple and unpretentious; his aim is to preach Christ and not himself, to do good rather than to create excitement or to win applause, relying rather upon the power of Scriptural truth and the influence of the Divine Spirit, than upon any adventitious means or exciting appliances. He seems rather to plead than to sermonize, his illustrations are apt and abundant, his appeals are searching, forcible, at times thrilling; the impression produced has been deep rather than demonstrative, while it has been widespread and general. Owing to the state of his health, Mr. Howard is obliged to rest during the day, but prayer meetings have been held at the church every morning or evening, which have been well attended.

Of the results we are not able to speak definitely now. Probably some fifty or sixty have been impressed or have professed a change. The work has seemed to be largely among the young people. Members of the church, and professing christians generally, have been warmed as with a new life. It is believed that the cause of religion and morality in this vicinity has been materially advanced by the efforts which have been made, and that the coming of Mr. Howard among us will prove a lasting blessing to the church, its pastor, and to the community at large. The efforts of Mr. Howard are entirely unsectarian, and the meetings have been attended and participated in by members of all religious denominations.

The desire has been expressed for the continuance of the meetings during the sitting of the Circuit Court. We are not at present advised as to the determination. Mr. Howard preached on Sunday and Monday nights of this week, and Mr. Drew Monday morning. That the interest has been so long sustained bespeaks it character.—Charlotte Gazette.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Rev. D. L. Wilson has been called to the church in Pulaski, Tenn.

Rev. A. H. Price, of the Presbytery of Montgomery, has received a unanimous call to Broadway church in Lexington Presbytery. Mr. Price has been conducting an interesting meeting at Broadway, and has been assisted by Rev. Dr. J. R. Bowman and Rev. R. C. Walker.

It is in contemplation to build a Presbyterian church at Manchester, Va.

Last Sabbath Dr. Douglass Morton and Shackleford Miller, Esq., were ordained as deacons of First Presbyterian church, Louisville, Ky.—Christian Observer.

Rev. A. D. McClure of Oxford, Miss., will accept the call from the church at Bardstown, Ky.

Twenty-nine additions to the church at Cynthiana, Ky. Interest increased till the close.

Rev. Francis Mitchell imparts to the St. Louis Presbyterian good news of the New Bloomfield (Md.) church. He was assisted for two weeks by Rev. W. H. Marquess of Fulton. Mr. Mitchell says: "We have been greatly blessed. I hardly know how to tell you the depth to which we had fallen as a church—cold, uninterested in spiritual things and many scarcely distinguishable from the world. It was terrible. Now I hope the day of darkness has passed away. I have never known some of the members so much alive to their obligations as Christians as at present. So far seven have united with the Presbyterian Church, but the greatest blessing fell upon church members." The hearts of the people seem to have turned with an increase of affectionate regard to their pastor, who, on the morning after the close of the meeting found near his plate at the breakfast table an envelope containing $25 with the request that he use it for his personal wants.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbyterian Banner says that Dr. C. C. Beatty has "founded two new scholarships in the Western Theological Seminary, thus providing for the continuous education of two ministers of the Gospel throughout all future generations. In addition to his other magnificent gifts to this Seminary Dr. Beatty has now founded four scholarships."

The Rev. C. De Heer and wife, Mrs. Reutlinger, Miss Dewsnap and Mr. Marling, a graduate of Princeton, will sail for our missions in West Africa, April 8th, in the steamer City of Montreal, from pier No. 37 North river, New York, at 3 p. m. Mr. Marling goes out for the first time. The others are veteran missionaries, who have done a good work in the "dark continent."—Presbyterian.

BAPTIST.

Rev. Dr. H. H. Harris, a professor in Richmond College, will succeed Dr. Jeter as one of the editors of the Religious Herald.

Ex-Gov. Brown of Georgia has given to the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., $50,000. The funds are already in the hands of Dr. James P. Boyce, treasurer of the Seminary.

The Northern Baptist Education Society shows by its annual report that there is a lamentable decrease of interest on the part of the churches in the educational work. During the past year sixty-four students were assisted in their work of preparation for the Christian ministry, and less than $3,000 was contributed by the churches, only about one-quarter making any contributions whatever. —Christian at Work.

CONGREGATIONAL.

The principal Congregational church in Canada, Zion church in Montreal, has to be sold to meet its liabilities. Its embarrassment is caused by liberal giving to build other churches, and increased expenditures on the pastorate.

REFORMED (DUTCH).

The numerous friends of the Rev. Dr. Ormiston will be glad to hear that he has gained sufficiently in health and strength to justify him in resuming his pulpit labors in the Reformed church on Twenty-ninth street and Fifth avenue, on the first Sunday in April.—Christian at Work.

METHODIST.

Wesleyan University, at Middletown, Conn., has been enjoying an old-fashioned revival since the day of prayer for colleges. Prof. —— says it is the most thorough that has occurred during his eighteen years connection with the college. There has been no excitement, it being, as a correspondent says, "a revival that was not gotten up, but that came down."—Christain at Work.

The results at Wesleyan University are thus reported: In the Senior class all have identified themselves with the cause of Christ but three; in the class of '81 all but one; in the class of '82 all but four; in the class of '83 all but thirteen.

LUTHERAN.

The Lutheran congregation at Summit Hill, Carbon county, Pa., has purchased the Methodist church.

There are thirty-two Lutheran congregations in Philadelphia of whom all but three own church buildings.

GENERAL.

A bill is now before the Legislature of the State of New York, proposing to tax all church property in excess of the value of $10,000. Theological seminaries and benevolent institutions will come under the same rule, and the taxation to some will be simply ruinous.—Presbyterian.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

PRESBYTERIAL NOTICES.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet at Laurel Hill church, Richmond county, N. C., Wednesday, April 21, 1880, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The usual blanks will be mailed to all the churches in due time. Let these blanks be carefully filled and sent up to Presbytery at Laurel Hill.

The assessments for the "Presbyterial Fund" are considered due April 1st, and should be promptly paid. Churches which are credited to this fund will be duly notified by the Treasurer. J. P. MCPHERSON,
Stated Clerk.

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 7, 1880.

Ministers and elders who expect to come by railroad to the approaching meeting of Presbytery to be held at Laurel Hill church, will be met with conveyances at Laurinburg on Wednesday morning, the 21st inst. The train from Wilmington arrives about 1 o'clock a. m., and the train from Charlotte between 3 and 4 a. m. Members coming on either of these trains will be accommodated with lodging and breakfast at the hotel near the depot, kept by Mr. Rivenbark. Members expecting to come by rail but at later date than that above mentioned will please notify us at once of the time they expect to arrive.

A. N. FERGUSON,

Concord Presbytery stands adjourned to meet at Davidson College on Thursday, April 22, at 11 a. m. WM. W. PHARR, S. C.

All who expect to attend Presbytery are requested to notify Mr. H. P. Helper, Davidson College.

HOW TO GET A HUSBAND.—Take of modesty a large portion; unite it with urbanity and good humor; to which add good sense and plenty of love, with a virtuous heart and a pretty face. Better than a cosmetic to make the skin fair and clear, to bring bloom to the cheeks and light to the eyes, and remove Pimples, Boils, Eruptions, Sallow Complexion, thick, yellowish appearance of the skin and eyes, Bad Breath, irritability and low spirits Take Simmon's Liver Regulator in time.

"I was so greatly troubled with Boils on the neck and body that I was hardly able to move my head, and suffered great pain without long being able to cure them, until I was induced to try Simmon's Liver Regulator, which entirely cured me, and I have had no return of them since, now over a year.

"JAMES M. CLEMENT,
Agt. for So. S. S. Co. Phila.

From the Rev. Dr. Harvey, the well known Financial and Educational Secretary of the Howard University.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

H. H. Warner & Co:

GENTLEMEN: I take pleasure in stating that I have for two years past been acquainted with the remedy known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and with its remarkable curative efficiency in obstinate and so-called incurable cases of Bright's Disease in this city. In some of these cases, which seemed to be in the last stages, and which had been given up by practitioners of both schools, the speedy change wrought by this remedy seemed but little less than miraculous. I am convinced that for Bright's Disease in all its stages no remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with this. Respectfully yours, C. A. HARVEY, D. D.

TAKE AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to purify the blood and purge out the humors, pimples, boils and sores which are merely emblems of the rottenness within.

WILMINGTON MARKET

DURING WEEK

ENDING APRIL 6.

THE attention of all persons interested is called to the fact that strict personal attention is given to the collection of the necessary information, and the careful preparation of our MARKET REPORT, so as to give a correct general review of transactions and prices, for the week ending each Tuesday morning.

SPIRITS TURPENTINE — On Wednesday nothing done; Thursday sales at 40, 40½ and 42 cents; Friday steady at 42; Saturday very quiet with small sales toward close of the day at 40 cents; Monday 40 cents, closing dull.

ROSIN — Wednesday, Strained $1 15 and Good Strained $1 17½; Thursday and since $1 12½ and $1 15 respectively and very quiet.

CRUDE TURPENTINE—Steady throughout at $1 50 for Hard and $2 50 for Yellow Dip. Virgin bringing $3 00.

TAR—Receipts taken regularly at $1 40 per bbl.

COTTON—Very few transactions. Ruling price for middling 12¼ cents, closing weak.

CORN—Two cargoes received, 3,500 bushels, sold for 63 cents, which we quote as the ruling price in bulk. Demand fair.

TIMBER—Prices continue high and receipts are taken readily at from $5 00 to $14 50.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

One hundred and twenty-five acres of strawberries have been planted in Florida this season for the Northern markets. The yield ranges from 4,000 to 8,000 quarts per acre.

An overwelming majority of the people of Wales, including a large portion of the publicans themselves, favor the bill before Parliament for closing public houses on Sunday.

The cooking school conducted by Mrs. Campbell of New York was opened in this city on Wednesday with a good attendance of the most refined matrons and young ladies of Charlotte.—Southern Home.

In many counties in West Virginia steps are being taken to organize wool growers' and sheep breeders' associations, the object being to encourage the raising of improved breeds of sheep, and to extend the mutton, and above all to secure a better protection against the ravages of dogs.

The Rev. Dr. Joseph Parker, the Congregational clergyman of London, has announced himself as a candidate for a seat in Parliament

A lady has opened a jewelry establishment in Regent street, London, employing women for watchmakers, a business that seems well adapted to their skillful and dexterous fingers.

The funerals of members of Congress who died in the year 1879 cost the government $13,366 97. The funeral of the Hon. Gustave Schleicher of Texas cost $5,102 92, of which $313 50 were expended for gloves and silk scarfs, at $9 each, for the delegation.

The King of Siam has appointed Mr. Edwin Arnold "an officer of our most exalted Order of the White Elephant," for his Light of Asia and its tribute to Buddhism.

Two pickerel were jumping out of the water near Babylon, L. I., trying to catch swallows, and only one fish was seen to fall back into the water. On rowing out to the spot it was found that the smaller one had jumped into the larger one's mouth and killed it. Both together weighed 22 pounds.

ANNO DOMINI.—The first sovereign who adopted the phrase, 'In the year of our Lord,' was Charles III., Emperor of Germany, 879. It is now the accepted mode of designing the year in all Christ an coentries.

English authoritics state that out of every five loaves of bread eaten in England during 1880 three must come from the United States and Russia.

There are about a hundred thousand Chinamen in Cuba, three-fourths of whom are coolies and the remainder merchants and tradesmen, some of whom have amassed large fortunes.

Troy, N. Y., is called "The World's Washroom." About 30,000 000 collars and cuffs are annually manufactured there; 70,000,000 pieces are laundried there every year, they being sent there from all parts of the country.

The product of a single bean planted in rich, loamy soil in Southbridge, Mass., was 1,515 perfectly developed beans. It has been estimated that if each of these were planted and produced a like crop, the sum total would be 2,295,225, or 18 bushels; and if these were also planted and produced a similar yield there would be 5,268,058,800,625 beans, equal to 1,371,890 tons, or 42,871,572 bushels, or 92 full freights for the Great Eastern steamship.

Russian wolves shown great sagacity in the capture of wild horses. They roll and frisk about until the unsuspecting victim is completely put off his guard. One wolf then approaches the horse's head, and another his tail. Both wolves then spring at their victim at the same instant—one at the throat and the other at the flank—and they do not let go until the horse is disabled. The horse turns round and round without attempting a defence, and is soon on its side, and the victory is won. At a signal the pack close in, but the small fry wait until their superiors are gorged.

MARRIED.

☞No notice of a marriage or death will be inserted unless accompanied by a responsible name, which is wanted not for publication but as a guaranty of good faith.

In Fayetteville, N. C., at the residence of the minister, by the Rev. H. G. Hill, Dr. JOHN W. MCNAIR, of South Carolina, and Miss LUCY L. HILL, of Fayetteville, N. C. H. G. H.

At the residence of the bride's father in Rowan county, on the 18th of March, 1880, by the Rev. A. L. Crawford, Mr. RUFUS M. ROSEBROUGH and Miss MARY JANE HYDE.

In Rowan county, N. C., March 25th, 1880, at the residence of the bride's brother, by the Rev. A. L. Crawford, Mr. JOHN N. MORGAN and Miss ALICE ISABELLA KNOX.

DIED.

☞Obituary notices must be paid for in advance. The first ten lines are inserted free. The excess over ten lines is charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. Correspondents can ascertain what an obituary will cost by counting eight words to a line, and multiplying each line by ten cents.

In Fayetteville, N. C., on Friday, Feb. 20, 1880, HENRY MCDONALD, Esq., aged 48 years and 5 months.

Mr. McDonald had been a merchant in Fayetteville for about thirty years. He was much esteemed by all who knew him—a kind husband, a good neighbor, a useful citizen, a faithful friend. A large circle of relatives and friends mourn over their sad bereavement. A. M. C.

On March 16th, in Fayetteville, N. C., Mrs. LYDIA JANE CULBRETH, aged about 48 years. The deceased was a member of the Presbyterian Church for many years, and her piety was sincere and ardent. She possessed in a high degree "the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit," and bore the privations of a lingering illness, not only without murmurs, but with exemplary patience.

She has left a loving family and many friends to mourn her loss, but has doubtless "departed to be with Christ," and dwells in "the Father's house" above. H. G. H.

Mrs BETTIE HARRIS HIX died at Moravian Falls, Wilkes county, N. C., March 25th, 1880.

She joined the Presbyterian Church at Rocky River in the year 1856 and lived a consistent member of it until her death. She leaves a husband and three little children to mourn their sad loss. A good wife and mother possessing a kind disposition, she was beloved by all who knew her. May her bereaved husband be enabled to say that though "Clouds and darkness are round about Thee" in this affliction, yet "Righteousness and judgment are the habitations of Thy throne." May He who took little children in His arms and blessed them, bless the dear little motherless children. A. H. M.

Raleigh Christian Advocate requested to copy.

At his residence near Galatia church, Cumberland county, N. C., March 31, 1880, Mr. ARCHIBALD LINDSAY, in the 76th year of his age.

He had long been a member of Galatia church, and for more than twenty years served said church as deacon. Seven years ago he was stricken with paralysis, which gradually increased, until death ended his great and agonising sufferings. For the last two years he was almost entirely helpless. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." J. P. M.

On the 25th ult., in Iredell county, Mr. THOMAS JURNEY, aged about 85 years.

His wife died a few years ago, aged 78, having been married 53 years. He was one of our best citizens; a man of strict integrity in all business matters and the most regular in attendance at Bethany church, of which he had been a consistent member near 50 years. An Israelite indeed in whom was no guile. He never had a spell of sickness till the last; he kept the same family of servants that he had before the war and they were faithful. His death makes a great vacancy in the church and community.

The Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., is requested to copy.

JORDAN WICKER was killed on the 16th of March, in Chatham county, by the fall of a tree. He was nearly 73 years of age.

Death cometh as a thief in the night, at an hour that we know not. Let us heed the warning: Be ye also ready.

Near Cool Springs, Iredell county, N. C., on the 13th ult., Mrs. MARY ANN MONTGOMERY, aged about 50 years.

She was a good woman and of great sincerity of character, and had been for many years a member of Fifth Creek church. She was much esteemed in the community. She leaves a husband and one daughter to mourn for her.

At the residence of her brother, Dr. G. W. Whitson, near Asheville, N. C. on the 16th, ulto., Miss MELISSA WHITSON, aged 71 years.

More than thirty years ago, she made a profession of her faith in Christ and joined the Presbyterian church of Swannanoa, in Buncombe cunty, of which she remained a consistent member until her death. Modest and unobtrusive in her demeanor, she was firm in the faith, and her seat in church was rarely vacant. Gentle and affectionate in disposition, she held a warm place in the affections of her friends, and especially was she loved and revered by the children of the household where she dwelt, and the void caused by her death will long be felt and lamented.

"How blest the righteous when they die."

V.

Suddenly at the residence of Mr. John McRae, in Cumberland county, on the morning of the 22d ulto., Col. JOHN LEACH, of Blue Springs, Robeson county, in 73 year of his age.

Col. Leach was forty or fifty years a member of the Presbyterian Church, having joined in early life at Centre, and removed by certificate, in 1870, to Bethel. He was punctual and faithful in the Sabbath School and sanctuary, and is doubtless, but gone up higher to be with Christ, which is far better A. M. Q.

At his home in Cumberland county, on the evening of the 22d ulto., Dr. MALCOM SHAW, in the 81 year of his age.

Dr. Shaw was a member of the Presbyterian Church over half a century. He lived honored, respected and beloved by all who knew him, and he died in a good old age, full of years, and was gathered home to the fathers and to the Church triumphant in glory. A. M. Q.

JOSEPH M. SLOAN, died at Brenham, Texas, Feb. 21st, 1880. He was the youngest son of Col. John Sloan, who resided successively at Greensboro', N. C., and at Lexington, Va., from which place he removed to Texas in 1873. A sister of Mrs. Sloan, Miss Julia A. Graham, who resided with her, was taken to her heavenly rest July 1st, 1876. Col. Sloan died most triumphantly, Nov. 4th, 1877, and now the mother and her two remaining sons, have been called to give up the youngest. He was born October 1st, 1859. During his earlier years he was a delicate child, but he had grown to be a young man possessed of unusual endurance and of great spirit and energy. It was this which caused him to neglect the first symptoms of his disease, typhoid pneumonia. During the three weeks of his illness there were hosts of friends who manifested their solicitude, and a very large number gathered to the funeral. Their sincere grief is the best tribute to their large hearted friend. The entire community sympathize with the afflicted relatives. R.

Suddenly, of heart disease, on the 23rd of March, at Charlotte, N. C., Dr. W. S. EVERITT.

When the "LIFE RESTORING" East India Remedy is at hand. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical that DR. H. JAMES' Cannabis Indica will positively cure Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Nervous Debility. It is an Imported Remedy. Try it—prove it for yourself.

Here are a few extracts from letters of persons who were CURED, and now order for their friends:

"I fear Cousin is in a decline, and as thy medicines cured my only brother of a Hemorrhage of the Lungs about a year ago, I wish Cousin to take them." Thy true friend, HANNAH MICKLE. Near Woodbury, N. J.

"As your medicine cured me of Consumption some three years ago, I want him to try them. I gained fifteen pounds while taking the first three bottles." J. V. HULL. Lawreneeburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

"Mother has been suffering with Bronchitis for nearly twenty years, and tried most all kinds of medicine, and says the Cannabis Indica is the only thing that gives her relief." JANE A. ASHBROOK, Lovelaceville, Ballard Co., Ky.

"I know all about the Cannabis Indica. Fifteen years ago it cured my daughter of the Asthma; she had it very bad for several years, but was perfectly cured. Please send me a $5 box of your medicine." JACOB TROUT, Deep River, Poweshiek Co., Iowa.

"It has cured Mrs. Bebout of General Debility of the whole system, of two or three years' standing, and others are trying it with success." BEBOUT & LESLIE, Simpsons' Store, Washington Co., Pa.

A FAVORABLE NOTORIETY.—The good reputation of "Brown's Bronchial Troches" for the relief of Coughs, Colds and Throat Diseases has given them a favorable notoriety.

OUR PAPER.

We do not forget that the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN is read not only by Ministers, who by reason of training and study are specially fond of profound discussions of religions philosophy, but by both sexes, and by all classes and conditions of persons. Consequently it is our aim to present such a variety of moral and religious reading that the paper will commend itself to all as a popular vehicle of such information and instruction as not only ought to be read, but as will be read by young and old, rich and poor, clergy and laity, learned and unlearned. We present no elaborate prospectus. Any who may desire to know more of the paper, are referred to its friends, who may be found in almost any community, or we will gladly send sample copies on application.

OUR PREMIUMS.

We invite special attention to the premiums we are offering with the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN for the ensuing year:

To any subscriber, the paper one year, and Kitto's Cyclopedia (*5 00 edition) for $4 75.

The paper one year and Smith's Bible Dictionary ($4 50 edition) for $4 50.

The paper one year and Cruden's Unabridged Concordance for $4 00.

To any one sending us THREE new subscribers at $2 65 each we give
SMITH'S BIBLE DICTIONARY,
OR
THE LIFE OF ST. PAUL

As a premium for two new subscribers, at $2 65 each, we give
CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE.

To every New Subscriber at $2 65 we will give a MAP OF PALESTINE, 28x42.

We have sent this Map to a large number of persons and feel justified in saying it gives entire satisfaction. The publisher's price is $1 00.

The Cyclopedia and the Bible Dictionary are very cheap—exceedingly cheap. And
CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE,
COMPLETE—UNABRIDGED,
Being an index to every important word in the Scriptures and the Apocrypha—with full definitions of the Theological and Scriptural meanings of words, and having the texts indicated with the respective meanings. We say this Concordance—the best probably in the world is a marvel of cheapness. No Christian family—or other family—should be without it.
WE SPECIALLY OFFER
The Paper one year with the
CONCORDANCE,
To any new Subscriber for $3 50.
In all cases we prepay postage.

ANALYSIS
—OF—
SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO,
—BY—
PROF. A. R. LEDOUX,
STATE CHEMIST OF NORTH CAROLINA,
March 26, 1880.

Moisture, @ 212° F.				12.67
Soluble Phosphoric Acid	7.38	per cent.
Reverted " "	4.57	"
Total available Phos. Acid	11.95	per cent.,	or available Bone Phosphate,	25.89
Insoluble Phosphoric Acid	2	"	or " " "	4.36
Nitrogen	2 64	"	equivalent to Ammonia	3.20
Potash	90

Commercial Value per Ton (2 000 lbs.) $41.30.

In 1879 SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO was the HIGHEST grade of all the licensed Cotton Fertilizers sold in North Carolina. The above Analysis indicates that SOLUBLE PACIFIC GUANO is even better this year than last.

The wise will regard quality as much as "price" in purchasing Fertilizers.

FOR THE FAMILY.

Tears.

Is it raining, little flower?
Be glad of rain!
Too much rain would wither thee.
'Twill shine again.
The clouds are very black, 'tis true,
But just behind them shines the blue.

Art thou weary, tender heart?
Be glad of pain;
In sorrow sweetest things will grow.
As flowers in rain.
God watches, and thou wilt have sun
When clouds their perfect work have done.

Two Wonderful Clocks.

One of the most curious clocks ever made was completed not many years ago by Karl Ketler, a German miner of Pennsylvania. It so nearly resembles the famous Strasburg clock as to seem almost an imitation; but Ketler declares that he has never seen the great clock of Strasburg, and that he never even heard of it until his own work was nearly completed. At any rate some account of Ketler's clock will be of interest to American boys and girls, as the first piece of mechanism of this sort our own continent has produced.

Ketler was occupied three whole years in the construction of his wonderful timepiece, during the last of the three working at it day and night and so often absorbed in his undertaking as to forget both food and sleep. He was a man of very limited education, without any of the advantages of travel or wide observation, and the whole work of this curious clock was performed with no other tools than two common jackknives.

The clock is eight feet high and four broad, has sixteen sides, and is surmounted by a globe, over which is a cross. There are four dial plates, all carved in curious, emblematic figures of most unique design. One of the dials shows the day of the month; another the day of the week; a third the minutes and seconds, and a fourth the hour of the day. Above the dial plates a gallery extends about half way around the clock, and in the centre of this gallery is a carved wooden figure of the Saviour, while at each end is a small door opening into the body of the clock. Over the right door is an eagle, and over the left a rooster. Twice a day, that is at noon and midnight, there is a sweet chiming of bells, during which the small door at the right opens, twelve wooden figures, personating the twelve apostles, march in procession, with St Peter at their head, all along the gallery. Each in turn, as he passes the Lord, bows with face toward Him, and then, resuming his former position, walks slowly forward till he reaches the door at the left, which they all enter. When Peter salutes the Lord the cock crows, and when Judas, who is in the rear, with one hand shielding his face and the other grasping a bag, reaches the cock it crows twice. At the extreme corners of the clock, placed on pedestals, are beautifully carved statues of Moses and Elias, and in the rear are two obelisks of the Egyptian style, inscribed in hieroglyphics, and designed to symbolize the ancient period of history. The clock will run thirty two hours, and, by a special attachment, the procession of the apostles may be repeated whenever desired.

But the most astonishing thing I ever heard of in the way of a time-piece is a clock described by a Hindoo rajah, as belonging to a native prince of Upper India, and jealously guarded as the rarest treasure of his luxurious palace.

In front of the clock's disk was a gong, swung upon poles, and near it was a pile of artificial human limbs. The pile was made up of the full number of parts for twelve perfect bodies, but all lay heaped together in seeming confusion.

Whenever the hands of the clock indicated the hour of one, out from the pile crawled just the number of parts needed to form the frame of one man, part joining itself to part with quick, metallic click; and, when completed, the figure sprang up, seized a mallet, and walking up to the gong, struck one blow that sent the sound pealing through every room and corridor of that stately castle. This done, he returned to the pile and fell to pieces again. When two o'clock came, two men arose and did likewise; and so through all the hours of the day, the number of figures being the same as the number of the hour, till at noon and midnight, the entire heap sprang up, and marching to the gong, struck, one after another, each his blow, making twelve in all; and then fell to pieces.—St. Nicholas.

The Consciences of Children.

Little children often have very tender consciences, and are perfectly aware when they have been "naughty."

A little girl one day said to her mother, "Papa calls me good, Auntie calls me good, and everybody calls me good, but I am not good."

"I am very sorry," said the mother.

"And so am I," said the child; "but I have got a very naughty think."

"A naughty what?"

"My think is naughty inside of me."

And on her mother inquiring what she meant, she said,

"Why, when I could not ride yesterday, I did not cry nor anything, but when you were gone I wished the carriage would turn over, and the horses would run away, and everything bad. Nobody knew it; but God knew it, and He cannot call me good. Tell me, mamma, how can I be good inside of me?"—Canada Presbyterian.

Cute Chickens.

The artfulness of common chickens is illustrated by this funny story, published in Land and Water: In former days it was difficult for visitors to get anything to eat at John O'Groats, the extreme north of Scotland, there being no butchers or bakers within miles. When visitors arrived it was the custom of the proprietor of the little inn to chase and catch a chicken, pluck and roast him at once for the visitor's dinner. In course of time the chickens became very artful. They kept a sharp look-out, and when they saw a carriage coming along the road—they could see a long way down the straight road from the inn—they bolted with all legs into the heather, and did not reappear until the visitors had eaten their bacon without the chicken and taken their departure. When the telegraph wires were first put up between Berrydale and Hemsdale the grouse were continually flying against the wires and killing themselves, and in one season the driver of the mail-cart picked up no less than forty brace of grouse so killed. Lately, not a grouse has been found killed. They seemed to have passed on the warning.—Exchange.

Elegance of Home.

I never saw a garment too fine for man or maid; there never was a chair too good for a cobbler or a cooper, or a king to sit in; never a house too fine to shelter the human head. These elements about us, the glorious sky, the imperial sun, are not too good for the human race. Elegance fits man. But do we not value these tools for housekeeping a little more than they are worth, and sometimes mortgage a house for the mahogany we bring into it? I had rather eat my dinner off the head of a barrel, or dress after the fashion of John the Baptist in the wilderness, or sit on a block all my life, than consume all myself before I got to a home, and take so much pains with the outside that the inside was as hollow as an empty nut. Beauty is a great thing, but beauty of garment, house and furniture are tawdry ornaments compared with domestic love. All the elegance in the world will not make a home, and I would give more for a spoonful of real hearty love than for whole ship-loads of furniture, and all the gorgeousness all the upholsterers in the world can gather.—Dr. Holmes.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Health and Dress.

Dr. B. W. Richardson delivered a lecture on Monday evening at the London Institution, Finsbury-circus, upon the subject of dress in relation to health. At the outset Dr. Richardson repudiated any intention to deprecate good fashion or good change of fashion in dress. He thought, with Mrs. Haweis, that it was the bounden duty of every woman to look as handsome as she could, and to maintain her beauty as long as possible, for nothing was more beautiful than beauty in old age. Fashions, as a rule, were dictated by vain and ignorant persons who set nature at defiance, as though they were nature and she an idiot. What was wanted in the reform of dress was good fashion for both sexes, and for every-day life some unit for costume that should tend to bind more closely together the various classes of the community. With regard to the mechanical adaptation of dress to the body, the most serious error was tightness by which pressure was brought to bear upon any particular part, such as the neck, feet and limbs. The corset was opposed to all that was healthful and all that was beautiful, keeping it as it did the heart and the adjoining organs under suppression. No subjection to which women were liable could be greater than that which they voluntarily inflicted on themselves by wearing those articles, which deadened their mental capability as well as their vital energy. Waistbands, garters and tight shoes, or shoes with pointed toes, were also very prejudicial to health. Belts interfered with respiration, and, moreover, among working men who wore belts it was the rule rather than the exception for hernia to supervene, while bad boots were responsible for misshapen feet among nine tenths of the English community. Women's dresses should be loose and should be supported from the shoulders, as was usually the case with male attire. Indeed, faulty as it was in an artistic point of view, man's dress had greatly improved in these latter days, and was, in relation to health, perfection as compared with that of women. He suggested that the dress of women ought to be—although of lighter materials—the same as that of the opposite sex, with the exception of the exterior robe or gown, which should play the same part as the outer coat of a man. In regard to hats, the "gypsy" bonnet was very becoming for women, while the chimney-pot hat worn by men was light and healthy and far superior to some descriptions of felt hats, which were in a hygienic point of view bad and hideous to look at. The best and most simple of all was the fine old Swiss cap, sometimes called the Leonardo da Vinci. One of these, a limp black velvet cap with flaps, was exhibited by Dr. Richardson, who stated that he himself wore one as graduate of a Scotch university, where the original one was supposed to have been made from John Knox's breeches. It was especially necessary to adapt one's clothing to the season of the year, as it had been proved by the late Mr. Milner that the body undergoes two pounds wase in the autumn and two pounds increase in the spring. Waterproof clothing was injurious to the system, as were also in another way the aniline and other dyes now prevalent. The best colors for dress in warm or cold weather was white, which might be modified to light gray as less liable to get dirty, while black was the worst. It was satisfactory to think that mourning was slowly falling into disuse, for, after "suttee," it was almost the saddest of miseries inflicted by society on the already miserable. Dr. Richardson concluded by pointing out the necessity for cleanliness in all wearing apparel, and by commenting on the utter inefficiency of the laundry system in London and other large towns.—London Queen.

The Sacred Fire of the Pueblos.

The Pueblos claim that their Montezuma was born through the immaculate conception of an Indian maiden of their own tribe in the village of Pecos, about thirty-five miles distant from this city. While a youth he did not exhibit any extraordinary qualities, but upon reaching manhood's estate showed himself to be a great hunter and possessed of supernatural powers. After dwelling with the tribe for a long period and performing many miraculous deeds he departed, going southward. On the eve of his journey he is reported to have lighted a sacred fire, which he told his people to keep burning until his return. Although this was long centuries ago, it is said that the Indians have scrupulously obeyed the injunction and have never allowed the fire to die out. They have continuously, through successive generations, kept the slumbering embers aglow. At least this is their story, and it is largely believed, especially by those who have seen the fire glimming in their old adobe temple. In 1837 the pueblo, or town of Pecos was sold. It was on a Spanish grant, and at that period the Indians removed the sacred fire with great care to Taos, where it is still burning and viewed with reverential awe. Some of the Indians of the present day have so much confidence in the return of Montezuma that they get out upon their house-tops every morning with the rising of the sun and look anxiously into the far distance for his coming. Even though many of the Pueblo Indians have outwardly embraced the Christian religion, yet they maintain their faith in Montezuma, whom they regard as their saviour or sovereign. They are a docile and industrious people, who life a pastoral life. As communities, they are far more prosperous and live far better than the majority of the natives.—Globe Democrat.

Scotchmen Preparing for Argument.

We turned our chairs to more easy positions, I stirred the fire to a blaze, and Mr. Craig (the Bond street hero) addressed Mr. Macdour as follows: "Do you remember the little discussion we had when I last saw you five years ago as to the management of St. Andrews College?" "I do," said Sandy; and there was a sideward nod of his head that said, "And I'm glad to see you do." "Well, now," pursued the other, "you've altered your opinions since then, surely?" "Not a bit," proclaimed Sandy. "Eh, now! can you really say that?" incredulously demanded Mr. Craig; and forthwith the battle began. Did you ever see a Scotchman preparing for argument? Much has been written and said about the war-horse arrayed for battle, the bull entering the arena, and other animals in trying situations; but I repeat again, did you ever see a Scotchman preparing for argument? There is a complacent smile on his lip and a firm gaze in his eye as he faces his adversary that tells of possible conquest and certain pleasure. There is also a little pity in the glance he fixes unflinchingly on the poor fool who disagrees with him. But here were two Scots arrayed, and how deadly the struggle would be I knew not yet, but presently. In even measured tones the two went on, till Joe looked at me and I looked at Joe, and we both looked at the clock. A quarter to ten. I determined in my own mind that old codgers like these went to bed at ten, and trusting in that delusive hope, I rang for some hot water.—Exchange.

Scarcity of Song Birds.

The remarks of the Duke of Argyll on the scarcity of song birds in this country has again directed attention to the subject. A scheme is now on foot to introduce the Chinese lark, a bird which adapts itself to any description of weather, and is wiry and graceful in form. A number of them will be let loose in Tennessee and Kentucky.

The Golden Towers of Russia.

The fashion of gilding church towers is universal in Russia, and it has been calculated that enough gold is thus lying idle to pay off the national debt. The Isaac cathedral in St. Petersburg has a plating of gold three-quarters of an inch thick over the whole of a dome as large as that of St. Paul's in London. The church of Our Lady of Kezan has a massive altar furniture of solid silver. During the great fire of Moscow, in 1812, the molten gold and silver were seen flowing like water from the burning churches, and the new addition to them which is about to be consecrated represents an outlay of fully $15,000,000. And all this in view of the fact that the Russian paper rouble, ordinarily worth seventy-five cents, is now worth only fifty cents.

Medicinal Properties of Milk.

Milk is an excellent remedy in gastric derangements. In hot weather small quantities taken frequently relieve the thirst and cramping pain which accompanies gastro-intestinal inflammation. Even in health the free use of milk as a summer beverage is preferable to iced drinks. When its effect is constipating it may be neutralized by a little salt. Used hot with pepper and salt it is an excellent remedy for dysentery. Dr. Donkin successfully employs a diet of skimmed milk in diabetes, using four quarts daily without any other food.

Perfection of Character Composite.

We do not see why womanliness might not as well be called the perfection of human character as manliness. The fact is that perfection of character is a composite—many elements enter into it, and the graciousness of a refined woman is as fair to see as the courage of a noble man. —Philadelphia Presbyterian.

Humorous.

"I find your recommendation very good Bridget." "Yes, ma'am, and now I'll see yours, ma'am, if yo plaze."

An Irishman, who was drinking the health of bishop, gave this toast: "May yur riverence live to eat the old hin that crows over yur grave!"

A young lady on being asked, upon her return from church, to quote the text, replied, "Blessed are the dress-makers"

A cat's eyes are said to be the largest at midnight. We never made an examination; but we are positive that its voice is about seventeen times larger at that hour than at any other period during the twenty-four.—Boston Globe.

Mr. Crofts tells the story of a priest who proposed to illustrate the difference between the churches by an object lesson. Taking a chestnut (burr and all), he said: "This burr represents the world; this shell represents the Protestant Church. Now," said he, "I will show you what the true Catholic Church is like." With that he cracked the shell, and behold the kernel was rotten.

At a political meeting the speakers and audience were very much disturbed by a man who constantly called for Mr. Henry. Whenever a new speaker came on the stand this man bawled out: "Mr. Henry! Henry! Henry! I call for Mr. Hedry!" After several interruptions of this kind at each speech, a young man ascended the platform and was soon airing his eloquence in magnificent style, when the same man as before, was heard bawling out at the top of his voice: "Mr. Henry! Henry! Henry! I call for Mr. Henry to make a speech!" The chairman arose and remarked that it would oblige the audience if the gentleman would refrain from further calling for Mr. Henry, as that gentleman was now speaking. "Is that Mr. Henry?" said the disturber of the meeting. "That can't be Mr. Henry! Why, that's the little fellow that told me to holler."

SECULAR NEWS.

A Fredericksburg (Va.) dispatch of April 1 says: "A steel-rifled gun of the Wentworth pattern, with solid shot, shell and ammunition, was shipped to-day by a steamer to the mouth of the Rappahannock river, by the State government, for the protection of the oyster fisheries."

Rev. A. D. Betts writes to the Wilmington Star that there will be a reunion of Company E, 30th N. C. regiment, of which he was chaplain, at Teachey's Depot, April 23d, 1880. Captain J. W. Ellis is to address them. Mr. Betts adds: "We wish to meet every every surviving member and the friends and kindred of the deceased." The captain is to call the roll.

The Criminal Court of Copenhagen, Denmark, has sentenced Baron Gedalia, a chief of the banking house of Gedalia & Co., diplomatic agents of the Bey of Tunis, late Consul General to Portugal, and possessor of a dozen grand crosses and other decorations, to one months' imprisonment for repeatedly using cancelled stamps on stocks and bills.

We find since the fish season has opened that there has passed over the Jamesville and Washington railroad, up to Monday, 221 ult., 597 boxes of fish, bound for New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore. During the past week there was shipped to New York 10 boxes, Philadelphia 31 boxes, and Baltimore 4 boxes. Total number of boxes shipped 645.—North State Press.

Mr. A. A. Scroggs says there is no such thing as a mad stone, but there are three kinds reputed to be. He says: "It is greatly to be regretted that any person should rely upon such foolish superstitions nonsense as the application of a piece of pumice, meteoric or a Bezoar stone, to cure the consequences of the bite of a rabid animal, neither of which do any more good than a piece of brickat."

Mr. S. G. Worth has just spent a portion of two days in our city. He reports a favorable season of work at the salmon and trout hatchery at Morganton during the fall and winter, in which time many thousand California and Schoodic salmon and trout were hatched and released. The new hatchery has proved a complete success, and the ponds contain adult trout and fry, the German carp and other interesting varieties. He is now on his way to the Albemarle waters, where sufficient apparatus has been ordered to hatch ten millions of shad, and it is hoped rock fish also. A corps of messengers has been secured, and in a few days the annual season's work in hatching these varieties will be in full blast.—Raleigh Observer.

Messrs. H. H. Warner & Co.:

GENTLEMEN: I have been doctoring the last four years for Rheumatism in the back, Sciatia and Kidney difficulties, and no time free from pain until I commenced taking Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. Three bottles did the business. I want to keep it in the house to treat my friends with, instead of wines and Peptena, as it will cure the diseases that they will produce. Very truly yours,

CHARLES WALTON.

A Wise Deacon

"Deacon Wilder I want you to tell me how you kept yourself and family so well the past season, when all the rest of us have been sick so much, and have had the doctors running to us so long."

"Bro. Taylor the answer is very easy. I used Hop Bitters in time and kept my family well and saved large doctor bills. Three dollars worth of it kept us all well and able to work all the time, and I will warrant it has cost you and most of the neighbors one to two hundred dollars apiece to keep sick the same time. I guess you'll take my medicine hereafter." See other column.

TALBOTT'S PATENT SPARK ARRESTER

The Invention of the Age.

It does not destroy the draft.
It does not interfere with cleaning the tubes.
It will not choke up, and requires no cleaning.
It requires no direct dampers to be opened when raising steam (dampers being objectionable, as they may be left open and allow sparks to escape)
It requires no water to extinguish sparks, which, by condensation, destroys the draft. Besides, when water is used, if neglected, the efficiency is destroyed by evaporation of the water, and the boiler is kept in a filthy condition.
It is simple and durable and can be relied upon.
It can be attached to any boiler.
No planter should be without one of them. Insurance companies will insure gins and barns where the Talbott Engines and Spark-Arresters are used at same rate as charged for water or horse-power.

RURAL PURSUITS IN THE UNITED STATES.

"Money making" and "preaching the Gos... pel" are not antagonistic pursuits; on the ...contrary, the former employment is necessary ...to support the latter. God sends some men ...into all the world to preach the Gospel ...to every creature;" and the rest of his ser... vants are to furnish the means of living for ...those thus sent. Therefore the Church may ...be divided into two classes, the "senders" and ..."the sent." And much the larger of the two ...classes are the senders. The one object of ...labor, according to St. Paul, is "that we ...may love, to give him that needeth;" and ...the greatest of needs is the need of the Gos... pel. The christian works industriously that ...he may have money to supply the needs of others; the worldling works with probably equal industry that he may have money to supply his own needs. And in either case all their faculties are used for the purpose of making money. And making money we acknowledge to be a righteous occupation if it is devoted to righteous ends. One great trouble is that we make it with an unnecessary amount of toil; it is the duty of every one to lighten his neighbors' burden as far as he can. An immense portion of United States territory is adapted for pastoral pursuits, and for no other. From the Mississippi river to the Pacific ocean stretches an empire which is better suited to wool growing and cattle raising than to agricultural labor. I have conversed with persons from these regions and read a good deal on the subject, and the universal testimony is, that no pursuits in the world are more steadily remunerative.

Why then do so few persons engage in these occupations? is our oft-repeated question. And the answer is almost invariable: It is a hard, rough life, with none of the comforts and pleasures of civilization. We have to change our pastures frequently, and have no settled homes. Few persons are willing to submit to these privations for any length of time: and still fewer are willing to subject their families to anything like the hardships which they themselves would be willing to undergo.

Now the important question is: "Cannot these comparatively uninhabited regions be peopled and made profitable, by simply inventing, or contriving, or discovering some way of making a nomadic life comfortable or pleasant?"

I am in no doubt when I answer, "Yes." Wealthy English travellers have reduced tent-travelling to science. Let the wool-grower and cattle-raiser send to London for complete traveling tents and equipments; let them form themselves into companies of ten or twelve families each, so that they can employ a pastor or teacher; and I believe the life of these pastoral people would become not only the most comfortable, but the most healthful in the world. The Callahan flock in Starr county, Texas, numbers 60,000 head, and would support thirty families. They could have every desirable luxury of civilization. The tents are carpeted with oilcloth, and over this are spread the rich and beautiful rugs which have become so fashionable in luxurious homes. Camp bedsteads are as comfortable as the finest spring mattress; chairs can be made as luxurious as any "sleepy hollow" of velvet or damask. When the flocks eat out one section, the camp is broken up and moved a few miles further on. Everything is light and easily moved, and the new encampment is, in a single day, made as comfortable as the old one. Kerosene stoves do the cooking and heat the tents in cold weather. The flock owners can have a daily mail at their own expense, and this expense is not a heavy one. The lands eaten out by the flocks and herds soon regain their grasses—greener and more luxuriant than before. A contributor to the Country Gentleman says: "Prairie grass is always destroyed by the trampling of cattle and horses, and by the close feeding of sheep, but we find them immediately replaced, without seeding, by white clover and timothy."

An old experienced farmer once remarked to me, "Blue grass seems to follow sheep wherever they go." Each year the pasture lands become richer, as every "feeding off" has the same effect upon the soil as the folding system has in Great Britain. There they pen their sheep with hurdles upon every portion of the field successively, and this top dressing places the land in high condition for the following crop. But in our great pastoral regions, crops are out of the question. They don't pay in comparison with the wool and cattle growing, and would only retard more profitable pursuits.

In the way of food, pastoral people could live comfortably upon ship supplies—ship bread of every variety, canned goods, fruits, barreled apples, oranges, lemons, &c. Their employments are so profitable that they need not economize in any healthful luxury.

Adam Smith, whose great work, the "Wealth of Nations," has been ranked beside the printing press and the use of steam, in civilizing the world, gives some interesting facts in regard to the people who pursued pastoral occupations in past ages. In comparing the three classes of industry—the pastoral, the agricultural and the manufacturing—he says: "A shepherd has a great deal of leisure; a farmer has some; a manufacturer has none at all. The first may, without any loss, employ a great deal of his time in martial exercises; the second may employ some part of it; but the last cannot employ a single hour in them without some loss." Instead of martial exercises, I would say, let them employ their leisure in reading, music, painting, and other elegant and innocent occupations. The Gorman and Scythian armies which conquered the Romans were composed of shepherdsmen, and Adam Smith says this victory which "is the third great revolution in the affairs of mankind" was brought about by the irresistible superiority "which the militia of a nation of sheep-herders has over the militia of a nation of husbandmen, artificers and manufacturers." (Page 552.) Again he remarks: "The ordinary life, the ordinary exercises, of a Tartar or Arab, prepare him sufficiently for war. Running, wrestling, quoit playing, throwing the javelin, drawing the bow, &c., are the common pastime of those who live in the open air and are all of them images of war." "The judgment of Thucydides, that both Europe and Asia could not resist the Scythians united, has been verified by the experience of all eyes." "The inhabitants of the inhospitable deserts of Arabia and the other great nations of shepherds have never been united but once: under Mahomet and his immediate successors." These once powerful nations of shepherds have sunk into comparative obscurity, but why should not a new Anglo-Saxon race of christianized and enlightened pastoral people fill the region between the Mississippi and the Pacific. The outer rim of States lying next the great river and next the ocean, could furnish their needful supplies. Before leaving Adam Smith, however, I will repeat one more remark of his. In commenting on the perpetuity of wealth in shepherd communities, he says: "There are no nations who abound more in families revered and honored on account of their descent from a long race of illustrious ancestors; because there are no nations among whom wealth is likely to continue so long in the same families."

The rush of population to Australia was in consequence of the discovery of gold in unusual quantities, yet now the export of wool far exceeds in value the export of gold, from that country.

Let us sum up the apparent advantages presented by wool growing:

1. I know of no occupation which is so profitable to all classes of people.
2. I know of none which is so healthful.
3. I know of none which can be made more comfortable and pleasant to ladies and children.
4. It would people vast tracts of country which are now almost uninhabited.
5. Adam Smith says the testimony of history shows that pastoral pursuits make powerful nations.
6. Adam Smith says wealth continues longer in families in this than in any other system.
7. It has direct Scriptural commands, and in this way is honored by God beyond other occupations—"Be thou diligent to know the state of the flocks and look well to thy herds."

H. M. I.

SUNDAY LAWS.

The subject of Sunday laws, or laws to secure the rights of the citizen to that day, is agitating our community at present, because the Legislature is now considering a bill for that purpose, which has passed the lower house and is now before the Senate. The bill is bitterly opposed by our city press on the assumed ground that it is sectarian, fanatical, and an interference with the liberty of the citizen. One writer assures us that "all Sabbath laws are, in their essential nature, the growth of intolerance, fanaticism and a meddling spirit of persecution, as odious and unreasonable as that which actuated the Inquisition in a less enlightened age."

1. Such assertions cannot be reconciled with the fact that there is a plain and comprehensive system of Sabbath laws laid down in the Word of God, and enjoined upon the chosen people. And if they cannot be reconciled it is clearly better for us to be "sectarian" with God on our side, than to be liberal in defiance of His authority.

Modern research shows that the idea of a weekly division of time, and the sacredness of the seventh day, were ideas not peculiar to the Hebrews. They were held in greater or less clearness among the Greeks, the Hindoos, the Egyptians, and (as seen from the cuneiform inscriptions) by the Assyrians. The customs of those great nations which lay so near the cradle of the human race, should serve to convince intelligent persons that, at all events, Sabbath laws were not an invention of the Puritans.

2. But we pass by what might be said as to the religious aspect of this subject, to refer briefly to some other considerations, which demonstrate it to be a fit subject for legislation. It will be obvious that the sense of moral obligation is an indispensable necessity to a well ordered State, and to a law-abiding people. Without it brute force would be the only mode of securing obedience to law, and society would surely drift first to despotism, and then to anarchy. And there can be no high nor permanent prosperity for a people where virtue is not founded in religion. True patriotism does homage to God. The highest and most fundamental necessities of society and the State, thus require the recognition of God, and our relations to Him. Every such consideration appeals to true statesmanship to guard with honor the day of Him, who is the vital origin and protector of those moral forces which nourish all the springs of true prosperity—the day consecrated to the noblest exercise of reason, the worship of God.

3. There is also another consideration which cannot be overlooked. When our Lord said "The Sabbath is made for man" He emphatically taught that it is a necessity as well as a blessing. It is a physical as well as a moral necessity. Man needs not only the oft recurring rest of sleep at short intervals, he needs longer rest at longer intervals, and change of mental occupation besides. Life can no more endure an unbroken routine of thought and occupation than the stomach can endure only one kind of food. There will result from unresting toil and devouring care for mere material things, such an exhaustion of mind and body that all traces of man's higher nature will become degraded, and capacity for higher uses destroyed.

And as to this particular division of time experience concurs with science as to its exact adaptedness to man's constitution. M. Prondhon, a profound French writer, says:

"Lessen the week by a single day, and a due proportion of time is destroyed. The labor is insufficient for the repose; increase it by that much and the labor becomes excessive. Take a half-day twice a week, you increase the loss of time by breaking it in fragments, and by destroying the unity of the day. On the contrary, take forty-eight hours of rest after twelve consecutive days of toil, and you will kill a man by idleness, after having exhausted him with fatigue. And I omit a mass of considerations of the same kind which would befall the family and society, under any other arrangement. How then," he exclaims, "did Moses specify this exact proportion? Sooner than believe it a work of calculation, or of chance, I must accept it as a revelation from God."

No one can doubt that man needs this proportion of rest to keep his physical, intellectual and moral nature in health, and to prevent his soul from becoming the mere drudge of the body.

In his celebrated speech on the Ten Hour bill Lord Macaulay says:

"The natural difference between Campania and Spitzbergen is trifling, when it is compared with the difference between a country inhabited by men full of moral and bodily vigor and a country inhabited by men sunk in mental and moral decrepitude. Therefore it is that we are not poorer but richer, because we have, through many ages, rested from our labor one day in seven. That day is not lost. While industry is suspended—while the plow lies in the furrow—while the exchange is silent—while no smoke ascends from the factory—a process is going on quite as important to the wealth of nations as any process which is performed on more busy days. Man, the machine of machines—the machine compared with which all the contrivances of the Watts and the Arkwrights are worthless—is repairing and winding up, so that he returns to his labor on the Monday with clearer intellect, with livelier spirits, with renewed corporeal vigor."

4. These suggestions are enough to show that on every ground the citizen is entitled to the Sabbath. The State does not transcend her authority when she declares by law that every citizen shall have the Sabbath, and that no one shall deprive him of it. We do not assert that the State has a right to discriminate in favor of classes. But if there is a class which appeals more earnestly to her care than any other, because more dependent, that class is the laboring class—the class dependent for their daily bread on their hard-earned daily wage. To them the Sabbath is even a nobler boon than to others. And for this class a Sabbath law is a necessity. Dependent largely on the favor of their employer, who himself is struggling with competitors in business, if the law does not interpose to protect them, they can only refuse their employers command to sacrifice the Sabbath, at the risk of losing their livelihood.

Hundreds of small storekeepers and tradesmen in New Orleans feel compelled to traffic on the Sabbath, in order to keep customers who would abandon them, did they not do as others do. We have no doubt that there are not a few saloon keepers even, who would be glad of the opportunity to spend that day with their families, could they do so without the risk of losing their patronage. Their Sabbath depends on the interest or whims of others. A large and valuable class of our citizens are thus practically deprived of the Sabbath, because no law secures them the day. Men who are at the beck of an employer have no Sabbath that they can call their own. Thousands of men in this community, the slaves of capital or of necessity, have less control over their Sabbath rest than if they lived in a heathen land.

5. To whom shall this class appeal? If they had at their command the treasury of a Lottery Company, or the resources of the liquor sellers, perhaps they might find friends among the newspapers. But they are poor men, and their interests seem to have no representative, except in the Legislature itself. Their case presents a strong appeal: and the Legislature which protects their interests, will earn the gratitude of one of the worthiest classes of our citizens, and confer a permanent benefit on the whole community. We call attention to the fact, that in the present condition of competition for business, the fact that we have no law, works oppressively to these classes. There is no way by which they can be protected against the necessity of labor while competition exists—in other words, they cannot have a day of rest guaranteed them—except through a law which destroys the servitude of compulsory labor, by forbidding labor, and unnecessary business.

The cry that such legislation is "sectarian," is too silly to have any weight. All law implies the right and duty of the State to legislature pro bonos mores—and to condemn and punish whatever is contra bonos mores. It is her prerogative to guard the morals of her people and to resent whatever assails them. If she protects the citizen in the possession of the day, that is one benefit. If she, by closing drinking saloons, protects him against temptation to drunkenness, and the crimes to which it leads, all that can be said is, that she gives two blessings instead of one, and throws around the community the amplest protection in her power.

By making it a dies non—that is, by suspending the transaction of public business on the Sabbath—the law already acknowledges the sacredness of the day. All that is needed beside, is that the Legislature should enact such legislation as shall, against all ordinary contingencies, secure to the citizen his possession of what is already admitted to be his right.—Southwestern Presbyterian.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

According to the Maine papers the prohibitory liquor law in that State, so far from being a failure, is in its effects a great success. It is now twenty-nine years since the system was first adopted in the State, and with the exception of 1856 and 1857, when the license plan was tried, more or less stringent laws on the subject of the liquor traffic have been in force. The friends of prohibition assert that these laws have been exceedingly beneficial; that they have to moulded public opinion that no political party dares advocate their repeal; that the manufacture of liquor in the State has been entirely suspended, and that except in a few of the larger cities its sale, even in the most secret way, is unknown. Fifty years ago, it is asserted, nearly every male drank; while at the present time three-fourths of the population are total abstinence people. These are exceedingly satisfactory results, and if the figures upon which they are based are correct it is not surprising that prohibition has so strong a hold upon the majority of the people of Maine. In regard to the surreptitious sale of liquor in the State the opponents of prohibition, who would naturally be inclined to exaggerate in the matter, do not place the quantity disposed of in this way at more than $1,250,000 worth. It is difficult to obtain reliable statistics on the subject, but supposing that these figures are correct the showing in favor of prohibition is very satisfactory. They give $2 as the average expenditure in this direction for each citizen, whereas the average throughout the other States is eight times that sum. From the above figures it will be seen that prohibition really prohibits in Maine.—New York Herald.

HOW TO TRAIN THE MEMORY.

Your memory is bad, perhaps, but I can tell you two secrets that will cure the worst memory. One of them is to read a subject when interested; the other is not only to read, but think. When you have read a paragraph or a page, stop, close the book, and try to remember the ideas on the page, and not only call them vaguely to mind, but put them in words and speak them out. Faithfully follow the two rules and you have the golden keys of knowledge. Besides inattentive reading, there are other things injurious to the memory. One is the habit of skimming over newspapers, items of news, smart remarks, bits of information, political reflections, fashion notes, so that all is a confused jumble, never to be thought of again, thus diligently cultivating a habit of careless reading hard to break. Another is the reading of trashy novels.

What holy notes at even tide,
The Alpine shepherds raise;
When fading rays of sunset hide
Begins their song of praise;
From mountain crest the Alpine horn
These sacred words proclaim:
"Praise the Lord God, praise the Lord God,"
With sweet and loud acclaim.

While other horns adown the slopes
The melody repeat,
It rolls with awe-inspiring rhythm,
Down to the vale's retreat.
"Lord God," the solemn crags reply,
As if in chorus grand;
Peak after peak takes up the cry,
A glorious praising band.

"Praise the Lord God" reverberates
Through all the trembling air,
The reverent dwellers hear the call
And kneel in humbly prayer.
Soon stars are glimmering here and there,
Fast fades the softened light,
The Alpine horn speaks forth once more,
"Good night, good night, good night."

Peace spreads abroad her brooding wings,
A benediction falls,
And silence reigns o'er cliff and chasm.
'Round those eternal walls.

*These thoughts were gleaned from an extract quoted by the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN.

LOVE IS ALL.

If the sun shines on a dull brick or stone, they reflect none of his beams, there is nothing in them capable of this; nor is there, in an ungodly man, any natural power of reflecting the light of God. But let the sun shine upon a diamond, and see what rays of sparkling beauty it emits. Just so the Christian who has the grace of the Spirit; when God shines in his soul, beams of celestial loveliness are reflected by him on the world. The Christian's character should savor of holiness. The promise is, "I will be as the dew unto Israel;" and how sweet is the fragrance of the flower after the gentle falling of the dew; so must the true believer be under the soft distilment of the droppings of heaven on his heart. Cultivate a spirit of love. Love is the diamond amongst the jewels of a believer's breast plate. The other graces shine like the precious stones of nature, with their own peculiar lustre and various hues; but the diamond is white. Now in white all the colors are united, so in love is centred all the other Christian graces and virtues. "Love is the fulfillment of the law."—Rowland Hill.

BORROWING OF TO-MORROW.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

When I was a child, and the minister would announce and read the hymn beginning

"Lo! on a narrow neck of land
'Twixt two unbounded seas I stand," imagination usually carried me away so far that I heard little of the remainder of Wesley's solemn lyric. Yet no child can understand or even grasp at the significance of the little word, now. The present moment—literally all we have, for thought, for action, for repentance and for faith. Yesterday and yesterday's affair are already remote. The hand pressure of your friend lingers with you, the sweet conversation is unforgotten, and the impression made by some pleasure or providence is still fresh. But, when you think of it, there are words, looks and impressions which were made upon you twenty or thirty years ago, and which are not in the least vague or worn. Sometimes, you know not why or how, memory flashes upon you the scenes, incidents and experiences of the long ago, and voices long silent speak once more, vanished faces return, and the past has a resurrection. All our yesterdays are part of the great ocean that beats on the one shore of the isthmus of life, where we stand to-day. And all our to-morrows are portion and parcel of those other waves which are forever surging between us and our home beyond.

It would seem that, the race from first to last having had for their opportunity only the field of to-day, by this time we might have learned economy and prudence in its use. But we are continually borrowing of to-morrow. We spend our health and strength lavishly, often uselessly; we incur obligations which cannot possibly be met, unless the future favor us; and we trust, with a certain reckless confidence, that what is to be will be what we desire. Still worse, there is a sort of backhanded borrowing of the morrow, which has an unhappy effect upon character. We are not at peace about something doing or done, and conscience tells us we must reconsider it, change our course and begin anew. We agree with the mentor, but we give it a gentle pat, as one soothes a fretful child, and we say, "To-morrow we'll attend to it." We have had a misunderstanding with a friend, and though friendship is life's most precious possession, we defer till some easier opportunity the word of explanation which would make all right again. We want to acquire a language, to pursue a line of reading, or to discover the historical merits of some mooted point, but the fire is bright, the novel is enchanting, and the mind is indolent, so we wait till next week. There are friends around the corner in trouble, and we know that deep loneliness broods over their hearth and they tread wearily along a shadowed path. Our going to them now, would be a greater comfort than we can measure, but we do not go, because to-morrow we will have larger leisure, or be out upon errands, or feel more in the mood for sitting with the sorrowful. The church needs every member at the prayer-meeting, and the pastor is grieved and straitened in his work, because the meetings are cold, thinly attended, and prized by the faithful minority. We ought to go to prayer-meeting, and we intend to, of course, but this week there is a concert, or a birth-day party, or a social entertainment of home description, and we prefer that to the hour of prayer. And, what we do once, is done over and over, until some of us, if we sat down and reviewed the past, would be amazed at our neglect. The prayer-meeting should never be a strange place to the Christian, but it is frequently so to those who have formed the fatal habit of borrowing of to-morrow.

So in the child's education, we mean fully to have him early brought to confess Christ for himself. Was he not dedicated to the Lord in baptism? Is he not a child of the covenant? But why does he not go regularly to the sanctuary? and why, when there, does he sit where he pleases, and not in the parental pew? Why does he seem so unfamiliar with the Bible that when his Sunday School teacher asks him to find a reference in Micah, he gropes hopelessly about among Judges and Kings to discover the prophet's location? Have not father and mother been trusting to to-morrow in the religious training of the lad? Is there not too much of this improvidence, in many households?

Friends, if there be a true word to say, if a kind deed to do, if a loving word to send, and the word, or deed, or thought are to be yours or mine, let us improve the time, now. —Christian Intelligencer.

PUBLIC OPINION.

Public opinion on moral subjects was once, and to a very influential degree, a unit in this country. For some time, even after the chaos of faith (to borrow a strong phrase of Mr. Rogers) had set in, there was no reason to doubt what the judgment of society would be upon an unfaithful wife, or a defaulting officer, or a perjured witness, or an evil-doer in the ministry. Neither is there any doubt now what the prevalent voice will be in any such case. The ominous fact is, that there will be many voices instead of one; and they may range all the way from solemn condemnation to applause.

This is precisely the reason why wrong-doers are so much less afraid of the public sentiment than of yore: because that sentiment is so divided its force is dissipated. The moral power of the community is weakened by as much as its unanimity is destroyed.

And when, coincidently with this severance in public opinion, itself, the spirit of reverence is found to be exhaling, a day of spiritual danger has verily arrived. Is not reverence the glory of youth and the grace of old age—is not reverence manifestly declining?—The Light: Is it Waning?

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

The life of Wesley has been translated into the Italian language by a Protestant minister at Rome, and has been well received by the press.

It is a suggestive and striking fact that the people of the Sandwich Islands contribute annually for missionary purposes outside of their own territories $24,000. Some churches average more than four dollars per member. One church sustains five foreign missionaries.

The native churches of South Africa gathered from the Bechuana, Hottentot and Kaffir races, have now enrolled about 50,000 men and women who have professed faith in Christ.

The Church Missionary Intelligencer states that Bonny, in Africa, where the late chief ordered the idols to be destroyed, has become a Bethel. Two congregations are crowded by the chiefs and people, and they are carrying the Gospel to other villages.

It is stated that a few weeks ago an Armenian priest, still connected with his own church, left a contribution of $180 at the rooms of the American Board in Constantinople, to be used for the benefit of his people.

The death is announced of Hannes Arnason, Professor of Philosophy at the Theological School of Iceland. He has left 30,000 crowns for granting stipends to theologians who wish to study philosophy abroad, especially in Germany.

The Rev. Dr. Jessup, writing from Beyrout, Syria, says the Government at Constantinople has given notice that hereafter any Moslem who becomes a Christian will be put to death, and that any foreigner subverting Moslemism by teaching Christianity shall be imprisoned without notification to their consuls. In Syria, however, intelligent Moslems condemn this action.

The Belgian Government grants to the Roman Catholics, who number 99 per cent. of the population, 4,500,000 francs yearly; to the Protestants, of whom there are 13,000, 69,366 francs; and to the Jews, numbering about 1,400, 11,220 francs.

An old Carmelite convent in Lisbon now bears over its gateway the inscription, "Presbyterian church." It was purchased of the Portugnese government, which has a vast amount of such property at its disposal.

The American Chapel in Paris, under the care of Rev. E. W. Hitchcock, D. D., has raised during the last year about $1,800 for benevolent and mission work. They contribute towards the expense of at least three mission stations.

An old man of eighty, a member of the "Salvation Army," was buried at King's Lynn with somewhat unusual ceremony. The corpse was followed to the grave by about 150 members of the "Army," who carried their colors and sang "Army" songs. From 1,200 to 1,500 persons assembled to witness the proceedings. The "Salvation Army" has just commenced to build a new hall in King's Lynn, which is to cost £800.

The alleged miracles at Knock, Co. Mayo, are being sifted by degrees. A correspondent writes in reference to an account given concerning one "John Roache, of Roscommon, who had been blind for seventeen years, and went away able to see." On inquiry it turns out that the said John Roache did indeed go to Knock in hopes of being cured, but went away as blind as he came. Yet this "miracle" was asserted on the authority of a Roman Catholic Archdeacon!

After exciting hopes and enthusiasms of the warmest sort, the new Indian creed called the Brahmo Somaj is, says a contemporary, manifestly withering. A great number of the less educated converts have quietly dropped off, whilst many of the cultured class have traveled much further than the tenets of the Brahmo Somaj go. Neither of these developments is at all surprising. Fervent spirits who adopted the Theistic creed in pure faith and devotion, had a terrible shock when their prophet broke his own ordinances and the covenant of his own devising. And if simple-minded persons revolted against this act, others more astute and less docile protest against the tone of Chunder Sen's later utterances. The faith which was said to be grounded on common sense, tempered by a lofty reverence for the Supreme Being, has been developing unexpected features of late. Mr. Chunder Sen has himself reviewed the evidence upon which he might be credited with a direct revelation, and has decided that it is inconclusive. But he took a very long time to resolve the question. The movement "to promote communion with departed saints among the more advanced brethren" has attained official sanction. The Indian Mirror, which represents Brahmo Somaj, announces that "ancient prophets and saints will be taken one after another on special occasions, and made the subject of close study, meditation and prayer." First to be evoked in Moses, and the form of supplication will be a "spiritual pilgrimage." Those who take part therein will try "for hours together to draw inspiration" from the Hebrew lawgiver. The same paper delivers a "new dispensation" for the faithful. In the form of a vision it describes the birth of a male child, whose "upper limb was like unto a lion, and the lower one resembled a man." As soon as born he roared, and then fell prostrate. Then the sons of God descended upon earth. One of them was so great that the children of man could not measure his height in eighteen hundred years; another was always inebriated as with new wine; a third was firm as a rock; and a fourth swayed mighty kingdoms with his eyebrows. Much there is of this sort of thing, the effect of which will certainly not be to arrest the disintegration of the Brahmo Somaj.—Christian Union.

THE CHILDREN OF THE CHURCH.

It has been suggested that the Church might well expend a fair share of thought just now in devising plans for the diversion and innocent amusement of its children and youth. Stated in this form, without further explanation, the idea would strike one as palpably absurd. The mission of the Church, as the body of Christ, is clearly not to come down from its high position of teaching and disseminating eternal truth to assume the garments and ply the trade of a nursery maid or a showman.

For convenience of expression we shall use the term Church to signify those, any or all of those, who are included in its fold. We do not believe that officially, or corporately, the Christian Church can rightly employ itself in devising plans for amusement or modes of pleasure. This explanation we insert to prevent possible misconception.

But the Church is in the world, though its proper position is that of separation from it. The Church is surrounded by all the temptations to vice and sin, and exposed to all the allurements to evil which satanic ingenuity can invent. The natural tendency of the human heart is all to the service of sin. Those forms of pleasure which lead most surely to destruction are precisely those which, under the impelling force of natural depravity, prove most attractive to the young. The duty of the Church would seem to be to counteract this tendency, not only by unceasingly and unsparingly denouncing evil in all its forms, warning against all evil practice and putting forth its power as it may to the suppression of vice; not only with the Scriptures as its rule of faith and practice by teaching the duty and the desirableness of holiness of life; but, coming to a lower plane, if you will, by leading the young away from the sinful pleasures and follies in which they delight, by instituting and providing what will be at once innocent and enjoyable.

The constitution of our natures demands at times relaxation from the sterner duties of life and some forms of pleasurable exercise for mind and body. This with older ones. With the young playfulness is the imperative demand of nature. The instinct which leads to joyful frolicsomeness is God-given, and in its proper exercise not only a right but a duty. The tendency being to those amusements which lead to folly and sin, should not such means of diversion and recreation be devised as are at once morally healthful and in the highest degree enjoyable?

Satan points the young on the one hand to the Church as opposed to all enjoyment, and admission to its precincts as the ruin of all earthly pleasure, and on the other to the portals of the world wide open to every form of earthly happiness. It is not true indeed, for Satan is a liar from the beginning, but the fallacy deeply imbedded in the heart does its fearful work. Every one who deals with children and youth, every one who has been young, knows the potency of this satanic plea.

In providing means for antagonizing this youthful tendency to folly and sin, we must recognize what has been aptly called the gregarious instinct as the base of all plans. The young will seek the young. We must provide for the assemblages of the young where, among themselves, and yet with those of older growth, they may innocently follow the bent of nature to the full.

We are not for bringing the Church down to the world. We recognize the distinction and insist upon its observance, but we would take the children of the Church from the hands of the world and show them that they may find earthly happiness along with what is infinitely higher, spiritual joy and everlasting good in the bosom of the Church.

THE LIBERAL REACTION.

To give our readers what we suppose to be a fair and clear statement of the effect of the recent political revolution in Great Britain, and to save them from the absurdities which we and others might impose upon them by a treatment of the subject—we say in kindly consideration for our readers—we give them the following from the Christian at Work:

"Some things connected with this Liberal reaction are especially noteworthy. One is the immense influence which is still exerted over the country at large by Mr. Gladstone. His speeches in Lancashire, in 1868, when he was contesting one of the divisions of that county, settle the fate of the Irish Church; and it cannot be doubted that his marvellous Scottish campaign a few months ago has had much to do with the settlement of this election. For a man of seventy years of age, the mere physical strength needed in the making of these efforts is almost unparalleled. But though, like all his other addresses, they were diffuse in some degree, yet the indictment which he made in them against the Beaconsfield administration on the score of its financial mismanagement and its restless Foreign policy was most crushing, while the arguments with which it was enforced were most convincing. To him, therefore, more than to any one man, the turn of the tide is due.

But the Liberals themselves have been wiser in their generation than they have been for years. At the last general election they lost a great many seats owing to the eagerness of those who desired to have their own little crotchets represented in the House of Commons. The Liberation Society wanted to force the disestablishment of the Church into the front, and would make the question of a candidate's supporting that, the hinge on which their support turned. The United Kingdom Alliance was equally anxious about its Permissive Bill, and its adherents would send no one to Parliament unless he would promise to vote for that. It was so also with other questions and their adherents. They would rather split the party and let a Tory go in, than consent to regard their pet prospects as secondary and secure a seat for a Liberal. But on the present occasion, there has been an absence of all such folly. Everything else has been sunk in presence of the danger to the country, its colonies and dependencies, from the continued administration of Beaconsfield. The candidate who seemed on the whole the best has been selected, all rival Liberals have been withdrawn, and when the issue came to be thus squarely between Tories as a whole, and Liberals as a whole, it was not doubtful which would win.

The Nonconformists, who feel, and justly feel, the continued existence of a church establishment to be a great grievance, and the refusal of christian burial to their people in a consecrated churchyard according to their own forms, to be not only an injustice, but an insult, are especially to be commended, for putting patriotism, as they have so nobly done, above denominationalism, and it is to be hoped that the new Liberal administration, which owes so much to them, will set themselves early to the removal of some of their disabilities."

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

We invite special attention to the article on Presbyterial Visitation, in another column. The article, A Burial Service, gives the many reasons for its institution.

In January last the New York Observer offered a premium of $100, for the best Essay designed to counteract some form of Infidelity: The Essay to be written by an undergraduate student in a Theological Seminary. A large number of essays were sent in, the names of the writers being, previously to their decision, unknown to the committee of award. The prize was awarded to Mr. Charles Ghiselin, of Norfolk, Va., a member of the senior class of Union Theological Seminary, Hampden-Sidney, Virginia. The result is very highly creditable to the author and to the Seminary and we note it with pleasure. The Observer states indeed that none of the essays were other than creditable to the writers.

We clipped the Prize Essay as published and hope at an early day to present it to our readers.

Tum's motion finds an enthusiastic second. Hear him!

"Good for Tum'! There is life yet in the North Carolina Church, if we have men bold enough to advocate a measure so revolutionary as that proposed in last week's issue of the N. C. PRESBYTERIAN. If the day is dawning when questions may be considered on their merits and not by standing rules, light is coming with it to warm our hearts and reinforce our ranks. 'Tum' has made a wide furrow. I hope the good seed will send good ripe fruit to the floor of Synod. I like your contributor's suggestion so well that I want to second his motion."

In no spirit of captiousness, but merely to vindicate ourselves, we mildly protest against the admixture of Presbyterial proceedings appearing in the Christian Observer as condensed from this paper.

Wilmington Presbytery has no disposition to invade Mecklenburg and change the name of a church in Buncombe county, nor yet to license Mecklenburg's candidate and send him to labor in Anson county. Orange is not prepared to part with her very efficient Treasurer, and rob Mecklenburg of the services of one, who will prove equally efficient.

Our contemporary slipped up this time—it very seldom does—but we know exactly how it happened. It may be our time next.

The Raleigh Christian Advocate makes a capital point:

"Scientists are spending a great deal of labor in trying to find out where man came from. Would it not be well to give some thought as to where he is going? It is well to know what man came from, but it is transcendentally more important to know what he is going to. The destiny of a being is more important than his origin.

"We see it stated that the Bishop of Ontario has suspended a clergyman for the atrocious crime of partaking of the Holy Communion in a Presbyterian church in company with his aged mother, who was a member of that religious body. And yet there are men in the Episcopal Church who go to the utmost verge of Romish error, who set up the mass and recite prayers for the dead in their churches, and rend their parishes asunder in unholy strife, with scarcely a breath of remonstrance. One such act as that of the Bishop of Ontario is a more hurtful crime against the 'body of Christ,' and does more to alienate from the Church the good will of men, and destroy its power for usefulness, than all the attacks upon it of the arch enemy."

In the above the Christian at Work but expresses general opinion.

We wish to thank the Stated Clerks of our Presbyteries for their promptness in forwarding the proceedings, and for the condensed form in which they are given. People will read them if short, and when too elaborate will pass them by. Obviously there publication is useless if they are not read.

Our contemporary of the Biblical Recorder has compiled a statistical table purporting to show the relative membership of the different Protestant denominations in North Carolina. The table has been published by request, in many, perhaps most, of the papers in the State. Now we do not doubt that our contemporary believes that our Baptist brethren number over 160,000, but—with due respect to our contemporary aforesaid—we don't. Has the Biblical Recorder any reliable official documents such as other denominations possess, setting forth the membership of the Baptist churches in detail? or have we all a right to guess? Let us know how the figures are arrived at.

Says the Covenant, a Reformed Episcopal paper:

"We shall hold ourselves under peculiarly great obligations to the Living Church, the Pacific Churchman, or to any P. E. Church paper, if the editor will have the goodness to cite any passage of Scripture, to show that the Apostles established the Episcopate as an order in the ministry, distinct from, and superior in rank to the Presbyterate? Or as an order in the ministry at all? Or as an intimation to others that they meant it to be so considered?

"If there is such a passage, the divine origin of Episcopacy is at once established; and if there is not—well we ask for the passage?"

Quite so!

NEWS NOTES.

ACCESSIONS AT HAMPDEN SIDNEY.

A correspondent writes that on April 4th, twenty five accessions on profession of faith were made to the College church at Hampden Sidney.

On Sabbath last six persons were received into membership of the First Presbyterian church of Wilmington, N. C., (Rev. Dr. J. R. Wilson, pastor), on profession of faith in Christ, and four persons were received by certificate. Within twelve months past there have been thirty-one additions to this church by examination and several by certificate.

Extra services were held in the Presbyterian church at Tarboro, N. C., from Monday, 29th ulto., to April 3d, inst. Rev. L. H. Baldwin was assisted in the services by Rev. H. T. Darnall, Rev. D. E. Jordan, Rev. J. W. Primrose and Rev. Dr. J. H. Smith. On Tuesday, 30th, ulto., Rev. L. H. Baldwin was duly installed as pastor of the church, Rev. H. T. Darnall as commissioner of Orange Presbytery delivering the charges to pastor and people.

The Tarboro Southerner speaks of the installation services as interesting and impressive, and says of the meetings as a series: They have left an effect for good on the people that will not be eradicated, but will blossom and fruit in increased religious sentiment in the community.

Our friend and Christian brother, Capt. W. J. Potter, who visited the Bahama Islands as a colporteur of the American Tract Society, has returned to his home at Smithville, N. C. In a note to the Morning Star of this city he says: "I met with kind friends, including the Governor, American Consul and all the Ministers. I hope I got the colporteur work so started in the Bahamas that it will prove a great blessing to the people."

Rev. Dr. Harding announced from the pulpit Sunday, that the congregation of the Second Presbyterian church had raised $3,700, lacking only $300 to pay off the entire indebtedness of the church building.—Southern Home, Charlotte, N. C.

HOGE'S CHAPEL, GILES COUNTY, VA

Rev. W. B. Arrowood writes:

"This church was organized about one year and a half ago. Some four months ago two of our energetic young ladies, Misses Willie Sue and Hulda Hoge, conceived the idea of soliciting funds to paint the church. Their plans were not more wisely laid than vigorously executed. In a short time eighty dollars, the amount required for the work, was collected. And now our house of worship, already rejoicing in its new dress, presents a neat and handsome appearance. Just here we would embrace this opportunity to tender our grateful acknowledgements and sincere thanks to the many friends who so generously assisted us in this work.

"Our little church now numbers fifteen resident members. Two were lately received on profession of faith and one by certificate. A few Sabbaths ago the interesting ordinance of a household baptism was celebrated in this church. Others talk of uniting with us soon. "One good turn deserves another." Our church is painted, and now we want to build a parsonage. Who will undertake the work of raising the money, and who will contribute it?"

The same brother informs us that three or four candidates, one of whom is blind, will probably be licensed by Montgomery Presbytery, which meets this week. We hope to have further news for that quarter for next issue.

BETHEL PRESBYTERY.

The Spring Sessions of Bethel Presbytery were held at Beersheba church, beginning April 1st, 1880.

Seventeen ministers and twenty-six elders present.

Rev. W. W. Mills was chosen Moderator, and Rev. G. A. Trenholm Clerk.

Narratives from the churches were encouraging, showing diligence and fidelity on the part of our ministers, and a good degree of zeal and earnestness on the part of the officers and members of the church.

The commission previously appointed reported that they had ordained licentiate J. L. Williamson, and installed him pastor of Waxhaw and Tirzah churches.

The committee on Domestic Missions reported recommending that Presbytery at once take steps to supply the many destitute portions of our territory with the Gospel, and that the churches be affectionately urged to raise the sum of $1,200 as a salary for a suitable evangelist. Here is an inviting field, and with men able and willing to do the work efficiently, several new churches might be organized in our bounds.

The committee on Sabbath Schools gave an encouraging account of their work, yet deploring the want of interest in this good work, manifested in too many of our churches, and the unsuitableness of much of our Sabbath School literature, and recommending that Presbytery urge pastors and sessions to use only the collection of hymns and such Sabbath School aids as are approved by our own Committee.

The work of Foreign Missions received the attention of Presbytery, and evidently has a large share in the affections of our pastors and people. By request of the committee, Presbytery directed pastors and supplies to preach on this subject previous to the Sabbath appointed by the General Assembly for taking up collections for this cause. The committee also requested, and Presbytery authorized, a meeting of the deacons to be held at Blackstock during the summer, said meeting to be addressed by Rev. J. L. Girardeau, D. D., on the subject of the Diaconate.

The work of Colportage has been prosecuted within our bounds for the past twelve months with encouraging results.

Rev. F. L. Leeper and elder J. G. Lowry were chosen principals, and Rev. E. Brantly and elder James Beatty, alternate commissioners to the General Assembly.

J. W. McClure and W. T. Matthews were licensed as probationers for the Gospel ministry.

With an unusual amount of friendly debate and three days pleasant association, Presbytery adjourned to meet at Winnsboro, October 13, 1880, at 7:30 p. m.

CHARLESTON PRESBYTERY.

Met in Columbia, S. C., April 7th. Opening sermon by the last moderator.

Rev. T. P. Hay read an able discourse on Col. i: 27.

Organization.—Rev. G. R. Brackett moderator, Maj. W. G. Vardell temporary clerk.

Delegates to Assembly—Rev. J. R. Girardeau, D. D., and W. A. Clark. Alternates: Rev. J. R. Dow and C. G. Henderson.

Candidates.—J. M. Seabrook was licensed, and S. I. Woodbridge was received under care of Presbytery.

Division of Presbytery—A committee was appointed to report to the next meeting on the feasibility of dividing the Presbytery.

Fraternal Spirit—Several were invited to sit as corresponding members or visiting brethren. Among the latter was a Rev. Mr. Johnston (colored) of Fairfield Presbytery.

Appointed Subjects—A sermon by J. R. Dow on the Higher Christian Life, and a subsequent conference upon the subject were of special interest. At next meeting the question will be debated whether infant baptism ought ordinarily to be part of the Sabbath public service.

Seminary—No action was taken in reference to Columbia Seminary.

Place of next meeting—Beach Island.

A BURIAL SERVICE.

The Presbytery of Orange overtures the General Assembly to provide and have bound with the Psalms and Hymns a suitable burial service for the optional use of laymen. To the writer this action seems very desirable. Will the editor kindly allow a few remarks?

1. The use of this service is not obligatory.

2. It is not even proposed for the use of ministers.

3. It is not a proposed addition to the Directory for Worship. The condnot of funeral services is not a function of the ministry exclusively. Any christian may with propriety conduct a service at the grave as well as in the meeting for prayer, or christian conference. Therefore it is proposed to bind a suitable burial service for the optional use of laymen along with the Psalms and Hymns, where it may be easily accessible.

4. It not infrequently happens that the services of a minister cannot be had. This is specially the case in the country and in thinly settled sections, in the army, and on shipboard. In many of our feeble country churches, which are open for divine worship only once a month, it sometimes happens that the minister may not conveniently attend a funeral, and in such case, one of the elders should conduct the service. The writer would not call an elder a layman, but elders wholly unused to such things would gladly avail themselves of such a help as is proposed. In the writer's own family, it once happened that no minister could be had at the funeral of a child, and a most acceptable service was conducted at the grave by a very intelligent and pious physician.

5. For the want of such a service, easily accessible, recourse is often had by our own people to the prayer book of the Episcopal and the burial service of the Methodist Church. Not by our ministers, of course, but by our laymen and elders. It is assumed that our ministers do not need such a help as that proposed; but in the case of laymen, even those competent to conduct the service without the aid of a form have not often the self-command which comes of use. After a while they could dispense with the crutch of printed forms. Why compel our people to resort to helps afforded by others—the beauty of which is unduly extolled, while their language we cannot approve.

6. Some written form of service is invariably used in the army and navy, and merchant marine, which ever after is endeared, along with the Church issuing it, to the friends and relatives of the deceased. This is a recognized advantage. Why should not the Presbyterian Church afford the same help to laymen and reap the same benefit?

We hope the General Assembly will favorably consider the overture. We have old forms which could be remodeled to suit modern taste. The advantages are obvious, and the usual objections to a liturgy do not obtain against this help for laymen.

PRESBYTERIAL VISITATION.

Following the recommendation of the General Assembly in 1871, some of our Presbyteries are divided into districts which are placed in charge of visiting committees. The Presbytery to which the writer belongs, is divided into six districts, consisting of about eight churches each. These districts are committed to the special care of a committee appointed by Presbytery, consisting of three ministers and two elders. If these elders are absent the members of the committee present can appoint two others, and three constitute a quorum for the transaction of business. These committees are required to visit half the churches in their district every year, and all of them in two years; to inquire into their material moral, and spiritual condition; to endeavor to stimulate their Christian zeal and fidelity, and to report the results of their labors annually to Presbytery.

According to our theory of Church government the Presbytery is the Bishop exercising specified episcopal functions over all the churches within its bounds. Hence each church session is directed to make to Presbytery annual reports exhibiting its financial, moral and religious condition. But these yearly sessional reports are sometimes defective, are often passed over with inadequate attention on the part of Presbytery, and frequently omit important matters, demanding consideration, but deemed beyond the range of such official documents. For these reasons, if there is proper Presbyterial oversight of churches, some other means must be employed besides annual written reports from sessions.

These Committees of Visitation, clothed with Presbyterial authority, having definite instructions, and required to report to the appointing body, have been found very efficient agencies for promoting Presbyterial oversight, and the welfare of the churches. The benefits they secure are numerous.

1st. They may heal dissensions in their incipient stages. Where there are growing differences in congregations between private members or church officers, or the minister and people, these visiting committees may prepare the way for reconciliation and harmony. They may point out the causes of trouble, bring the parties together, and by mutual explanations and wise counsels, restore that cordial good-will which enables "the fruit of righteousness to be sown in peace." They may do this before alienation has become chronic and permanent separation a stern necessity.

2d. They stimulate churches to meet their pecuniary obligations. If there is any debt on church property, or if there are any arrears due pastors the facts are distinctly brought to the attention of the congregation, and officers, and people are urged to prompt measures for settling their indebtedness. Often in anticipation of the coming of the visiting committees, the elders and deacons, will make special efforts to pay their liabilities, so as to make a favorable financial report. Uniformly, if the committee finds a congregation in debt, it is able to initiate steps for securing ultimate payment and maintaining church honesty.

3d. These committees can develop in the churches visited, the grace of giving. They can do this in a variety of ways. In their private and public conferences with the people, they can present the wants and claims of different religious enterprises, suggest the best methods of raising funds, encourage organized systematic effort for this purpose, and expound the Scriptural principles which require and control worshipping God with their substance by all believers.

4th. Such committees can advance the moral and spiritual growth of the churches visited. Spending with each church at least two days, conversing freely with the people in their homes about church work, encouraging church officers in the discharge of their varied and responsible duties, calling attention to the Sabbath school, the prayer-meeting, the monthly concert and other means of grace, and preaching the truths and administering the ordinances of God's word; such visiting brethren may not only refresh and edify believers, but greatly help the shepherd's of each flock, and exert a salutary influence upon its numerical growth by saving impressions made upon the ungodly.

But such machinery, however good, in itself will accomplish little, unless worked with wisdom, system and energy. Visiting committees will confer few benefits if they perform their duties in a hasty, careless or perfunctory manner. They must be willing to grapple with difficulties, and to do patient laborious work if they would bring to the congregations visited, the benefits mentioned, or similar blessings.

MEETING OF COMMISSION.

The Presbytery of Wilmington, at its late meeting, ordered the undersigned commission to ascertain and remove, if possible, the cause of prevailing evils in the Black River church.

The elders, deacons and congregation of said church are hereby directed to meet the commission on Wednesday before the fourth Sabbath in April, at 12 o'clock, at the usual place of worship. The commission will expect a full and unreserved statement of the religious and financial condition of the congregation. There will be services in the church daily during the session of the commission.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

I. K. Funk & Co., New York, publish in their standard series Essays by Thomas Carlyle—Goethe, Burns, Schiller, Luther's Psalm, Memoirs of Mirabeau, Death of Goethe—for 20 cents.

The Life and Works of St. Paul, by Canon Farrar; over 400 pages quarto, printed in clear type, bound in manilla; two parts. Published by I. K. Funk & Co. This capital work, written in the clear and easy flowing style of its distinguished author, is sold for 25 cents for each part.

We have Fifteen Sermons by Bishop Whittingham, a book of 310 pages, bound plainly but substantially in cloth and printed in large type. The sermons are very short, and, with one or two exceptions, are free from denominational bias. In general they are very practical and very clear. Yet we note that the sermon on Worship, Doctrine and Discipline was delivered to Presbyterians and to Methodists. The meeting houses (?) of the latter were used—it is so stated—and (though it is not so stated) the sermon contains at least a due amount of reckless assertion and plausible sophistry.

Scribner's Monthly, volume xix, from November, '79 to April, '80, in olive green cloth, price $3. Contains frontispiece portrait of Peter the Great, and double frontispiece portrait of Bayard Taylor; 430 engravings and 952 octavo pages.

In this book we have all the various articles that have appeared in Scribner's Monthly for the past half-year. Articles on Art, Essays, Biographical sketches, Poems, with Topics of the Time, Communications, Home and Society, Culture and Progress, &c., &c.

Moore's History of North Carolina, through the kindness of the publishers, Messrs. Alfred Williams & Co. of Raleigh, N. C., is before us. The typographical execution is in the highest degree creditable, and the style is popular. If we may credit the laudations the work receives on all hands, the State, not less than the author is to be congratulated on the success of the work. When we shall have found time to read it carefully we propose to discuss it fully and candidly; until then we could not be just to the author, the public and to ourselves by an expression of opinion.

The Presbyterian Review cannot fail to supersede the Princeton Review if it keeps up to the second number, now before us. Published by A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 900 Broadway, N. Y. $3 per annum. Contents: The Chronology of the Kings of Israel and Judah, by Prof. Willis J. Beecher; The Chinese in America, by Prof. James Eels; Deaconesses, by Prof. A. T. McGill; Henry Vaughn, the Poet of Life, by Rev. S. W. Duffield; The Theory of Prof. Kuenen, by Rev. T. W. Chambers, D. D.; A Plea for Evangelical Apologetics, by Rev. John M. Gibson, D. D., and The Exclusiveness of Christianity, by Prof. Samuel H. Kellogg. The article on "Chinese in America" we have read carefully with great interest. Prof. Eels is by location and experience of all men prepared to treat the question ably and judiciously. Dr. Kellogg's "Exclusiveness of Christianity" is another timely article, striking directly at Max Muller's theory with regard to Christianity.

ANECDOTE OF CHALMERS.

Of course this spirit of earnestness was frequently imposed upon. Dr. Chalmers was not only a mighty orator and sagacious scientific thinker, he was a large-hearted and open-handed man. But there was one singular instance in which he lost his temper. He was sitting busily engaged in his study one afternoon when a man was introduced. He was a Jew, professing to be an anxious inquirer. Apologizing for his interruption by saying that he was in very great distress of mind, the Doctor's sympathy was instantly excited.

"Sit down, sir. Be good enough to be seated."

The visitor declared he had been an unbeliever in the divine origin of Christianity, but beneath the touch of the Doctor's eloquence all doubts had vanished; still there was a difficulty which pressed upon him with peculiar force—it was the account the Bible gave of Melchizedek, one of the types of the Christian Messiah, being without father, without mother, &c.

Very kindly, and patiently, and anxiously Chalmers disposed of all these difficulties. The man expressed himself as greatly relieved in his mind, thankfully acknowledging that in the matter of Melchizedek he saw his way very clearly.

"And now," continued he, "doctor, I am in great want of a little money, and perhaps you could help me in that way, too."

At once the object of the visit and the cunning stratagem for obtaining an introduction, was seen, and the wrath of the doctor was aroused. To have been interrupted in his work, to have expended all his eloquence and learning, and patience on this! A tremendous tornado of indignation rolled over the head of the unfortunate mortal as he retreated from the study to the street door.

"It's too bad!" said the orator. "Not a penny, sir; not a penny, sir! It is too bad; not merely to waste my time, but to haul in your mendicity upon the shoulders of Melchizedek!"

MEETING OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

An adjourned meeting of Orange Presbytery will be held at Henderson, N. C., on the 28th of April, inst, at 8 o'clock p. m.

ECLECTICISMS.

STATISTIC FIENDS.

Interior:

There is a class of monomaniacs among the male members of society who are known as statistic fiends. They can tell you to a cent just how much money you waste every year on tea, on coffee, on neckties, on burning two lamps when one would answer. Everything in heaven and earth is a question of dollars and cents. It is to be hoped that the statistical mania will not break loose among the women. Things are hard enough to bear as they are now in this world, without that additional excruciation.

PRAYING IS NOT TEACHING.

United Presbyterian:

Prayer should not be used for information. He to whom we pray does not need our instructions, and no matter how they who lean upon the leader need intelligence he should seek some other way to give it to them. A stated pastor is not so likely to offend in this way as a casual preacher. He wishes to compliment a church, or its pastor, or to give his opinion in respect to some existing condition of affairs among the people, and phrases it all in his petition addressed ostensibly to heaven. The taste of such a perversion is bad, to begin with, but the irreverence of it is its worst fault. The custom of mentioning ministers and making them special objects of prayer in a congregation is a proper one enough, and yet because it is often so abused as to spoil its propriety many judicious persons do not observe it.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE SABBATH.

Presbyterian Journal:

It cannot be doubted that our national prosperity, with all its fruits, has a connection with the Sabbath. The great tree stands alone, but its roots below the ground stretch within the jurisdiction of the Sabbath, and are refreshed and invigorated there. There is a public conscience as well as public opinion, and how much of all that is purest, loftiest and best in public opinion may be traced to the influence of the Sabbath and the exercises of the sanctuary, time will never be able to unfold.

LIBERTY TAKEN.

Christian Intelligencer:

We take the liberty of suggesting to the political spiders who are weaving their webs so industriously over every election district in the land, that history and the experience of the past make it pretty sure that before they have caught the flies, the housemaid will be along with her broom. Our sharp political managers are really the most shortsighted of men, because they leave out of the account God, history, conscience, the individual will, the great currents of providence and popular opinion, and above all, the quiet undercurrent of third party thought and purpose, the depths of which their shallow plummets are utterly unable to sound.

COMFORTING TO KNOW.

Herald and Presbyter:

It is comforting to know that, though we cannot of ourselves do anything, we have assurances of help if we seek it aright. We may labor for souls with as much confidence as a farmer plows and seeds his ground. The words, "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread," were a promise as well as a judgment. They assure the worker his food; God promises rewards to his faithful servants. We may sow the seed of the word in confidence, knowing that it shall not return void but accomplish his purposes.

NO KEEPER OF CONSCIENCE.

Christian at Work:

If one offends against the laws of the State let him be judged by the laws of the State; against the laws of a church, let him be judged by the laws of the church: beyond this no man can afford to go, for no one has any grace to spare, nor can any one afford however willing some may be, to assume the office of keeper of the conscience of others. When the great apostle enjoined upon the Christians in Rome to be diligent in business, he did not mean that they should overcharge themselves with the business of others, as much as that they should attend to their own affairs. There would seem to be danger of forgetting this, sometimes.

NO MIND TO WORK.

Southern Presbyterian:

But with all that the wisest and best organizers can do, there will still be many whom no harness will fit, and to whom no burden of duty can be adjusted. They never can be pleased, no matter what is given them to do. The work is either too hard for their humble abilities, or too small for their pride. Some are unwilling to work except in the lead. They must have a conspicuous and honorable post; their views and plans must be deferred to by all; they must hear of what they accomplish; at least they must feel that their services are of the highest importance and value. It is almost useless to say that such persons have no real "mind to work," and that the value of all they do is lost for want of a right spirit.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

PRESBYTERIAN (SOUTH).

Items condensed from the Central Presbyterian:

At a recent conference of the ministers and elders of the Presbyterian churches of Richmond, Va., steps were taken towards securing a Presbyterian minister for the western part of the city.

An interesting and profitable meeting has recently been held in the Loch Willow church, Lexington Presbytery. The pastor, Rev. A. S. Moffitt, was assisted by Rev. C. L. Hogue. The additions to the church were five by certificate and nine by profession of faith. Of the latter, four were baptized, and five were members of the Bible classes of the Sabbath school. Thirty members have been added during the year.

Twenty-seven have been added to Bethel church, in Lexington Presbytery during the year. The congregation is in a prosperous condition, and owes now a very small sum which will be paid before the Presbytery meets. This church is 103 years old. Rev. Dr. McFarland was its pastor forty-two years, and during the first twelve years of his ministry there was an average increase of forty members per year to the church. Two other churches, Shemeriah and Mt. Carmel, have been formed in large measure from Bethel. Rev. James Murray is the pastor at present.

Mr. Frank W. Pitman, a student of Union Theological Seminary, has been engaged as colporteur by the Committee of Publication in Lexington Presbytery, and will enter upon his work immediately after the close of the session.

Laurensville (S. C.) Herald: Rev. Ferdinand Jacobs, D. D., President of the Laurensville College has accepted a unanimous call to the pastoral charge of the Presbyterian church on James Island, near Charleston. He will, however, remain in his present position till the close of the current session of the college, at the end of June next.

Items condensed from the Christian Observer:

Rev. Rutherford Douglas has been elected to succeed Rev. Dr. R. L. Breck, as chancellor of Central University.

A two weeks meeting in Portland Avenue church, Louisville, Ky., has just closed. The Spirit of God manifested its presence graciously. Prayer meetings and other services were attended by large and attentive audiences. Seven persons made a profession of faith and were received into the church. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Morrison was assisted by Rev. J. H. Moore, Rev. E. O. Guerrant and Rev. T. E. Converse.

Mr. Alonzo R. Cooke of Union Theological Seminary has been invited to supply the church at Carrollton, Ky.

Seven persons received into Bethel church, West Lexington Presbytery.

Rev. Jerry Witherspoon, on Sabbath 4th inst., was installed pastor of the church at Jackson, Tenn. A correspondent writes to the Observer: Crowds gather day and night on the Sabbath to hear sound, able and eloquent sermons from the earnest and gifted young pastor. Men who have not been in the habit of attending church may be seen there now. Prominent saloon men, skeptical and irreligious lawyers—men of all classes—are among his auditors.

Rev. G. S. Roudebush of Crystal Springs, Miss., has been offered a choice of departments as professor in the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical college.

Rev. M. C. Hutton has changed his post-office address from Staunton, Tenn., to Corinth, Miss.

Items from the St. Louis Presbyterian:

The Prescott church, a part of the charge of Rev. W. E. Burke, has about doubled its membership since its organization, last October.

Rev. John K. Hitner, who is temporarily engaged in special missionary work, has for convenience sake changed his postoffice from Maysville to Georgetown, Ky.

On the 4th inst., the names of sixteen persons were announced as received into the church at Little Rock, of which Dr. T. R. Welch is pastor. Ten of these new members were admitted on profession of faith, and six by letter.

The Central church, (Dr. Brank's) whose financial embarrassment a few months ago excited grave apprehensions, has made a very creditable record. In its great trial and straits, its liberality has abounded: We learn that, from April 1, 1879, to March 31, 1880, notwithstanding its struggle with a very burdensome debt, it has contributed to the several benevolent schemes of our Church $708 43, of which the sum of $551 was given to foreign missions. The total amount above mentioned is nearly one-half the entire contribution of the Presbytery of St. Louis during the same period.

Items from the Southwestern Presbyterian:

On last Sabbath four persons renounced Rouanism and were received into the membership of the Third Presbyterian church (Dr. Smith's) New Orleans. They consisted of a matron, over three score years of age; a young man, the head of a family, and a sailor.

We learn with pleasure that a member of the Lafayette Presbyterian church, New Orleans, has presented to that church the handsome gift of a full set of gas fixtures—chandeliers, standards and brackets, surmounted by opal globes, lighting up its audience room and vestibules. We congratulate Dr. Markham and his people on this expression of good will from one of their number. The addition of ten members at their Communion, last Sabbath, is another gratifying token of divine favor.

Rev. W. S. Johnson writes to the Texas Presbyterian: Rev. T. J. Stone, stated supply of Cleburne Presbyterian church, while on his way to the school room, March 18th, was stricken down with paralysis. His speech was not affected, and reports from him on Friday 26th, were favorable.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

Four Chinese, from a class of about twenty-five Chinese in Rev. W. A. Bartlett's Sabbath school of the Second Presbyterian church in Indianapolis, were admitted to the church the last Sabbath in January.

Rev. Dr. John McCloskey, the oldest member of Presbytery of Philadelphia Central, died on 31st ult., in his 85th year.

Rev. Andrew Johnston, a member of the Presbytery of Albany, died suddenly on Saturday, the 20th ult., at the age of 71.

BAPTIST.

The First Baptist church of Indianapolis, on Sabbath mornings, sends a messenger to the hotels with small printed cards of invitation to the church services, which are distributed to the guests. After the invitation the cards have these words: "If tempted, or in trouble, or neglected, or a stranger, the pastor may have a word for you."

CONGREGATIONAL.

A Congregational church of twenty members has been formed at Stewartsville, Minn.

The First Congregational church of Manchester, N. H., receives a bequest from the late Mrs. Dr. Elliott of a house and land for a parsonage, and $2,000 as a trust fund, the income of which is to be expended for the poor of the church. Also $2,000 is to be given the society as soon as its debt shall be reduced to that amount.

REFORMED (DUTCH).

Mr. J. H. Warner of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., recently deceased, has left $2,000 each to the Board of Domestic Missions and the Board of Foreign Missions of the Reformed Church.—Christian Intelligencer.

The will of the late Miss A. E. Williams of Stapleton, L. I., makes the Board of Foreign Missions and the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church, the American Bible Society and the American Tract Society her residuary legatees. There will be about $12,000 to be divided equally.—Ibid.

METHODIST.

Two hundred thousand dollars, the sum necessary to clear the Methodist Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., of debt, have been subscribed and an agent is employed in collecting.

The endowment fund of $500,000 of the Drew Theological Seminary at Madison, N. J., was lost by the failure of Daniel Drew, in 1876. Two hundred and eighty thousand dollars have been raised towards replacing the amount lost.

Net sales of the New York Book Concern amounted to $800,000 last year. Net profits $70,000.

GENERAL.

Messrs. William H. Vanderbilt, C. K. Garrison, William E. Dodge, James Talcott and others have subscribed $30,000 toward a fund of $100,000 for the purpose of founding a permanent institution for the New York Christian Home for Intemperate Men.

PRESBYTERIAL NOTICES.

The Presbytery of Fayetteville will meet at Laurel Hill church, Richmond county, N. C., Wednesday, April 21, 1880, at 11 o'clock a. m.

The usual blanks will be mailed to all the churches in due time. Let these blanks be carefully filled and sent up to Presbytery at Laurel Hill.

The assessments for the "Presbyterial Fund" are considered due April 1st, and should be promptly paid. Churches which are credited to this fund will be duly notified by the Treasurer. J. P. McPHERSON,
Stated Clerk.

Fayetteville, N. C., Feb. 7, 1880.

Ministers and elders who expect to come by railroad to the approaching meeting of Presbytery to be held at Laurel Hill church, will be met with conveyances at Laurinburg on Wednesday morning, the 21st inst. The train from Wilmington arrives about 1 o'clock a. m., and the train from Charlotte between 3 and 4 a. m. Members coming on either of these trains will be accommodated with lodging and breakfast at the hotel near the depot, kept by Mr. Rivenbark. Members expecting to come by rail but at later date than that above mentioned will please notify us at once of the time they expect to arrive.

A. N. FERGUSON,
Laurinburg, N. C.

The next Presbytery stands adjourned to meet at Davidson College on Thursday, April 22, at 11 a. m. WM. W. PHARR, S. C.

All who expect to attend Presbytery are requested to notify Mr. H. P. Helper, Davidson College.

The trial of one bottle of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer will show most beneficial effect upon the hair and scalp.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

From the Rev. Dr. Harvey, the well known Financial and Educational Secretary of the Howard University.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

H. H. Warner & Co.:

GENTLEMEN: I take pleasure in stating that I have for two years past been acquainted with the remedy known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, and with its remarkable curative efficiency in obstinate and so-called incurable cases of Bright's Disease in this city. In some of these cases, which seemed to be in the last stages, and which had been given up by practitioners of both schools, the speedy change wrought by this remedy seemed but little less than miraculous. I am convinced that for Bright's Disease in all its stages no remedy heretofore discovered can be held for one moment in comparison with this.

Respectfully yours, C. A. HARVEY, D. D.

PEELS YOUNG AGAIN.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, Providence, R. I.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN D. BROWN, OF SALISBURY.—Our own acquaintance with Mr. Brown was of the most casual kind, but such as would lead us to regard the terms expressed to us not over-wrought: "A high-toned, honest, obliging, Christian gentleman." He died of Bright's disease of the kidneys, aged about sixty years. The papers of Salisbury and Charlotte speak of his strict integrity, his generous disposition, his pious example, his upright life. A noble record truly.

For about forty years of his life he was a member of the Presbyterian church at Salisbury, and for years a deacon of that church. When a good man falls the world is a loser.

We are pleased to learn that the school of Maj. W. B. Lynch, at High Point, is prospering. The number of pupils on the roll has increased since we last referred to it. He expects by the next term to employ another teacher.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

The one hundredth anniversary of the Battle of Guilford Court House was celebrated at Greensboro, N. C., on the 6th, inst., The regular order of business was opened by an address from Col. Thos. S. Kenan, Attorney General of the State, Gov. Jarvis being detained at home by sickness. A large number of distinguished North Carolinians were present and a number of fine addresses delivered. Numerous letters were received expressing the regrets of the writers at enforced absence. An association was formed to be styled the Centennial Association of the Battle of Guilford Court House. Gov. T. J. Jarvis was elected President, Judge R. P. Dick, Vice President, and R. T. Fulghum, Esq., Secretary. The Centennial Committee consists of many of the prominent citizens of Guilford.

A heavy hail storm visited the Western part of this State on Monday last, doing great damage to the growing crops along the Blue Ridge range, from Jefferson, in Ashe county, to the Hickory, Nut Gap, Buncombe county.—Asheville Journal.

It is not generally known that a letter M is stamped on the neck of the Goddess of Liberty which adorns the new dollar of the daddies. It is a pretty good test of counterfeit. To one who does not know its exact position it is right hard to find.—Charlotte Observer.

There are only twelve dollars known to be in existence of the date of 1804. The scarcity makes them valuable. Collectors will give $1,000 for them.

The aggregate of the contributions from this country to the Irish Relief Fund amounts to $1,002,600. This amount is larger than from all other sources combined.

The Standard announces that the King of Siam will leave Bangkok early in April, to visit the chief capitals of Europe. After a short stay in England he will leave for the United States, and the American Government will send a man-of-war to Southampton to escort him thither.

There will soon be sent out from the State hatchery at Corry, Pa., between 400,000 and 500,000 brook trout for stocking streams in Western Pennsylvania.

Dr. Joseph Angus of England reminds the Christian world of the fact that with 50,000 missionaries at work and $75,000,000 a year to support them, the Gospel might be preached again and again to every human being within ten years.

Count von Moltke, the great German Field Marshal and War Director, or "battle-thinker," as he is styled in their expressive language, says that every war, even if it succeeds in victory, is a national misfortune.

The largest plough that was ever known to be made was recently turned out by an Illinois firm of agricultural machinery makers, for use on the St. Louis, Iron Mountain, & Southern Railway. It is calculated to cut a ditch 30 inches wide and 2 feet deep, and is worked by attaching it to a platform car of a construction train by means of timbers framed and extending out so that the plough cuts its ditch a sufficient distance from the track. It cuts a furrow 8 inches deep each time, requiring three of them to reach the proper depth, and it will make one mile of ditch 2 feet deep and 3 feet wide every four hours, thus doing the work of about 1,000 men. Its total weight is 1,700 pounds.

A very destructive fire occurred in Wilmington on the early morning of Sabbath last. A large brick building, the property of Mr. B. H. J. Abrens, built for stowing ice but used latterly as a warehouse for hay and grain, the hardware store of Mr. G. A. Peck, the grocery store of Mr. A Rush and the dwelling of Mr. L. Solomon, the last two in the same building, were consumed, and the bakery of Mr. D. J. Gilbert totally wrecked. During the progress of the fire the walls of the warehouse, mentioned above, fell in and several persons escaped death almost miraculously. Mr. Charles D. Burkhimer had an arm broken, Mr. D. H. Farrow got out but became unconscious shortly after. At last accounts Mr. Farrow was improving and will probably recover, though his condition is still critical. Capt. William Ellerbrook, of the steamer Wm. Nyce, was caught under the falling walls and crushed to death. His body, badly burned, even charred, was recovered a few hours after the fire. His dog was found at his side with a bit of clothing in his mouth, showing that even in death he was trying to draw away his master to a place of safety.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and Throat and Lung, Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative power in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French, or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. W. SHERAR, 149 Powers' Block, Rochester, New York.

THROAT DISEASES OFTEN COMMENCE with a Cold, Cough, or unusual exertion of the voice. These incipient symptoms are allayed by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches," which if neglected often result in a chronic trouble of the Throat.

15 Pounds Gained in Three Weeks, and CURED OF CONSUMPTION.

Messrs. Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa.

GENTLEMEN:—Please send me twelve bottles of DR. A. JAMES' CANNABIS INDICA, one each of Pills and Ointment, for a friend of mine who is not expected to live; and as your medicines cured me of CONSUMPTION some three years ago, I want him to try them. I gained fifteen pounds while taking the first three bottles, and I know it is just the thing for him.

Respectfully, J. V. HULL.
Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

This remedy speaks for itself. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical. There is not a single symptom of CONSUMPTION that it does not dissipate at once, and it will break up a fresh cold in 24 hours. $2 50 per bottle. Address
CRADDOCK & Co., 1032 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa.

WE HAVE known persons to doctor for years for Consumption, all to no effect. Though they had a cough, felt pains in the lungs, were depressed, weak and many other symptoms tending to that disease, yet there was no structural unsoundness of the lungs, all these symptoms being caused by the liver being sluggish and the stomach weak. In all such cases the diseased conditions yield readily to Simmon's Liver Regulator, and the patient is invariably brought back to health.

"I have been down ten years with Liver Disease. I have had a severe pain in my left side for three years with dry cough; this last Fall the cough became severe, and I coughed up half a gallon a day. The best doctors in Atlanta and my settlement said it was the last stage of Consumption. I was weakened down so by New Year's day that I had to take my bed. I sent and got your medecine (Simmon's Liver Regulator), and have taken it regularly. My cough is nearly gone; I am able to sit up half the day. G. M. DODD, N. P., East Point, Ga."

At 3 o'clock, on Wednesday morning, April 7th, 1880, GEORGE CAREY, aged 6 years, 2 months and 5 days, second child of James H. and Annie Maria Taylor.

Just before he died, he said "I'm so tired, I want to go to sleep," and then he rested.

In this city on the morning of the 5th inst., Mr. WILLIAM HARRISON BIDDLE, in the 60th year of his age.

Deceased was a native of Onslow county, but had been a resident of Wilmington for about twenty-five years. He leaves a bereaved widow and three children, besides several other relatives and a large circle of friends to mourn his departure. We trust that our loss is his eternal gain.

"Thou art gone to the grave—we no longer behold thee,
Nor tread the rough paths of the world by thy side;
But the wide arms of mercy are spread to enfold thee,
And sinners may hope since the sinless has died."

FOR THE FAMILY.

The Way.

SIDNEY G. LAW.

I.

Father, thou leadest by a darksome way
  The children of thy love,
A way they "know not," tho' it leads to-day
  And to Thy home above!

II.

A way beset with trials, swept with storms,
  Oft hid by blinding tears,
Tangled with thorns, haunted by dreadful forms,
  Of woes, and doubts, and fears.

III

But Oh! Dear Lord, may I but always know
  That Thou art ever near!
Serene and patient thro' the gloom I'll go,
  And smile at doubt and fear.

IV.

Help me, oh help me to receive Thy Word,
  And in Thy love to trust;
Assured, Dear Jesus, Thou, my Guide, my Lord,
  Art tender, true, and just.

V.

Thou wouldst not choose for me a path too rough,
  A path Thou wouldst not tread:
No—let me hush my murmurs—'tis enough
  That Thy dear feet have bled!

VI.

And so to glory and to God I go,
  Led on by love divine,
Smiling midst pain and tears, since well I know
  That God and heaven are mine!

FORTY DOLLARS.

"What! Forty dollars more? Forty dollars for trimmings? My mother never spent so much on any dress. And you have the dress. I hate to seem cross, my dear, but with so many business men failing every day, one sees the wisdom of economy. Explain, my dear."

"Well, papa," said Emma, "it is just this: Madame Farine says that I need ten yards of a trimming at four dollars a yard. The dress is half finished, and really money goes so. There were other things to get. I'm ashamed to ask, but I was obliged to do so."

"Very well, my dear," replied the merchant, "there is the money, but I don't think you'll need any more before Christmas. Times are not good, you know, and—dear me! forty dollars for a trimming! Women are getting worse than ever."

Emma Rome slipped the roll of notes into her purse with a feeling that it was dearly bought; but fate has placed so many women in the condition of beggars, and it is so customary to do as Emma did, that she almost wondered at the little pang which shot through her breast Besides, her father seemed to forget the matter soon, and she knew that he was called rich—that, actually, forty dollars was but a small sum for him. So, breakfast over, and Mr. Rome off for that mysterious region known as "down town," she dressed herself becomingly and started on her shopping expedition. On the way, thoughts of her new dress ran through her mind. She intended to wear it on an occasion which to her seemed very important. Some one was to be present whose opinion she valued—some one she herself admired very much. Did he admire her?

She had asked herself the question over and over again. She had even pulled away the petals of a marguerite one by one, counting them as they fell with the words: "He loves—he loves me not." And there were to be many handsome girls present, and she was not vain. Eh, she must look as well as possible!

Thus absorbed, she suddenly found herself several blocks below her destination. There was nothing for it but to walk back, and the way led through streets filled with miserable tenement houses. The fashionable girl hurried along until, all at once, she found a sort of barricade across the street. The middle object of this barricade was a sewing machine, to which, on one side, clung a woman, and on the other a man. The woman was crying; the tears splashed down on her hands. An attendant crowd of residents contemplated the scene with evident interest, and Emma Rome became, perforce, one of their number.

Scarcely ever in her life before had Emma Rome been in close contact with actual misery. Poor, to her, simply meant not rich. Now she was among rags, dirt and misery, forced to stand still for a moment and look upon it. At first, the only emotion it excited was disgust. But as she was about to seek a passage through the squalid crowd, words fell upon her ear that arrested her attention:

"Forty dollars I've paid you on that machine, and now you'll not give me time. I only ask time. I'm an honest woman. I'll pay you. Man, do you know it's all there is between us and starvation? Let me have the thing back. It's but ten dollars I owe you."

"You've owed that two months," replied the man. "Come, let go. Missus. I don't want to hurt you. I've go: to obey orders. 'Money or the machine,' was what the boss said."

But the woman did not relinquish her hold. Still clutching the machine, she turned her agonizing eyes upon the bystanders.

"Forty dollars," she repeated, "and the machine but fifty, and he's taking it. I never failed until Jim broke his leg, and his work stopped, and his wages with it, and I'd doctor's bills and all."

"No, that she didn't," cried a voice from the crowd. "I'm knowing to her honesty."

"And he'd better be off with his cart," cried a man who had stalked out of the entry of the house near which the crowd had gathered, rolling up his sleeves.

"Look here, good people," explained the man who held the machine, "I don't want to do this. I obey orders or lose my place and my bread and butter. She'd better go to the boss and talk to him—not to me."

"I've been," said the woman. "He's made of stone. I told him he'd starve us. He will. There, what is the use of my fighting like a drunken body in the street?—a decent woman. They've more than the worth of the thing now, God knows; but they've the power. Take it." And she let go her hold and covered her eyes with her hands.

But instead of those rough, red fingers, others, dainty and small, and well-gloved, came down on the cover of the machine. Emma Rome had pressed forward, and now spoke:

"Stop," she said, "will you let this woman keep her machine if I pay you ten dollars?"

"Them's the boss' orders, Miss," replied the man, "and I'd be glad to do it, too."

Then while the crowd gathered close, and the woman who had told her piteous tale sobbed with joy, Emma drew the sum named from her purse, received in return a receipt, which she gave to the poor woman, and experienced for the first time the delight which the performance of an utterly unselfish act brings with it.

Moreover, when the machine had been borne up-stairs, Emma, who had exchanged a few words with its owner, followed her to her miserable room, noted its poverty, heard all the bitter tale. It was a true one—the hot tears told that.

"But I don't mind anything now, Miss," sobbed the narrator. "Now the machine is my very own, I don't mind how hard I work. And the only great tug is the landlord—four dollars a month for rent."

"As much a month as a yard of that trimming" thought Emma, with a little pang.

She questioned the woman further, and found that her landlord "lived down-stairs." And before she turned from the door she had emptied her purse, and had paid three months' rent in advance.

"Your husband will be well and at work by that time," she said, [illegible] no regrets for the lost fringe [illegible] way homeward. Nay, she [illegible] to the soul when Madame Farine remarked, with a glance that said volumes:

"The black lace from your old grenadine dress? Certainly, since it is your taste."

The dress, however, was not unbecoming, despite the refurnished lace, and Emma wore it to the party. She was quite conscious that every woman of her acquaintance knew what the dress was trimmed with, but her conscience whispered to her that she had done right. Moreover, the light of the better thought was on her face. Somehow Arthur Maine found himself more than ever attracted by it, and as she drove home that night, Emma felt that the marguerite which had said to her, "he loves," had been no false prophet.

She had learned two lessons in a little while; one, that the poor might be clothed and fed from the trimmings of the rich; the other, that extravagance in dress never yet won any man's heart. She never forgot either.—Presbyterian Journal.

Newsboy Nabobs.

The ragged little urchin who rushes about the streets of New York with his cry of "Sun," "Times," "Herald," or "Shine," any day in the week, is no doubt the last being one would set down as taking any care for the future, or laying by a store for the proverbial "rainy day." He seems a happy-go-lucky little chap, taking the world as it comes, with no care for the future beyond selling out his stock of papers and not finding himself "stuck," as he expresses it, at the end of the day. But the New York newsboy, or bootblack, is not the improvident being which the majority of people take him for, as recent inquiry at the Newsboys' Home on Duane street proves.

The number of newsboy lodgers at this place ranges from about two hundred and two hundred and eighty in winter, to one hundred and fifty in summer. Of this number about fifty or sixty patronize the Newsboys' Savings Bank, and those lads will average about twelve dollars a month in savings. Some of the more enterprising—possibly the most self-[illegible]—have run the figure up as high as [illegible] dollars in the same space of time. Many of these young depositors put their money in the bank simply for the interest allowed, and draw it all when the interest has accumulated to what seems to them a princely sum. Others have the winter outfit in view, and [illegible] go for them clothing at the first cold snap. To encourage this spirit of saving in the boys prizes are given at the end of every month to the boy having the largest "pile"—five dollars to the first, three dollars to the second, and one dollar to the third.

"How are you enabled to offer this interest, and these prizes, since the money is allowed to remain in the bank, and not invested in any way?" was asked by the writer of the superintendent.

"O, the amounts are given by the Children's Aid Society and by a liberal gentleman of means in this city for the purpose of encouraging this provident spirit in the boys. They usually take their money, principal and interest, to buy clothing or books with, but some spend it foolishly. Some of the boys keep their earnings in regular banks outside.

"Few boys sleep here in summer, as they can lie around most anywhere, and it is then that they save the greatest amount of money, not having any room rent to pay," continued the reporter's informant. "They pay six cents for a lodging, six cents for supper, and six cents for breakfast."

The reporter was shown through the [illegible]. There is a large apartment used as a dining room and for evening schools, or Sunday night gathering. When not in use the tables, which consist of long boards laid across "horses," are compactly stored away in one corner. The rooms of the matron, Mrs. O'Connor, open off this assembly room. The large room contains a piano and other articles of household adornment dear to the feminine heart, such as a singing canary in a gilded cage, &c.

Above this is the dormitory, with its neat rows of iron bedsteads, all furnished with clean bedding and warm counterpanes. Around the walls are placards bearing in very "audible" type such legends as these: "Boys who swear or chew tobacco cannot sleep here." "Boys having homes are not received here." Another placard announces that "washing will be done for the boys every Thursday, free."

Off the dormitory is the bath room and wash room, amply fitted up with all the modern devices for facilitating cleanliness, bath tubs, wash tanks, foot baths, &c.

An evening school is opened on the first of October, and continues during the cold months, and meetings are held every Sunday evening in the large hall.—N. Y. Witness.

Alexander.

The present Emperor of Russia, Alexander II, was born April 29, 1818, and is consequently nearly 62 years of age. He is said to be "a large, ox-eyed man, with a look of sadness and perplexity." He is also said to be subject to melancholy period of hypochondriasis, during which existence seems but a dreary blank to him. He is haunted by fears of sudden death, and by the dread of assassination. At these times he moons about on apparently solitary walks with a large dog, but there is always a policeman handy to keep the sacrilegious from approaching him. When well he devotes much of his time to changing his costume with much stolid perseverance, and he likes to be attended by a humpbacked Privy Councilor, who acts as foil to his fine figure, and sets it off; for he is a well built man, tall and straight, though rather too German in the rotundity of certain of his curves. His father, Nicholas, who was in many respects a notable sovereign, had him very carefully brought up, and foreseeing that he would want support, perhaps devotion in after life, to counteract his apathy, surrounded him with some select young men who could be relied upon. This little band of cronies have hung together ever since. They have lived with and on the Emperor, without interruption, from the time of his accession until now. He provides for their wants; they dip their fingers into his purse whenever they are so minded. He is a loosely hung emperor, more like the good fellow of a free-and-easy club than the despotic master of millions, when in the midst of these his familiars. He has been known to sit in his shirt sleeves, a-straddle on a chair, hobnobbing with them.—Christian at Work.

Tigers and Elephants in India.

Ten years after the famine of 1770 a once populous district was a silent jungle, and in 1780 a small body of Sepoys could with difficulty force its way through its forests. In vain the East India Company offered a reward for each tiger's head sufficient to maintain a peasant's family in comfort for three months—an item of outlay which our officers deemed so important that when, in the financial crisis of 1790-91, the Treasury had to suspend all payments, it made the tiger money and diet allowance for prisoners the sole exceptions to the rule. In vain it spent the whole land revenue of a frontier district in rewards for killing wild beasts. A belt of jungle filled with ferocious animals lay for years around the cultivated land. The official records frequently speak of the mail bags being carried off by tigers, and the custom of the mail runners carrying jangling rings or bells to scare away the wild beasts survived to our own day. Lord Cornwallis, in 1789, had to sanction a grant of public money to free the military roads from the depredations of the animals. The ravages of the wild elephants were on a larger scale, and their extermination formed one of the most important duties of the British officers after the country passed under our rule. Tigers, leopards and wolves slew their thousands of men and their hundreds of thousands of cattle. But the herd of wild elephants was absolutely resistless, lifting off roofs, pushing down walls, trampling a village under foot as if it were a city of sand which a child had built upon the shore. In two parishes alone, during the last few years of the native administration, 56 hamlets with their surrounding lands "had all been destroyed and gone to jungle, caused by the depredations of wild elephants." Another official return states that 40 market villages throughout Birbhum district had been deserted from the same cause. Large reductions had to be made in the land tax, and the East India Company borrowed tame elephants from the native Viceroy's stud in order to catch the wild ones. "I had ocular proof on my journey," writes an English officer in 1791, "of their ravages. The poor timid native ties his cot in a tree, to which he retires when the elephants approach, and silently views the destruction of his cottage and the whole profits of his labor." "One night," writes an English surveyor in 1810, "although I had a guard, the men of the village close to my tent retired to the trees, and the women hid themselves among the cattle, leaving their huts a prey to the elephants, who know very well where to look for grain. Two nights before some of them had unroofed a hut in the village, and had eaten up all the grain which a poor family possessed."—Christian at Work.

Stonewall Jackson, the Professor.

My first recollection of Stonewall Jackson is when I was a college-boy at Lexington, Va., in the fall of 1860. I am not able to say whether it was the peculiar carriage of the stiff, military-looking institute professor who daily passed the college-grounds that was of chief interest to the students of Washington College, or whether the stories told of daring and reckless courage in his early military life invested him with a halo of romance and made him an object of hero-worship in their youthful minds. Whatever the cause, the solid tramp of Major Jackson on the plank walk would be the signal to stop all games of mirth that may have been in progress on the college campus until he had passed. The stiff, stolid-looking man would pass on, turning his head neither to the right nor left, but a single touch of his cap was the silent recognition given of the deferential respect shown by the boys.

"Old Jack," as he was familiarly called by cadets and students, was so plain in manner and attire, there was so little effort at show, his feet were so large and his arms and hands fastened to his body in such an awkward shape, that the cadets didn't take much pride in him as a professor. They feared him in the lecture room, they paid the strictest deference to him on parade, but in showing a stranger the sights about the Institute a cadet was never known to point out "Old Jack" as one of the ornaments of the institution. He was more popular with the college students, who did not have the same reasons for fearing the austerity of his manner, but who knew him as the son-in-law of their college president, Rev. Dr. George Junkin.

My first meeting with General Jackson in the social circle was one evening when he called to see a friend at our boarding house. I shall never forget the impression his manner and appearance made upon me. Boy as I was, I looked upon him with a reverential awe. I had heard the stories of his struggles in early life; of how he had walked from his house in Lewis county to Washington to receive his appointment as a cadet to West Point; of his being ill prepared, and the difficulty he had in keeping up with his classes; and then I had heard of his brilliant career in Mexico, of his mounting the walls of Churubusco with the American flag in his hands; and here now was the hero of my youthful enthusiasm before me. He was so different from what I thought a hero ought to be! There was so little animation, no grace, no enthusiasm. All was stiffness and awkwardness. He sat perfectly erect, his back touching the back of the chair nowhere; the large hands were spread out, on each knee, while the large feet, sticking out at an exact right-angle to the leg (the angle seeming to have been determined with mathematical precision), occupied an unwarranted space. The figure recalled to my boyish mind what I had once seen—a rude Egyptian-carved figure intended to represent one of the Pharaohs.

But when the conversation commenced I lost sight of the awkward-looking figure. I even lost the reverential awe which had so deeply impressed me at first. I only saw the mild eyes emitting gentle beams, and only heard a soft, melodious voice—speaking, it is true, in short, crisp sentences—but withal as mild and winning as a woman's. I then understood how it was that Major Jackson could be a hero. Underlying that rough, uncomely exterior was a vein of the most exquisite sentiment. In the soul of the man was that magnetism which attracted and that power which controlled and made him the master of his fellowmen. In after days, when I saw the uplifting of his dusty cap excite the wildest enthusiasm among his veteran legions, I knew whence the power emanated.—Wheeling Regulator.

Cut Your Flowers Freely.

All lovers of flowers should remember that one blossom allowed to mature or go to seed injures the plant more than a dozen new buds. Cut your flowers, all of them, before they begin to fade. Adorn your rooms with them; put them on your table; send bouquets to your friends who have no flowers, or exchange favors with those who have. All roses, after they have ceased to bloom, should be cut back, that the strength of the root may go to forming new roots for next year.

The Horseshoe "For Luck."

The origin of this horseshoe superstition has never been satisfactorily explained. Among the theories offered, that contained in the following will rank as among the possibilities:

"The horseshoe was of old held to be of special service as a security against the attacks of evil spirits. The virtue may have been assigned, perhaps, by the rule of contraries, it being incompatible with the cloven foot of the Evil One; or from the rude resemblance which the horseshoe bears to the rays of glory which in ancient pictures are made to surround the heads of saints and angels; or, finally from some notions of its purity, acquired by passing through the fire. This latter supposition receives some countenance from the method reported [illegible] the care of horses that had become vicious or afflicted by any distemper which village [illegible] disease was [illegible] attributed to witchcraft, and the [illegible] to imply the belief that the [illegible] by fire of the shoes which the animal wore had afforded an inlet to m[illegible]. Accordingly, the horse w[illegible] the door was closed and barred; the shoes were taken off and placed in the fire, and the witch or warlock was speedily under the necessity of removing the spell under which the animal suffered..... Sailors are, for the most part, careful to have a horseshoe nailed to the mizzenmast, or somewhere on the deck near midships, for the protection of the vessel. The Chinese have their tombs built in the shape of the horseshoe, which custom is very serious, as it may be fairly regarded as a branch of the superstition long prevalent among ourselves."

The storm of Saturday night on the Alb Lina is reported as terrific, [illegible] damage, we learn, was done that splendid [illegible]. But whether occurred at or near M[illegible] other points.—Charlotte Press.

Ague Cure

Is a purely vegetable bitter and powerful tonic, and is warranted a speedy and certain cure for Fever and Ague, Chills and Fever, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, and all malarial disorders. In miasmatic districts, the rapid pulse, coated tongue, thirst, lassitude, loss of appetite, pain in the back and loins, and coldness of the spine and extremities, are only premonitions of severer symptoms, which terminate in the ague paroxysm, succeeded by high fever and profuse perspiration.

It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure. AYER'S AGUE CURE thoroughly eradicates these noxious poisons from the system, and always cures the severest cases. It contains no quinine, mineral, or any thing that could injure the most delicate patient; and its crowning excellence, above its certainty to cure, is that it leaves the system as free from disease as before the attack.

For Liver Complaints, AYER'S AGUE CURE, by direct action on the liver and biliary apparatus, drives out the poisons which produce these complaints, and stimulates the system to a vigorous, healthy condition.

We warrant it when taken according to directions.

THE VIEWS OF SENEX.

Having read with great interest in your paper the articles on "What is the matter?" and "What is the remedy?" I propose to give in three short letters what I think is the matter (1st with the Ministry, (2d) with Elder and Deaconships, (3d) with the Laity.

In this letter I will give what I think is the matter with the ministry: The high standard of education required by the Presbyterian Church clogs its wheels by compelling us, from the nature of things, to get our ministers from converts between the ages of ten and twenty years.

It follows, there being no possibility of applying the test of actual experience under adverse circumstances, that some unconverted persons enter into preparation for and are in time conducted into the ministry. In regard to those who are truly converted between the above mentioned ages, it may be said, that the tendency of separation from free intercourse with their fellowmen in general, necessitated by the absorbing requirements of an educational course at college and seminary, is to impair to a considerable extent their efficiency. When they ought to be learning human nature by mixing with the every day affairs of life, learning the manners, customs and needs and trials met with by all men, they are necessarily shut out from them in the arduous preparation required by the Presbyterian standard. How awkward must one of this class feel when he first steps upon the pulpit! How little qualified to assume the pastoral relation.

How little in common must he feel with the great body of his charge! His mind, from the force of habit, leads him to subjects for conversation for which so many have no taste. His flock, engrossed with the cares engendered by the wear and tear of life, find in him very little solace or sympathy. He floats, as it were, like an iceberg in the community, unable to enter into the needs, the feelings of those he would like to assist, and vice versa. A surgeon may be an adept in his art, with the brightest and best adapted implements, but what will they avail if he cannot reach the limb to be amputated? So the minister may be a fine scholar, profound theologian and write logical discourses, but from a want of the proper knowledge of the wants and needs and sympathies of his people, he shoots over their heads. Probably a few may feel they have been treated with a feast of reason, fewer still to a flow of soul.

This high standard of education shuts off necessarily the vast majority of men converted after they are twenty-five years of age. They may feel called to preach, but the long time of preparation, in the very prime of life, rises up like a mountain before them and thoroughly discourages them. They have learned the ways of the world, the impulses of depraved human nature, and in full and free intercourse with all grades of society can more readily touch the chords of the human heart, and lead them in the way everlasting.

We must lower the standard of education, so that good and pious men of good English education can enter the ministry. Our country is so diversified in its population that we must have men to preach to the poor and ignorant as well as men to preach to the rich and educated. All our ministers, being of the highest grade of education, cannot, in the very nature of the case, suit all conditions of our population. Let the Church require the ministry to preach without manuscript. All agree that a sermon loses in effect when read from the desk. Let it be thoroughly prepared beforehand, but when preached let it come from the heart and reach the heart, with the eye of the minister at all times on his congregation. Then it is that the good effect is felt.

As before stated, in the next letter I will show what I think is the matter with the Eldership and Deaconship. SENEX.

THE QUESTION BEFORE US.

For sometime past articles have appeared discussing the question of the slow and meagre progress of the Presbyterian Church in North Carolina compared with the great and rapid progress of the Methodist and Baptist churches.

The acknowledged fact has been attributed to the greater cost of an educated ministry; to the scholastic habits of mind engendered by our Theological Seminaries; to the careless or cowardly failure to preach the distinctive doctrines of the Calvinistic system; to a superior education itself as separating our ministers in intellectual and social sympathy from the people; to our greater caution in the admission of members; and lastly to a lack of fervor and freedom in conducting the public worship of the house of God. It is suggested that we are in this last particular between the upper and nether mill-stones, having neither the aesthetic and liturgical attractions of the Episcopal Church, nor the animation of the Methodists and Baptists.

If these allegations be just, they would seem to draw very grave consequences after them; and not merely to justify but to compel a departure from our present plan of operations: First, they would do away with our Theological Seminaries at once, for if they so train our ministers as to make them inefficient and incompetent they are self-condemned as not merely a nullity but a nuisance. It would seem to follow, too, that such training in Hebrew, in Greek, in scientific and historical theology, in the history of our own and other Churches, belles lettres and general literature—ancient and modern—is equally condemned; and for the same reason as that which would explode our seminaries, viz: That it puts our ministers to a disadvantage, as compared with other Churches not encumbered with this useless and oppressive learning. The bare statement of the case, it would seem, is enough to dispose of the objection, without any elaborate discussion. Although obvious considerations must occur to your readers, based upon the clear dictates of reason; the analogy of other professions, as the legal and medical, and upon the experience of the Church, embodied and recorded in history, to show that solid knowledge, of what men have to teach, is a source not of weakness but of power. We have heard that ignorance was the mother of devotion but not that it was an element of efficiency, a condition of success or an essential of eloquence. If the view combatted be just, then the ministry of the Gospel can no longer be reckoned among the learned professions.

That as a Church we have made less progress, actual and relative, than we might, and than we should, is reluctantly confessed. But I cannot believe that our failure is due to the causes assigned. Our most learned ministers use not only the poorest and most vigorous, but the plainest and clearest forms of speech; and while no doubt much more study ought to be given to our public progress, and much more use made of the best manuals and models of devotion, it seems to me that the prayers of our ministers generally have not less order, fulness, feeling and Gospel unction than I hear in other churches. So far as I can see the manners of our ministers in their personal and pastoral intercourse with the people are as kind and friendly and as pleasing as those of other Christian ministers. In regard to the very serious charge of not preaching the distinctive doctrines of the Calvinistic system, there are several things to be said:

1. The fact alleged cannot be sustained, so far at least as my knowledge extends. On the contrary, it is believed that the distinctive doctrines of the Calvinistic system are now discussed more frequently, more fully, and more thoroughly by the present generation of preachers in the South than by the last.

2. The Confession of Faith with the moderation and good sense that pervade it says, touching the preaching of the doctrine of pre-destination, "The doctrine of this high mystery of predestination is to be handled with special prudence and care." These doctrines are preached by our ministers generally as they ought to be preached, and are presented in their services as they are in the scriptures, not with party heat and passion, or with undue prominence, but pervasively and in due proportion. These doctrines pervade their sermons as the salt pervades the sea; not gathered into lumps and globes, but diffused throughout the mass.

So that whatever partial truth and force there may be in any of the causes of our comparatively small progress, the main cause is still to seek. Another cause may be assigned, altogether different. It is, in brief, the want of a practical recognition of the unity of the Church; and the fault is in us, not in our system. It is in the working of the Church, not in the constitution of the Church. The constitution of our Church does not contemplate a collection or congeries of independent and individual congregations slightly connected and distantly related, but a compact organization, bound together by a common life and operating not only on a common system, but with conjoint and concurrent action, without conflict or collision, and with absolute unity of aim and effort. Theoretically, we are Presbyterians. Practically, we are largely, if not wholly Congregational. In theory, we acknowlege the organic unity of the Church as a Divine institute. In practice, we often ignore—sometimes we positively and grossly violate the unity of the Church. Compare the spirit and policy of the early Church as given in the Acts of the Apostles, with our own. Look on this picture and on that. Being of one heart and of one soul they had all things common. And although the sale of houses and lands to form a common fund was never compulsory, and was never designed to be permanent, the spirit out of which it grew, and of which it was the pious expression, was of the essence of charity, and will subsist while charity shall survive.

That noble spirit has re-appeared in our own day, and in a Presbyterian church, in something approaching apostolic strength and fervor. Immediately after the disruption of the Church of Scotland, in 1843, Dr. Chalmers inaugurated a system which made a provision for those of the Scottish people and of the Scottish ministers, who were willing to forsake all and cast in their lot with the Free Church. The same spirit must be evoked among us, and the same or a similar system adopted and carried into practical effect, or the destitutions of the land will never be supplied by us. I am perfectly aware that we have what goes by the name of the Sustentation Fund, or Home Missions. But how is that fund itself sustained? How painfully, how pitifully inadequate is the provision actually made for a large portion of our most faithful and godly ministers, where the Presbyterian Church is wholly unknown, or the particular congregation is weak. From how many important and inviting points are we excluded merely because we have not the means to support a minister? The immediate remedy is the constitution of a common fund by the contribution of the more favored churches and wealthy individuals. The ultimate remedy is the Holy Ghost, inspiring fervent love and prompting the conscientious and abounding liberality which flows from fervent love to God and man. J. M. A.

SENSITIVE PEOPLE.

One of the many words in the English language which have been perverted from their original meaning is the term "sensitive." The dictionary definition of it is this:

"Sensitive: Having sense of feeling, or having the capacity of perceiving impressions from external objects. Having quick and acute sensibility, either to the actions of external objects, or to impressions upon the mind and feeling," etc.

According to this, therefore, a sensitive nature is a most excellent quality. Persons who possess it enter quickly into the feelings of others, and are consequently the best "confidants." You can talk to them as freely as it may be necessary, without being in continual alarm lest they should discover left-handed personal reflections in your innocent remarks. They have the happy faculty of forgetting themselves in their interest in other people and things. They are perhaps too easily frozen by an uncongenial atmosphere, but how rapidly do they thaw when the foreign element is removed, and become the life and soul of society. It is not the healthy sensitive people that continually fall into "misunderstandings" and are always in some "scrape" or other. They possess too much of that all-important endowment, "tact," which, when it is combined with good breeding, gives that exquisite courtesy of manner which no amount of external polish will bestow.

But this is not the usually accepted interpretation of the word. The expression, "a sensitive person," brings to your mind one whose nerves are on the wrong side of his cuticle, one who "wears his heart upon his sleeve for daws to peck at," one who is continually being "hurt" at some fancied neglect or coldness, and to whom you converse on miscellaneous subjects in constant trepidation lest you should accidentally hit upon one of the many tender points in his character.

"I know that I am very sensitive, but I can't help it," is the reason given for many a foolish distrust of friendship, and unwarrantable cavilling at a careless word. But the truth is, these unfortunate persons do not want to help it; on the contrary they cherish it, and even cultivate it as if it were the most apparent virtue, and as it is not a virtue it grows accordingly, until finally they cannot rid themselves of it if they would. All persons, high or low, rich or poor, possess the power of hurting their feelings, therefore they are almost always injured. The world accords them pity, but not respect; sympathy, perhaps, but little love; and before long they are too apt to lose even these, for those who have duties to perform and an object in life, cannot waste precious time in listening to complaints that cannot be remedied. The man who goes through life with a purpose, and realizes, be it ever so little, how important is his work to himself in the formation of his own character, and how there is always some one who could take his place and perform his mission as well as he does himself, and therefore of how little real importance he is in the world, will meet with true friends and unlooked-for consolations; but he who thinks more of the place he holds in the affections of other people, and how much or how little of a necessity he is to them, than of his duty toward his Maker and himself, will be disappointed, injured, and unhappy all the days of his life.

I wish I could say to every growing girl and boy who is looking forward to manhood and womanhood so earnestly and eagerly: In the course of your life you will probably be wronged, your motives misunderstood and your actions perverted more than once or twice. If you cannot rectify the wrong, bear it, live it down. Don't try to talk it down, and, above all things, do not let it hurt you.

"Let it not be in any man's power to say truly of thee that thou art not simple or that thou art not good; but let him be a liar whoever shall think anything of this kind about thee, and this is altogether in thy power. For who is he that shall hinder thee from being good and simple?" Thus says Marcus Antoninus, and we are permitted to see with much more certainty than he did that evil cannot in the long run withstand good.

Then read healthy books, live a healthy life, be true, be honest, and—be sensitive.—Liberal Christian.

THE GREAT DELIVERANCE.

BY DAVID A. WALLACE.

God in his Word promises deliverance to his people in many forms and in very strong language. The following may be regarded as specimens of the declarations of his Word on this subject: "The eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him to deliver their soul from death;" "Thou hast delivered my soul from death; wilt thou not deliver my feet from falling?" "For he shall deliver the needy when he crieth; the poor also, and him that hath no helper;" "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble;" "Because he hath set his love upon me, therefore will I deliver him;" "I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him and honor him;" "Our fathers trusted in thee; they trusted and thou didst deliver them;" "But the salvation of the righteous is of the Lord; he is their strength in the time of trouble, and the Lord shall help them and deliver them; he shall deliver them from the wicked and save them because they trust in him; "Thou shalt compass me about with songs of deliverance; "I sought the Lord and he heard me, and delivered me from all my fears;" "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all;" "That we should not trust in ourselves, but in God which raiseth the dead, who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver; in whom we trust that he will yet deliver us;" "The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation;" "But now we are delivered from the law that being dead wherein we were held."

But what does this deliverance include? Let us see.

He delivers his people from condemnation. "He that believeth on him is not condemned." "There is now, therefore, no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." The wrath of God shall never descend on them. The curse he takes completely away.

He delivers them from death. "He that believeth on the Son have everlasting life." "He is passed from death unto life." He shall never die. The earthly house of this tabernacle may be dissolved; it may be taken down and cast aside as rubbish, yet the believer hath a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Everlasting life is the sure and certain possession of every believer. He delivers them from sin. He has procured for them perfect sanctification. "He loved them and gave himself for them, that he might redeem them from all iniquity and purify them unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." They have in Christ full and complete sanctification. He is imparting it to them as they need, and one day they shall be holy as God is holy.

He delivers them from bondage. By nature they are in bondage to the law as a covenant of works; to sin that dwelleth in them, and through fear of death. But now every believer is delivered from the law. He is no longer under law, but under grace. He has nothing to do with it as a way of salvation. Christ himself became partaker of flesh and blood that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, and deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage. The creature itself shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God. Where the spirit of God is there is liberty, and the Holy Spirit dwells in every believer.

He delivers them from falling. Though weak, though compelled to walk in slippery places, yet they are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation. Nothing shall pluck them out of the hand of their omnipotent Saviour. Nothing shall separate them from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus. The life of every believer is hid with Christ in God; no blow can strike him without first crushing through the omnipotent Jehovah.

He delivers them in time of trouble. Either he takes away the trouble or gives grace sufficient to enable them to bear it. The promises on this point are very rich and abundant; sufficient, certainly, to bring consolation to any believer's heart.

He delivers them from evil. The promise is, "There shall no evil befall thee." No matter what comes to the believer, whether sickness or death, loss or bereavement, poverty or disgrace, it shall not be an evil. On every one of his people he has set his seal, and no power in hell or on earth is permitted to hurt even the least of them.

Such is the deliverance provided for us who believe. Every one of us may say to our God in Christ, "Thou art my help and my deliverer." Let us, then, think of him as our deliverer; let us trust him as our deliverer; let us call on him as our deliverer; let us praise and honor and bless him as our deliverer. "O, how great is thy goodness, which thou hast laid up for them that fear thee; which thou hast wrought for them that trust in thee before the sons of men!"—United Presbyterian.

SAFE.

PSALM XCI. 1.

Safe 'neath thy sheltering wing,
Safe near thy bleeding side;
Here would I hide secure and sing
Whatever may betide.

'Tis here no foes can come;
No doubts nor fears arise;
Our deepest sorrows turn to bliss,
Dark clouds to sunny skies.

Keep us O Christ our King!
Safe near thy riven side;
And guard us while to thee we cling,
'Till safe beyond the tide.

JAPAN.

PROTESTANT MISSIONS IN JAPAN.

The story of modern missions in Japan is startling and Pentecostal. The Japanese Christians are fond of calling their history a second edition of the Acts of the Apostles. It is only twenty years since the first missionaries landed on their secluded isles, and eight years have really measured the whole period of actual work. The first church was erected in Yokohama in 1872, and already there are one hundred and sixty missionaries, male and female, more than one hundred native preachers, more than fifty organized churches, nearly three thousand members in the churches, a Christian community of probably eight thousand, numerous schools, dispensaries and colleges, translations of the Scriptures, the publication of thousands of religious works and the circulation of a christian newspaper in all parts of the empire; besides the immense and co-ordinate influences in the political and social life of the people, the mighty awakening of the national mind, the spirit of inquiry and enterprise, the removal of restrictions upon the freedom of missionary work, the emancipation of the servile class, the universal diffusion of common schools, the elaborate provision for higher education by the endowment of colleges, schools of technology and art, normal schools and universities, the opening of railways, telegraphic communication and postal service, the adoption of a decimal currency, the inauguration of great public works, and above all the admission of the Bible to their higher schools, the adoption of the christian calendar and the official Sabbath as the statute holiday of the empire.

The visit of Commodore Perry to Japan and the christian dignity and tact with which he fulfilled his delicate mission, not only won the confidence and admiration of the people, but awakened an intense curiosity to know and an insatiable desire to possess the secret of Western greatness.

One morning the mission rooms of the Reformed Church, in New York, were visited by two Japanese princes, who had forfeited their lives by leaving their country without permission, and who said they had come to be taught "how to make big ships and guns." They were taken under the care of the Board, provision make for their education, and negotiations effected with the Japanese Government to obtain permission for them to pursue their studies in America. The result of this movement was, that ere long one thousand Japanese students, from influential families, were in various colleges in Europe and America, and have returned to their native land to spread the civilization, culture, and in many cases religion, they have acquired among their receptive and thoroughly awakened countrymen. The first missionaries to Japan went from the American Churches. In 1859 the Presbyterian, Reformed and Episcopal Churches entered the country, and the labors of Messrs. Higgins, Verbeck and Williams in Nagasaki, and Messrs. Hepburn and Ballagh in Yokohama, were attended by many incidental encouragements, and prepared the way for the greater work that followed when the door was fully opened. God was preparing calmly by His invisible Providence, and more than one signal incident indicated that the Holy Spirit was working secretly in coordinate lines upon the hearts of men.

One day a Japanese gentleman of high rank noticed a little object floating upon the water in the wake of a foreign vessel that had just gone out of the harbor of Yedo. He sent his servant to bring it to him, and they found that it was a foreign book which none of them could read. He was told, however, that it was an English Testament, which professed to be a revelation of the will of God; and that it could be obtained at Shanghai, in the Chinese language. He sent and obtained a copy, and, with several companions, began the study of the curious volume. Hearing that Mr. Verbeck, at Nagasaki, had come to Japan as a teacher of this book, he sent his interpreter to him to ask him many questions about it, and afterwards himself visited the missionary, attended by a large retinue.

"Sir," he said, as he met Mr. Verbeck, "I cannot tell you my feelings when, for the first time in my life, I read the account of the character and work of Jesus Christ. I had never seen, or heard, or read, or dreamed of, or imagined such a person. I was filled with admiration, overwhelmed with emotion, and taken captive by the nature and life of Jesus Christ."

Thus God had taught this heathen, alone with His Bible, in a pagan court, and proved again the power of His Word and Spirit. This man and two of his attendants were baptized, and soon after three others also, who with him had studied the Bible, received the same holy rite. Thus the first six converts to the Gospel in Japan were the work of God alone. So signally and gloriously did God Himself begin the conquest of these wondrous isles. During these preparatory years several persons were also baptized at Yokohama, and by 1872 there were perhaps a dozen professing native christians in Japan.

In this year the regular history of the Japan mission may be said to have begun. Its inauguration was, as already said, Pentecostal. In the commencement of that year, the week of Prayer, so gloriously linked in its origin with foreign missions, was observed in Yokohama by union services on the part of all the missionaries and English speaking residents. Several Japanese students also attended. The lessons chosen were the Acts of the Apostles, read in regular order, and translated and expounded for the benefit of the Japanese. The meetings became so full of interest and power that they were continued from week to week for two months, and soon the power of the Holy Ghost became strangely manifest. The interest was not confined to the foreigners, but the Japanese were soon seen upon their knees also, praying with cries and tears of earnestness, that God would pour out upon their heads, as upon the Apostolic Church, the baptism of His Almighty Spirit. The intensity of feeling was indescribable, and and even men of the world who listened, remarked, "the prayers of the Japanese take the heart out of us." Thus born of revival, the first native church was organized in March, 1872. There were many inquirers, but it was judged wise to admit at this time no more than eleven persons to the first communion roll. In the same year the first church edifice was erected by Mr. Ballagh, and, with singular fitness, the first contribution to its cost came from the children of foreign missions. The native christians of the Sandwich Islands sent the first thousand dollars to build the first christian church in their sister isles.

Such was the commencement of the work. Six years later, when the first General Conference of Missionaries met in Japan, it was found that this handful of corn had become a great harvest, that these scattered laborers had grown into a strong band of 104 missionaries, representing fourteen societies; occupying 94 central and local stations; having 44 organized churches, twelve of which were wholly and twenty-six partially self-supporting; thirty christian schools for boys and girls, attended by 830 pupils; three theological schools, attended by 173 students; 52 Sunday schools, attended by 1,850 children; 130 native preachers, colporteurs, and Bible women; two hospitals and seven dispensaries, with 175 indoor patients and 17,757 out patients; and the sum of $3,552 contributed by these new converts in the preceding year for religious purposes.—The Gospel in All Lands.

WILLIAM CARSTAIRS.

This story illustrates the freshness and simplicity of the pastoral character of William Carstairs among the absorbing public affairs which occupied him:

His sister, the wife of a Fifeshire clergyman, had become a widow. Carstairs had just arrived in Edinburgh from London to transact business with King William's ministers. She came over to Edinburgh and went to his lodgings. They were crowded with the nobility and officers of state, and she was told she could not see him.

"Just whisper," said she to the servant, "that I desire to know when it would be convenient for him to see me."

He returned for answer, "Immediately," left the company, came to her, and most affectionately embraced her.

On her attempting to apologize, "Make yourself easy," he said, "these gentlemen are come hither, not on my account, but their own. They will wait with patience till I return. You know I never pray long."

And so, after a short prayer suited to her circumstances, he fixed the time for seeing her more at leisure and returned in tears to the company.—Dean Stanley.

THAT POLICE OFFICER.

"You are wanted!" was the sharp and startling voice that suddenly smote my ears.

"Wanted!" That means "arrested."

I was no sooner recovered from my surprise than I perceived that I was in the hands of a personage of stern authority. I must appear instantly in court, where I found myself at once, for the court was not outside my own personality.

I shall never forget the arrest or the name of the officer. His name was Conscience.

Several things about him:

1. His authority. Did he need a badge to shew it when he arrested me? That one word "Wanted!" startled the accused like an electric shock. It made him feel in the depths of his soul that behind this officer was an invisible Power that warranted all his boldness, and assured his right to arrest. Ideas were started about a Supreme Ruler acting through this officer that superseded the need of any other credentials.

2. His power. Could I not arrest his hand? Could I not, as an injured man, turn upon him to defy him? The moment I felt his presence I knew that in a fight he alone would be the victor. The mightiest of men have tried to conquer. Show us one record of success.

3. Mistaken in the person—might he not be? Police officers have thus erred. But this agent of law never arrests on surmise or vague suspicion and never fails of getting the right man. Did I not know how well he judged, the moment the word "Wanted" startled me? It was not some one else he was after. Nothing could be clearer.

4. Could I not fly! Some criminals are swifter than the police. Did Conscience ever lose one by flight? Who went to Joppa, and on the ship the same day and hour and moment with the fleeing Jonah, extorted confession by augmenting the terrors of the storms? Did Judas shake off this officer, even with death to help him? Can continents or oceans interpose between a man and his accusing conscience?

5. Fight the officer—how about that? Policemen have been killed by arrested criminals. But can a deathblow be given to this inward accuser? Was this officer ever seen to reel and fall by the hand of violence? Has there ever been a desperate fight between those two parties where the assailant of Conscience was the victor?

To the honor of this officer I will add that my experience taught me that so far was he from being harsh, cruel or vindictive, he was in fact carrying out the plans of Infinite Love towards me. Painful as was my early experience I at last came over fully to his side, as regards his opinion of myself; and having, by his powerful aid, sought and found the favor of the Infinite Ruler, "being sprinkled from an evil conscience by blood that cleanseth from all sin," I am now upon the happiest terms with this officer, finding some of the most precious pleasures of life in intercourse with him, and trust I shall enjoy his presence through a happy eternity.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

One of the native congregations connected with the United Presbyterian Mission in Old Calabar has a regular attendance of five hundred persons. Not many Sabbaths ago King Eyo occupied its pulpit in the missionary's absence.

According to assertions made by some Italian papers, certain English Roman Catholic Bishops have requested the Pope to grant them special powers enabling them to deal more easily with English Ritualists who desire to join the Roman Church. His Holiness, it is added, has conformed to their request.

A Methodist museum is to be established in England, to collect and preserve such historical documents as can be obtained relating to the early history of Methodism, and also interest objects connected with the missionary work in foreign lands.

It is said that quite a number of Lutherans are settling in Italy. There is a strong Lutheran Church in Naples. It has a parochial school in which there are one hundred and thirty children. At Salermo there is another German church, which with that at Naples, forms a considerable parish.

The Roman Catholics in Cochin, South India, having lately obtained possession of a church which had formerly been the property of the Syrian Christians, searched the houses in the village for Bibles and other books which the people had bought from a Church Missionary Society colporteur, and made a great bonfire of them in front of the church.

The theological students of the United Presbyterian Church of Scotland have remitted to the Biddle University at Charlotte, N. C., $6,120 for a fund, the interest of which is to be appropriated to aid students preparing for mission work in Africa.

It is stated that at the close of the year 1879 there were in the world 10,207 members of the Order of the Jesuits, an increase of 220 during the year and of 1,524 since 1869. Of the whole number, 2,104 are missionaries, and the rest, 8,103, are occupied in teaching.

In the Arcot Mission of the American Reformed Church the missionaries extended the hand of welcome last year to over 5,000 persons who have abandoned the worship of idols and professed themselves Christians. On one Sabbath Rev. Jared Scudder baptised 307, and on the next 227 persons, converted from Hindooism.

During the last year the Gospel was preached in one hundred towns and cities in China where it had not been previously heard. Recently two Chinese "literati" were received into the Mission Church at Poating-fu. Heretofore missionaries have been unable to reach the literati.

The world does move, even in Spain. A little child was to be buried in the cemetry at Mallona, near Bilboa. Its father had become a Protestant and was determined that his child, though baptized by the priest, should be buried in the Protestant part of the cemetery. The priest objected on the ground that the child belonged by baptism to the Romish Church. When the coffin reached the cemetery it was seized and placed in the receiving vault. Priest and Protestant then appealed to the Governor, and he to the Minister at Madrid. The latter telegraphed: "Parents have the right to decide for themselves in what cemeteries the bodies of their children shall be buried."

An Oriental missionary concert in the First Church of Aintab is thus described by a correspondent of the Christian Union: "It is the first Sunday in February, and the churches unite in a missionary concert at the usual time of the afternoon service. As you enter, Oriental fashion, you slip off your shoes and leave them near the door. The church bears the date 1855. The stone walls are without plaster, and the wooden columns and ceiling have never known paint. The men occupy the body and one side of the church; the women the other side, and are separated from the men by a low partition. Pews are unknown. Pastor Simon opens the services. The short invocation is followed by a selection from the prophets and by prayer. The men keep on their fezes, which with the snowy izars (white sheets covering the head) of the women form a by no means unpleasant sight. No one, however, prays with head covered. The fez is removed, and replaced after the prayer. The first hymn is announced, and the people continue to come and the large church is crowded. Addresses from various missionaries follow, interspersed with hymns in the singing of which the congregation heartily joins. By the time the concert is nearly through the mothers have forgotten their babies in their interest in the meeting. So noisy have they become that you begin to wonder whether this is a nursery or the recess hour in a primary school. After singing two verses of "Holy Bible, Book Divine," Pastor Krikor pronounces the benediction and the audience disperses. Not very quickly though, for nearly fifteen hundred people have been present, and each individual must find his or her shoes or overshoes and put them on, before stepping out. And though a very respectable shoe store might be opened with the goods left at the door or in the windows, not one will be lost or stolen."

NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN.

The Presbyterian.

JOHN McLAURIN - Editor.

WILMINGTON, N. C.:

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1880.

EDUCATION IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Has the time not arrived when the grand old commonwealth of North Carolina can and will give to the subject of Public Instruction that consideration which its great importance demands? With regard to the paramount importance of thorough and complete education, and of such varied education as would fit our citizens for the development of material wealth from our unsurpassed natural resources we suppose all are of one mind; rather let us say, that upon a fair and intelligent presentation of the subject there would be no serious diversity of opinion. This with regard to the theory; but theories are valueless except in so far as they form the basis of action, and valuable to the extent only that they result in practical good.

The practice of our State in relation to Public Instruction has been little more than veriest trifling. Hard words these to write of our dear old mother, yet not more hard than true.

Grand enterprises require grand means for their accomplishment. The course of a river cannot be turned with a teaspoon, nor a mountain be overturned with a toothpick. A railway hundreds of miles in length requires something more for its construction than a president or superintendent, a half-dozen shovels and a keg of spikes; yet it has been very much on such terms that North Carolina has engaged in the work of education.

We are not disposed, we wish to say here, to ridicule those whose love of their State has led them to put forth their utmost energies to correct the abuses of the system, or to devise more hopeful methods; their patriotism and their heroism are only the more prominent because of the futility of their efforts.

Mr. T. B. Kingsbury, of the Wilmington Star, in very modestly declining to allow his name to be used in connection with the office of Superintendent of Public Instruction says: "In the first place the present law is so very defective that the Superintendent, if really a man of superior qualifications, could not be possibly of any practical benefit to the State. His duties are clerical, and nothing else. His office is a sinecure, and ought either to be abolished, or the law ought to be so changed as to make the office effective. In the second place, the salary is wholly insufficient. The Superintendent of Public Instruction in North Carolina should have more important duties to perform than the Governor—duties demanding a higher intelligence and a better education. He ought to be a man of very marked abilities. He should be familiar with the public school system of other States; should thoroughly comprehend the needs of North Carolina, and the defects of our present common school law; should be a man of untiring energy, of irrepressible enthusiasm; should write clearly, forcefully, scholarly; should have a persuasive and magnetic eloquence; should be a man of ripe scholarship and have good executive ability. Such I take, in brief, to be the necessary qualifications of a Superintendent. With a good law under which to work such a man would be a power in North Carolina. He would be felt from the mountains to the seaboard." Which says much that we would say and says it better. We would add to the qualifications of the Superintendent the loftiest and most disinterested patriotism and the most unsullied integrity, qualities which would be only indirectly applied, perhaps, in official administration, but which would go far towards holding the support of the people to the man. In regard to the change of law we would go beyond our common schools and institute with them higher schools adapted to fitting all citizens for the special duties to which they might be called in trade, agriculture or the mechanic arts; and we would provide the means for the adequate accomplishment of all. This would not be to throw away hundreds, but to wisely expend hundreds of thousands, if need be; not to amuse with the name, but to realize the beneficent results of thorough education. Easily said, but how should the money be raised? By taxation—and now having slain all machine politicians by that tremendous word, let us proceed. The moral advantages which would result from thorough and judicious education are the greater, but the material, the pecuniary, advantages would be more captivating to the people. With a champion possessing the qualifications above described the task would not be difficult to convince the people of North Carolina that on the simple score of augmentation of wealth, for themselves and their children, taxation would be supremely wise. Such a champion—not of a party but of a cause—such a champion calling the people together through the length and breadth of the State, and haranguing them faithfully, would dispel the deadly apathy which pervades us, and would concentrate and direct the energies of the press—energies now so diffused and so desultory that the strongest efforts raise scarce a ripple upon the bosom of public sentiment.

Our contemporary doubts that we have the man who is equal to the work. We do not doubt it. North Carolina has one son (in either political party, or in both, she may have many), in whom the qualities indicated are conspicuous; one whom she has placed again and again in positions where patriotism, the most exalted, and administrative qualities of the very highest order have been required, and never has she misplaced her honors.

One honor greater than any heretofore bestowed awaits the man, be he who he may, that can, aside from party trammels, disenthral the Old North State and lead her into the van of educational progress.

CHURCH DEBTS.

In olden times, and times not yet so old, it used to be said as an excuse for saddling a debt upon a church, that it could be paid by easy instalments and if carried over to posterity that it was only in strict accord with the fitness of things that those who would be specially benefited should bear a proportionate part of the expense. But wiser views have succeeded to this plausible but fallacious reasoning, and for months past there has been, at the North more especially, a revival, a boom—(hateful word, but more expressive than revival here)—a boom on the subject of debt paying. The means employed to rid the churches of the incubus of debt have not been always such as can be justified, even from a most charitable point of view. Sometimes they have borne very decidedly the appearance of dishonesty, in resorting to clap-trap expedients and decoys to draw forth means from the tight-pocketed wealthy. But the irregular methods, and in them we class the Kimball mode, have not been always followed, and of late a healthier sentiment is gaining ground accompanied by corresponding action.

People are coming to the very sound conclusion that a church debt is never a spiritual blessing, indeed should never be regarded as other than a great evil, and seldom we are disposed to say can it be called properly, a necessary evil.

A debt-ridden church will, in any case, find it hard to be a prosperous and aggressive church, but the shifts and evasions and delays which mark the course of debt from its inception to its conclusion very often bring widespread scandal, scandal which involves not only the individuals responsible for the evil, but the whole Christian Church.

The temptation to incur debt in the erection of houses of worship is very great. The difficulty of progress in any direction where a few persons of a common faith and order are dependent upon the courtesy of those of different views for a place of assemblage is quite obvious, but the evil of erecting a church building upon promises to pay, or a mortgage to secure the creditor is very much worse. Where a congregation has honestly done all that it can to raise the means for erection of a house of worship, it is quite well to ask for help from those who are able to assist. But when a congregation have imprudently burdened themselves with debt, the plain, honest, straightforward, manly way is to buckle to the task of getting rid of the curse, at whatever cost. When any congregation can feel that they are clear of debt, made so by their own efforts and at great sacrifice, they have achieved a victory that gives them an advanced position and that has powerfully strengthened them for aggressive work.

We have had definitely in view, in what is above written, debts incurred in the erection of church buildings; but the principles and the practices announced are perfectly applicable to all the pecuniary obligations of the Church. Very few churches need remain in debt to their pastors one month, if they determine that they will do what is only just to him and to themselves, and honest towards God.

DR. PRITCHARD'S LECTURE.

The lecture of Rev. Dr. Thomas H. Pritchard before the Wilmington Library Association and the citizens of Wilmington on the night of Wednesday of last week was clear, convincing, practical and in the highest degree entertaining. The subject "What is the One thing necessary for the Development of North Carolina?" was answered,—not by statement only but by proof as well—Education thorough, complete and universal, as applied not only to the fitting for the professions styled learned, but for the energetic and profitable prosecution of agricultural and mechanic pursuits. We wish every citizen of North Carolina could have heard it.

THE KING OF SIAM AND HIS VISIT.

The King of Siam proposes to visit Europe and the United States. The programme is announced. He is to leave home April 23d, inst., on a Siamese man-of-war for Singapore, thence by a boat of the Messageries Maritimes he will go to Marseilles, and reach Berlin June 5th. At Berlin he will be the guest of the German Emperor. From Berlin he will go to Brussels and London. On July 1st he will embark on an American man-of-war for America. During a few weeks stay in this country he will probably visit Richmond, going no further South, and may go as far West as Chicago. He will be accompanied in his tour by several royal princes, the Ministers of War and Foreign Affairs and by many of his noblemen.

In connection with this subject we present the following clipped from an exchange:

"Nothing could better illustrate the far-reaching influence of modern civilization than the announcement that the King of Siam is about to make a tour of the Western world with the view of introducing English and American customs into his domain. Until within comparatively a few years Siam was an unexplored country to Europeans and Americans. Bangkok, the chief city, was well known to the commercial world as an important centre of trade many years ago, but very little communication was had with the natives of the interior. Missionaries visited Siam as early as 1828, but until quite recently they did not make much progress. Within the past thirty years, however, there has been a marked change in the attitude of the Siamese government toward the "barbarian" world. The father of the present King was an able and liberal monarch and very tolerant of Europeans. The education of his son was intrusted to an English woman, a Mrs. Leonowens, who has written a very interesting account of her sojourn in the Land of the White Elephant. Her pupil, who is the reigning monarch, is intelligent, liberal and progressive, and every inch a king. He is still a young man, spare in person, with clear, dark eyes, and quick and active in his movements. He is not, by the way, the only King of Siam. There are two kings; but the first king is the actual monarch, while the second king, who receives one-third of the revenue, and has an army of 20,000 men at his disposal, is a sort of prime minister, whose advice the first king always seeks before taking any important step. Both the first and second kings can speak and write English and are well versed in English literature. The Siamese are a kindly, inoffensive and intelligent people, quick to adopt those measures and customs which appear to be superior to their own, but they are not very industrious and are rather timid. In person they are small and well-proportioned, with olive-colored skin and black hair, and very fond of dress. The costumes of the gentry and courtiers are said to be very rich and picturesque and as the King will bring a splendid retinue with him, we shall probably have an opportunity of seeing Siamese fashions at their best. That the visit of the present King will have important results in opening up the country to foreigners as well as in the introduction of reforms in government, education, etc., can scarcely be doubted, as Chutahlongkorn is a wide-awake monarch and will doubtless keep both his eyes actively employed from the moment he leaves his own territory.

MR. PENTECOST'S LABORS.

The question as to how far, or whether at all, to countenance the efforts of unordained men, who take up the work of preaching the Gospel, is one which conscientiously exercises many minds. By all such the following from Rev. Dr. Eddy, a venerable Congregational pastor, will be read with interest:

"Mr. Pentecost's evangelistic labors in this city closed on Thursday evening of the present week. Since I last wrote, his audiences have been as large as ever. Much good has been done. About fifty were added at the last communion (March 7) to the First Congregational church; some fourteen to the Second; thirty-seven to the First Presbyterian; and more than forty to the Front Street Presbyterian. Other churches have been increased in about the same proportion. Many of those who have recently professed faith, are new converts; probably not less than half. Many more, it is hoped, will soon join themselves to the people of God in covenant. * *

He had at first been engaged for a single month; then at the suggestion of certain business men he engaged for another month. Then, for the second time, a committee of business men visited the Ministers' Meeting and urged that Mr. Pentecost should be secured for a third month. Though several leading pastors were doubtful about the expediency of continuing the special service meetings, under that pressure they consented. Four churches were offered for the meetings; and it was voted, the "business men" concurring, that Mr. Pentecost be requested to preach one week in each. This would have carried him for a week, to the Rockway Mission, now Union Presbyterian church, situated among working people, and with accommodations for 1,500 hearers. This proposition Mr. Pentecost positively declined. Thereupon the "business men" "took the matter into their own hands," as they said, and, failling to secure the Central M. E. church, the largest in the city, they arranged that he should preach in the Woodward Avenue Congregational church. This, though of but moderate size, is an elegant edifice, and situated in the most fashionable part of the city. There Mr. Pentecost preached for a fortnight with good success. There is a great change in the composition of his audience. Many cultivated people have left him. Nine-tenths of his hearers are professed Christians. Many young persons, mostly young women, have, it is thought, found Christ. Few professional and business men have been converted. There has been no such "break" among them as was predicted provided the meetings were continued in an attractive locality.

Pastors and churches have a right to expect from me, after the observation of ten or twelve weeks, an impartial statement of my judgment touching the methods and results of Mr. Pentecost's labors in Detroit.

1. In respect to the general excellence of his preaching there can be no doubt. He preaches the Gospel with clearness and power. Doubtless he has sometimes been unguarded in his doctrinal statements. On the whole, however, such statements have been so qualified by the general scope of his preaching, that they were not seriously misleading. He is a true, Gospel preacher.

Now and then a humorous anecdote is introduced in the wrong place, and raises a laugh when the general pathos of the discourse might be expected to draw tears.

2. It has been felt by the most judicious pastors that there has been an unfortunate failure in the inquiry-meetings. Mr. Pentecost has done too much of the talking. He has not known how to avail himself to the utmost of the wisdom and skill of experienced pastors, as Dr. Baker, Dr. Pierson, Rev. M. Smith, and the venerable Dr. Sprague; all of whom, not to mention others, have had large experience in revivals of religion.

3. The great mistake was made when Mr. Pentecost was invited to conduct a series of "union meetings." This, of course, made the evangelist, for the time being, sole bishop, for no one pastor could prudently interfere under such an arrangement. The ministers' meeting (composed of evangelical ministers of all denominations) did indeed appoint an Advisory Committee, of which I was made Chairman; but their office has been an absolute sinecure. Mr. Pentecost has not felt the need of advice; he certainly, with one possible exception—a trivial one—has not asked it. Ministers have surrounded him as learners or as ornamental figure-heads. This I regard as an enormous mistake in the management; and a mistake for which the pastors themselves are mainly responsible.

I would most earnestly advise every pastor who is inclined to invite an Evangelist, to invite him to his own church, and not as his leader, but as his assistant. Never give up the helm which God has put into your hand to the hand of a stranger. Sing, if you will, "Oh, to be nothing," but sing that to the Lord; in your own parish and pulpit, resolve to be something.

4. Another mistake has been the exclusive use of "Gospel Hymns." Mr. Stebbins has done good service, considering his tools. He is a man of excellent spirit, and is no inferior artist; but the "Gospel Hymns" have grown stale. Many of the hymns are sentimental, school-girlish effusions about heaven—that is to say, about harps, crowns, songs of glory, pearly gates, &c., "over there, over there." The fling of Mr. Frederick Harrison that the heaven which the Christians hope for is "the eternity of the tabor," is abundantly justified by these so-called "Gospel Hymns." Mr. Stebbins is unfortunate in being tied to this book, of which, as I guess, he is growing weary. He is a man of cultivated taste, and really remarkable power as a singer. He is capable of much better work than this trashy book allows him to do. I have watched the congregation, night after night, and have seen the effect of many a solemn discourse neutralized by the shallow sentimentality of a "Gospel Hymn," sung—and exquisitely sung—by good Mr. Stebbins.

I have spoken frankly, and I hope kindly. Mr. Pentecost has no truer friend than I; but though I love him much, I love the cause of Christ more.

P. S.—Many will naturally desire to know something about the pecuniary cost of such an effort as we have made in Detroit. Mr. Pentecost himself makes no terms. I happen to know that he is poor; and that he has made no money since he became an evangelist. Of course he must be supported; and Detroit will not let him go without a liberal blessing. He abundantly earns all that he receives, for he is a prodigious worker. But his methods imply a pretty large outlay. I should say that it cost us here more than $1,000 per month to defray all expenses; but no one has felt burdened.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

We give the views of "Senex" on the subject which we have been discussing in our columns, and are promised his views to what is the matter with the eldership and deaconate, and the laity.

In accordance with our expressed wish that all parties should speak out plainly, we give these papers, but it should be understood that the views expressed are the views of those who express them.

We make no attack upon our seminaries nor would we in anywise impair their efficiency. Upward and forward, not downward and backward is the course in which we desire to move.

Too much discussion on the dark side without turning to the light is discouraging, and with the articles referred to as to come, enough will have been heard as to what is the matter. We confess that we had hoped that the bright and cheering side would have been fully presented. There is ample material. Numbers—mere numbers—lacking the essential of intelligent piety are undoubtedly a drawback and a burden. If mere members are all that is desired, they can be readily obtained by letting down the bars, but no Presbyterian wishes to bring the Church down to the world that it may simply increase its numbers. The solid qualities of intelligence and high Christian character, manifested in inflexible adherence to Scriptural truth and the practice of godliness, give to our Church an influential and most enviable position.

There is room and opportunity for this side of the question.

Our Church its Faith and Order, is the title of a pamphlet containing two discourses delivered in the Second Presbyterian Church of Wilmington, N. C., by the pastor Rev. C. M. Payne.

We do not refer to the subject as a matter of news, for by an omission certainly unintentional, the pamphlet was not received by us until it had been noticed hundreds of miles away; in truth the editor of the paper being absent from the city at the time of issuance, his first knowledge of the fact was obtained from the notice referred to.

We call attention to the subject to commend the plain, clear and complete manner in which Presbyterian faith and order are presented and to recommend the example set by the preaching of these sermons, and their publication in cheap form for gratuitous distribution.

The subjects treated are precisely those upon which at this time and at all times it is in the highest degree desirable that our people should be kept well informed. The essentials in the treatment are that they should be presented in bold, plain Anglo-Saxon, based on Scriptural texts, and calmly, clearly and logically discussed.

The following from one of the Roman Catholic journals of Mexico, plainly tells what Protestantism is doing in that country:

It is necessary that the Catholics rise resolutely and make a rapid and voluntary movement in defence of their beliefs. To day, unfortunately, the Protestants come with a subvention, and their teachings are extending throughout the whole country. They circulate their writings at the lowest prices, even give them away, sometimes in tracts, sometimes in papers, which is their favorite method of sowing the bad seed; and sad to say, in exchange, the Catholic weeklies and dailies are dying off for lack of subscribers to sustain them. Protestantism is becoming truly alarming among us.

The greatest wretch that now disgraces the barbarism of the world is probably the King of Burmah. He is besotted to the lowest degree and afflicted with leprosy. Raised to the throne by the sacrifice of relations and sustained there by the destruction of all who might oppose him, he has lived a life of debauchery and crime. He very lately has had seven hundred of his subjects buried alive under the city walls. This is said to have been by advice of his astrologers to be in cure of effects resulting from a long debauch. Latest advices are that the wretch is dead.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

RECEIPTS FOR WILSON MISSION.

We acknowledge the following receipts for the Wilson mission:

As per last report of March 16th.....	$174 00
Chapel Hill church	2 00
Red House church	3 25
Nutbush church (total 11 50)	4 50
Children of Shiloh church (total $3)	50
Rev. D. I. Craig	1 00
Rev. J. B. Smith, D. D	2 00
Rev. A Currie	1 00
Mrs. F. H. Johnson	1 00
Proceeds of map of Presbytery, drawn by Rev. F. H. Johnston and bought by Samuel Watkins	6 00
Newbern church Sunday school	16 02
Washington church Sunday school	5 00
Washington church	32 19
Home Mission Society First church Raleigh (total 126 23)	56 23
Total	$314 69

The donors small and great will please accept thanks. We earnestly desire $500. There are $75 more in good promises leaving yet $110. We would be glad to have a contribution from every church in the Presbytery. The many which have not responded might do something. We ask of such: will you not give us a 10 cents collection? It is not much to you, but in the aggregate it will considerably help us. Do this and we will yet report $500 collected. Very truly yours,

JOHN W. PRIMROSE.

Manson, Warren Co., N. C.

We learn that Mr. Alexander Cooper of Oxford, an Elder of Grassy Creek church since 1851, died about the last of March very suddenly at his residence.

The Oxford Torchlight says:

"Rev. D. E. Jordan has tendered his resignation as pastor of the Presbyterian church in this place, and last Sabbath morning preached his farewell sermon to the congregation. We learn that Mr. Jordan will remove to Hendersonville."

During the sacramental meeting at the Presbyterian church in this town, the services attending which closed last Sunday night, there were three accessions to the membership of the church, all young girls of twelve to fourteen years of age from the Sabbath school. —Iredell Gazette, April 16th.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Gospel in all Lands, conducted by Rev. Albert B. Simpson and published for the proprietor by Anson D. F. Randolph & Co., New York. $2 per annum

This pamphlet contains 50 pages of matter printed in clear type on extra fine paper and the number at hand is embellished with about thirty engravings illustrative of the text. No publication we have seen is so admirably adopted to furnishing a complete and accurate history of the missionary work past and present as the one before us. Each number contains a thorough sketch of the Protestant missions in some quarter of the globe. Previous issues have thus brought the mission work in Africa and in China very prominently and attractively before the public and the April number discusses Japan: its geography, its religions and the manners and other characteristics of its people, with a record of what has been accomplished and what is doing for its spiritual regeneration. There are very many articles besides, in the nature of missionary incidents, general missionary intelligence, &c., &c.

To clergymen, in aiding for preparation for the monthly concert for missions, and to all who desire,—and all should desire—to have their hearts encouraged by a knowledge of how wondrously Christ is bringing the nations of the earth to His feet we commend this work.

MEETINGS OF PRESBYTERIES.

Presbytery of South Carolina.—Over forty members present. Licentiate A. E. Norris was ordained as an evangelist. Messrs. James L. McLin, Wm. G. Neville and D. E. Frierson, Jr., were licensed as probationers. Rev. S. L. Morris and ruling elder W. A. Templeton were appointed commissioners to the General Assembly.

Presbytery of Missouri.—The church at Dalton, with thirty-five members was enrolled. The Presbytery overtures the Assembly to remove the committee on Domestic Missions to St. Louis. Rev. O. W. Gauss and ruling elder C. Hammond were elected commissioners, as principals, to the Assembly, and Rev. W. H. Marquess and elder F. T. Kemper as alternates.

Presbytery of Maryland.—Rev. John Leyburn, D. D., and elder L. C. Inglis were elected commissioners to the General Assembly, with Rev. Charles Beach and elder G. F. Anderson alternates. Mr. Milton B. Lambdin of Union church, Alexandria, Va., was received as a candidate for the ministry, and J. Addison Smith was dismissed to St. Louis Presbytery.

Presbytery of Eastern Texas.—A new church recently organized at Beaumont was reported. Rev. R. McInnis, D. D., of Central Mississippi, was elected evangelist. Presbytery overture the Assembly requesting that if the overtures of Synod is granted, erecting the Presbyteries of Dallas, Paris and Texas into a new Synod, the proposed new Synod be named North Texas instead of Red River. Rev. W. M. McElwee and ruling elder Bryan elected commissioners to the Assembly; Rev. W. R. McLelland and elder Steadman alternates.

HARMONY PRESBYTERY

Met, pursuant to adjournment, in Cheraw on the 7th inst., continuing its sessions until the 10th inst.

The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. J. A. Cousar, from 1 John iv: 7.

Sixteen ministers and about twenty-five elders were present.

Rev. H. G. Gilland was elected moderator and Gen. W. L. T. Prince temporary clerk.

Calls—A call was read from New Harmony church for the pastoral services of Rev. R. D. Perry for one fourth of his time. Mr. Perry not being present, it was ordered that said call be placed into his hands by the clerk.

Rev. C. E. Chichester was allowed to retain a call from Florence church until next fall meeting of Presbytery.

Bethesda church, Camden, was granted permission to prosecute a call before Concord Presbytery, N. C., for the pastoral services of Rev. Robert B. Anderson.

Licentiate E. G. Smith accepted a call to Hopewell church, and arrangements were made for his ordination and installation.

Rev. N. W. Edmunds accepted a call to the Sumterville church, and arrangements were made for his installation.

Candidate S. E. Bishop was licensed to preach the Gospel.

Mr. W. G. Godbold was taken under the care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry.

Rev. S. H. Hay and licentiates Bishop and Fraser were granted leave to labor outside the bounds of Presbytery.

Commissioners to the Assembly—Principals: Revs. H. M. Brearley and J. L. Bartlett and elders J. C. Coit and J. T. Walsh. Alternates: Rev. A. M. Hassell and H. G. Gilland, and elders W. A. Crossland and W. L. T. Prince.

The stated clerk was ordered to have 500 copies of the minutes published.

The executive committee were instructed to try and secure the services of licentiate S. E. Bishop for six months for Horry and Georgetown counties.

Presbytery adjourned to meet at Liberty Hill on Thursday before the third Sabbath in October, at 11 o'clock a. m.

W. A. GREGG, Stated Clerk.

MONTGOMERY PRESBYTERY.

This Presbytery met at the Second church Lynchburg, Wednesday the 14th of April, at 8 P. M., and was opened with a sermon from Rev. W. R. Coppedge, the last Moderator.

Rev. Wm. M. McPheeters was elected Moderator, and Rev. F. G. Railey and Ruling Elder Burdett from Salem, were elected temporary clerks.

One thing renders this meeting of Presbytery especially memorable. There were five candidates for the gospel ministry licensed, all of them having finished the course at Union Seminary this spring. They were Geo. Davies, Wm. Ruff, Walton Graybill, Mr. Cock and Mr. Ochiltree, who is also blind. And yet he took the most important part of the course at Union Seminary in two years including Hebrew in which he is very proficient. Mr. Graybill was granted permission to labor within the bounds of West Lexington Presbytery with the permission of that Presbytery. Mr. Ruff was allowed to assist his brother at Locust Bottom, his brother being in feeble health and offering to divide the salary with him. Mr. Cock was sent to assist Bro. Rice at Covington; Bro. Rice also being in feeble health. Mr. Davies was requested to labor at Princeton, Mercer county, if the way be clear, with liberty however if called to labor elsewhere. Mr. Ochiltree was allowed to assist Rev. P. B. Price, with the liberty to go elsewhere if the way be opened. The Lord be praised that He has put it into the hearts of so many of his young servants of our Presbytery to enter the gospel ministry.

Rev. C. M. Howard was granted permission to labor without the bounds of this Presbytery, provided he get permission of the Presbytery within whose bounds he labors.

Rev. J. M. Rawlings and Ruling Elder W. S. Graves of Liberty were elected delegates to the General Assembly, and Rev. Dr. McIlwaine and Ruling Elder Frederick Johnston were elected alternates.

Floyd Court House was chosen as the place for the next regular meeting, and Wednesday before the third Sunday in September, the time.

A called meeting was ordered to be held at Covington, on Thursday before the third Sunday in June, to consider the resignation of Rev. J. M. Rice, as pastor of that church.

A young man, member of the First Presbyterian church of Lynchburg, was received under the care of the Presbytery, as a candidate for the ministry, with the understanding that he apply to the pastor of that church for baptism. He was received into our church (on examination) from the Campbellite church; hence the above action.

Presbytery adjourned Saturday night to meet at Covington.

Upon the whole this was an unusually important and interesting meeting of our Presbytery. W. B. ARROWOOD.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

PRESBYTERIAN (SOUTH).

The church at Sumter, S. C., has called the Rev. N. W. Edmunds to be its pastor.

The church at Camden, S. C., has called the Rev. R. B. Anderson, of Morganton, N. C., to be its pastor.

The Charlottesville, Va., Chronicle reports of the Charlottesville church: There has been during the past ecclesiastical year an addition of nineteen to the membership. The pastor's salary has been paid up promptly, and every other indebtedness except the manse debt, which has been brought down to $375. Upwards of $500 have been contributed to benevolent objects and church enterprises, in addition to the amount paid for current home expenses—the aggregate amount of money raised by the congregation during the year approximating $3,500.

Rev. A. E. Grover, late pastor of the Presbyterian church in Shelbyville, Tenn., has been secured to supply the mission church connected with the Second Presbyterian church of Norfolk, Va. This mission is in Atlantic city, a village in the suburbs of Norfolk.

The Tygart's valley church at Huttonsville, Va., lately received twenty-two persons upon profession of faith and one by letter. Many of those received were baptized non-communicants, but more were not so connected.

Dry Creek church in Miss., has greatly prospered under the ministrations of Rev. G. T. Storey. On Sabbath, 28th of March, Messrs. Archie Fairly and William Smith were ordained as deacons.

During a protracted service held in connection with the regular communion in the Sharon church, near Augusta, Ky., in which the Rev. J. M. Evans was assisted by Mr. J. H. Hopper, Sabbath School evangelist, there were ten additions to the church on confession of faith in Christ.—Christian Observer.

A new Presbyterian church was dedicated at Augusta, Ky., on the 4th of April inst. The Christian Observer speaks of it as the prettiest church, probably, in Kentucky, and without a dollar of debt. The lot, building and furniture cost about $7,000. The furniture was almost entirely the free will offerings of devoted members and friends of the church.

Rev. Joseph A. Graves, lately in charge of Bethesda and Lebanon churches in Hinds county, Miss., has received and accepted a call to the church at Grand Junction, Tenn., with three other churches near by.

Fifty-three members have been received into the First Church, Louisville, Ky., since New Year's: forty by profession and thirteen by certificate.

At Manchester, Va., the Presbyterian congregation contemplates building a new church, and a committee has been appointed to report the cost of a suitable building.

The postoffice address of Rev. Geo. T. Lyle has been changed from Second Creek, W. Va., to Stony Point, Hawkins county, E. Tenn.

Rev. J. G. Fackler, whose acceptance of a call to McKinney, Texas, we have announced, is constrained to seek that mild and uniform climate for the sake of Mrs. Fackler's health. He expects to begin his labors at McKinney on the first Sunday in May. Correspondents will please note his change from Liberty, Mo., to McKinney, Texas.—St Louis Presbyterian.

Rev. E. M. Palmer writes to the St. Louis Presbyterian:

"It is my happy privilege, after a long silence, to report "good news from Zion" and Zion. At a school-house, four miles from Parksville, where some of the young men from Park College have been holding Sabbath school and other services for sometime, we have just closed a meeting, including in all about fourteen services, yet extending over more than two weeks by reason of various interruptions. It was in some respects peculiar and, on the whole, the most remarkable I ever attended, and it has not been without much good fruit. It was the Lord's work and to Him be all the praise and glory, while to us is much joy. The Holy Spirit was there with quickening and saving power. Results so far as known or gathered, thirty-seven hopeful conversions, or, in a few instances, restorations from a backslidden state, by which we are encouraged to believe none can ever finally fall away from true grace. Thirty-two have united with our church here, making thirty-eight additions during this year. The other five wished to join the Methodists. Among the number were six husbands and their wives, and one wife without her husband. In one instance, the parents leading, five of the family were brought in, all but one and it too young to believe for itself, an almost literal fulfillment of the words of Paul, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thine house." Five gathered from another family, the children making the start.

Items from Texas Presbyterian:

Rev. G. R. Waddell writes from San Saba that they are going to try and have a sort of Presbyterian camp meeting there next summer. There is plenty of room for one, the nearest Presbyterian churches north, east and south being respectively 70, 85 and 115 miles distant, while on to the west there is none to the Pacific Ocean.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Missionary Association of the Waco church was held on Sabbath, April 4th. Some short addresses were made, interspersed with singing, and a statement was made of the work accomplished by the Society in raising funds. There is a separate society of the girls and very young ladies called the Gleaners. One item of the reports is that through their labors the church will report as its contribution to Foreign Missions for the year $115, while if there had been only the church collection it would have been only $20. For the coming year their gatherings will be devoted to Home and Foreign Missions: the first half of the year to the support of the Presbyterial Evangelist, and the other half to Foreign Missions. Are there not a number of churches in the Presbytery, are there not many others in the State, in which similar things might be done?

Items from the Southern Presbyterian:

Eight communicants were recently added to Midway church and two to New Harmony, in Harmony Presbytery. The charges are in pastoral charge of Rev. R. D. Perry.

The Rev. W. H. Adams will supply the church on Sullivan's Island during the summer. His postoffice address has been changed from Lexington, Mass., to Charleston, S. C.

The Rev. R. P. Kerr, of Thomasville, Ga., has accepted an invitation to supply the church at Columbus, Ga.

During the last two weeks, nine communicants have been added to the church at Columbia, S. C.—six by certificate, and three on profession of their faith.

A correspondent writes us that "the dwelling-house occupied by the Rev. A. L. Miller, at Centre Point, in Nazareth congregation, Spartanburg, Co., S. C., was consumed by fire on the night of the 26th ult. A part of the furniture was saved; the clothing of the family was almost an entire loss. The loss, however, which will be most keenly felt by this deserving young minister, is his library, consisting of some three hundred valuable theological books, and all his sermons, the work of some seven or eight years. The books and sermons are an entire loss.

NORTHERN PRESBYTERIAN.

On April 4th twenty-seven persons were received into the Third church, Chicago, Ill., on profession of faith in Christ. The membership is now 1,600 or very nearly so.

The amount received and transmitted by Mr. Rankin, treasurer of the Persian famine fund is $17,106.

REFORMED (DUTCH).

Rev. Dr. Mancius S. Hutton died of heart disease on 11th inst. in his 77th year.

The Congregationalists of Plainfield, N. J., have decided to reorganize and to abandon the church property held by them to the Reformed Church.

METHODIST.

The New England Methodist Conference refused to admit Anna C. Oliver to deaconship, but afterwards placed itself on record as favoring women in pulpits by instructing the delegates to the General Conference to use their influence in removing all distinctions of sex in the offices and ordinations of the ministry.

The loan fund of the Methodist Church Extension Board has accumulated to $342,000, with more than enough subscribed and pledged to swell the total to $500,000.

BAPTIST.

The Baptist Union Theological Seminary, Morgan Park, Illinois, has seventy-six students this year, of whom eleven are in the Scandinavian department.

The Evangelical Baptist Benevolent and Missionary Society has voted to execute a new mortgage on Tremont Temple in Boston for $150,000, and to spend that sum in rebuilding the Temple. The old mortgage of $120,000 has just expired.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL.

Rev. Dr. F. Swentzell has left the Methodist Protestant Church to take orders in the Episcopal.

Seymour L Husted of Brooklyn, N. Y., placed a package containing $10,000 on one of the contribution plates at St. Mary's Protestant Episcopal church. It was to pay a mortgage on the rectory.

The late George Affleck of Hartford, Conn., left $9,000 in trust to the bishop of the diocese to be expended in relieving the poor of the city; also $2,000 to the Hartford Hospital and $8,000 to the Orphan Asylum.

MEETING OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

An adjourned meeting of Orange Presbytery will be held at Henderson, N. C., on the 28th of April, inst, at 8 o'clock p. m.

F. H. JOHNSTON, Stated Clerk.

Mrs. Wise—No doctor's bills for the past year, and has less than five dollars for medicine, and eight in the family.
Mrs. Jones—Would that I could have a like experience with my family.
Mrs. Wise—You can, if you will make Simmon's Liver Regulator your household remedy. From the youngest to the oldest, we take the Regulator whenever we feel Dyspeptic, Bilious, Feverish, or out of sorts, and it always relieves the Stomach, regulates the Bowels and quiets the Nerves.
"I have used your family medicine, called Simmons' Liver Regulator, for several years, and find it the best medicine for a family to keep in the house. I can eat anything I wish at night, and take a dose after it, and sleep as sound and sweet as ever. I have not spent one dollar for my family for medicines in five years, only for your Regulator, and must say it does all it says in will.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 8, 1877.
Some three months ago I found myself suffering with Brights disease—Albuminuria. By the use of a reliable test I found albumen in the urine, and in some slight degree in a few instances in a coagulated state. I suffered from dropsy, particularly about the ankles, slight pains about the kidneys, a derangement of digestion, great dryness of the skin, and at times much thirst, and, of course, a gradual failing of strength. This was about the state of things when I commenced taking the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I took about six tablespoonfuls every day for one week, when I found all my symptoms decidedly improved, and at the end of two weeks it was difficult to detect any trace of albumen. Having imprudently taken cold I had a very slight relapse some two weeks ago, when I began again using the medicine, and am now as well as ever.

At his residence in Guilford county, on the morning of April 7th, PAUL COBLE, Esq.

For three months he had endured much pain, which was borne with christian patience and resignation. As his end drew near his confidence grew stronger, till at length he passed away in the clear, bright sunshine of christian hope and peace. In his death, irreparable to his family, the Church has lost a valuable member, the country a good citizen, and the poor a true friend.
W. B. T.

At the Brown House, in Macon, Ga., 5th April, inst., of consumption, EDWARD WALDRON, of New Brunswick, N. J.

Mr. Waldron was returning home from Florida, where he had spent the winter in search of health. Finding the climate of Macon pleasant he had stopped there some weeks, and purposed remaining during the spring. An hour or two previous to his decease he was walking around in the best of spirits, enjoying as good health as the fatal nature of his disease permitted. He leaves a widow and a family of children. Mr. Waldron married in North Carolina, a daughter of Mr. E. Martin, of Washington, where the immediate relatives of Mrs. Waldron still reside.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, We have learned with profound regret of the death of our esteemed friend, Mr. JOHN D. BROWN, which occurred on the 6th day of April, 1880, at his home in Salisbury, N. C.; and

Whereas, we, North Carolinians, and other friends of the deceased residing in New York city, desire to give expression to the sentiment of sorrow which fills our hearts at the announcements of this fiat of Omnipotence, and to bear our testimony to the great worth and high christian character of our late friend and brother salesman; and

Whereas, We would tender our heartiest sympathies to the sorrowing widow and family of our friend in this sad hour of their bereavement; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Mr. John D. Brown we, ourselves, have lost a friend whose genial qualities, whose exemplary character as a christian gentleman, whose diligence and rigid honesty in business, whose fairness in competition, and whose inflexible devotion to duty in whatever sphere of life it has pleased God to call him, have now our highest admiration, and his memory shall ever live in our hearts as one whose bright example throughout a long and eventful life should stimulate us, who survive him, to emulate his virtues.

Resolved, That in the death of this true son of North Carolina our State has lost a representative, and our merchants an agent in this great centre of commerce, whose example reflected credit upon the former and whose faithful services will be remembered with gratitude by the latter.

Resolved, that to the bereaved widow and family of our deceased friend we tender our deepest sympathy in their affliction, and we humbly and devoutly implore Him "Who doth not willingly afflict or grieve the children of men" henceforth to shower his blessings upon them.

Resolved, That in grateful recognition of his kind and generous actions to our friend, we do hereby tender to Mr. Edward S. Jaffrey, of New York, in whose service the deceased has labored for the past ten years, our sincere thanks for his generosity and personal kindness to our brother salesman during his last fatal illness in this city.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to the family of the deceased, to Mr. Edward S. Jaffrey, and to the Salisbury Watchman for publication, with a request that all North Carolina papers publish the same.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mr. DANIEL MURDOCK McCORMAC died at his residence, in Shoe Heel, on February 4th, 1880, in the 45th year of his age.

Mr. McCormac had been in feeble health for some time, and was at intervals a great sufferer; but nevertheless, his death was in a measure unexpected and sudden, and proved a severe and painful shock to his family and friends. He, however, was prepared by grace, we believe, for the solemn event, and was enabled to meet it composedly and triumphantly. A devoted wife and two interesting little ones, with a large circle of relations and friends, are left to mourn his untimely end: for he was cut off in the meridian of life, and in the midst of his usefulness.

The community in which he lived, and the church of which he was so long a worthy and consistent member, feel greatly his loss: but who can fully appreciate the loss which his own immediate household has sustained! A useful citizen, a conscientious and honest business man, a consistent Christian, a quiet, unobtrusive gentleman of suave and courteous manners, his loss is deplored by all, and all miss him. But especially and most sadly is he missed in that little home circle of which he was the honored and beloved head and faithful prop. For them how profound and sincere should our sympathies be. May they realize the rich fulfilment of the precious promises of God's Word, especially intended for the widow and the fatherless. It is not easy for the outside world to appreciate fully the depth and tenderness of the love of the husband and father for his own little household, and how peacefully and happily he lived in the bosom of that home ever pervaded with the atmosphere of warm, pure affection, remote from the common gaze. May the blessed Saviour, in whom he believed, and in whom he has sweetly fallen asleep, we trust, by his own living presence, cheer that home, brightening it by the light of His countenance, and warming it by His infinite love!

Mr. McCormac connected himself with the Lebanon Presbyterian church in December, 1858, under the ministry of Rev. Daniel Johnston. Residing in Shoe Heel when the church in that place was organized he was one of those who petitioned Fayetteville Presbytery for its formation, and was in full communion with it, and a consistent, useful and deeply interested member of it at the time of his death. His walk was blameless, his life consistent, and in all his relations he was faithful. Of a modest, retiring and undemonstrative disposition, few knew the sterling excellence of his character. But his great desire was to do his duty and glorify his God. Especially was he anxious that his children after him should walk in the faith of their fathers. Even to his last hour he was careful to leave particular instructions how he wished them taught and trained.

We believe a good man has gone to his rest; and that the God whom he served and in whom he trusted, will prove a God and Father to his widow and children after him.

FEELS YOUNG AGAIN.

"My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; head ache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters, with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over 70 years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, Providence, R. I.

NASAL AND BRONCHIAL CATARRH

EFFECTS OF CATARRH IN THE SYSTEM.

Catarrh, in ordinary circumstances, whether brought on by climate or accidental causes, is not by any means difficulty to cure in healthy persons, provided proper treatment is commended before the disease has obtain a firm hold. But in cases where the patient has, either from hereditary predisposition or direct irregularity, a tainted diathesis, Catarrh appears in its worst form and assumes a phase of the most dangerous character, requiring the most careful and scientific management. In these cases the disease is not confined to the linings of the interior of the Nose, but extends to the Ethmoid bones, which, forming the Nose, are like filagree in their delicate construction, and as thin as an egg-shell. The decomposition of these bones, and consequent falling in of the Nose, is one of the most painful and hideous pictures that humanity can show as the result of neglecting this repulsive disease. The membranous lining of the Nose lies close to the Ethmoid bones with all their network of nerves and blood-vessels, and when inflamed such is the vitality that the circulation of blood is increased to three times its normal condition, the inflammation extending to the Ethmoid bones, ulcers are formed that penetrate through the entire cartilages the bone becoming necrosed, the acrid discharges assume a frightful fetid character, and, in scrofulous cases, almost unbearable, the patient often, from injury of his own sense of smell, being unable to comprehend the terrible extent of this effluvium in its loathsomeness to others. The membrance then becomes thickened by continuous inflammation, albuminous deposits become mixed with the discharge, resulting in destruction and absorption of the Nasal Bones.

Bronchitis, or Inflammation of the Bronchial Tubes.

THE THROAT This disease is so closely connected with Catarrh that it may be truly described as a branch of that disease, only Modified and changed by the nature and organization of the parts affected, Catarrh being confined to the interior of the Nose, while Bronchitis affects the small pipes entering into the lungs, known as the Bronchial Tubes. Where this disease obtains its worst character, tumors grow up like mushrooms, creating inflammatory adhesions and discharge of offensive matter from the throat, extending through the Eustachian Tube to the ear, which becomes affected. The absorption of the tuberculous matter is very dangerous and frequently results in Pulmonary Consumption and Death.

TO THE READER.

Can you comprehend in its terrible significance that this disease is more fatal to mankind than all the fevers and other ailments we know of?—or the millions of people that labor under it? Many often are unconscious of its ravages until the discharge from the nose and throat bring it painfully home to them, in the ineffective efforts to cough and expectorate the offensive matter. Can anything be more digusting to the onlooker than this spectacle! Yet none are so frequent. You will find it in every street-car, in every public conveyance. This is only the begining of the disease. It requires instant scientific treatment. From the delicate organization of the parts affected, there is no time to lose; nothing but the most decided measures will arrest the silent progress of this cruel malady. There must be no neglect.

CATARRH AND AMERICANS

There are few among Americans who did not know by experience some of the symptoms of this disease, and upon many it has fastened itself with a tenacity which defies the skill of the ordinary physician. The "hawking" and spitting for which Americans are sometimes ridiculed by foreigners, are due to this disease, produced by the peculiarly changeable nature of our climate, on account of which colds are contracted, and settle in the head, or the throat and lungs.

CATARRH COMPLETELY RID OF.

193 E. FAYETTE ST., Baltimore, Md., Dec. 20, 1879.
REV. T. P. CHILDS—I have the pleasure of informing you that after a faithful use of your remedy for eight weeks ending March 28, 1879, I am completely rid of a stubborn case of Catarrh of three years' standing—breathing tubes clear as a whistle, appetite and digestion good. Yours, THOMAS B. HAND.

The Family of a Missionary CURED—CHILDS' TREATMENT All It Professes To Be.

Rev. Thomas Allen, now residing in Dayton, Ohio, after six years' service in India, accepted the position of District Secretary of the American Missionary Union for Ohio and West Virginia. The family contracted catarrh while in India.

DR. CHILDS—Dear Brother: This is to certify that I have used your Catarrh Specific and Cold Air Inhaling Balm in my family with the most beneficial results. My son, now in Madison University, New York, was so badly afflicted with Catarrh I feared for a time that he was incurable; and, when I applied to you for medicine, my hope was faint. It acted speedily and efficiently, and I believe saved him from an early grave. He is now perfectly cured. My wife, who had become very much reduced by a residence in Farther India, as a missionary, has derived great benefit from your Inhaling Balm. I can most heartily commend these medicines to the afflicted, believing they are all they profess to be.
THOMAS ALLEN, Dayton, O.

The Chancellor of the University of Nebraska Cured.

Too much stress can not be laid upon the following testimonial. Dr. Fairfield is well known all over the United States as a man of high standing, learning, and great eloquence in the pulpit. He is at present the Chancellor of the University of Nebraska. Prior to the use of Childs Catarrh Specific he had utterly lost the use of his voice, and was compelled to suspend his daily lectures.

Can Lecture Daily.

REV. T. P. CHILDS—Dear Sirs: I think you have the true theory and practice for cure of Nasal Catarrh, and also for the treatment of the respiratory organs. My throat is now so well restored that I lecture daily without any difficulty, and find no difficulty whatever in preaching. You are at full liberty to use my name for the benefit of others.
Yours, very truly, E. B. FAIRFIELD, D. D., L L. D., Lincoln, Neb.

United States Express Agent Cures His Daughter.

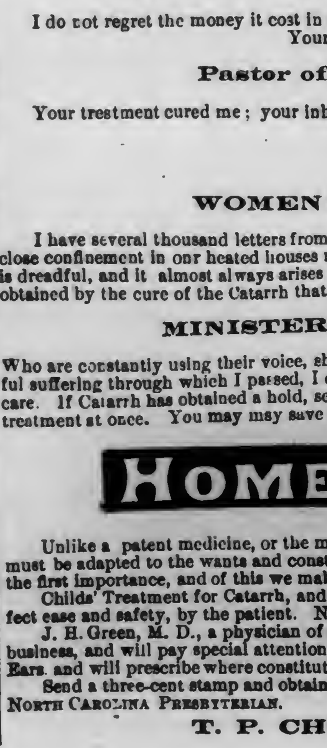
T. P. CHILDS & CO.: Dear Sir—About three years ago a severe attack of Measles left my daughter with Catarrh of the Head. A severe Cold aggravated the disease. I commenced using your treatment, and she commenced to improve at once. Now my daughter is entirely well—all the horrid disease gone. Your treatment is marvelous in its effects. JOHN W. RILEY, U. S. Express Agent, Troy, O.

A Leading Ohio Judge Cured—A Thousand Thanks for Childs' Treatment.

JUDGE J. COLLETT, of Lima, O., writes: "You will remember how terribly Catarrh had taken hold upon me. Now I am cured; head free, air passages all open, and breathing natural. I express to you again what I said in a recent letter, 'A thousand thanks to you for so sure a remedy and so very cheap.'"

Childs Catarrh Treatment
HAS STOOD THE TEST OF YEARS.

In twelve years' practice 45,000 Catarrh Sufferers have applied for relief, and thousands of testimonials have been received from all parts of the country.



Catarrh Eighteen Years.

Terrible headache, disgusting nasal discharges, dryness of the throat, acute bronchitis, coughing, soreness of the lungs, raising bloody mucus, and even night sweats for Eighteen Years, incapacitating me for my professional duties, and bringing me to the verge of the grave—ALL were caused by, and the result of, Nasal Catarrh. After spending hundreds of dollars and obtaining no relief, I compounded my CATARRH SPECIFIC AND COLD AIR INHALING BALM, and wrought upon myself a wonderful cure. Now I can speak four hours with no difficulty, and can breathe freely in any atmosphere. At the calls of numerous friends, I have given my cure to the public. It is certain, thorough and perfect, and is endorsed by EVERY PHYSICIAN who has examined it.
T. P. CHILDS.

Many of our leading divines, lawyers, and prominent business men have tried this remedy with wonderful success. We know Mr. Childs as an honest Christian man.—Cincinnati Daily Gazette.

A Lady in Massachusetts Cured.

REV. T. P. CHILDS—Dear Sir: I have suffered from a severe cough most of the time for the past four years. Physicians have told me it was caused by chronic inflammation of the bronchial tubes. I procured some of your Cold Inhaling Balm, with other medicines, about the middle of last January, and have used it since with most satisfactory results. I have not been so nearly free from a cough during the past four years as I am at this present time, and the result is wholly due to the use of your balm, which I heartily recommend to that large class of invalids who have consumptive tendencies.
Very respectfully yours, MRS. J. H. BULLARD, Springfield, Mass.

Horrible Suffering of a Resident of Texas.

One of the most terrible cases of Catarrh we have had in our practice was that of W. C. Sandel, of Willis, Montgomery County, Texas. He says:

In 1873 I was attacked with the Catarrh, slight at first, but it gradually grew worse and worse. In the spring of 1877 the disease assumed a new form; my mouth and throat were attacked, ulcers were formed, and soon the ulva was all eaten away, and large sores through the posterior nares. My condition was now not only deplorable, but apparently hopeless. Large quantities of very offensive matter were discharged from the nostrils and throat; and for days together I could take no food but spoon victuals. I knew of no remedy, and the doctors could give me no relief or advice. My sufferings were intense, and distraction of mind was added to my physical sufferings.

After three months use of our treatment he reported a radical change for the better, and again in a recent letter he says: "I AM ENTIRELY CURED; all the horrible disease entirely removed.

REV. T. P. CHILDS—Dear Sir: I value your Inhaler and medicine for bronchial troubles very highly. I would not take a farm for it if it could not be replaced.
Respectfully, J. P. ROBERTS, Chicago, Ill.

Pastor in New Jersey Does Not Regret the Cost.

I do not regret the money it cost in using your medicine. I can heartily recommend your treatment.
Yours, E. J. LIPPINCOTT, Clarksboro, Gloucester County, N. J.

Pastor of Methodist Church Cured.

Your treatment cured me; your inhalers are excellent. This is the only radical cure I have ever found.
E. S. MARTIN, Pastor M. E. Church, Port Carbon, Pa,

WOMEN THE MOST GRATEFUL.

I have several thousand letters from grateful women all over the country. Their sedentary habits and close confinement in our heated houses make them very susceptible to this disease. Foul breath in a woman is dreadful, and it almost always arises from Catarrh or its baneful attendants. Pure sweet breath can be obtained by the cure of the Catarrh that causes it.

MINISTERS, LAWYERS, TEACHERS,

Who are constantly using their voice, should be watchful of the first approaches of Catarrh. After the dreadful suffering through which I passed, I cannot too strongly urge upon my brother speakers the necessity of care. If Catarrh has obtained a hold, send at once and obtain my CATARRH SPECIFIC, and commence the treatment at once. You may may save yourself years of agony.

HOME TREATMENT

Unlike a patent medicine, or the many so-called Catarrh cures advertised, CHILDS' CATARRH TREATMENT must be adapted to the wants and constitutional needs of each individual patient. A knowledge of this is of the first importance, and of this we make a special study.

Childs' Treatment for Catarrh, and for diseases of the Bronchial Tubes, can be taken at home, with perfect ease and safety, by the patient. No expense need be entailed beyond the cost of the medicine.

J. H. Green, M. D., a physician of twenty years' general and special practice, is now associated in the business, and will pay special attention to all diseases of the Upper Air Passages and to Affections of the Ears, and will prescribe where constitutional treatment is necessary.

Send a three-cent stamp and obtain the facts and expense of this treatment. Say you saw this in the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN. Address
T. P. CHILDS & CO., Proprietors, Troy, Ohio.

FOR THE FAMILY.

Only a Baby.

BY REV. OLIVER CRANE, M. D.

Only a baby, so tiny, so canny,
Emblem of innocence, weakness and wants,
Petted and fretted and teased by so many.
How they are mauling him,
Pulling and hauling him—
Handled and dandled by cousins and aunts.

Only a baby, now growing and crowing,
Ready to laugh and as ready to cry;
Coying, coqueting, so cunning, so knowing,
What can be done with him,
But to make fun with him,
Stealing a kiss and a nudge on the sly?

Only a baby in mischief forever,
Noisy busy from morning till night;
Yet so amusing, so merry, so clever,
What can you say to him,
What but to play to him,
Letting him caper with all his might?

Only a baby, but playing the tyrant,
Saucily saying I won't and I will,
Coaxing till winning, so archly aspirant,
What can you do with him?
Glad to get through with him,
Only when tucked in his cradle and still.

Only a baby, now walking and talking,
Making all ring with his racket and fun,
Rolicking, frolicking, stammering, stalking,
How can you share with him,
How can you bear with him,
Armed with his drum and his whistle and gun?

Only a baby—a schoolboy in trousers,
Trudging each morning away to his school;
Joining his mates in exuberant rousers—
How it amuses him,
While it excuses him,
Setting a trap for an April fool!

Only a baby a baby no longer
Growing to boyhood as fast as he can;
Stouter in body and mentally stronger!
Now he is yearning for—
Now he is burning for
Time to go by to be counted a man.

—Interior.

"For Thine is the Power."

"I can't do it—it's quite impossible. I've tried five times and I can't get it right," and Ben pushed his book and slate away in despair. Ben was a most ambitious boy; he wanted to be "head" in the school; for had not the minister already spoken about him, and said such a boy ought to have a chance at college? But Ben worked at great disadvantage. His mother, though a good Christian woman, and a lady, in the best sense of the word, had had very few advantages when a girl, and so could not help Ben, and the father, who might have done so, had died, leaving his widow with three little children to support by her needle.

Mrs. Hartley gave a little sigh at her boy's perplexity, but only said quietly, 'Then you don't believe in the Lord's prayer?'

"The Lord's prayer, mother! Why, there's nothing there to help me with this example."

"O yes; there is help for every trouble in life in the Lord's prayer, if we only know how to get at it. I'm afraid you don't yet know that prayer."

Ben flushed. If it had been anybody else that had said that, he would have been really vexed but mother was different. Ben always tried to be sure he quite understood her, for he never for one instant forgot why her hands were never idle.

"Now mother, you don't mean that. I've said that prayer ever since I was a baby! I could go to bed or leave my room in the morning without saying it. I know I sometimes don't think enough of what I'm saying, but you know, mother, I do try to mean it—I—I—" But Ben stopped, his voice half choked.

The mother saw that her boy had misunderstood her, and answered quickly, 'I never doubt, Ben, boy, that you are trying and praying, but I was trying a long time before I knew what the last part of the Lord's prayer really meant. I'm no minister or scholar, but I'll try and tell it to you. You know we ask God for bread, to be kept from evil, and to be forgiven, and then we say, for thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory. It's God's power we rely on—not our own; and it often helps me, Ben, when I have a difficult new pattern to fit I say 'For thine is the power—this is my duty, Heavenly Father, give me Thy power,' and he does, Ben, he does."

Ben sat silent. It seemed almost too familiar a prayer. And yet, that time when he had to stay from school because he had no clothes, he had asked God; and the minister's wife had brought him a suit the very next next day. "But a boy's sums, mother!" he said.

"I think that sum is just as much to you as many a grander sounding thing to some one else. You say if only you get that right you'll be perfect for the month. Now, I care a great deal about that, but I'm quite sure that your Heavenly Father loves you more than I do. I would help you so gladly, Ben, if I could, but He can help you; His is the power; ask Him."

There was another silence, and then Mrs. Hartley said: "Now, Ben, I want you to run to the store for some sewing silk for me; the air will do you good. I believe, my son, that if you ask you can do that sum when you come home."

Ben started at once; his mother's slightest wish was law to him. He ran along, enjoying the rest from study and the cool, fresh air. The sewing silk was bought, and Ben started home, when he caught sight of Phil Earlie across the street. Ben gave a whistle boys so delight in, and Phil looked back and joined him.

"Done your lessons?"

"All but my sums"

"Did you try that fifteenth example?"

"Yes."

"Get it right?"

"No, not yet, but I will."

Phil gave a provoking little laugh. "You will? I guess not; I've done it, but I never could have found it out alone. I had help."

Ben's heart fairly ached with envy for a moment. It was always so; Phil had his uncle George, and other boys had large brothers or fathers to help them; only he was left quite alone. But just then he remembered his mother's words, "It's God's power we rely on—not our own." "I'll get help too," he said to himself.

The boys chatted on, played leap frog and raced each other; but even as he raced and romped Ben felt changed. He had begun to believe in his Heavenly Father as never before, and was wonderfully happy.

After giving the silk to his mother he picked up his slate and book and went up to his own little room. Kneeling by the bed he repeated the Lord's Prayer, stopping at "Thine is the kingdom and the power. Heavenly Father, I want power to understand this. There's no one to help me; please give me power."

Ben waited a moment, and then, still on his knees he took his slate and tried again. Do you ask me, Did he succeed? 'If any man lack wisdom let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not." Ben had asked, and God answered. After a little earnest thought he saw what rule he had neglected, and worked the example correctly. The next day he was "head," for he was the only boy who had "done his sums without being helped."

"Yet I was helped, mother," he said, "and I shall never forget the last part of the Lord's Prayer after this."—S. S. Times

The Baby Elephant.

On the 10th of March an event occurred in Philadelphia that has aroused universal curiosity and interest. It was the birth of a baby elephant, which immediately became famous as being the first of his kind, so far as is known, ever born in captivity. All other elephants brought to this country for exhibition, or used in eastern countries as beasts of burden, have been captured and tamed, and it has heretofore been regarded as an unquestioned fact they would not breed in captivity.

The mother of the cunning little fellow who is attracting so much attention is a large black Asiatic elephant named Hebe, and belongs to the great London Circus. She is acknowledged by all the other elephants of the circus as their queen and they are all loyally devoted to her. She and six other large elephants have been spending the winter in a stable at the corner of Twenty-third street and Ridge avenue, Philadelphia. Here the elephants stands in a large room, each with their hind legs chained to posts.

Immediately upon the birth of the little elephant the others seemed to become crazy with joy. They had been very quiet, but they set up the most tremendous bellowing and trumpeting imaginable. Some of them broke their chains and danced about in the most grotesque manner, besides performing all the tricks they had been taught in the circus ring. The general excitement communicated itself to Hebe, and in a moment she became the most fractic of them all. Snapping the chains that bound her to the posts as though they were threads, and apparently becoming for the first time aware of the presence of her baby, she seized him with her trunk and threw him with great force, twenty yards or more, to the opposite side of the room. He fell close beside a large stove, around which was a railing of heavy timbers. Rushing after him, his crazy mother beat down this railing, threw him over the stove, and in her madness would probably have killed her baby, had not her keeper, who had fled for his life upon the first outbreak, returned with help and attracted her attention. With considerable difficulty she was secured and again chained to the posts, and the other animals were also quieted. During all the confusion the baby had stood motionless in the place to which his mother had flung him, and had regarded the whole scene with a look of wise solemnity, such as only a baby can assume.

When quiet was restored he became very frisky, and was willing to make friends with everybody. He ran about with his mouth wide open, and his little trunk pointing upward in the funniest way possible. He blundered about here and there, running against all sorts of things, and finally seemed overjoyed to be taken back to his mother, who has ever since shown the greatest fondness for him. He is thirty-five inches high, and weighs two hundred and fourteen pounds, so that he is about the size of a large New Foundland dog. He is fed by means of a nursing bottle made of a yard of rubber hose and a large funnel. One end of the hose is put in his mouth, and the other is attached to the funnel, into which the keepers pour warm milk until the baby shows that he has had enough by throwing down his end of the tube.—Presbyterian.

Concerning Diamonds.

J. Ballantine Hannay's discovery of a process of making diamonds was the subject of "an evening" at the Royal Society on Thursday night, and to-day there are signs of a coming diamond panic. Skeptics say that the laboratory will never produce gems of the first water. It is conceded that the chemist may turn out "bort" or "carbonado," the black, unornamental diamond, which is used for rock-boring, and which in fact, penetrated the Mont Cenis for the locomotive. But enthusiasts say that the time is not far distant when Mr. Hannay and his followers will be able to flood the diamond market with gems equal to the "Koh-i-noor." A panic in diamonds would not be the first of the kind. Not many years ago, at the Leipsic Easter market, diamonds fell fifty per cent., owing to Dom Pedro paying the interest of the Brazilian state debt to England in diamonds instead of gold. In 1836 there was a great rise in the precious stones, and in 1848 the revolution in France sent them down again. From that period they went up at the rate of five per cent. a year until 1865, when the United States came into the European market as a great purchaser, and immediately after the civil war between North and South, they rose suddenly 25 per cent. At the end of the Franco-German war they went up again, but the discovery of diamonds at the Cape lowered the price for several years. The gem has lately, however, recovered its position and value, and just now, when science tilts at it, the favorite stone may be said to have renewed its ascendency in the world of fashion, and also as a banking security. Mr. Streeter, in his recent work on "Precious Stones," says the trade in gems is a much more important business than ever it was before. Prior to the discovery of America, India was the great emporium of precious stones. Pegu received a large annual sum for its exports; so did Ceylon, and even now there is a jewel market held in Ratnapura at the yearly Buddha festival. The price on these occasions is largely determined at the moment by the rank and wealth of the buyers. It is calculated that the value of the stones found yearly in the island of Ceylon is $50,000. A hundred years ago Brazil became a powerful rival to India. The trade was a prerogative to the crown. The total value of Brazilian diamond produce from 1861 to 1867 was $5,440,000. The largest reputed diamond in the world is known as the "Braganza," which was discovered in Brazil in 1741. It weighed, in its rough state, 1,680 carets; was the size of a hen's egg, and is valued at the almost ludicrous estimate of $291,750,000. "But," says Streeter, "as it has never been cut, its genuineness is naturally doubted, and it is believed to be a white topaz." It is one of the State treasures of Portugal." The largest known diamond belongs to the Rajah of Mattan, in Borneo; it weighs 367 carats, and has been the subject of feuds and bloody battles; but the Rajah still holds it, and is supremely happy, it is said in its possession. The Governor of Batavia offered him $150,000 and two ships of war, with guns and ammunition, for it; but the "Rajah said: "No; it is a talisman in my family, and to part with it would bring misery upon us." "The Great Mogul," or Koh-i-noor, which is occasionally worn by Queen Victoria, is perhaps the most famous of stones, dating back to 56 years before Christ.—London Letter in N. Y. Times.

Wool.

A clever man once argued that cork trees grew to supply stoppers for ginger-beer bottles. That was his way of hinting that too much might be made of the argument from design. In spite of the warning thus conveyed we must, in the outset, mention a very curious fact or two about wool, that may be regarded as strengthening the argument from design or not, as the reader chooses. Wool is simply a kind of modified hair, depending on the very same conditions of the skin, into which we cannot now enter. But hair—especially human hair—and wool differ very much in one respect. Hair, when seen under the microscope, gives a succession of markings, more or less regular, running across it, indicating that it is composed of a series of cells very closely pressed together; but wool shows these markings so much more defined that they present a serrated outside surface, resulting from the inequalities where the cells join together. This is what gives the curl observable in wool and woolly hair. It is because human hair generally does not have these serrations that it cannot be felted, and that it can be woven only with great difficulty, and would not make very warm garments even it were. In preparation for some of the worsteds, indeed, one of the processes in combing wool aims at reducing the degree of serration, so as to obtain more smoothness and softness in the fabric. It may be mentioned, that one of the main reasons why such staples as mohair and alpaca so imperatively need to be mixed with other substances in being worked arises mainly from the shortness of the serrations. Sir Titus Salt's wonderful foresight and skill were seen as much in his clear discernment of the requisite qualities in the mixing staples as in the conviction of the availability of alpaca itself to produce a glossy and beautiful cloth. These microscopic inequalities in the wool are thus what give it its great value as a woven commodity—hair having comparatively little cohesion when woven together. Though the wool spinner may not have the fact in mind when he purchases his raw material, it is really the number of these serrations which determines qualities. The finer the wool the greater the number of serrations. The best Saxony wool, we learn, contains 2,?00 of these serrations in a single inch, merino wool only about 2,400, our own Southdown about 2,100, while the coarser sorts, as found on some of the Leicester sheep, does not present more than 1,850. It needs to be borne in mind however, that several qualities of wool are got off one sheep, and this it is which gives rise to the occupations of wool sorting or wool stapling.—Good Words.

About Maple Sugar.

I wonder how many of Aunt Patience's nephews and nieces ever saw real maple sugar?—in little delicate brown cakes I mean; square, and oblong, and round fluted ones, all looking in such a hurry to melt away in your mouths. I shouldn't wonder if there were a good many, who haven't much idea of where it comes from or how it is made, and would like to hear, as Horace Greeley used to put it, "what I know about sugar-making."

Well, in the first place there must be a tree, because you know the sugar is nothing at all but boiled-down sap; and a splendid tree it is. There are five different kinds of maples that grow east of the Mississippi, and I don't know how many more there may be west of it. Perhaps some of the nephews who live off there will write and tell us. The botanical people call them all Acer, sharp, vigorous, because they are such fine trees; but the Acer saccharinum, our sugar-maple, is the noblest of all. To be sure the swamp maple is very beautiful in the spring, when, before it gets any leaves at all, it is covered with red tassels, each one a cluster of ever so many tiny flowers no bigger than a large sweet-pea seed, and hanging on long, slender, tender little stems. Again, in the Fall its leaves turn very prettily. But every spring the sugar-maple gives out gallons and gallons of its life-blood to delight the sweet tooth of all the people, big and little. You know it is said that we think more of gratifying our palates than our sense of beauty. This blessed tree does both for us, however, because in the Fall it colors its leaves as no other tree does, rose-color, crimson, garnet, yellow or dark brown, and all these touched with dashes of green. There is a little leaf before me now of the wonderful red that isn't exactly like anything else, just tipped at the very end of the middle point with brilliant yellow, as if it had glowed and glowed in the glorious October air till the sun coaxed it to burst out into a tiny flame just before I, ruthless Vandal, came by with my penknife and carried it off to be shut up in a great book for days and days. Then after all the good tree's work is done out on the hill in the sun and wind, and a man has come with his ax and cut it down, it keeps people warm through the long cold winter better than any other kind of wood; for it is so hard and solid and burns so long that it has still another name; rock maple.

But about the sugar. You know that the sap of a tree is all drawn out of the ground by its roots, and goes up into its leaves, which throw off into the air a good deal of water that is in it, but keep the solid part for the tree to grow strong on. When they drop off in the Fall of course this breathing out stops, and there is no need for the roots to take in any more sap. But they do keep on all safe and warm down in the earth even after the frost comes; and then they begin again in the spring before the leaves think of waking up. So all the trees get very, very full of sap and the maple has so much that the minute you make a hole in its trunk out comes the drops, a steady little stream in warm, sunny days; and "good sugar weather" means frosty nights and just such days.

What do you think about it? There is no way of learning how a thing is done like seeing the operation with one's own eyes; but seeing with somebody's else is next best. So look through mine; and what do you see?

A pleasant bit of woods that lie along the top of a hill which is not very high, and looks toward the northeast over a little valley which holds the sleepy river, the railroad track and the great brick buildings of the factory, to the village, which is waking up in the sunny air to the consciousness that spring is coming sometime, before very long, in spite of two feet of snow still on the ground. At the bottom of the hill are a couple of men on an ox-sled beginning to break a zig-zag road up to the sugar-orchard. It is tedious business and the patient oxen have hard work of it, but they are four-legged proofs that patience and perseverance conquer all things, and after a while come steaming up to the sugar-house. A funny little shanty of a place it is, so built against the side hill that the back wall is about as high as the front, with a door on one side and three windows high up toward the roof, which slants backward a little and is guiltless of shingles. The whole building is not more than twenty feet square; but hundreds of pounds of sugar and gallons of syrup are made in it every spring and sent in every direction.

The two men have augurs with them and round pieces of wood, six or eight inches long, perhaps, and an inch thick, with a channel cut in the side to carry the sap. When they have bored holes in the trees and put these spouts in, and hung underneath the bright tin buckets, the sap comes running out, first a drop and then a great many all in a hurry, just as the school-boys and girls in the village rush out when school is done. Poor little drops! If they know what fiery trials were waiting for them they wouldn't be so anxious to get away from their slow journey up into the branches. Perhaps the reason why they stop coming now and then is that they have a presentiment of their fate.

When the buckets begin to grow full on the hundreds of great trees the men come around again, this time with two or three hogsheads on their sled. The buckets are emptied into them, the sled makes a good many trips to the sugar-house, and the sap-drops begin to have a warm time of it. For a clear, hot fire has been made, and over it has been mounted, with one end a trifle lower than the other, a great iron pan, eight or ten feet long by three or four broad, and curiously arranged inside. At intervals of about ten inches there are iron partitions which do not run entirely from side to side, but have a little passage-way alternately on one side and the other. The sap coming in at the top zig-zags its way along at such a leisurely rate that most of the water in it is evaporated during the journey, and it comes out at the lower end nearly or quite syrup. The additional boiling necessary to reduce it to sugar is generally given it in kettles, and if the orchard happens to be near the owner's house it often receives the finishing touches there. Some of the farmers make considerable profit in good seasons by furnishing to all sugar lovers, for the modest sum of twenty-five cents, unlimited hot sugar with the necessary accompaniments of doughnuts and pickles.—Christian Union.

Forest fires are sweeping through various counties of New Jersey. The fire originated from locomotive sparks. The village of Tom's River was entirely surrounded by fire and great alarm was caused for the safety of the town. Some buildings were burned. The fire crossed the river and is still spreading. The fine residence of Judge Jeffrey, with out buildings, has been burned. The area burned over is estimated at 600 square miles.

Good Evidence.

When such men as the Rev. Dr. Rankin, Rev. Dr. Harvey, Prof. Green, Dr. Bartine, Col. John K. McChesney, E. W. Neff, and a number of others equally trustworthy, signify over their own signitures of the marvelous efficacy of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, in the diseases for which it is recommended, it is time to dismiss doubts on the subject.

POVERTY AND SUFFERING.

"I was dragged down with debt, poverty and suffering for years, caused by a sick family and large bills for doctoring, which did them no good. I was completely discouraged, until one year ago, by the advice of my pastor, I procured Hop Bitters and commenced their use, and in one month we were all well, and none of us have seen a sick day since, and I want to say to all poor men, you can keep your families well a year with Hop Bitters for less than one doctor's visit will cost—I know it.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR Diseases of the Throat and Lungs.

In diseases of the pulmonary organs a safe and reliable remedy is invaluable. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL is such a remedy, and no other so eminently merits the confidence of the public. It is a scientific combination of the medicinal principles and curative virtues of the finest drugs, chemically united, of such power as to insure the greatest possible efficiency and uniformity of results. It strikes at the foundation of all pulmonary diseases, affording prompt relief and rapid cures, and is adapted to patients of any age or either sex. Being very palatable, the youngest children take it readily. In ordinary Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Influenza, Clergyman's Sore Throat, Asthma, Croup, and Catarrh, the effects of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL are magical, and multitudes are annually preserved from serious illness by its timely and faithful use. It should be kept at hand in every household for the protection it affords in sudden attacks. In Whooping-cough and Consumption there is no other remedy so efficacious, soothing, and helpful.

Low prices are inducements to try some of the many mixtures, or syrups, made of cheap and ineffective ingredients, now offered, which, as they contain no curative qualities, can afford only temporary relief, and are sure to deceive and disappoint the patient. Diseases of the throat and lungs demand active and effective treatment; and it is dangerous experimenting with unknown and cheap medicines, from the great liability that these diseases may, while so trifled with, become deeply seated or incurable. Use AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and you may confidently expect the best results. It is a standard medical preparation, of known and acknowledged curative power, and is as cheap as its careful preparation and fine ingredients will allow. Eminent physicians, knowing its composition, prescribe it in their practice. The test of half a century has proven its absolute certainty to cure all pulmonary complaints not already beyond the reach of human aid.

It requires no direct dampers to be opened when raising steam (dampers being objectionable, as they may be left open and allow sparks to escape)
It requires no water to extinguish sparks, which, by condensation, destroys the draft. Besides, when water is used, if neglected, the efficiency is destroyed by evaporation of the water, and the boiler is kept in a filthy condition.
It is simple and durable and can be relied upon.
It can be attached to any boiler.

DR. BRECKINRIDGE'S THEOLOGY.

Within the last twenty-five years we have had, either in part or in whole, contributions to our theological literature from three prominent men in the Presbyterian Church, viz: Dr. Hodge, Thornwell and Breckinridge. While all alike agree in their general view of divine truth, no three men treating the same subject ever differed more in the structure of their minds, in their training and learning, in the style, tone, temper and character of their discussion.

Of these men, all distinguished by uncommon powers of mind, Dr. Hodge was most versed in theological literature. He was both the oldest of all, and had spent his long life in a theological seminary. He was pre-eminently the scholar in theology. Dr. Thornwell was the metaphysical theologian. Metaphysics had been a special field of study, and his striking use he handled its weapons with skill and power. Dr. Breckinridge had been more in practical life. He came into the ministry from another profession and was pre-eminently a debater and polemic.

Taking Dr. Hodge's work as a whole, as being at once didatic, polemic and historic, considering its learning, its piety, its power of thought, its lucidity of statement, the way in which it confronts every new phase—considering all these particulars it appears to me to be the greatest, if not the greatest, book on theology in our langnage.

Dr. Thornwell's work is but a fragment, and it will always be a sorrow, to the Southern Church at least, that he did not live to finish it. We can easily judge from the fragment what an exquisite piece of work the whole would have been.

Dr. Breckinridge's book lacks the scholarship and lucid statement of Hodge, and the metaphysical clearness of Thornwell, and for various reasons will never occupy the place which the others will hold, yet for massive power of thought, for powerful statement of great truths, and for impressive and magnificent eloquence in detached passages, a Webster in weight and momentum when fully aroused, I hardly know his equal.

But the book will hardly take rank as a classic on theology, not only on account of its faulty distinction of theology—as objective and subjective, a distinction impossible to preserve, as he attempts to do—but the style of the main is not adapted to theological discussion. It is too diffuse, wordy, often redundant. It lacks compression and simplicity. It often appears to be setting forth some tremendous truth, under a verbose and rolling rotundity of phrase, which, when analyzed, amounts to but little. The book is too much of the nature of a sermon for the class room, and too much elaborate discussion for the pulpit. The result is that the lectures, as a whole, are not first rate lectures on theology, nor first rate sermons for the people.

Dr. Thornwell, it is well known, had a very high appreciation of Breckinridge, and in reviewing his second volume says: "Dr. Breckinridge's work will take its place by the side of the works of the greatest masters, and none will feel they are dishonored by the company of the new-comer. It is strictly an original work, the product of the author's own thought; the humblest christian, too, can read it with almost as much profit as the minister. We know of no book, ancient or modern, always inspiring the divine composition of John Owen, which can compare with it in spiritual power."

Per contra, thus writes a critic of the same book in the Bibliotheca Sacra for October, 1879:

"The work is of no value to the scholar, and but poorly suited to the wants of the unlearned. Beside the great masters in theology the author is a child, babbling confusedly. He uses phrases which contain whole theories, and the pith of controversy between opposing schools, as innocently and with as little appreciation consciousness that any one could think of raising a question upon them, as if he were merely bidding you good morning. These two volumes are a misfortune to their author and calculated to bring discredit upon the scholarship of the country. Such enormous pretension we have never seen conjoined with such humiliating a performance."

Were two criticisms ever more diverse? Whatever Dr. Breckinridge was he was not a "babbling child." If he ever babbled it was the babbling of a giant. His work will always repay reading, for its profound sense of God as the originating cause of all good in man, for the grand manner in which special topics are discussed; for power and originality on certain subjects; for unsurpassed pathos and eloquence scattered profusely throughout the book; for weighty and brilliant aphorisms and for glow and unction of feeling.

I do not, however, think anything in Dr. Breckinridge's theology is equal to his lecture delivered at the University of Virginia on the "Internal Evidences of Christianity." That seems to me the very grandest piece of writing in America since Edwards on Bible Evidence. I have often wished it had been published in a separate form. The book called "Evidences of Christianity" was composed of lectures delivered at the University of Virginia in 1852, and I judge is now out of print. It would be a good thing for the Church if Breckinridge's lecture was published in some cheap form and given thus to the public. Not only is the thinking in this lecture of the very first order, but I know of no writing in the whole range of English literature that excels it in vigor, grace and beauty of style. Simply as a piece of composition it ranks with Macaulay or Webster.

Among the passages in his theology which are very striking take the following on misery, which sin has entailed on man:

"Whether we consider the shortness of man's life, its utter uncertainty, the unsatisfying nature of all earthly things while it lasts, or its certain, painful and most generally sinful termination, whether we consider the physical evils which embitter it, the poverty, the toil, the sickness, the sufferings, the oppression, the famine, pestilence and sword, and all the countless ills to which flesh is heir; whether we turn our thoughts to the moral evils which degrade and defile us, poisoning all the enjoyments of our present state, and rendering us unfit for any better state to come; whether we turn our eyes for comfort into our own hearts and find them all polluted, or turn them to our perishing fellow-creatures and find them as miserable as ourselves, or to God and feel that he has forsaken us, or to the grave and find that it is no refuge for us, or to eternity and behold only darkness and despair; there is nothing left for us but to confess the greatness and the righteousness of the condemnation we have incurred, and to seek deliverance from it through deliverance from the sin that produced it."

And this on the sufferings of our Lord:

"It is wholly impossible for us to comprehend the extent of these propitiatory sufferings of Christ in whatever light we attempt to consider them. His bodily suffering throughout his life and in his death:—his inward anguish from the ceaseless contradiction of sinners, and their ingratitude, stupidity, degradation and pollution, as a source of inexpressible distress to a being absolutely perfect in a life long intercourse; the hiding of the face of God from him and the unutterable bitterness of his anguish therein; the fearful temptations of satan once and again let loose upon his soul; the sins of the world imputed to him, who alone of all the world knew no sin; the curse of the law and its tremendous penalty fallen upon him, carry the awful action to its highest pitch—upon the cross the utmost fury of every separate portion and source over him, in one combined and overwhelming torrent; accursed of the law, forsaken of God, denied by his followers, assaulted by the devil, endoring the penalty of sin, betrayed, condemned, mocked, crucified; he succumbed at last to the king of terrors and with one loud and bitter cry bowed his head and gave up the ghost. Such a spectacle the universe had never seen; in all the universe God alone comprehended what it meant. It was for us and for our sins. It was our glorious Lord making as a priest a vicarious atonement for us."

This on regeneration:

"The renewal of the soul is a great reality. It is of God; it is through Jesus Christ; it is by the Holy Spirit; it is under the light and power of Divine truth; in it the understanding is enlightened, the will is renewed, the conscience is sanctified, affections are purified; the result is a new ability, and a new desire to know, serve, and to enjoy God. It is this new life of the soul in which every thing that practically distinguishes all christian people primarily consists. Neither the old creation, nor the natural birth, nor the resurrection of man, is a complete image of this new birth. For in neither of those wonderful works was a living, thinking, feeling self-conscious spirit—the subject of the amazing change: a change wrought not by it, nor even of it, but on it, and that by God himself; a change in which it was indeed a subject and not an agent, and under which its condition was one not of activity but of passivity, nevertheless a passivity of a peculiar kind—that of a living, thinking, feeling, self-conscious spirit, which incurs a divine and spiritual renewal toward which it has no efficiency of its own. Thus renewed the new life of the spirit must be, of necessity, a real and vital existence, tending unto and nourished continually by Him who gave it; adorned with some gift of God: crowned with some grace of the Spirit, manifesting in some way or other a light the very nature of which is that it cannot be hid. And finally, the two invariable manifestations of the new life of this renewed soul; the two unalterable tendencies of the restored spirit, the two grand offices of spiritual religion as a power in the regenerate heart: Faith and Repentance must show forth themselves and their fruits. The reality of the new creation of the fallen spirit; the reality of the new life thus restored; the reality of its union with Christ, its Saviour, and its possession of the Holy Spirit, its Sanctifier. These are realities, which no more of uncertainly or variety than the realities of our existence as spiritual, rational, moral and fallen admit of them."

Take another passage on "results of mortal existence:"

"At the end of nearly six thousand years from the creation of man one generation of the human race numbering a thousand millions of souls finds itself here in possession of of this earth. At every instant multitudes are passing beyond the river of death; other multitudes of new beings are bursting into life. The change of the generation is incessant and irresistible, and after a little will be absolute and universal; but it is so gradual and so silent, as to produce no shock, so imperceptible that no one knows or can know when one generation is gone and another is come, or to what particular generation he or anything else exactly appertains. We are the children of Adam; united in our day, we present for an instant, and in each successive instant, that one living undivided race; and the next successive instant and every successive instant it is changed, and yet not changed: and presently it is all changed and yet it changes never."

I will give but one more, but that a grand one:

"We often speak of the difficulties of religion as presented in the works of infidels and heretics. But they are not worthy to be so much as once thought of when placed by the side of the difficulties which the soul of the true believer has mastered. Satan does not reveal his strength to his willing followers. The spirit which rests in the shallow doubts which outlie the wide frontiers of divine truth, never approaches the real problems over which the heart agonizes and before which the intellect recoils. If the onward struggles of any earnest Christian spirit in the progressive development of its divine life were distinctively recorded, so that they could be carefully considered by others; they would show nothing more clearly than the utter insignificance and hollowness, the pitiable ignorance and baseness, of the common pretext of unbelievers. These great spiritual battles are fought around and within these citadels, these strongholds of God, in each of which is entrenched one of these great gospel paradoxes, and if our eyes were opened so that we could see at one glance the whole vengeance of the church militant, we should behold encompassed around, or lodged within these very battlements the chief captains of the army of the Lord; some safely and securely reposing on the bosom of Christ, having won the great victory; some discomfitted yet renewedly girding themselves for the life-battle; some calmly watching and pondering, till the signal falls for a new onset; some in the very heat and desperate grapple of the imminent deadly breach. Who can pass his eye, even in thought, around their glorious ranks without wonder and love and joy, without perceiving under a new aspect, the high communion of the redeemed of God, in this form of their union with and in Christ?" GROWTH OF OUR CHURCH.

MR. EDITOR:—We have read with interest and profit a series of articles in the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN on the question "What is the matter?" This is an important question and well worthy of discussion by our wisest and most experienced leaders. Anything that concerns the growth of our Church is of vital interest. And therefore we trust this discussion will not be discontinued until a practical solution of the problem has been made.

In this article we propose to address ourselves to the sole task of advancing one reason, which has not yet been adverted to, as far as we have seen, in answering the naked question why our Church grows slowly. One among several underlying reasons which have not yet been noticed, is to be found in our system of pastorates. When a pastoral relation is once established it is destined to continue during the life of the pastor unless he or his flock make application to Presbytery for its dissolution. Whatever may or may not be the supervisory control of Presbytery it is certainly the exception and not the rule to dissolve a pastoral relation in the absence of a petition therefor by the pastor or his flock. Now we conceive it would not be a heavy burden, if we should assume it, to show that the deliberate judgment of Presbyteries on the eligibility of established pastoral relations carried into execution in the dissolution of the ineligible ones, would result frequently in the two-fold good of both the pastor and the people. And it is easy to see this would conduce to the increased growth of our church. We should not shut our eyes to the truth at any time. The melancholy facts are certainly not as scarce as we would have them be of pastors and flocks unsuitably yoked together. Not as seldom as would be best is the pastoral relation instituted with every appearance of fitness and promise of usefulness, and a short experience demonstrates it was a mistake—yet it is allowed to continue. Churches, it is sad to say, are too frequently allowed to wane for long years under the ministry of their pastors while the pastors themselves wane in usefulness with them. Would not churches be more usefully served and ministers be more useful by a change of charges in most cases after the lapse of a limited time? We think so. There are weak places in every man. No minister is so proteau as to present that which is acceptable and fascinating to all the diversified tastes of any congregation. May we not expect a class, larger or smaller, in every congregation which one minister would not be as apt to reach and influence as were another? Ministers make mistakes in their work and this will be so as long as they are imperfect, and by these mistakes some members of their flocks become estranged from them. And the longer a minister remains in the same charge the more will the number of these mistakes be multiplied. Of much of this, sometimes perhaps of all this, the minister may be ignorant. Nevertheless it is a fact and these estranged persons are now beyond the pale of his influence. Man is a creature of habit. Ministers like other men are prone to live and move in grooves. It requires an effort to avoid it. In all that has reference both to their pulpit performance and to their social intercourse with their flocks they are inclined to get into ruts. Long continuance in a charge is especially apt to bring about this result. On this account their sermons may fall on the ears of their congregations insipidly; and their pastoral visits cease to effect because they are the same old thing, grown old by long repetition. True, this need not be so yet it sometimes is so, and always will be so. Who is prepared to question for a moment the truth of the assertion that on this account many ministers would be more useful in other charges and the charges they serve be more usefully served by some other ministers? We would not be understood as advocating an itineracy like that in the Methodist Church but we think there is a golden mean between its system and ours which would be an improvement on our present system of pastorates dependent upon the action of pastor or flock for a change. Our churches may well enter a plea for relief from the practical working of our system. The people although satisfied another minister would serve them more usefully naturally recoil from going to their pastor and asking him to leave them. And they suffer long and greatly, frequently, before they can work themselves up to the point of asking for the change. Often it is the case no doubt the masses of a congregation know the usefulness of their pastor is in a great measure at an end, or that some other minister would serve them more successfully, and yet their mouths are stopped, their action foreclosed, by the fact their pastor is ardently admired and supported by a few, perhaps one or two, leaders who pay most of the salary. Out of deference to the fancy of this minority the relation is allowed to continue.

If the foregoing points be well taken, the practical working of our system of pastorates constitutes one reason why our Church grows so slowly. Now what is the remedy for this obstacle? The answer is plain. Let the Presbytery do its duty. The difficulty lies not so much against our machinery as against the way it is worked. Let the Presbytery exercise its vested rights of oversight of the churches under its jurisdiction and dissolve such pastoral relations, and make such pastoral changes as it sees would be most conducive to the spiritual interests of its churches. Are we not nominally Presbyterians and really Congregationalists in this matter? Surely it is one of the functions of the Presbytery to do this work. "The Presbytery has power * * * in general to order whatever pertains to the spiritual welfare of the churches under its care." P. R. L.

FEAR NOT, IT IS I.—Mark vi: 45-50.

BY REV. OLIVER CRANE, M. D.

Hath the Master bidden
Thee the deep to try,
Though o'ercast and hidden
Lowers the evening sky?
Venture forth obeying;
On the mountain praying
Jesus signals, saying,
Fear not, it is I.

Does the tempest, raging
Round thee fierce and high,
Ruin seem presaging?
Courage, help is nigh!
On the billows nearing,
Lo! the Lord appearing,
Speaks, in accents cheering,
Fear not, it is I.

Does He, on the surges,
Seem as passing by?
Silent thus He urges
Thee for aid to cry;
Let not awe oppress thee,
Lo! He comes to bless thee,
Hear Him now address thee,
Fear not, it is I.

Mid the darkness dreary,
Forced the oar to ply,
Dost thou, worn and weary,
Often heave a sigh?
Jesus hears thy sighing,
He thy need supplying,
Answers to thy crying,
Fear not, it is I.

Does the pathway only,
To thy longing eye,
Strewn with thorns and lonely
On before thee lie?
Lo! unseen to guide thee,
Jesus walks beside thee,
Hear Him gently chide thee,
Fear not, it is I.

What though, reft and cheerless,
All thy comforts fly?
Trust thy Lord, and fearless
Dread and doubt defy:
Onward press enduring,
Strength from Him securing,
Who still speaks assuring,
Fear not, it is I.

UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, VA.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES AND DIRECTORS FOR THE YEAR ENDING APRIL 14, 1880.

The trustees and directors held their annual meeting on the 13th and 14th of April, 1880. Sixteen of the twenty-three members of the corporation were present. Since the last meeting, in April, 1870, Mr. J. Harman Brown of Baltimore, one of the trustees, has died. He was a ruling elder from the Synod of Virginia and second vice president of the Board. His death is a serious affliction, and this Theological Seminary has lost a wise and faithful counsellor and an earnest and generous friend.

The whole number of students during 1879-80 was fifty-one—being 21 seniors, 22 of the middle class, and 8 of the junior class. Certificates of having completed the full course of study prescribed by the constitution were awarded to the following gentlemen, viz: Messrs. Weisel Beale and H. M. Sydenstriker of West Virginia, J. R. Bridges, Wm. Chinn, A. R. Cocke, George W. Davis, Ch. Ghiselin, W. J. Grayhill, W. Ruff, C. Stokes, R. A. Wailes and T. P. Walton of Virginia, F. P. Harroll, L. A. McLean and J. N. H. Summerill of North Carolina, J. Phipps of Tennessee, J. G. Praigg of Kentucky, and J. A. Smith of Texas. Modified certificates were awarded to Messrs. DeLacy Wardlaw of Tennessee, Absalom Sydenstriker of West Virginia, W. H. Robertson and W. H. Ochiltree of Virginia.

From the reports of the faculty and the examining committee it appears that there has been a good degree of diligence and faithfulness in study on the part of the students. The benefit of the use of written examinations in connection with oral has again been made evident, and its results are satisfactory. The health of the students has been generally good.

Two hundred and six volumes have been added to the library, making the whole number about eleven thousand. A new and commodious library building, both elegant and convenient, costing over $15,000, has been erected in accordance with the directions of the trustees, from funds given by Mrs. Brown of Baltimore and is named as the "Brown Library Hall." The building is nearly completed and will be ready for occupancy with the next term.

The Synods of North Carolina and Virginia declined to reduce the number of directors, in answer to an overture from the Board.

The condition of the finances, which has given great concern, may be seen from the statement hereto appended.

The trustees deemed it expedient to change the time of beginning of the terms to the first Wednesday in September to terminate on the first Wednesday of May following.

It is gratifying to report that three of those receiving certificates will engage in the foreign missionary work.

Acknowledging with profound gratitude the manifest favor of God to this Seminary in the years that are past, and His gracious and guiding hand, during perplexities that have environed this institution, to Him do we look for continued direction and blessing.

Respectfully submitted,

J. HENRY SMITH, President.

F. N. WATKINS, Secretary.

APPENDIX.

In consequence of a failure, for the first time on the part of the State of Virginia, to meet the January (1880) interest on the $116,995 of her bonds held by the corporaton, the treasury has been somewhat embarrassed to meet the demands on it for salaries, scholarships and other expenses. Before the 15th April, however, these have been paid, without borrowing. There have been no new investments made since April, 1879 and for a list of these the Assembly and Synods are referred to the printed reports of the institution in the Appendix to their minutes of 1879. To meet the payments for the Library Building, sales have been made of funds donated for that purpose and invested, to the amount of $7,000, at a gain of $600 on the original cost of these securities. It is estimated that $34,150 of the investments will certainly yield $5,600 for 1880-'81. This does not, however, include the $116,995 of Virginia Registered 6's and some other public and private securities now in liquidation or uncertain as to revenues.

TRUSTEES.—Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, of North Carolina, President; Rev. Dr. A. Martin, of Virginia, and E. N. Hutcheson, M. D., of North Carolina, Vice Presidents; F. N. Watkins, Farmville, Va., Secretary and Treasurer; Rev. Drs. W. Brown, J. J. Bullock, H. M. White, J. L. Kirkpatrick, C. H. Read, and Rev. C. White of Virginia; Revs. F. H. Johnston, H. G. Hill, J. M. Atkinson, W. S. Lacy, W. W. Pharr, J. Rumple and B. F. Marable, of North Carolina; with Elders G. Chadbourn, W. Murdock, R. I. McDowell, of North Carolina; E. M. Armstrong and J. N. Sydenstriker, of Virginia (one vacancy).

FACULTY.—Rev. Drs. B. M. Smith, R. L. Dabney, T. E. Peck and H. C. Alexander. Rev. Dr. Dabney is Clerk of the Faculty.

The next term begins September 1st, 1880, and ends May 5th, 1881.

The Postoffice address of the Professors and students is "Hampden Sidney, Va."; that of the Treasurer is "Farmville, Va." The legal title of the corporation is "The Trustees of the Union Theological Seminary, in Va."

F. N. WATKINS, Sec. and Treas.
Farmville, Va., April 15, 1880.

UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY, VA.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE, April 14, 1880.

In pursuance of instructions from the Trustees, the following items are sent to the press:

Their annual meeting was held on the 13th and 14th of April, sixteen of the twenty-three members of the corporation being present.

Mr. J. Harman Brown, of Baltimore, having died since the last meeting, the Trustees recorded their appreciation of his great personal worth and of the valuable public services, unselfishly and freely given by him during his long and useful life.

The Rev. Dr. Dabney was relieved from duty, as a professor, till December 1st. It is understood that he will spend the summer and fall abroad.

Change of Sessions.—This much discussed question, in the Synods and by the Directors, was solved by compromise of opinions. The next term begins September 1st, 1880, and ends May 5th, 1881. The records of the Faculty exhibited so great an irregularity on the part of the students in beginning their studies in the past Seminary years that the Trustees recorded their urgent request to students to attend, promptly on the first day of the next term; and Presbyteries having candidates for the ministry, among the students, will have their special attention called to this great disadvantage to those under their care, pursuing their theological studies at this institution.

The library building approaches completion. The accommodation of the eleven thousand volumes and the convenience of students will be greatly promoted by this large building with its excellent appointments.

Library furniture and a suitable enclosure of the lot on which the library building is placed, will be needed; and the Rev. Dr. Smith (Librarian) is requested to apply to the friends of the institution to aid in securing these objects.

The certificate of proficiency, which, by the Constitution, is awarded to each student on the completion of the prescribed course of study, in the judgment of the Trustees, should be based upon a reasonably moderate but fixed grade of scholarship, and should not be awarded to any falling below that grade. This matter is referred to a committee for future report. There is no abatement of purpose, on the part of professors and trustees, to promote and encourage a high standard of scholarship.

The finances of the institution received the full attention of the Trustees. The public will allow more than a mere brief notice of this important matter. In the earlier history of the Seminary, investments in what are known on 'Change as Virginia bonds, were deemed as being not only safe, but among first-class securities. The existing amount of these investments, to a period recently after the late war, was in Virginia Registered 6's $116,995, and in Virginia Consols $20,700, making a total of $137,695. Much the large part thereof was held before 1 January 1860. While a large amount of bank stocks and other investments became valueless by the disasters of '65; the Virginia bonds yielded, till 1 January 1880, semi-annually the interest due, thus vindicating the wisdom of those who were the early guardians of the institution. To the honor of the Legislature which first met after 1865, it was provided by law that full interest should be paid on the Virginia bonds held by seminaries of learning; mainly, because these institutions could thus continue their usefulness. The funds for these endowments had been voluntarily contributed by the friends of the institutions, many of whom were the taxpayers of this State—and who were then and are still willing to pay this interest. In 1872, by two Acts of Assembly, it was further provided, that, "till otherwise ordered," the second Auditor was instructed to continue to pay this interest. This law is still in force, and, when the State is "in funds," it is hoped the law will be executed. Up to the 1st of April the salaries of the professors were deficient in payment only $200 each, in consequence of the failure of the State to meet the January interest. (Since the 1st of April they have been paid in full.)

The scholarships.—Of the $38,000 held for scholarships, the public will regret to learn that $26,500 are invested in Virginia Registered bonds, and that while a large part of the demands for the payment of orders on these scholarships were, in '79-80, met, payment on these $26,500 will be suspended if the State fails to make its usual semi-annual payment of interest. Will not this deficiency be made up by those who know the necessity of meeting the demand for ministers to supply the destitutions of the land, and to fill the unoccupied pulpits of the Church? The aid to students from this source cannot be too highly estimated.

Graduates.—Twenty members of the senior class received certificates of having completed the course of study. Their names will be furnished in the official report which will be sent to the Assembly and Synods, and which will also go to the press.

Addresses.—The anniversary exercises were greatly increased in interest by addresses from the Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith, of North Carolina, and Rev. Dr. Alexander Martin, of Virginia. Representatives of religious and secular journals were present, and therefore only this brief reference is made to these excellent addresses. The Rev. F. H. Johnston addresses the graduates of 1881.

Officers for '80-'81.—The Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith was elected President, Rev. Dr. Alexander Martin and Dr. E. N. Hutcheson, (N. C.) Vice Presidents, F. N. Watkins, Secretary and Treasurer.

F. N. WATKINS, Secretary.

HONESTY BEFORE ETIQUETTE.

There are those who nurse their tastes up to so fine a point that moral worth may be at any time eclipsed by a badly-fitting garment or shoe, or a violation of grammar, spelling, or etiquette. This is sheer folly, as one must needs take leave of the world if he would avoid these little unpleasantness. If the perpetrator have but an upright soul and an honest heart, we would rather take him or her by the hand, than thousands whose dress, conversation, and manners are oracularly styled faultless. Of course, one prefers great-heartedness and refinement combined; but if to gain the latter the former must be dispensed with it is, in our opinion, too great a sacrifice. We have seen people whose teeth were quite set on edge by the chance mispronunciation of a word, to whom an act of downright immorality would be far less distasteful. It is unnecessary to pronounce a verdict on such surface-people. Let them keep on skimming life till it be thinned to their taste.

The fountain of joy became a Man of Sorrows, and the Lord of glory was covered with shame; and why? Amazing mystery! that we might be raised to happiness and glory.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

There are eighty-two Mormon churches in England and Ireland.

The 814th anniversary of the founding of Westminster Abbey was recently observed. Canon Farrar preached the sermon.

The Presbyterians in Victoria do not mean that their representative at the Philadelphia Council shall come at his own charges, for when Rev. James Nash sailed they placed in his hand a purse of $2,000 to pay his expenses.

It is reported that Father Chiniquy, who has been lecturing in Australia, has been selected by the Synod of Eastern Australia to represent it in the Pan-Presbyterian Council in Philadelphia.

Pere Didon, the Liberal Dominican, whose sermons in Paris—first on divorce and now on the conflict between science and religion—have made so much stir, has been summoned to Rome by the General of his Order to explain his views. He is reproached by the Moral Order journals with having advocated Socialism in his Lenten sermons at the Trinite.

Among the speakers at the Tyne Theatre, London, recently, was a Chinese gentleman who addressed the congregation in English, and afterward gave a £5 note toward the expenses. An offering from a Chinese christian toward spreading the Gospel among the heathen of England. But it is the way of the Gospel to reverse the natural order of things.

In Spain there is such a thirst for the knowledge of the Gospel of Christ that, Dr. Punshon says, it is no unusual thing for their missionaries to receive a written requisition from villages signed by forty of fifty inhabitants, asking them to come and preach the Gospel to them. Like France, they have had about enough of Romanism, and begin to understand its hollowness.

The Irish Presbyterian papers are protesting against the students of the Irish Presbyterian Church passing part of their time at the Free Church Theological Schools in Scotland, as there is much doubt felt concerning the soundness of the Free Church professors, both in Glasgow and Edinburgh. There is evidently the same feeling of distrust in the minds of leading men in the Scottish Church, and it is beginning to be quite outspoken.

Miss Fielde, a missionary under the Baptist Board, at Swato, China, has about twenty Bible women whom she has taught, and sends out two by two into hundreds of heathen villages. Five years ago most of these women were ignorant, superstitious heathen; to-day they are earnest, intelligent Bible women. Such is the transforming power of the Gospel.

In illustration of the improved feeling of Mexicans toward Protestant missionaries, it is stated that "a missionary recently passed the night in the town of Ahualulco, where the Rev. Mr. Stevens was murdered by a mob in 1874. He slept on the bench where the dead missionary had been laid, and was guarded during the night by the man who led on the mob that killed Mr. Stevens."

Father Chiniquy has left Australia for New Zealand en route for America. A farewell meeting was held which was well attended. In the address presented, several conversions from Roman Catholicism were spoken of as the result of his visit. It was also stated that in the colonies £4,790 had been contributed to his mission in America, of which £2,200 had been given by New South Wales.

During the past year, what is known as the Protestant Bible Car has made the tour of Italy from Genoa down the shore of the Mediterranean to Naples, and crossing the peninsula thence to Lecce; from Lecce has taken the route up the Adriatic to Ancona, and from Ancona to Placinza, ending at Brescia. A large number of Bibles and Testaments have been sold, and many people have listened to the reading of the Scriptures from the car.

WILMINGTON, N. C.:

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28, 1880.

THE CHURCH AND THE SOCIAL SIDE OF MAN'S NATURE.

It is related that a minister who had preached an eloquent sermon upon "Heavenly Recognition" upon leaving the church was accosted by a lady who requested him to follow it up with one on earthly recognition, giving as the reason of her request that she had been for several years a regular attendant at his church and had never been in any way recognized by a single member of the congregation. If the charge implied in her words was just that congregation was seriously derelict in duty.

The very constitution of man teaches the Church a lesson in this matter. The temporal and the spiritual are so interassociated and interconnected with each other that it is utterly impossible to separate them. The true idea of religion is not that it is something annexed to the temporal life as a separable, distinct element, but the principle of life itself. The temporal life and the spiritual are not like a mosaic work of different woods glued together, however closely, but the spiritual is rather like the veining in beautifully grained wood, part and parcel of the very wood itself permeating and pervading the whole. This being the case the divorce of the temporal and the spiritual is impossible. As well attempt to separate the waters of two streams after their confluence. Religion is addressed to the whole man; it enters into and consecrates his entire nature, body, soul and mind, all of his relations in life, business and social, as well as the strictly religious. The Scripture idea of the Church is that of a family; the individual members are brethren. This analogy occurs frequently in the Bible, and the idea underlies as a basis many exhortations contained in the epistles. The members of the Church are described as members of one body with a common sympathy in joy or sorrow, just as the different members of the same human frame share the pain or pleasure of any particular part. Can any one believe that the force of these figures is exhausted by an application simply to ecclesiastical relations; that this intimate association and sympathy is fully expressed in partaking of the Lord's Supper four times a year? Certain classes may succeed in drawing fine distinctions between social and religious fellowship, but others find it difficult to separate the two and persist in believing that religion ought to have something to do with the social element. They cannot see why religious sympathy, communion and fellowship should not touch the temporal life at some point besides in the creed, and at some time other than the communion season. And such have warrant for so thinking.

The social element evidently figured largely in Christ's life. He addressed man as a being of social instincts. The same element is very prominent in the history of the Church as recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. There seems to have been the most thorough sympathy and most intimate communion between church members in the golden age of the Church. Any church that ignores the social element in its church life fails lamentably in a very important part of its duty. When persons find that their religious relationship fails to embrace the social, that persons who sit with them at the same communion table give them no recognition on the street or in their homes, they will seek some church in which the social element is not so utterly ignored. They desire not only to be tolerated but welcomed in a church. As the lady above alluded to intimated, a little earthly recognition is desired. There should be something of home life in every church, some mutual interchange of sympathy, some inquiries after the welfare of each other, some friendliness in word and manner. People will go, and they ought to go, where this is given them. If they attend any church for several Sabbaths and receive no religious hospitality at the hands of that congregation they search for some more genial atmosphere. It is a mistake to stigmatize this as unworthy pride, or the desire to use the Church as a means of social advancement. It is not necessarily this or anything like this; it is an instinct implanted by God, recognized by our Saviour in His teaching and by the apostolic Church in its earliest and purest period.

This natural want of man cannot be satisfied by the excellence of the preaching. It is a void that can be filled only by sympathy, kindly interest and community of feeling. Moreover it is a mistake to think that this duty can be delegated to the pastor or to the pastor and elders. They cannot represent the church in the matter of christian fellowship. It is the duty and the privilege of individuals. The earnestness and diligence of the pastor, however great, are without avail unless seconded by the congregation. In this matter often lies the secret of the difference in growth between two churches in the same town. One becomes strong and flourishing, while the other remains comparatively weak. Perhaps the numerically weaker church has wondered at the difference as they consider the convenient position of their church and its comfortable adjuncts and the admitted excellence, even superiority, of their preacher. They think they have a preacher who could "draw." Perhaps so; but does the congregation also "draw?" Does the congregation believe in such a thing as "earthly recognition," or is it waiting patiently in order to give "heavenly recognition?" If the latter is the case then outsiders will wait for the same thing, and that congregation needs to be reminded that religion and its fraternal sympathies are not only for heaven but also for earth.

COLLECTION FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

On next Sabbath, or as soon thereafter as practicable, the collection for the Foreign Missions of our Church is to be taken. Let us hope that all our churches, and all our members, will take this subject prayerfully to heart, and that the result will be a very large increase in the contributions to this cause.

We commend the following from the Gospel in all Lands:

"We know a wise and venerable pastor who, many years ago, found his church falling habitually into arrears in his support. He waited awhile, and then, by a happy inspiration, began to preach to the people on Foreign Missions and to take up collections for the Boards. The officers were alarmed for their already defective treasury. He persevered, and before long every one was surprised to find that all the contributions increased, the arrears ceased, and the church found that all it had ever needed was to have the fountains opened. They were always full enough."

ADDRESSES AT HAMPDEN SIDNEY.

Some kind friend, we can only guess who, has sent us the Richmond Dispatch giving a correspondent's account of the exercises at Union Seminary. Most of the items have been anticipated by the official reports on our first page.

We copy the following relating to the addresses delivered:

"An address was delivered before one of the societies by Rev. Dr. J. Henry Smith of North Carolina, in which this scholarly gentleman fully maintained his well earned and high reputation. The themes were thoughts suggested and lessons taught by what is not contained in the Scripture: Then silence is wisdom, mercy and truth. For illustration: 1st, the silence of the New Testament in regard to the infancy and youth of our Lord; 2d, as to His personal appearance; 3d, as to Mary, the mother of our Lord; 4th, the silence of the evangelists respecting themselves and respecting one another; 5th, as to the day, month or year of the birth of the Saviour; 6th, as to sacred places and objects.

"The address to the graduates was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Martin of Danville, Va., and received the marked and interested attention of his large audience. The Doctor is known as a cultivated gentleman of ability, and presents his views with force and earnestness. Making the admonition "add to your faith virtue" the foundation of his address, and regarding virtue as the synonym of true and manly courage, without rashness, and, in the minister especially, as that habit of thought and feeling which gives such tone to the character and enables the subject of it to stand firmly for the truth against all odds, he proceeded to show, with clearness and force, the great demands of the age for moral courage in the maintenance of true convictions against a perverted public opinion, which sometimes makes us feel its tyranny; and he pointed out not so much the necessity of Christian courage as against the influence of a false public sentiment outside of the Church, as against a danger in the same direction, growing up within the pale of the Church itself."

REPORT of the ASSEMBLY'S PROCEEDINGS.

With very great pleasure we state, as requested, that the proprietors of the Charleston News and Courier have arranged for full reports in their morning issues, of the doings of our General Assembly.

Daily during the sessions of the Assembly, the paper will be sent to all who will send their names, with forty cents subscription, to The News and Courier, Charleston, S. C.

The price is extremely low, as we understand that the enterprising journal referred to will publish a full verbatim report of all the proceedings. We advise the sending forward of subscriptions at once.

We would have published a part of the reports from Union Theological Seminary in last issue and would have been glad to do so, but our copy did not reach us until after our paper was mailed. It is due to Judge Watkins, Secretary of the Board of Directors, to state that the delay was not in any measure due to remissness on his part.

The State Board of Medical Examiners will meet in Wilmington on the 10th of May, to enable candidates who pass their examination, to connect themselves with the State Medical Society on the 11th, 12th and 13th. The Board will continue its session during the 11th, 12th and 13th of May.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters or this column.

The Newbern Sunday school gave $26 02 to the Wilson mission.

The postoffice address of Rev. J. L. Currie is now changed from Hillsboro to Chapel Hill, N. C. Correspondents please note.

Rev. C. M. Payne has returned home and resumed his ministerial labors. His health is quite as good as circumstances permit. The congregation of this brother are the more attached to him from sympathy in his bereavement.

A series of meetings have been held in the Newbern church, in which the pastor, Rev. L. C. Vass, was assisted by Rev. F. H. Johnston, who preached two excellent sermons. After several days services by the pastor, Rev. B. F. Marable joined in the services, and preached a number of most attractive and powerful sermons to large congregations, embracing many who were not regular attendants on the preaching of the Gospel. Several persons have been baptized and received into the church, and others have professed conversion, and will be received soon. The seed faithfully sown cannot be lost.

A correspondent gives us good news from churches in Mecklenburg Presbytery:

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The church at Asheville has been greatly revived and has received a number of members on profession of faith. The last occasion in which members were received was one of unusual interest. Rev. S. T. Martin, who was visiting the pastor, preached a sermon on Baptism, and the sacrament was administered to an entire family. A gentleman, his wife and two infant children were among those who united with the church, and as they all received the sacrament of baptism at that time it presented a natural illustration of the scriptural doctrine, and a modern instance of the sort of household baptism which the apostles administered.

DAVIDSON RIVER.

Last Sabbath six persons were received on examination. Preaching twice each day for four days. Congregations large, good attention and solemn interest. Sacrament of the Lord's Supper and baptism were administered on Sabbath. The pastor was assisted by Revs. J. P. Gammon and S. T. Martin.

We learn from our exchanges that Rev. J. F. Latimer, Professor of Languages in Davidson College, will leave for Europe immediately after the commencement exercises of that institution. He will spend much of his time abroad in such researches and studies as will inure to the increased usefulness and prosperity of the College.

The Carolina Watchman, of Salisbury, N. C., pays a compliment to two of the recent graduates of Union Theological Seminary:

"We have had two young graduates of Union Theological Seminary with us this week, the Rev. F. P. Harroll, of Fayetteville Presbytery, and the Rev. J. N. Summerell, of Concord Presbytery. Mr. Harrell filled the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church Sunday morning and night, and was listened to with marked attention. Mr. Summerell, by previous invitation, preached at the Methodist church Sunday night. We have rarely known two more prominent young men than these.

"It will be gratifying to every North Carolinian if they shall find work within the bounds of their native State, to which, doubtless, they feel as ardently attached as any of her sons. But it is noteworthy that both have already had offers in other States, and are, for the moment, halting as to whether they should wait for an open field at home or enter one abroad."

PRESBYTERY OF FAYETTEVILLE.

Going to Presbytery by railroad, and by night, too, is not altogether as romantic as driving through the sandhills, along the wonderfully clear sandhill streams, breathing the fresh fragrance of bays and laurel, and feasting the eyes on gorgeous flags and ivy and honeysuckle and golden starry jessamine. Yet the cars even at midnight, especially with agreeable company, present many attractive arguments in their behalf, not the least of which are freedom from fatigue and swiftness of transit. Leaving one of the most distant churches at 10 Tuesday night, before 4 Wednesday morning we were at Laurel Hill. This is better than a day and a half on the road. Ten of us reached Lanrinburg before the gray dawn of Wednesday: how tired and sleepy that night and how hungry the next morning our pleasant host, Mr. Riveubark, well knows, for he satisfied us most agreeably.

Presbytery convened at Laurel Hill at 11 o'clock Wednesday, April 21st, and was opened with a sermon by the moderator, from Psalm xix: 10. There were present during the sessions of Presbytery every minister belonging to the body, two corresponding members (Rev. Dr. McNair and Rev. S. C. Alexander), and one visiting brother, Father Munroe, of the Baptist Church. Rev. N. T. Bowden was chosen moderator, and W. J. Stuart, of Carthage church, and D. McIntyre, of Cameron church, were chosen temporary clerks. There were more than thirty elders present (fifty churches in the Presbytery), and it was the largest attendance of ministers and elders I have ever seen in a meeting of Fayetteville Presbytery.

Having gotten the Presbytery organized, let us look at the transformed church, of which our worthy brother, Rev. A. N. Ferguson, is pastor. Since I last saw it, in November, 1879, there has been a complete renovation within. The walls and ceiling have been painted in dark mottled hues, the pews and gallery fronts have been neatly and tastily repainted, the pulpit and platform thoroughly refitted, and aisles and floors newly carpeted. The pulpit is specially pretty and attractive. A beautiful chandelier adorned the church, of which some of your kind and generous Wilmington people know something, and completed the handsome refurnishing of the whole interior. Pulpit lamps and wall lamps as handsome and tasteful also gave light by night and ornament by day. It was pardonable, I am sure, when some long-winded speeches were ringing, or during the reading of some of those reports, to look about and see the newness of beauty. At least that is what was done considerably, and not alone by your correspondent.

As is usually the case most of the work of Presbytery was done on Saturday, after many of the members had obtained leave of absence. Wednesday afternoon was spent considering what could be done without committees; Thursday was wholly engaged with reports, grew tedious and wearisome; much of Friday, in discussing how to save time and what to do with the reports, and in giving members leave of absence; and Saturday, the deferred business was transacted. "'Twas ever thus," especially in Fayetteville Presbytery. It was a busy season, I know, and it was gratifying to see so many present, but I think the Presbytery was diminished one-half or nearly so Saturday morning. This absenteeism roils me almost as much as "the little book" does some of my brethren. I cannot but think it is a man's duty to be in his post from the opening to the close.

The more important items of business were these:

Reports were duly made of the installation of Rev. Roger Martin as pastor of the churches of Centre and Shoe Heel, and of Rev. J. H. Coble as pastor of the church of Laurinburg, all in November last.

Leave was granted Harmony, Mount Carmel and Mark's Creek churches to employ the services of Rev. S. C. Alexander of Mecklenburg Presbytery as stated supply for 1880.

The terms in the joint call of Union and Carthage churches for pastoral service of Rev. M. McQueen, were so arranged that each secures half his time and is responsible for half his support.

Leave was granted Rev. D. A. McRae to labor within the bounds of this Presbytery until the next stated meeting.

Mr. Lanchlin A. McLean, and Mr. Frank P. Harrell after due examination were licensed as probationers for the holy ministry, and leave was granted them to labor without our bounds until the next stated meeting.

Rev. Joseph Evans and Mr. Daniel McIntyre were chosen principal delegates to the General Assembly, and Rev. David Fairley, and Capt. A. S. Baker, alternates.

Rev. D. D. McBryde, Rev. D. Fairley, Rev. Joseph Evans, Ruling Elders W. J. Smith and R. McCaskill were appointed a committee to rearrange the committees of visitation, if deemed expedient, and report to the next meeting of Presbytery.

Rev. J. P. McPherson, Rev. H. G. Hill and Ruling Elder W. J. Smith were appointed a committee to revise and readjust the assessments upon the churches, and report at the next meeting.

The committee on the Sabbath was continued.

The Narrative presented the usual varied scene. It made me feel sad that so large a Presbytery had done so little during the year. The Stated Clerk will doubtless give you more exact information in the abstract.

The points in the various reports to be forwarded to the General Assembly, he will also duly and promptly furnish you.

Presbytery adjourned Saturday afternoon about 5 o'clock.

You know Bro. Ferguson and the Laurel Hill people. I could not but reply to some one, who wondered why so full a Presbytery had met at so busy a season, "because we met at Laurel Hill Church." The hospitality was cordial and unbounded. The arrangements showed consideration in little things as well as in great. So many of us came by public conveyances, and such complete provision was made for comfort, that it seemed nothing was left unthought of. The weather was charming, the nights lovely, the crowds, especially on Saturday and Sunday, simply immense. Nature was in her kindliest mood, and the soft fresh verdure of the ample grove, the songs of birds and the fragrance of flowers made the time so sweet and delightful that it was an universal regret when the last goodbyes were said. Sunday was warm, almost oppressive, early in the morning, but a brisk and refreshing breeze made the vast assemblage within the hallowed walls, comfortable, while the sacred and precious services were engaged in and enjoyed. The pastor announced five as having been received into the communion of the church. At the sacrament of the Lord's Supper nine ministers of the Presbytery were present and as many elders. It was a day to be remembered.

There was preaching every day Presbytery was in session, the candidates for licensure occupying the pulpit Thursday and Friday morning, and preaching their trial sermons to good audiences deeply interested in them. There was preaching also every night, the services closing Sunday night. The congregations were large and attentive, and Sunday morning the vast church seating eight hundred people was filled to overflowing.

The next Presbytery will be held at the Presbytery's youngest church but one, Shoe Heel, only ten miles from Laurel Hill. It is a charming country, it is true, and the people are so kind and cordial, we all love to meet with them. But for all that I think Buffalo a good place too, though it is not in Robeson, and I am expecting Presbytery some of these days to find it out. W. S. L.

EBENEZER COLORED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, NEWBERN, N. C.

By order of Orange Presbytery, this church was organized more than a year ago. It is now in charge of Rev. A. A. Scott, a graduate of Lincoln University, and they are laboring in hope under God's blessing. Their greatest hindrance now is the want of a building, for which they are laboring. Hon. Wm. E. Dodge, Messrs. E. S. Jaffray, A. DeWitt, Chas. Soutter, and others, in New York city; J. & H. Harmon & Potter, of Boston; ex-President Jno. Maclean, D. D., of Princeton; Rev. Wm. E. Schenck, D. D., of Philadelphia; Franklin Street Presbyterian church and Rev. P. Harrison, of Baltimore; and other friends have sent through me for these colored Christians, $244 44; the Presbyterian church and some friends in Newbern, N. C., $375; other friends in North Carolina, $86 96; total, $711 40. About $650 more will complete this modest but important enterprise. They are promised $100 if they raise now $550. It is certain that eleven persons will read this, who can give $50 or more each, and finish this work for our Lord. Fifty-five will read it, who can each easily spare $10; one hundred who can send $5 each; and five hundred and fifty, who can do a blessed deed for Christ's cause by contributing one dollar or more to lift this little band of colored Presbyterians into a position of power among their people, needing a pure Gospel.

Christian reader, will you not help this worthy cause according to your ability, and now? If you will kindly respond at once, this building can be completed in about two months and a-half, and a grand and promising effort fully and strongly inaugurated in Christ's kingdom. Send your gifts (they will be thankfully received) to

BUILDING CHURCHES IN NORTH CAROLINA

HOW CAN WE MEND OUR WAYS IN THIS MATTER?

Help is needed in many places. The earnest minister who has been preaching at missionary points away from his regular pulpit, cannot gather his sheaves without a house; how is he to get it? He cannot build it himself. Though he takes "his horse, and script and shoes" along with him, he will not have money enough these times to build churches such as Presbyterians demand in North Carolina. Our scheme of systematic benevolence requires him to appeal to his regular charge to contribute every alternate month to objects of benevolence, and send their alms to Richmond or Baltimore or Memphis, and appeal to his Presbyterial Committee for help when he needs it in his own field. So he has to appeal twice, and the second appeal is generally less satisfactory than the first. The writer may be charged as out of order, but he believes there will have to be a departure from this scheme if we build the churches needed in North Carolina. Let the minister who goes out and preaches away from his own pulpit, give his people reason to believe he is in earnest about building a church at a proper place—that he is practical enough to handle and use money for such purposes—that the people for whom he wants to build it are doing all they can themselves; and then let him appeal to his regular charge to turn their alms over to him for that purpose as benevolent contributions, and it is believed they will give more for home missions than they have ever done. We will build more churches and chapels in North Carolina, our membership will increase faster, more families will take the PRESBYTERIAN, more men will be ordained to care for the spiritual interests of the members, more Sunday Schools will be run, more Presbyterian publications will be demanded, and more funds will be raised in the Synod for Foreign Missions, and some earnest, anxious men in our ministry will be more encouraged.

The old Presbyterian communities and pastoral charges in North Carolina would do well to think more favorably about their relations to the scattered families and missionary stations where some of our ministers go and minister and want to plant churches. We are exhorted to "walk honestly towards them that are without and that we may have lack of nothing." "And as touching brotherly love." I quote also the same authority, "ye need not that I write unto you; for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another."

THE BURIAL SERVICE.

MR. EDITOR:—I was pleased to see by your last issue, that a matter which has long stirred and troubled my own mind, has also stirred the mind of some one else, (who has evidently not only a mind for business, but a heart to feel for the wants and needs of his people). The want in question being that of a suitably prepared Ritual for Presbyterian funeral services. I could give you at once three cases in point in one community where this want has been sadly and deeply felt, and but for accident, or rather a kind Providence, there might in two at least of these cases have occurred the soul-harrowing event of a burial without a service. Whoever the kind and thoughtful brother may be who has brought this matter before the notice of the Assembly, I trust he will press it until he has gained his point, and that a ritual will be soon prepared and bound with our hymnals for this important and needful service, so that in the absence of the pastor or a minister of our own Church, our elders may feel authorized to conduct such services. And here let me also suggest that one thing that may be "the matter" with our beloved Church is that we are too much afraid of formal services. Yet I have known some instances where we might have enjoyed some precious seasons of prayer and praise, but for a certain timidity or backwardness in beginning an impromptu service; or possibly the fear of encroaching upon the duties of the pastor has withheld some of our good people from the office. However it may have been, would it not have been remedied by a ritual or liturgy prepared for such unexpected occasions—not to be ever obligatory—but only to be used when the occasion rendered it needful or expedient? But this last suggestion I leave for wiser heads to consider. The first mentioned need is too apparent for anyone to doubt or cavil at. A.

JUST TO ALL.

MR. EDITOR:—I desire to make the following addendum to the report of the proceedings of Orange Presbytery at Washington, already published.

By some unaccountable oversight, whether yours Mr. Editor, or mine, I really do not know, that report fails utterly in the respect which is due to the moderator of the body, the Rev. P. H. Dalton, in refusing any mention of him as such, despite of all the rules of courtesy and honorable custom. The names of the faithful and courteous clerks, Rev. Mr. Darnall, and Elder Samuel Watkins, are also shrouded in involuntary midnight secrecy and darkness. I tender to these excellent brethren and to the readers of the PRESBYTERIAN my apology for this sin of omission. The abstract was written hurriedly one afternoon in Bro. Vass's study in Newbern under the conviction that I would not have another opportunity in two weeks to prepare it for publication, and that I knew would seem an outrageous delay. There are one or two other items which perhaps ought to have appeared in the abstract, viz:

Rev. Mr. Dalton, and Elders J. H. Lindsay and W. C. Denny, were appointed a committee to visit Jamestown with a view to the organization of a church, if the way be open.

Rev. D. E. Jordan resigned the position of Presbyterial Agent of Publication, and Rev. Mr. Darnall was appointed in his place.

Historical Sketches of the First Raleigh, Chapel Hill and Hillsboro churches were read and directed to be filed in the archives of the Presbytery.

Rev. Messrs. Jordan, Vass, and Dr. Smith were appointed a committee to determine what is and what is not proper matter for record in the minutes of Session.

MEETINGS OF PRESBYTERIES.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

CONCORD PRESBYTERY.

The Presbytery of Concord met at Davidson College, on Thursday, April 22d, 1880.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. M. Wharey, on the text Psalm 138:2 latter clause, "——for Thou hast magnified Thy word above all Thy name."

In the absence of Bro. Pharr, Rev. J. Rumple was requested to act as Stated Clerk. The continued ill health of this beloved brother and efficient officer is a matter of sincere sorrow to the whole Presbytery.

Rev. J. A. Ramsay was chosen moderator and Rev. R. W. Boyd, and Elder J. G. Hall, temporary clerks.

The day was spent in hearing the narratives of the churches. At night this community had the pleasure of listening to a discourse on the concluding verses of the 9th chapter of Revelation, by Rev. E. F. Rockwell, so long and favorably known to them.

On Friday the examinations of candidate A. W. White, on languages and sciences were sustained.

The name of Jefferson church was removed from the roll and its members (if any) assigned to the church at Wilkesboro.

After prolonged debate the call from Camden church, Harmony Presbytery, was placed in the hands of Rev. R. B. Anderson. It must be highly gratifying to that brother to be so loved where he is and so sought after where he is not.

The place chosen for next meeting of Presbytery is Newton; the time, Thursday before the third Sabbath in September.

Presbytery was cheered by the unexpected presence of its stated clerk, Rev. Wm. W. Pharr, in the body. His health though feeble is improving.

The afternoon was spent in considering the report of the committee on Evangelistic work. The committee deemed it essential to the successful prosecution of this work for Presbytery, as it were, to divide itself—the churches of Cabarrus county and of Salisbury assuming the support of an evangelist in Stanly county, and assigning to the other churches a similar work for the people beyond the Blue Ridge. Presbytery undertook the work as thus explained.

Presbytery also undertook to raise $200 for the Mission Chapel asked for by Bro. Davis, our missionary at Soochow, China.

At night Rev. J. Rumple preached by appointment on "Presbyterial Oversight." The preacher evidently believes that Presbytery is the true "Bishop and ought to perform its duties with energy as well as discretion G.

Brazos Presbytery.—A call was made for the pastoral services of Rev. J. W. Sexton. The call was approved and order taken for his installation. Rev. James Wilson reported organization of a church at Englewood. Presbytery approved the division of Synod. Rev. D. McGregor and ruling elder James Sorley were elected principal commissioners, and Rev. J. W. Sexton and elder A. J. Burke, alternates.

Presbytery of Florida.—Rev. Henry R. Raymond, Jr., was received from Tuscaloosa Presbytery and elected moderator. Rev. R. Henderson was dismissed to Harmony Presbytery. Commissioners elected to the Assembly: Rev. H. R. Raymond, Jr., and elder Edwin P. Cater, principals; Rev. B. L. Baker and elder A. B. Hagan, alternates.

Presbytery of Augusta.—Rev. Dr. James Woodrow and ruling elder T. T. Windsor were chosen commissioners to the Assembly, and Rev. W. S. Beau and elder J. A. Billups, alternates. Rev. George T. Goetchius was chosen Stated Clerk.

Abingdon Presbytery.—Rev. J. O. Sullivan and elder J. H. Caldwell were elected commissioners to the General Assembly; Rev. J. M. Kirkpatick and elder J. C. Spotts alternates. Rev. W. E. Hill was received from Greenbrier Presbytery. Mr. Walter H. Robinson was received as a candidate for the ministry.

Presbytery of Lexington.—Rev. F. Gaines was elected moderator. Rev. C. M. Humphreys, late pastor of Bethany, was dismissed to Palmyra Presbytery. A call from Fairfield church was placed in the hands of Licentiate James H. Smith, accepted by him, and a committee appointed to ordain and install him.

Bethesda church at Rockbridge Baths, was allowed to prosecute a call before the Presbytery of Eastern Texas, for the pastoral services of Rev. W. M. McElwee, of Texas. Rev. A. H. Price was received from Montgomery Presbytery and a call from Broadway church was placed in his hands. Rev. G. L. Brown resigned the pastorate of Windy Cove church and Rev. C. S. M. See the pastorate of Crab-Bottom church. Rev. D. L. Wilson was dismissed to the Presbytery of Columbia. The following were appointed commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. Dr. J. L. Kirkpatrick and Rev. D. A. Penick, Elders J. T. L. Preston and D. M. Switzer. Alternates: Revs. T. M. Boyd and F. McCutchan. Elders M Sitlington and R. A. Curry

Roanoke Presbytery—Commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. R. C. Reed and ruling elder O. C. Clark, principals; alternates Rev. Dr. T. E. Peck and elder W. P. Dupuy. Mr. Paul F. Brown was ordained an evangelist.

East Hanover Presbytery.—The pastoral relation between Rev. J. J. Anderson and Samuel Davies' church was dissolved. The pastoral relation between Rev. H. M. Anderson and the churches of Christ and Bethany was dissolved; he was dismissed to the Presbytery of Florida. Mr. Charles Ghiselin, a licentiate of this Presbytery, and a recent graduate of Union Theological Seminary, was directed to engage in missionary work in the western part of Richmond, under direction of the Executive Committee of Domestic Missions.

Mr. Peyton H. Hoge, of the Second Presbyterian church, Richmond, was taken under care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry. Mr. Howison was licensed. Rev. J. D. Dudley and Rev. William N. Scott, and ruling elders David Callender, of Petersburg, and Major Willis J. Dance, of Powhatan, were appointed commissioners to the General Assembly; and Rev. John M. Rose, Rev. T. D. Witherspoon, D. D., and Ruling Elders J. D. K. Sleight, of Richmond, and John Donnan, of Petersburg, were appointed as their alternates. The following paper, presented by Rev. Dr. Wm. Brown, was adopted unanimously, and ordered to be sent as an overture to the General Assembly:

1. It is manifest that the answer—whether it be right or wrong—given by the last Assembly to the overture from the Presbytery of Atlanta, has been unsatisfactory to a large part of our Church. It brings up a question as to the nature and degree of authority to be attached to many very important acts of our highest judicatory. Such, for example, is the question whether a decision of the Assembly in Thesi, as to the meaning of any part of the Constitution of our Church touching doctrine or discipline has a binding force equal to a decision of the same point given in a case of judicial process. Here is a matter of grave import about which there is a serious difference of opinion, as may be seen from the action of the Synod of South Carolina and from recent discussions in religious newspapers.

2. It is also manifest that there is in some respects a very serious difference of opinion throughout the Church in regard to what are called "worldly amusements." What is their nature? Are they under all forms and circumstances sinful? If not, under what conditions do they become so? What is the relation and duty of the Church toward them? And what are the means which can be most wisely and effectually used against them?

The Presbytery would represent to the Assembly that while at various times this subject has found a place in its proceedings, yet the action taken has been almost entirely in the form of brief declarations, never in that of instructive discussion. This, it is agreed, must ordinarily be left to our pastors as a part of their official work; but in reference to a class of subjects which not only require a very clear discrimination, but about which there is in some respects much obscurity and confusion in the minds of many good people, may there not be great advantage in receiving from our veperable Assembly some thoroughly considered teaching and testimony at greater length than would be otherwise needful? It is surely most desirable that our beloved Church should, in the action of its judicatories, be very careful, on the one hand, not to weaken its rightful authority of discipline by taking any extreme, untenable ground which cannot be recommended to a reasonable conscience; while on the other hand, it should set its face inflexibly against what is wrong, and endeavor by all lawful influence within its power to stem the tide of evil connected with the matter here referred to.

To attain the end desired two things are of prime necessity: unity of opinion and unity of action—the first being very conducive to the second. But it is lamentably true that at present our church has neither. With a view, therefore, of securing both of these results, as far as practicable, we do here respectfully overture your venerable body to appoint a committee, whose duty it shall be to take this whole subject into careful consideration and make a full report thereon to the next General Assembly.

ANNUAL COLLECTION FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS.

The annual collection for Foreign Missions, according to the appointment of the General Assembly, will be taken up on the first Sabbath in May, or as soon after as may be found convenient. We avail ourselves of the occasion to lay before the readers of the Missionary a few plain statements in relation to the condition and wants of this great cause, to which we ask their earnest and prayerful consideration.

The receipts for the year which has just closed exceed those of the previous year about $2,000. If we were to strike out certain special gifts that were received the year before the last the excess this year from the ordinary sources would be nearer $3,000. This is encouraging, inasmuch as it evinces a growing interest in this great cause. And we earnestly pray that the only effect of this cheering announcement will be to stimulate the people of God to even greater efforts during the new year upon which we have now entered. There is a demand for still greater liberality, if we mean to sustain the missionary work which we have in hand.

In the first place, a number of our missionary brethren now in the field are really in very feeble health, and if they do not soon have relaxation from their arduous and exhausting labors they will be utterly unfitted for any more active labor either at home or abroad. Their personal interests, as well as the highest interests of the great cause to which they have devoted their lives, demand that we grant them the relief which is so much needed before it is too late. These brethren well know, and so does the committee, that they cannot leave their work, before reinforcements arrive, without imperiling its very existence. Think of this, Christian brethren, when you open your hands to drop your contributions into the Lord's treasury on the first Sabbath in May.

Another fact to which we wish to call your attention is that we now have three young men under appointment—one for Greece, one for China and one for Brazil—whom we are intending to send forward as soon as they are ready, and we are emboldened to do this in the confident assurance that the churches will enlarge their contributions so as to meet the demands of the occasion. If there is not a material increase of contributions there will be embarrassment, in spite of anything that can be done to prevent it. We trust then that there will be but one mind among us, and that shall be that the demands of the case must be met by larger gifts. We know that there are those that are making sacrifices which they feel to promote this cause. And why should we not all do this? Why should we not all aim at that high standard of duty which requires self-denial and sacrifice? Would that not be Christ-like, and would it not bring us as individuals and as churches into closer sympathy with Him? We would be glad and we think it would not be unreasonable to wish and expect the contributions to be twice as much as they were the last May.—Missionary.

The Bracken county Chronicle reports that a protracted meeting in Augusta, Ky., is being prosecuted with success. Rev. S. M. Evans is pastor of the church. Rev. H. M. Scudder is assisting. There have been two additions to the church.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN.

The Rev. L. P. Bowen, of Newton, Md., has been invited to supply the church at Marshall, Mo., which for the last two years has been supplied by the Rev. A. W. Nesbit. Mr. N. expects to leave soon for Europe.—Southern Presbyterian.

Communion services were held in the Second Presbyterian church, Staunton, Va., on April 18th. Says the Central Presbyterian: "Dr. Bowman, of Harrisburg, assisted the pastor Friday night and Saturday morning. There were two additions by certificate. The quarterly voluntary offering for debt on the church amounted to $130.50. The amount of money raised by this church during the past year, is $1,537.56. The membership is now sixty."

Hampden Sidney College has lately received, it is said, a valuable gift from a liberal friend.

The post office address of Rev. W. E. Keller has been changed from Bloomfield to Mount Sterling, Ky.

Items from the Christian Observer:

It is announced that the new Presbyterian church at Kirkville, in Madison county, Ky., which is a very handsome little edifice, will be dedicated on the third Sunday of May next. Dr. E. O. Guerrant, of Louisville, is expected to preach the dedication sermon.

The Lord's Supper was celebrated in the Third Presbyterian church, Knoxville, Tenn., on Sabbath, April 11th, and eight additions were announced from the pulpit.

Union City church has made arrangements with Weisel Beale, of Union Theological Seminary, to supply its pulpit. He will be with them May 1st.

The Chattanooga Times says: The building committee for the Second Presbyterian church are now simply awaiting the completion of the plans to begin work. The chairman of the committee, says they will expend about $6,000 on a building, the greater part of which fund is already secured.

The building committee for the First Presbyterian church are awaiting the action of the church so they can begin operations. They have within their reach $20,000 for a site and building, and work will be commenced as soon as a location is decided upon.

The Editor of the Texas Presbyterian had the pleasure of attending the communion service at the Prairie View church on the 2d Sabbath inst. He writes: This church was organized about two years and a half since, soon after the first Presbyterian camp-meeting. There was not much material for a church of Presbyterian antecedents in the neighborhood, yet it has grown quite vigorously, numbering now we suppose between forty and fifty members. This growth has been the fruit of faithful and hard work, the pastor Rev. C. H. Dobbs, not only preaching at the church at his regular appointments, but in season and out of season, at school-houses and other places in the vicinity, and laboring faithfully and constantly in private. He has the assistance of faithful and working elders. One of the two superintends a Sabbath-school at the church, and the other another one at a school house near his home, four miles from the church.

Items from St. Louis Presbyterian:

Rev. W. G. F. Wallace has changed his postoffice address from Houstonia, Mo., to Sedalia, Mo. Correspondents will make a note of the fact.

We greatly regret to learn that Rev. John A. Calhoun who has been ministering so acceptably to the church at Palmyra, has ceased his connection with our Synod, and returned to Iowa. He has taken charge of the church at Eau Claire, in that State.

GIVE THEM A LITTLE HELP.

In all our congregations there are constantly many persons with whom God's spirit is striving—who are thoughtful and tender at heart, and who are waiting for Christians to speak a word to them. They only need a friendly word or a stretched out hand. They have not the courage to start alone, and they are waiting for the favorable opportunity. Now, the secret of soul winning is not to be constantly exhorting and lecturing people, but to be constantly giving them a chance to manifest the higher desires of their souls. We fear it too frequently happens that the unconverted seek God's people, rather than the contrary. There are times when every man's nature cries out for the Gospel, and at such a time all he needs is a touch of the hand, or a look of the eye, or but the opportunity to reply, in order to come. Have more faith—not only in God, but in the truth and in humanity. Do not shut the gates, but open them and keep them open, that whosoever will may come in.—Golden Rule.

BEST BOOK FOR EVERYBODY.—The new illustrated edition of Webster's Dictionary, containing three thousand engravings, is the best book for everybody that the press has produced in the present century, and should be regarded as indispensable to the well-regulated home, reading-room, library, and place of business.—Golden Era.

DIED.

On the 24th February, in Lexington, N. C., very suddenly, Mrs. SALLIE SOMERS WATSON, in the 20th year of her age, leaving an infant and a bereaved husband.

Mrs. W. was eminently pious, and held in the highest estimation by all who knew her. She was a child of the Sabbath school, upon whose young heart divine truth made a deep and abiding impression. It was sanctified to her salvation. "Her sun went down while it was yet noon." May the Lord sanctify the bereavement to the family.

April 2nd, at Weatherford, Texas, Mrs. LIZZIE BLAIR, wife of Mr. J. T. Blair, formerly of North Carolina.

She was very ill from the day she was taken sick, with erysipelas, and was unconscious from the third day; died on the twelfth day of her illness.

A few weeks before her death she gave satisfactory evidence of faith in Christ, and showed in many ways that she loved her Saviour and trusted in Him alone for salvation. An aged grandmother in North Carolina survives her, and two brothers in Tennessee.

"Asleep in Jesus! O! how sweet
To be for such a slumber meet;
With holy confidence to sing
That death hath lost its venomed sting!"
L. B. C.

March 30th, 1880, BESSIE S. AMIS, at the residence of her father, Lewis Amis, in Granville county.

Little Bessie was born Jan. 22d, 1865. On the 8th of June, 1879 she was received to the communion of Shiloh church. Only then did she enjoy the privilege of sitting at the Lord's table with the people of God, but now we believe her seated in glory with the Lord Himself and the saints of light. Her relief from great physical prostration and translation to Christ is a blessed exchange for her; but a mournful one for the father and step-mother who grieve for an only child. It was the writer's privilege to hear her first faltering confession of a wish to confess Christ before the world, and to the day of her departure her unfaltering faith in the Lord Jesus was edifying to older christians. She will return in the day of the Lord.

In Salisbury, N. C., April 6, 1880, JOHN D. BROWN, in the 63rd year of his age.

Mr. Brown was born in Cumberland county, near Fayetteville, N. C., July 25th, 1817. Early in life he became a member of the Presbyterian church of Fayetteville, being then an inmate of Mr. James Martine's family. About 1839 he removed to Salisbury and engaged in business here. Not long after this he began the business of general merchandizing, with various partners. At the opening of the late war the firm of Brown, Coffin & Mock was among the most popular and extensive establishments in Salisbury. Ten years ago Mr. Brown formed a connection as salesman with the wealthy and widely known house of E. S. Jaffrey & Co., in New York city, which yielded him a handsome income until his death.

In 1841 Mr. Brown was transferred by certificate to the Salisbury Presbyterian church, and a few years afterwards was chosen and ordained deacon in the same, and continued to fulfill the duties of that office as long as he lived.

He was twice married, and leaves an invalid wife and seven children (nearly all grown) to mourn their loss.

The life of Mr. Brown was characterized by many admirable traits, and he leaves the inheritance of a precious memory and an unstained reputation. He was a man of energy and tireless industry, and through all the changes of business that have marked the last quarter of a century he was never without employment. When property was swept away by the war, he had such a capital of character and business skill as enabled him to provide a bountiful support for his family. He was aided in this by a genial and uniform courtesy, and attention to friends and strangers, that secured the respect and confidence of all who knew him. Many instances could be mentioned of his kindness shown to persons on the great highways of travel and in New York city, when Southern men and women have been cheered and helped by his unselfish courtesy and attentions. Whether at his quiet home in Salisbury, or in the whirl of the great city, he was always regular in his attendance upon the services of the Church. He was wont to say to his Southern friends in the city, "I cannot show you the way to the opera or the theatre, for I never go there; but I will be glad to accompany you to any suitable church you may wish to attend." For himself, in the city he chose the church of the Rev. W. M. Paxton, D. D., as his regular place of worship. Thus he secured the pastoral care of that earnest minister, as well as such a religious home as every christian needs. During the last few years his mind dwelt increasingly on spiritual things, and his resort was to the Bible and to prayer when sad news of sickness in his family often came to afflict his affectionate heart.

He was an affectionate husband, a tender, kind and bountiful father, who loved to gratify the reasonable wishes of his children, and for these children his ardent wish and earnest prayer was that they all might be safely united to the Saviour. In family religion he was faithful, and the family altar was not allowed to go down. Until within a few days of his death he maintained family prayers, even when he was unable to read more than two or three verses, and to utter more than a few words of earnest prayer. Though many hearts are saddened by his removal from earth, to his family and friends there remains the confident hope that the exchange of worlds is a blessed one to him. The loving disciple of Jesus, according to the will of the Master, is called home to be with his Saviour and to behold and share the glory of the eternal kingdom.
J. R.

At Eagle Falls, Rockingham county, N. C., on April 23d, 1880, in her tenth year, CORA GALLAWAY, daughter of Dr. Jesse and Mrs. Cora I. Carter.

A slow, insidious disease manifested itself in her system about two years ago. Every effort to arrest its progress proved unavailing. Anxiously and tenderly the parents watched over and nursed the dear little one, but at length the citadel of life was undermined and the spirit departed. She loved Jesus, her Saviour, and sought to please Him. Now she is "safe in His arms."
C. M.

Near Greensboro, Guilford county, N. C., April 12th, 1880, Mrs. ELIZABETH WHARTON, wife of David Wharton, aged 84 years, 8 months and 22 days.

Mrs. Wharton is the last of a large family. Her ancestors came from Pennsylvania. They were staunch Presbyterians and were among the original members of the Presbyterian church at Buffalo. Her father, Major John Donnell, was a prominent ruler in the church and an officer in the Revolutionary war. He left a large family, some of whom many years since, settled in the Western States. They carried with them their love of church privileges, and some of them were eminently useful in planting and building up churches in the then new counties in which their lots were cast.

The subject of this notice connected herself with the Presbyterian church at Buffalo, November 10th, 1821. Thus for nearly sixty years, she was a witness for Christ. She loved the Church and its ordinances, and it may be safely said of her that she never, at least during the last nineteen years, the period during which the writer has known her, voluntarily absented herself from the house of God. She was naturally quiet and retiring; but her influence was always decidedly on the side of virtue, sound morals and pure religion. Her last illness was protracted through months, and from the beginning she believed that she would not recover. Her suffering was at times very severe, and she was perhaps never free from pain from the commencement of her sickness till her death. Yet she bore all with marked christian patience.

In the beginning of her confinement her religious experience was not satisfactory to herself, but her hope grew brighter and more comforting to the end. She had no confidence in the flesh. No one ever had a more humble opinion of his attainments in grace than she. She felt that she was less than the least of Christ's disciples. She had been a constant reader of her Bible and Henry's Commentary, and she greatly enjoyed the reading of the Scriptures, religious conversation and prayer. Of such exercises she seemed never to grow weary. She had an anxiety to depart and be with Christ, which she sometimes feared amounted to impatience. On one occasion she dreamed that Christ had taken her home, and when she awoke and found that it was only a dream she was evidently greatly disappointed. She retained her mind almost to the last moment. Just before she died she exclaimed, "Glory! Glory!" and passed away as quietly as if falling asleep.

Thus a good woman is gone to occupy, as we believe, the place prepared for her by her Redeemer. She leaves a husband, four children (one preceded her), a number of grand children and numerous relations and friends to cherish her memory. The unusually large attendance on her funeral services attested the high esteem in which she was held by the community in which she was born, lived and died. May this triumph of grace be blessed to all who were conversant with it, and may the mantle of this humble believer in Jesus, both as to sound Scriptural doctrine and Godly walk, be taken up by her descendants to the third and fourth generations.

MERCHANTS, READ THIS.—To those subject to ills incident to the vexations of business life, Dyspepsia, and a feeling of debility and fretfulness, we say, without equivocation, take Simmons's Liver Regulator. This remedy is unequalled in the cure of Piles, Constipation, Bad Breath, Sick Headache and Bilious Complaints. The Regulator is free from any injurious mercurial substance; not disagreeable; can be taken at any time, withing interfering with business or pleasure. It is so gentle, safe, and such a good digester, that it is often used after a hearty meal to settle the food and relieve any apprehension that the meal may disagree with you.

"Having been a great sufferer for many years from general Debility and Indigestion, I concluded to try your valuable medicine (Simmons's Regulator) in small doses, and found it to be what it was recommended for. You can use my name at any time you wish in its praise. J. F. DUMAS, Merchant. Haddock, Ga.

AN EXTENDED POPULARITY.—Each year finds "Brown's Bronchial Troches" in new localities in various parts of the world. For relieving Coughs, Colds, and Throat Diseases, the Troches have been proved reliable.

TAR.—Receipts taken day by day at $1 05.

COTTON.—Very little doing—closing at 11¼ cents Middling, nominal.

TIMBER.—Is coming in and all of good quality is taken readily. No abatement in price.

THE LATE J. HARMAN BROWN.—At the meeting of the Trustees of Union Theological Seminary, in Virginia, on the 14th April, 1880, the following minute was unanimously adopted:

The Trustees would make record of the fact that, since their last meeting, our excellent and valued member, Mr. J. Harman Brown, of the city of Baltimore, has been called to his everlasting rest. He was long an efficient elder in the Presbyterian Church; was eminent for his consistent piety and benevolence: as being "given to hospitality" and "a lover of good men." He was a light and blessing to his household. He devotedly loved the Church, because Christ his Saviour had purchased it with his own blood. He gave most liberally to it of his time and of his temporal goods. He was much interested in the prosperity of this institution. His venerable, cheerful face, beaming with good will to all, will no more be seen in our annual convocations; but his rest shall be glorious, and his memory will be blessed.

The Sunday Magazine for May. This capital publication is again before us as fine as ever with the usual amount of contents. Frank Leslie's Publishing House, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, N. Y.

Blackwood's Magazine for April is before us. Contents: Brummagem Morality; Reata, or What's in a Name; The Pesant Proprietors of Norway; Bush-Life in Queensland; The Afghan War; Elanour: A Tale of Non-Performers; The Prince Consort; The Crisis Abroad; The Appeal to the Country. The Leonard Scott Publishing Company, 41 Barclay street, N. Y.

I. K. Funk & Co., New York, lay before us John Stewart Blackie's Essay on Self-Culture, price 10 cents; and the first volume of Knight's Popular History of England. This, the cheapest edition of this great work ever published will be issued in eight volumes, at 30 cents per volume, in manilla, $2 40 per set, or $2 90 per set in cloth. The former price was $18 00 and $25 00. This edition, we are glad to observe, is not cheapened by printing on second-hand plates and thin wood-paper, as are so many other cheap books, to the destruction of the eyes of readers. The type is large, leaded brevier. This great work of Charles Knight contains nearly as much matter as Hume's and Macauley's histories combined, covering the whole ground of English history down to 1868. It is called "popular" because it is a history of the people, not of the dynasties alone. Lord Brougham said of this work: "Nothing has ever appeared superior, if anything has been published equal, to the account of the state of commerce, government and society at different periods."

Thanks to the Historical and Scientific Society of Wilmington for a copy of the pamphlet entitled "A Study in Colonial History," of which Hon. George Davis is the author.

The Popular Science Monthly for May is at hand. Contents: Climate and Complexion; The Carbon Button; God and Nature; The Buffalo and His Fate; Sham Admiration in Literature: The Impediment of Adipose, a Celebrated Case; The Martyrdom of Science; The Pleasure of Visual Form; Hysteria and Demonism; Bacteria as Destroyers of Insects; Some Facts and Fictions of Zoology; The Electrical Polyscope, illustrated; Capture among the Mullusks, illustrated; How Insects Direct their Flight; Sketch of James Clerk Maxwell, with portrait; Correspondence; Editor's Table; Literary Notices; Popular Miscellany; Notes. D. Appleton & Co., N. Y.

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Oct. 8, 1877.

Some three months ago I found myself suffering with Brights disease—Albuminuria. By the use of a reliable test I found albumen in the urine, and in some slight degree in a few instances in a coagulated state. I suffered from dropsy, particularly about the ankles, slight pains about the kidneys, a derangement of digestion, great dryness of the skin, and at times much thirst, and, of course, a gradual failing of strength. This was about the state of things when I commenced taking the Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I took about six tablespoonfuls every day for one week, when I found all my symptoms decidedly improved, and at the end of two weeks it was difficult to detect any trace of albumen. Having imprudently taken cold I had a very slight relapse some two weeks ago, when I began again using the medicine, and am now as well as ever.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

WORKINGMEN.

Before you begin your heavy spring work after a winter of relaxation, your system needs cleansing and strengthening to prevent an attack of Ague, Billious or Spring Fever, or some other spring sickness that will unfit you for a season's work. You will save time, much sickness and great expense if you will use one bottle of Hop Bitters in your family this month. Don't wait. See other column.

When the "LIFE RESTORING" East India Remedy is at hand. One bottle will satisfy the most skeptical that DR. H. JAMES' Cannabis Indica will positively cure Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Nervous Debility. It is an Imported Remedy. Try it—prove it for yourself.

Here are a few extracts from letters of persons who were CURED, and now order for their friends:

"I fear Cousin is in a decline, and as thy medicines cured my only brother of a Hemorrhage of the Lungs about a year ago, I wish Cousin to take them." Thy true friend,
HANNAH NICKLE, Near Woodbury, N. J.

"As your medicine cured me of Consumption some three years ago, I want him to try them. I gained fifteen pounds while taking the first three bottles." J. V. HULL, Lawrenceburg, Anderson Co., Ky.

"Mother has been suffering with Bronchitis for nearly twenty years, and tried most all kinds of medicine, and says the Cannabis Indica is the only thing that gives her relief." JANE A. ASHBROOK, Lovelaceville, Ballard Co., Ky.

"I know all about the Cannabis Indica. Fifteen years ago it cured my daughter of Asthma; she had it very bad for several years, but was perfectly cured. Please send me a $9 box of your medicine." JACOB TROUT, Deep River, Poweshick Co., Iowa.

"It has cured Mrs. Bebout of General Debility of the whole system, of two or three years' standing, and others are trying it with success." BEBOUT & LESLIE, Simpsons' Store, Washington Co., Pa.

FOR THE FAMILY

My Good for Nothing.

What are you good for, my brave little man?
Answer that question for me, if you can;
You, with your fingers as white as a nun;
You, with your ringlets as bright as the sun;
All the day long with your busy contriving,
Into all mischief and fun you are driving;
See if your wise little noddle can tell
What you are good for. Now, ponder it well!

Over the carpet the dear little feet
Came with a patter to climb on my seat;
Two merry eyes full of frolic and glee,
Under their lashes looked up unto me;
Two little hands pressing soft on my face,
Drew me down close in a loving embrace;
Two rosy lips gave the answer so true,
"Good to love you, mamma; good to love you."

—Emily Huntington Miller.

How Jimmy Gray went off after Coots.

"Jimmy! Jimmy!"

It was the widow Gray calling at the foot of the steep brown stairs leading up to the little chamber under her cottage roof. As she looked toward that cosy retreat, there was nobody to be seen, but she knew well enough that in the little chamber a boy both curly-headed and sleepy-headed was taking a morning nap under the warm blankets.

"Time for that boy to be up," thought the widow.

"Jimmy! Jimmy!" she called.

No answer.

The only sound audible was that of the spring wind. Caught by the wings when trying to work its way under the window-sash, it now murmured out its protest.

"Third time ought to go," thought the widow; "and if it don't, I'll get the speaking-trumpet of Skipper Ben across the way and shout that boy down."

"Jim-m-mee!" she cried.

"Here-r, mother," yawned out a faint and sleepy voice that seemed to rise from the depths of a dozen comforters. In a moment, something came down heavy on the floor above.

"All right," said Mrs. Gray. "Now I'll give those fried potatoes another turn, and then breakfast will be ready."

"Mother," said Jimmy, appearing soon at the kitchen door, wearing his shoes on his hands instead of his feet, as boys in a hurry are apt to do in the morning. "Mother, don't you think you would like a fat coot for breakfast to-morrow morning?"

"Not if you must go after it to-day. The sea was dreadful uneasy last night. I heard it calling off Ragged Pint, same as they always say it does before a storm, to entice the ships ashore. That's all moonshine, though. No, I wouldn't go to-day."

Jimmy, now at his breakfast, looked up from the table. He could see the ocean from his seat. It looked cold and uneasy, also, as if shivering. All over it were patches of white coming and going, as if sea-monsters were constantly springing to the surface, showing their teeth and then dropping down again.

"I would like to get you a nice, fat coot to cook, mother."

"Well, don't go to-day."

Breakfast over, the widow took down the leather-covered Bible, old and worn. Perching her glasses on her nose, she began to read one of the psalms. Jimmy thought she could even beat the minister at reading. Then she knelt in prayer. Jimmy noticed that his mother's voice trembled as she reached those words that were always a part of her prayer, "Keep those, dear Father, exposed to danger on land and on—the sea!" The widow sighed. Hadn't she reason to sigh? Hadn't this same terrible sea laid its cold blue hands on her husband, and forced him down into those depths, where his body still lay buried? "And on the sea," thought Jimmy, "if anything would keep one, 'twould be mother's prayer."

It was an hour later.

Jimmy was on the beach, his pants tucked in his rubber boots, his gun on his shoulder in readiness to tip over any sea-bird wandering on the sands. Sam Benton was there,—a grizzled old Triton, ready in his younger days to go into any neck-breaking scrape, and in his old age ready to advise any, but prudent enough to keep out of it.

"Jimmy," said Sam, "I stump you to take your boat and go out after coots. Plenty of 'em round Ragged Pint. I see 'em flying there about six this morning. Oh! a cloud of 'em." (Sam had seen just one.) "If it wa'n't for this ere rheumatics, I'd go. Oh, oh," he grunted rubbing his legs. "Come, I'll stump you to go."

"I—I—I—think 'tis too rough; don't you?" replied Jimmy.

"O boy! rough? Well, let it be rough. What were you made for? To take a lady's boat, and paddle it round the shores of a mill-pond? Mill-pond Jimmy!"

Sam Benton was wicked to tempt a boy that day, and Jimmy Gray was foolish to be tempted by him.

"Guess I'll try," said Jimmy, his pride up, and anxious to show Sam Benton or any other man on the beach that he could'nt be "stumped" that way.

In a few minutes his little boat had been shoved off into the waters. Sam Benton helped, his old rheumatic legs moving very nimbly now that they were in the ways of mischief. The boat that had been launched in a little creek was soon out amid the waves. Up and down, up and down, like a plank at see-saw, went Jimmy's little dory. He looked out to sea, and saw that he had made a fearful mistake in venturing upon the water. There was a lot of huge, heavy waves coming,—"rollers," they are called. Jimmy pointed his boat for shore. "I must get out of this just as I can," he said. It took all his strength and skill to keep his boat headed right, so that those big billows would strike the stern of the dory, and not the side, upsetting it. How big those billows looked just like huge fists the sea held up and shook at him! Jimmy rowed on, nearing the shore. At last there came one wave whose look he never forgot. It almost seemed animated by a spirit; as if it had eyes to frown on him, and hands threatening to raise; as if the sea monsters showing their teeth in the morning had come up out of the depths together, and, massed in one angry heap, were advancing to bury him out of sight forever! And alas! the wave struck the boat where it should not,—on her side; and over she went, Jimmy with her! He was a daring swimmer. There was a stout muscle in his plump boy-arm, and he struck out boldly for the shore. His heavy rubber boots were weights on his feet. His thick sailor-jacket hung like armor about him. Jimmy felt like a fish with his fins glued down He saw a rock ahead. "If I can only reach that rock," he thought But alas! a strong eddy swept about the rock, and again and again flung him off. His strength was fast going, but he made one more desperate effort, and succeeded in laying his hand on the rock; but he had really grasped the rock-weed growing there, and not the rock itself. The rock-weed gave way, he was swept off again by the eddy, and then he felt that all was over. He was drowning. Like an electric flash of the storm going through the heavens and lighting it all up at once from east to west, so his whole life seemed lighted up, and came before him. One thing that rose up like a dark cloud on a bright landscape, was the grizzled, taunting face of Sam Benton. The last thing that he saw, was his mother kneeling in prayer. He heard her words: "Keep those dear Father, exposed to danger on land—and on the sea." Then he caught her sigh at the close of the prayer. That petition would save if any would, he thought; and then came—black-heat—night—oblivion!

Jimmy knew nothing till at last he was conscious that people seemed to be trying to get hold of him, they far above, and he away down, down under the heavy waters. But by and by he seemed to come up, and the people reaching after him came nearer and nearer. At last they seemed to bring him to the surface.

He opened his eyes, and there were the doctor, his mother, and the neighbors, trying to "bring him to." He was in his little chamber at home, lying on the bed. He found out that a boat had been sent to his help, and let it be said Sam Benton—penitent Sam now—was one of those in the boat. Why, people said that when he saw what he had done, his face turned white,—white as the froth on top of the breakers. It was his hand that grasped Jimmy when he was going down for the last time. Everybody said that Sam Benton was a better man after that day, and certainly there was room for improvement. He was one of those waiting in the little chamber for Jimmy to wake up from that sleep so near death's undisturbed rest. Jimmy did wake up. After a while, he could speak. Putting his arms about his mother's neck, he whispered, "It was your praying that saved me, mother."

"Thank God!" said Widow Gray.—Sunday School Times.

The Heavenly Home.

It is not the walls of the building in which you live that makes your earthly home, but the company of those you love.

A little boy about four or five years old, was returning from school one day. He bounded into the house, exclaiming as he hung his hat up in the entry: "This is my home! this is my home!"

A lady was then on a visit to his mother, and was sitting in the parlor. She said to him:

"Willie, the house next door is just the same as this; suppose you go in there and hang your hat up in the lobby, wouldn't that be your home as well as this?"

"No, ma'am," said Willie, very earnestly, "it would not."

"Why not?" asked the lady. "What makes this house your home more than that?"

Willie had never thought of this before. But after a moment's pause he ran up to his mother, and throwing his arms around her neck, he said:

"Because my dear mother lives here!"

It is the presence and company of those we love which makes our earthly home, and it is just so with our heavenly home—that home which our dear Saviour has gone to prepare for the children of God.

A little Sabbath school boy lay upon his dying bed. His teacher sat at the bedside holding the hand of his scholar. "I am going home to heaven," said the little fellow.

"Why do you call heaven your home?" asked his teacher.

"Because Jesus is there?"

"But suppose," said the teacher, "that Jesus should go out of heaven?"

"Then I would go out with him," said the dying child. This dear child loved Jesus.—Canada Presbyterian.

China.

Some of our little readers who study geography know that this is a country in Asia, and to get there we must cross the Pacific Ocean. We might tell you many curious and wonderful things about this country, but it is of the people we desire to write. The Chinese are a queer people. Some one living in China writes to her friend Pansy of her Chinese servant: "He does housework, and how do you think he sprinkles clothing for ironing? This is done with the hand or a little broom. After the Chinaman was shown how to do it he seemed to get along very well until he thought of what seemed to him a better way. He filled his mouth full of water from the dipper; then he squirted it in a little stream all over the clothes. How would you girls like to have your white dresses sprinkled in that way?"

Our friend, the Rev. Mr. Davis, a missionary in China, sends us a model of a compressed Chinese lady's foot, copied from life, together with the little satin slipper, richly embroidered.

Many of our readers know that the mothers in China bind up the feet of the girl babies so they cannot grow any more. We wish we could show you this model. The foot is just three and a half inches long. The toes are so compressed as to appear to be growing to the sole of the foot. You would exclaim on seeing it, What an outrage upon humanity! We are sure your heart would be filled with renewed thankfulness that your lot has been cast in a land of gospel light and truth. Think you these mothers would subject their dear little girl babies to the cruel torture of binding their little tender rosy feet, if they knew of the gentle, loving Saviour who careth for the very little children? Just think of the millions in China who have never heard of Jesus. In the city of Soochow, where Mr. Davis lives, there are thousands and thousands who have never heard one gospel message. You know it is simply impossible for a few missionaries to reach so many. The reason why there are so few is, because the christian men and women do not give money enough to send the messengers of salvation to these dark places. Are you doing all you can to advance the cause of the Master? Do you practice self-denial in order to help the needy, or are you giving just so much as suits your convenience and pleasure? Freely ye have received, and what remains after you have gratified all your tastes and desires, after you have spent much in purple and fine linen, in costly jewelry, rich viands, then if there is a surplus of a few dollars, or it may be pennies, these you cast into the treasury of the Lord. That which cost you nothing, this is the kind return you make to your heavenly Father for His manifold blessings which crown your life, for every morning and every evening you are indebted to Him for some fresh token of His love. The parting command of our Saviour was, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel"—tell this good news to every creature.

Now some of our little boys and girls are ready to say, I am not a preacher, and that does not mean me. Are you quite sure He does not mean you? Is there no way for you to help the perishing millions of China? Yes, you can do it by saving your pennies. Whenever you are tempted to spend a penny for something you do not need, think of the little boys and girls of China who have never been taught to lisp the name of Jesus. Let your prayers follow your gifts. One little penny given in the name of Jesus will do more good than hundreds of dollars given without prayer. Work, then, and while you work pray, then indeed you will be a light-bearer. Work for Jesus, shine for Jesus, and one day you shall live with Jesus.—Orphan's Friend.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Napoleon and Metternich.

It was Metternich as much as any one man who organized the quadruple alliance of 1813 against Napoleon, and its success was the best evidence that Metternich knew what was to be done, and when and how. He had assisted in 1809 at the bestowal of Maria Louisa on the French Emperor, but in 1813 both parties had become dissatisfied with that compromise, and there were mutterings of opposition in all parts at the false relation between Austria and France. Metternich determined to put an end to this false position, and therefore in the summer of 1813, while offering Austrian mediation between Napoleon and his opponents, he was really laboring to knit together a new confederacy, which should avoid the blunders made by former coalitions against French aggression. In pursuance of this scheme he had to deal directly with the "man of destiny" and to foretell him his fate.

The account given by Metternich of this interview (June 26, 1813,) with Napoleon at the Villa Marcolini in Dresden is extremely interesting, as illustrating the character of the two men and the history of Europe. It was before the battle of Leipzig, and a year before the downfall of Napoleon, who had listened with much impatience to proposals made by Austria, then his ally in name, but in fact united with England, Russia and Prussia against him, and only waiting for an opportunity to attack him openly. Napoleon gave audience to Metternich, upon whose veracity we must depend for the authenticity of the story. He received the Austrian statesman with dignity; his hat was under his arm, and he wore his sword. After a few formal inquiries about the health of the Austrian Emperor, he said abruptly:

"So you also want war; well, you shall have it. I have destroyed the Prussian army at Lutzen, I have beaten the Russians at Bautzen; you wish to have your turn. I will meet you at Vienna. Men are incorrigible; the lessons of experience are lost upon them. Three times have I re-established the Emperor Francis on this throne; I promised to remain at peace with him as long as he lives; I married his daughter. I said to myself then, 'you are committing a folly.' I regret it now."

Metternich had observed on his way the uneasiness and disquietude of all the French generals. Berthier had whispered him in Napoleon's ante-chamber; "Don't forget that all Europe wants peace, France especially." "At this decisive moment," says he, "I looked upon myself as the representative of all Europe, and Napoleon seemed to me small." Metternich gave Napoleon to understand that the time had come for him to make sacrifices if he really wanted peace. "What do you want of me; that I should dishonor myself? Never! I know how to die, but I shall never give away an inch of territory. Your kings born on the throne can be beaten twenty times, and always go back to their capitals. I cannot, for I am an upstart soldier." He had never been beaten by men; in Russia he had only been beaten by the elements. He still had a fine army, and did not fear a coalition. He explained to Metternich that the Austrian army was weak; he knew to a man how the Austrian regiments and corps were composed. Metternich replied that the French army was only so numerous because the Emperor had been obliged to anticipate his levies. He had seen the French soldiers on his way; they were children. What would happen if this, the last army of France, suffered defeat?

"At these words Napoleon was carried away by rage; he became pale, and his features contracted. 'You are not a soldier,' said he, rudely, and don't know what passes in a soldier's mind. I have grown up on battle-fields, and a man like myself cares little for the lives of a million of men.' Thus saying, or screaming, he threw into a corner of the room the hat he had hitherto kept in his hand. I remained calm, leaning against a table between the two windows, and said: 'Why do you speak thus to me between four walls? Let us open the doors, and make your words heard from one end of France to the other. The cause which I represent will not suffer by it.' Napoleon containing himself, then uttered in a calmer tone these words, not less remarkable than his preceding ones: 'The French cannot complain of me; to spare them I sacrificed the Germans and the Poles. I lost 300,000 men in the Russian campaign, but in the number there were not more than 30,000 Frenchmen—.' 'You forget, sire,' I exclaimed, 'that you are talking to a German.'"

Napoleon then began to walk up and down with Metternich; at the second turn he picked up his hat. Metternich was always proud of having forced the great Napoleon to go through this performance with his hat. The interview lasted a long time; Napoleon became calm; he saw that he could gain nothing. He spoke of Maria Louisa; "In marrying an archduchess I wanted to unite the present and the past, the Gothic prejudices and the institutions of my age; I made an error, and I feel now the extent of it. It may cost me my throne, but I will bury the world under its ruins." When Metternich left him he says he said to Napoleon: "You are lost, sire. I had a presentiment of it when I came—now I am certain of it.—Reviews of Metternich's Memoirs.

Music in Stones.

It was 2 o'clock when our party reached "Ringing Rocks." The air of the afternoon was sharp and crisp, the ground well frozen and most of the snow of winter had disappeared. We had come to ring a chime on the strange and wonderful metallic rocks that nature has so mysteriously placed here in a group. These rocks are on the farm of Abraham Mensch of Pottsgrove township, Montgomery county. They cover a space of about three-quarters of an acre. Our party consisted of ladies and gentlemen versed in music. Each selected a rock suitable to form a scale of eight notes. The leading gentleman took the rock known as the "State House bell." He struck it with a hammer, and it rang out very like the old Independence bell in Philadelphia before it was cracked. The tones of a number of stones were tested before each member of the party had selected one with a tone corresponding to his note of the scale. Finally eight rocks were chosen, and a few tunes, such as "Old Hundred," "Sweet By and By," and "Home, Sweet Home," were given with considerable clearness. Some of these rocks give forth a rich, full tone, which would vie with the best metal. The "State House rock" at one time was one of the largest. It has been broken off several times, but it still preserves its strong, full tone. The sound produced by striking the smaller rocks resembles that made when a blacksmith's anvil is struck, some being clearer than others, but no two are alike. Many sound as though car wheels were being tested by the hammer strokes of the station men. The "ringing rocks" have been visited by thousands. On the surfaces of many of them are marks resembling footprints of horses and other animals. Fac similes of human footprints are also to be seen.—Philadelphia Press.

The Motherless.

Sitting in the school room I overheard a conversation between a sister and a brother. The little boy complained of insults or wrongs received from another little boy. His face was flushed with anger. The sister listened awhile, and then, turning away, she answered, "I do not want to hear another word, Willie has no mother." The brother's lips were silent, the rebuke came home to him, and stealing away he muttered, "I never thought of that." He thought of his own mother, and the loneliness of Willie compared with his own happy lot. Do we think of it when want comes to the orphan, and rude words assail him? Has the little wanderer no mother to listen to his sorrows? Speak gently to him, then.—Christian at Work.

Stanley.

Of Dean Stanley the London World says: "With much natural wit, some humor, and a keen insight into the weaknesses and foibles of society, Dean Stanley has made himself a persona grata in drawing-rooms and at dinner tables. No divine, if only he knows his audience, ever told a story better; and with the memory of Samuel Wilberforce as a raconteur, this is a great deal to say. His vein, indeed, is that of narrative rather than of badinage or repartee; but his anecdotes are admirable of their sort; and he has an extraordinary power of conveying genuine information in the most airy and sparkling manner. In general society he seems to lend the same kind of attraction to topics of solid knowledge that the aroma of Russia leather does to the contents of a library. No eminent Churchman of our time has done half so much to promote an acquaintance with antiquities and miscellaneous culture."

A letter from Gaston, N. C., says that Capehart & Son, at their fishery on the south side of Albemarle sound, recently caught 19,000 shad in five days. The largest day's work was 5,877 shad, other fish not counted. The seines are worked by steam.—Richmond Dispatch.

NORFOLK, VA., April 22.—Tidings have just reached here of the terrible work of the fires which raged last week in the swamp region of North Carolina. There was much destruction, both of life and property. Zachariah Owens, of Tyrrell county, and his family, consisting of his wife and three children, were overtaken by the flames while fleeing from their house and all burned to death. The heavy rains of Tuesday brought the fires under control.

Good Evidence.

When such men as the Rev. Dr. Rankin, Rev. Dr. Harvey, Prof Green, Dr. Bartine, Col. John K. McChesney, E. W. THE TIDY HOUSEWIFE.

The careful, tidy housewife, when she is giving her house its spring cleaning, should bear in mind that the dear inmates of her house are more precious than houses, and that their systems need cleansing by purifying the blood, regulating the stomach and bowels to prevent and cure the diseases arising from spring malaria and miasma, and she should know that there is nothing that will do it so perfectly and surely as Hop Bitters, the purest and best of all medicines See other column.

Is a compound of the virtues of sarsaparilla, stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, with the iodide of potash and iron, all powerful blood-making, blood-cleansing, and life-sustaining elements. It is the purest, safest, and most effectual alterative medicine known or available to the public. The sciences of medicine and chemistry have never produced so valuable a remedy, nor one so potent to cure all diseases resulting from impure blood. It cures Scrofula and all scrofulous diseases, Erysipelas, Rose, or St. Anthony's Fire, Pimples and Face-grubs, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter, Humors, Salt Rheum, Scald-head, Ring-worm, Ulcers, Sores, Rheumatism, Mercurial Disease, Neuralgia, Female Weaknesses and Irregularities, Jaundice, Affections of the Liver, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, and General Debility.

By its searching and cleansing qualities it purges out the foul corruptions which contaminate the blood and cause derangement and decay. It stimulates and enlivens the vital functions, promotes energy and strength, restores and preserves health, and infuses new life and vigor throughout the whole system. No sufferer from any disease which arises from impurity of the blood need despair who will give AYER'S SARSAPARILLA a fair trial.

It is folly to experiment with the numerous low-priced mixtures, of cheap materials, and without medicinal virtues, offered as blood-purifiers, while disease becomes more firmly seated. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA is a medicine of such concentrated curative power, that it is by far the best, cheapest, and most reliable blood-purifier known. Physicians know its composition, and prescribe it. It has been widely used for forty years, and has won the unqualified confidence of millions whom it has benefited.

THOMAS HUGHES ON THE CHOICE OF A BUSINESS LIFE.

Thomas Hughes, the English author who has become so wonderfully popular in giving us "Tom Brown at Rugby" and "Tom Brown at Oxford" made an address very recently, (Oct. 1879,) to the studeuts of Clifton College, in which he thus discourses: "In no portion of English society can public opinion be modified so swiftly and so radically as in a public school. One generation of brave boys may do it. At this present critical time, so man can guage the value in English life, of a stream of young men, flowing into all professions and into all industries from our public schools, who have learned to use resolutely those words so hard to speak in a society like ours "I can't afford";—and who have learned to have few wants, and to serve these wants themselves, so that they may have both the power and the means to help others. Young men who have manliness enough to be "careless of the comfits and cushions of life" and content to leave them to valets. It is more than thirty years since the wisest of American writers and one of the best of American gentlemen said, "Young men, on entering life find the way to lucrative employment blocked by abysses. The ways of trade have grown selfish to the borders of theft, and apple to the borders (if not beyond the borders) of fraud. The employments of commerce are not intrinsically unfit for a man; but they are now in their general course, so vitiated by abuses, at which all connive, that it requires more vigor and resources than can be expected of every young man to right himself in them. The sins of trade belong to no class, to no individual. Everybody partakes, everybody confesses—with cap and knee volunteers his confession, yet none feels himself accountable. He did not create the abuse, he cannot alter it. Considerations of this kind have turned the attention of philanthropists and intelligent men to the claims of manual labor as part of the education of every young man. The accumulated wealth of the past generation is tainted by these abuses, and—no matter how much it is offered to us—we must begin to consider if it is not the nobler part to reject it, and put ourselves into primary relations with the soil and nature:—and abstaining from whatever is dishonest and unclean, to take each of us bravely his part, with his own hands, in the manual labor of the world."

Hughes goes on to say that none can help in this great reform but those "who have learned in early life the great lesson of simplicity and self-denial, and I don't hesitate to say that the worst education which teaches simplicity and self-denial is better than the best which teaches all else but this."

These words ought to be written in letters of gold; so nobly true they are. And in placing ourselves in "primary relations with the soil and nature," I would again call attention to my subject of last week, pastoral pursuits in the United States.

The region open to this industry is vast:—the life is full of pleasure to the scholars, the artist, the scientist, the poet. And withal it pays better than any other business in which we can put ourselves "into primary relations with the soil and with nature." That it is already attracting educated men from various parts of the world is shown by the following clipping:

"In Colorado there is a class of highly educated men engaged in the cattle trade. The men are sun-burned, and wear flannel shirts while on the ranch; but none need mistake them for common or ignorant persons. They are in very many cases gentlemen of cultnre and standing. In the circle of ranchmen whose acquaintance I formed during my stay, there were several of considerable wealth and scholarly attainments who, travelling in the West for health, had become interested in the cattle business, and enchanted by the wild open air life; and who had invested in stock, roughed it, and were enjoying the climate, the freedom and the excitement, as well as the money it brings. One gentleman—mine host—had been in the royal navy of Great Britain; but he now likes the billowy prarie better than the deep blue sea. A neighbor was one of the best special geologists in America. Travelling in pursuit of his profession, he saw there was "money in cattle," and so left his esthetic Boston home for a tent on the plains. Another scientist, whose name is known on two continents, has during the past year gone heavily into the business. Two Harvard graduates are on ranches adjoining. Two young Englishmen, educated in Germany, herd their own flocks, and live temporarily in a dugout. At the rauch where I was entertained, I saw three youths brown and bashful, come every evening home with the horses, and ride away in the early dawn, at break-neck pace, after the snorting herd. They looked like any farm-boys; yet in the evening, when work was over, and they sat on the steps with the family, their talk was wonderfully bright and interesting. Two of them had travelled in Europe. One was the son of an ex Senator of California; another was the nephew of a general officer of the United States army; and the third was the son of a distinguished citizen of New York. They are as well-read boys as one can find anywhere. In delicate health, they left the city to 'rough it' in the prairies, and are stout and well now. Being busy from morning until night, riding all day over the blossoms and the fresh grass, and learning the cattle business from the beginning these lads will no doubt in a few years own ranches and herds of their own."

As I said before, the life of the ranchmen can be made perfectly comfortable by providing for the business English tents and camp furniture. Everything is gratifying to the artistic taste; and what is far better, is enobling and honest. They obey the divine command, "Work with your own hands, that ye may have to give to him that needeth."

H. M. IRWIN.

CARE OF THE NEWLY SAVED.

It was the remark of a lady who felt what she said that before she became a professor of religion she had many friends who manifested an interest in her welfare, but that so soon as she connected with the Church their good offices were discontinued. She was told of her danger and duty, and followed by all kinds of benevolent counsel. She was also made the subject of special prayer. It was a real disappointment to her in after days that she had no one to seem to care for her soul. In the church, devoted to its duties and a Christian walk, she was tronbled by her inexperience and perplexed by constant difficulties that rose in her way. But no one came to her relief. She was more alone than she had ever been in her life. The social sympathy of which she had heard seemed to be utterly wanting, and without communion, except in a way that was official and formal, she found the first cross she was called to bear to be one of spiritual solitude in the midst of her former friends.

Her experience was more common perhaps than we think. There is a zeal on the part of many Christians in behalf of those who are unconverted or out of the Church that is earnest and hearty, but which ceases when once the point has been gained of a profession of religion. It forgets the subsequent nurture which is just as much needed as the early care. Its aim is to get those to whom it is directed to declare themselves Christians, and when that is done it feels its work is ended. It is the spirit of one who will seek to get the homeless and outcast into the house, under the shelter of its roof and protected by its enclosure, without thinking of the food and training and companionship, wanting which it must be a prison instead of a place of joy and rest.

It would be too much to say that it is after the profession is made that the chief care is needed. To save a soul from death is the first, as it is the greatest, work of of all. But closely following it, and nearly related to it, indeed a part of itself, is the duty of properly assisting those who have committed themselves to the Lord. They need sympathy, warning, exhortation, encouragement, restraint—the care of children who are not starting on their way; and he is a right servant of the Master who properly fosters their faith and warms into expanding growth the germs of grace implanted in the soul.

Many a youthful Christian leads a life of loneliness and bitterness because of this want of sympathy. Many another one, whether feeling the loneliness or not, is yet alone, and failing of needed encouragement, passes a starving life, knowing nothing of the holy joy that comes with a deep experience of the Gospel, while others still, unhelped and unrestrained, fall into sin which brings on them the censure of a Church that neglected its own duty to them.—United Presbyterian.

PEOPLE OF CAIRO.

From a letter of Rev. Dr. M. D. Hoge to the Central Presbyterian we extract the following graphic and picturesque description:

"Here in these narrow streets you enjoy an endless panorama of commingled races, clad in oriental costumes ordinarily of bright colors, red and yellow predominating. It is wonderful that there are not more accidents, considering the fact that there are no sidewalks. Camels, horses, donkeys, vehicles, foot passengers, all mingled in apparently inextricable confusion, and yet there are no collisions. The carriages of the more wealthy are always preceded by one and often by two runners, clad in flowing white frocks fastened around the waist with broad bright sashes. The legs are bare from the knee down, and the feet encased in yellow slippers. Each runner carries a long wand in his hand, and his office is to clear the way for the carriage. All kinds of trades are prosecuted on the sidewalks, or in the little open shops without doors, in full view of passers-by; barbers shaving the beards or cutting the hair of their customers, tailors sewing garments, blacksmiths shoeing horses and donkeys, carpenters at work with their primitive tools, undisturbed by the throngs which are flowing by in ceaseless processions. The upper stories of the houses project over the lower, while from the tops of the flat roofs boards are laid across from side to side, making a complete covering, thus securing shade and coolness to the narrow streets beneath. No women are seen engaged in trade. None are employed about the hotels in any capacity, and they are wonderfully well kept considering the fact that all the rooms of guests are kept in order and the beds made by Egyptian boys. These cinnamon colored lads, without being as fragrant as that aromatic bark, seem to be perfectly honest. I have not locked my room door since I came to Cairo. My clothes have been taken from my trunk and placed in the bureau drawers and the keys left in them, but I have not missed a handkerchief, or even a cigar from the open box standing on my table. Women are seen, it is true, in great numbers in the streets, but the better classes always go closely veiled. The outdoor garb they wear is anything but graceful. You see a mass of stuffs waddling before you. You catch a glimpse of some bright colored garment, over which is worn a great balloon-like covering of black silk, resembling an ungainly, leather-winged bat—suggesting Milton's description of quite a different personage, 'That other shape, if shape it might be called, that shape had none.' It is a moving bundle of fabrics, with a woman in it. If it is approaching you then all you can see of her is a pair of restless, black eyes between the covering of the head and the line across the nose where the veil begins, suspended by a cord passing through a little cylinder, resembling a spool of cotton, which rests upon the forehead. There are evidently three classes of women in these Mohammedan cities—the strictly secluded beauties you would like to see, but cannot; those who go out and whose faces are partially disclosed, and those of the lower order who are seen with too much facility, and are so ugly that you wish you had never seen them at all. * * * *

A day or two ago I had an excellent opportunity of seeing the Khedive of Egypt, who came to our hotel to call upon Mr. Maynard, U. S. Minister to Turkey, now on a visit to Cairo. The Khedive in power at this time is Mohammed Tufik Pasha, son of Ismail Pasha who was recently expelled by the Sublime Porte and who now resides in Naples. Tufik Pasha drove to the hotel in a plain carriage, attended by a few officers on horseback. A long strip of carpet had been laid for him from the street through the wide piazza of the hotel into the interior of the building. A number of English and Americans were sitting at the time in the piazza. All rose as the Pasha entered. He walked between two lines of spectators, bowing from side to side as he passed. After his call the same ceremony was repeated, only he paused long enough to shake hands with two or three persons as he returned to his carriage, as a mark of attention to the foreigners present. He resembles in form and general appearance our friend Mr. Samuel Pulliam of Richmond, only, as the lady of our party to whom I read this last sentence remarked, 'not nearly so good looking.'"

SOCIABILITY IN THE CHURCH.

HOW NEW MEMBERS ARE FROZEN OUT—A PLEA FOR STURDY DOCTRINES—HOW SHALL WE BECOME SOCIABLE, AND YET RETAIN THAT VERY NECESSARY SENSE OF PROPRIETY AND INDIVIDUAL SELF COMPLACENCY?—THE HOME CENTRE.

BY MRS. MARGARET E. SANGSTER.

Churches being composed of human, and, therefore, imperfect beings, are often far from realizing ideal perfection. A church should be a friendly place; a warm, glowing and sympathetic atmosphere should pervade it; the members ought to know and cherish each other; all should be interested in its outside aggressive work, and all should share its interior spiritual life. In some congregations, when new members are received, there is a pleasant custom, by which the old members, rising, pledge themselves to be brotherly and sisterly toward the new comers, to become acquainted with them, and in everything to treat them with christian courtesy and love. It would seem that no such vow should be necessary, and yet there are churches in which the vow is a dead letter, and the obligation is hardly acknowledged. Who does not know churches where the fire in the pulpit utterly fails to thaw the ice in the pews? Who has not been made aware that, especially in our great cities, whole families gradually fall away from church-going, from regular attendance on a place of worship of their own, possibly because, in the changing life of our towns, as they go from one neighborhood to another, and enter on new church relations, they are left practically alone. Nobody extends them a welcome. Nobody holds out a cordial hand, nor looks at them with interest, and they feel the chill that congeals the heart of the stranger. For awhile they keep, through their children, a tentative connection with the church, through the Sunday school, and occasionally they drift into the sanctuary to hear a popular preacher, or to listen to attractive music, but they drop out of the ranks of Christ's servants, and one reason is, that they were not magnetized at first by the heartiness of some good man or woman, and that they were not missed from any place when first they grew careless and stayed away.

If everybody were brought up on the strong diet of Westminster and Heidelberg, if now, as of old, children were thoroughly inducted into the catechism and taught the doctrines of evangelical faith, there would be sturdier christians, and there would be more who could not be frozen out of God's house by indifference, frightened out by style, or offended by misunderstanding. If the good old plan of taking children to church and letting them sit with their parents were generally resumed, the coming generation would be more steadfast. A sweeter, purer, steadier life with Christ, a more vital spirituality, would make our churches every way stronger. And perhaps if we all lived in daily communion with our Lord, we would not need so often the gentle reminder to be courteous, and tender, and friendly to the Lord's disciples.

In a church, as in a community, or in a society of any description, there must be degrees and phases of intimacy. The people who are congenial will gravitate toward each other. Those who have a common ground of meeting will find opportunities to meet. The people who read, who enjoy music and art, who have travelled, who are highly cultivated, will naturally discover and enjoy each other. The people who care nothing for books, who are chiefly domestic, who are cumbered with care, struggling for daily bread, wondering where they are to get Mary's new hat and Tommy's new shoes, are the people most like ly to be overlooked; not because of their poverty or their plainness, but because of their narrowness of range and their inevitable self-absorption. Often, too, there is about them a sensitive pride, which is, very properly, suspicous of patronage, and which bristles up and declines to accept favors and attention from those higher in the social scale. The instinctive pride of the poor is frequently an armor which is impenetrable to the studied kindness of the rich.

In various ways we try to solve this problem of the lack of sociability in the church. Sometimes we fancy that a monthly sociable, with cakes and coffee, will set everything straight. It is announced. There is an indefatigable and smiling Reception Committee. There are the gracious elderly ladies, with their silvery puffs and their motherly manners. There are the affable and dignified elderly gentlemen. There is the good pastor, beaming and benignant. There is his wife, who set out long ago to be impartial, so that she might offend nobody, and who is now a bit mechanical in her politeness, distributing her gentle inquiries with a determination to speak to every one in the room. There are the timid people, who flop down into the first seat they see, and retain it for the evening. There are the stiff people, who rigidly adorn the walls. There is, too often, the crust of formality, which cannot easily be broken. And yet when, as, for for instance, in our church—yours and mine, I mean—the pastor and his wife are generally beloved and very lovable, when the First Directress, is queenly, and the Second Directress is most winsome, when the young people are bright, cordial and full of tact, and there is a programme for the entertainment all carefully arranged beforehand, a church sociable may be a very delightful affair, and the new-comers, the stand-off and waiting-to-be-noticed people, and the young men away from home—for all of which classes it was primarily designed—may enjoy it much.

The trouble is that to do any good the sociable must be followed up. It will not do for Madam, who was very amiable to Miss C. at the sociable, not to know Miss C. by sight when she encounter her next day behind a counter in Ridley's or Macy's. It will not do for Mrs. Bland, in her silk and velvet, to pass a week later Miss Crissy, in her threadbare merino, wearily trudging homeward from her day's labor in the public school, and have neither bow nor smile of recognition to spare. It will not do for judge, or editor, or doctor, or professor, to ignore completely the plain man on the ferry-boat, to whom the former was all courtesy at the sociable. To do the greater people justice, they intend no arrogance. They are simply preoccupied, absent-minded, or filled with thought of their own affairs; but then the others make no allowances, and only feel that they have had another lesson in social insincerity.

I have sometimes thought that, on the whole, sociables failed because they were too distinctly a part of church machinery. Years ago, when a timid girl, I remember being led up to the queen of a certain brilliant drawing room at a gay watering place. The lady was the admired of every one, because of her goodness, and because of her bright and piquant conversational talents. "Talk to me, my dear!" was her never-forgotten first observation to my blushing self. It of course had the effect of sealing my lips. When the church, as a church, gathers her unobtrusive members into a room, seats them on a sofa, and exclaims, "Talk, my dears!" the result obtained tallies with my experience precisely.

Visiting from house to house, if undertaken and carried forward with simplicity, kindliness and genuine cordiality, does much to promote good feeling. Everybody wants the minister to call, but the minister cannot be ubiquitous, and he is not omniscient. He cannot call very often on his whole parish. There are always the sick and the sorrowing, who have the first claim upon his sympathies and presence. The good women who can command the leisure to make frequent visits, especially on the lonely and retiring, are doing a very important part of church work.

After all, the real home centre of the church is its prayer-meeting. Whoever attends that habitually is likely to find to his blessed satisfaction that love for the Master is the tie that binds christians closest. Stay away from that fire, and you stay in the cold. Around that living flame they assemble who are most earnest and most active in serving Christ, and probably best worth knowing.—Christian at Work.

DR. CHALMERS' PLAN.

I should not omit to mention Dr. Chalmers' effort in Edinburgh for the reformation of the degraded quarter of the city lying under Castle Hill. He had no aid from the city government or from capitalists. He was unable to cause the erection of new tenement houses. But he went to work and districted the quarter called the West Port. He appointed over every section visitors whose duty it was to enter each house, and invite the children into the schools established in connection with his mission church, and also into industrial schools. The church at the West Port had fifty or sixty officers, to each of whom was assigned a special district for visitation. When I attended a service at this yet flourishing establishment I found on the door a list of the names of these officers with a description of the district assigned them for visiting, and for which they were personally responsible. The quarter was one of the most vicious and filthy in the whole city. I personally visited the cellar into which Burke and Hare—two noted murderers hung in 1829—were accustomed to entice their victims, whom, to the number of more than twenty, they one by one smothered with pitch-plasters for the sake of selling their undisfigured corpses for dissection at the medical colleges. Just opposite this den of iniquity are Dr. Chalmers' mission church, the industrial school, and, I believe, a savings bank. The present preacher I took tea with, and found that the enterprise was a great success. I saw a large and cleanlily dressed congregation in the building on Sunday, and was told that not a single pew in the house was without a paying occupant. Dr. Chalmers' plan was not to distribute clothes or food without pay, but to secure the religious instruction of every family, industrial activity on the part of children able to work, and economy through the action of savings banks. The centre of his plan, however, was personal visitation from house to house. He took the West Port in hand when it was black, and during his own life saw such a reformation in it that it was, so to speak, washed gray, if not white. At the present time the vice of the place is not utterly removed, but it is one of the most thoroughly respectable working-class quarters of Edinburgh. Everybody admits that the territorial plan of Dr. Chalmers was a success. He thought it the best plan to be adopted for the redemption of the poor in great cities. He was anxious to secure co-operation on the part of the city for shutting up dens of infamy—especially whiskey shops. One of the most striking remarks he ever made was that if the city would help to prohibit the sale of liquor and shut up the brothels, he could see in the result of his experiments the first dawn of a day of hope for the modern civilization in which cities are to perform inevitably so prominent a part.—Joseph Cook in Christian Union.

OUR DAILY RECKONING.

If you sit down at set of sun,
And count the acts that you have done;
And counting, find
One self-denying act, and word
That eased the heart of him that heard—
One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then you may count that day well spent

But if, through all the livelong day
You've cheered no heart by yea or nay;
If through it all
You've nothing done that you can trace,
That brought the sunshine to one face,
No act most small,
That helped some soul, and nothing cost,
Then count that day as worse than lost.

BUSINESS SUCCESS.

Among the rare bits of worldly wisdom uttered by Major Easthurn, one of the former magnates of State street, whose familiar face and form as he stood at his office door at noonday will be recalled by many, none may be more profitably considered at the present time than his comment on making haste to be rich.

"I've stood here on State street," said he, "for forty years, and I have seen men accumulate fortunes by speculation, and I've seen these fortunes disappear. I have seen men go up in worldly wealth, and go down, and I've always noticed that those persons who were content with slow gains and six per cent. interest came out ahead in the long run." The greatest of proverbial philosophers has also said, "A faithful man shall abound with blessings, but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent," and again, "He that basteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him." He hastens best who hastens slowly; not lazily, for there must be work, backed by energy, perseverance, intelligent self-denial, and thorough business habits. Believers in business impossibilities are not as numerous as formerly. For years we seemed to be living in the atmosphere of venture and great undertakings, and our whole industry was tinged with the uncertbly light, but of late years we have been suffering from a collapse of these great bollow ideas, and there is hope for a return of the staple prosperity of earlier times.

The past six years of depression has solidified all branches of business. Prudence and economy is now the motto of the successful merchant. The misfortunes of the past did not come for naught. It is a delusion to suppose that success is attained by any kind of patent process. Books are sometimes advertised with such titles as "The Secret of Success," "The Road to Wealth," etc., but they make the path of success no plainer or easier for those who are looking for a short road to wealth, power, honor and influence. These come only of years of intelligent labor and devotion to business, prudence, economy, honest dealing, courage, and perseverance. He that would have true and lasting success must deserve it. A fortune won by blunder or accident, by short cuts, by strategy, or close bargains is not success, and is likely to leave its possessor as quickly as it came. Success must be conquered in a legitimate way. The man who enters business only for plunder and gain, with no thought of his reputation or character, is not a good business man, and is never regarded by his fellows as a successful man. The truth is that real success does not mean wealth, social position, or political honors alone. To these must be added honesty, a heartfelt consideration for others, civility, promptitude of thought and action, intelligence, sobriety, and every manly virtue.

The truly successful business man is one who is complete in everything that belongs to his calling. He has a thorough knowledge of what has been done in his business, and applies this knowledge with untiring diligence to the undertakings before him. He watches and studies the markets, knowing how much is produced of the commodity in which he deals and the amount consumed; he is prompt in decision and execution, truthful in word and conduct, and keeps his credit unimpaired. In all that he does he commands the respect and confidence of all with whom he deals, and maintains a high and noble character before the world, which is beyond all price. The principle of the "survival of the fittest" is nowhere more applicable than in business matters. The unworthy and incapable are sure in the long run to sink to their proper level. —American Manufacturer and Exporter.

PERFECTION OF CHRIST.

In Christ, no one faculty or emotion appears in excess. His fulness of nature suits itself to every occasion. Strength and grace, wisdom and love, conrage and purity, which are the one side of our being, were never displayed so harmoniously and so perfectly, as in Him, but the incidents of the marriage feast show that the other side, the feminine, which are the ideal virtues of woman, were no less His characteristics. They throw light on the words of St. Paul "In Him is neither Jew nor Greek, bond nor free, male nor female." He could subdue Pilate by His calm dignity, but He also ministered to the happiness of the village festival. He could withstand the struggle with the Prince of Darkness in the wilderness; and let the rich young ruler go His way to perish, if he would, but he sighed as he healed the man that was dumb. He pronounced the doom of Jerusalem, with a lofty sternness, but He wept as He thought how it had neglected the things of his peace. He craved sympathy, and He showed it with equal tenderness. He was calm amidst the wildest popular tumult, but He sought the lonely mountain for midnight prayer. He sternly rebuked Peter for hinting a temptation, but He blamed His sleep in Gethsemane on the weakness of the flesh. He gave away a crown when on the cross, but He was exceedingly sorrowful unto death in the garden. He never used His miraculous powers to relieve Himself, but He provided for the multitude in the wilderness. His judges quailed before Him, but He forgot His dying agonies, to commend His mother to the lifelong care of a friend. He rebuked death that He might give her son back to the widow, and He took part in the rejoicings of an humble marriage, that He might elevate and sanctify human joys. In the fullest sense He was a man, but not in the sense in which manly virtues are opposed to those of woman, for He showed no less the gentleness, purity, and tenderness of the one sex, than the strength and nobility of the other. He was the Son of Man, in the grand sense of being representative of humanity as a whole. Man and woman alike, have in Him their perfect ideal.—Geike's Life of Christ.

OBLIGATIONS OF CHURCH MEMBERS.

Every person who deliberately chooses to become enrolled as a church member, engages by that act to serve the Church. He places himself and all he has at the disposal of his Master, saying, "What wilt thou have me to do?" He enlists as a soldier in a regiment, and must take his place in the ranks. He engages as a laborer in a vineyard, and must do the work assigned him. That place and that work are pointed out in different ways. He may feel specially qualified for some department of church work, and, therefore, specially called to it. Or he may be thrust into a place of labor and responsibility by the voice of his brethren against his will, but with such urgency on their part, and such clear indications of Providence that he cannot lawfully resist the call. A faithful soldier must be ready for picket duty, for the perils of the "forlorn hope," or for the battle where victory and glory are sure to be won. But it often happens when the time comes for the election of elders and deacons, that the brethren arm themselves with all sorts of excuses. One has no time, another no inclination for office, another shrinks from prominence and responsibility, and a chorus of voices is heard singing, "I pray thee have me excused." No if all are brethren, and to bear one another's burdens is to fulfil the law of Christ, then His disciples should be willing to take their share of labor and of sacrifice, instead of leaving a few willing ones to do all the work. Every young man who has the respect and confidence of the Church, and is called to fill an office, should respond at once. He should not think that his willingness to serve the Church without begging to be excused is any indication of a desire for office. The idea of ambition in office-seeking in the Church should be banished at once. There is little danger of being suspected of this, where no worldly emoluments are to be received. There ought to be as little ground to suspect that these offices are refused on account of the labor and self-denial which they impose. The old proverb that "many hands make light work" is true in the Church. It is by the "effectual working in the measure of every part," the "whole body being fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth," that the Church grows up and edifies itself in love. By sharing the responsibilities and duties of office, everyone enlarges his sphere of usefulness, becomes stronger for labor, learns to sympathize with his brethren, and feels less disposed to find fault with those who are at the helm, for he knows by experience how difficult it is to steer clear of all danger. Thus a manly piety is developed in the Church, and if a trusted pilot should be stricken down at his post, even in mid-stream, there is no danger or need of panic, for there are others already disciplined and ready to take his place.—Canada Presbyterian.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

The rabbi of the Jewish synagogue at Strasburg has become a convert to Christianity.

By the will of Mr. William Fisher, a leading townsman of Sheffield, a sum of eight thousand pounds has been left to found an institution for the benefit of unmarried or married women or widows who are Catholics or members of the Jewish body. The institution is similar to one already existing in Sheffield, but which excludes Catholics. Unitarians and Jews. Mr. Fisher was a Unitarian.

Intelligence has been received from Paris, that the Rev. Theodore Monod, who was expected to visit this country the present season, is prevented, by sickness in his family, from fulfilling his expectations. Rev. Eugene Reueilland, who is a leader among the Protestants of France, will come in his stead, and will lay before our people the cause of Protestantism in that country, which is now in so critical a state.

The Rev. Dr. M'All does not weary in his work in Paris. He has now announced a new series of meetings, specially for the benefit of the working classes. He has secured the use of the Elysee of Montmartre for a weekly series of religious addresses, on condition that religious controversies and political allusions are avoided. At the inaugural meeting the audience numbered 2,000, and the speakers included M. de Pressense and M. Durand Dasgier.

The latest archæological exploit has been the unearthing of a great Asiatic empire, whose name and existence, until recent excavations in the Asiatic provinces of Turkey brought it to light, were previously unknown. The unearthed empire was called the Empire of the Hittites, and its rule extended from the Caspian to the Ægean seas. The Hittites were a literary people, and one of their principal cities was Book City. There are a few scattered notices about this people in the Bible, but archæologists contend that they were then in their decadence. Some blocks covered with inscriptions in the language of the Hittites have been sent to the British Museum for Oriental experts to ponder over and decipher if they can.

The Council of the Church Association issued an address to the constituencies of the United Kingdom, calling attention to the fact that during the last thirty years the simplicity of worship restored to the church at the Reformation has been grievously impaired by the introduction of Romish practices. Although these proceeding have been condemned by the highest judicial tribunals, censured by the bishops, and repudiated by the vast majority of the people, the Ritualists persist in their defiance of the law, and an organized body are sparing no effort to secure immunity for these law-breaking clergy, even at the risk of overturning the established religion. At this crisis, therefore, the Church Association call upon the constituencies to make these questions a great electoral test, and to vote only for those candidates who pledge themselves to maintain the Protestantism of the National Church, and to support measures to expel Ritualism from its pale.

Although the arrangements made for the resettlement of Zululand were not so favorable to missions as might have been expected, there seems good reason to hope that the country will be really thrown open to the Gospel. John Dunn himself does not appear to be beyond the reach of christian public opinion. The outcry raised against his threatened intolerance has done him good, and he has been showing kindness and courtesy to the missionaries of his neighborhood. But the most interesting recent intelligence from that region is this, that the work of evangelization is about to be begun at Isandhlwana. By a remarkable providence, "the district containing the graves of so many of our fellow-countrymen has been assigned to a chief who is not only favorable to the establishment of a mission amongst his people, but has for years shown his desire to be himself instructed by the Church, and to have his followers brought under the influence of Church teaching." To preach Christ in such a spot is indeed to take a sublime revenge on the authors of the massacre. The work will be carried on in connection with the Mackenzie Mission.

CHURCH SERVICES.

We notice that this subject is receiving some attention from correspondents in two of our most influential exchanges widely differing in characteristics and representing geographical centres far distant each from the other. A like difference is also presented in the correspondents themselves, one being a Reverend D. D., the other a layman. That two correspondents, themselves occupying such different positions, should at the same time be representing such similar views in such widely separate quarters of the same church is a striking coincidence, especially when the character of their views is considered. They both agree in dissatisfaction with the services of the Presbyterian Church as at present conducted; the D. D., in the following plain terms:

"There is a growing spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction in the Presbyterian Church with the prevailing tone and type of our worship. It is in vain to ignore this, or to attempt to put it down by ridicule or bantering. And there is a disposition among many who are most deeply and earnestly attached to the Presbyterian Church, not only by early training but by intense conviction, to inquire if something cannot be done to develop among our people a more hearty and sympathetic mode of worship, in which the minister and the people shall alike take part in the joint-offering of the sacrifice of the lips.

It is difficult to see why it should be necessary that because the Presbyterian Church has so much of strength and substance in its grand system of doctrine, it should be considered any special advantage to cultivate a form of worship in which extreme monotony and simplicity, and even uncouth barrenness, are to be regarded almost as cardinal virtues and as signs of excellence. Not strength alone, but "strength and beauty are in His sanctuary," Psalm xcvi. 6. It is by no means an essential part of our scriptural simplicity of worship to ignore everything like culture in worship, especially when the word culture itself signifies worship. Yet the Presbyterian Church shuts herself out of the realm of the æsthetic, and seems to act as if everything involving good taste in the matter of worship belonged to other churches rather than to our own."

The layman, and we think it is to his credit, is not so radical as the D. D., but let him speak for himself in his own words, viz:

"It has always appeared unaccountable to me that the honored clergy of the Presbyterian Church will persist in preaching long sermons, when tired faces, and, in not a few instances, empty pews, furnish indubitable evidence that they are not acceptable. The clergymen of the Episcopal Church are much wiser in this respect. It is rare to hear from these ministers a sermon exceeding thirty minutes, while the average length is twenty minutes. It is true that the Episcopal service is as long as that in the Presbyterian Church, but it is so varied that the worshippers are not wearied. If the long sermons preached on Sundays from our Presbyterian pulpits were varied at intervals of fifteen minutes by singing or prayers, much of the weariness apparent on the part of the bearers would be prevented. But so long as the present service is retained, the true interests of the church require that the sermons should be shortened."

With reference to the merits of these opinions we have little to say. We fear that the layman's objections are not altogether groundless; yet we hope that the instances are rare rather than common. As to the length of the sermon much depends upon the character of the minister, the character of the audience, and the occasion. A twenty minute sermon from some preachers would seem longer than one of forty minutes from some others. Hence no rule can be laid down or even suggested. We can safely say however that wearied faces and pews empty on account of length of sermons establish the fact beyond the shadow of a doubt that those particular sermons, whatever be their length, are too long.

Thus much in guessing; now upon the subject in general we would say that whatever "spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction there may be in some quarters, it does not come within the sphere of our observation; furthermore its seems to us that the remedy proposed for this alleged spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction, indicates some confusion of thought as to the very genius and distinctive principles of Presbyterianism as we hold it.

1. All plea for a change based upon the importance of participation by the congregation in the services of the sanctuary is founded upon an erroneous conception of worship; in that it infers a distinction, as to worship, between the sermon and the other parts of the service which does not really exist. The Presbyterian idea is that the devout attendance upon the preaching of the Gospel is worship as really and truly as singing or responsive prayer. In listening attentively and prayerfully to a sermon the congregation is worshiping God and not the minister worshipping for the congregation. We distinguish here between the pleas based as above and those which argue for a more interesting form of worship and greater variety, &c.; upon the latter class we do not enter at present, but merely reiterate to emphasize the fact that, when writers urge a change in order that the congregation may participate in the worship, they ignore a fundamental principle in Presbyterianism, viz: that God is worshiped by the congregation in their attentive hearing of his word as expounded, enforced and illustrated by his accredited ministry.

2. In the argument for twenty minute sermons in imitation of the Episcopal Church, the Presbyterian idea of the ministry is forgotten, viz: that the preacher is a teacher. Whatever may be the Episcopal theory it is evident that practically this, the main element of the Presbyterian idea, is ignored almost entirely. Preaching forms necessarily a very small part in any ritual worship; whenever there is any conflict between the sermon and the service, strictly so-called, the sermon must yield. Very often it is shoved entirely aside; the service is the main element; you will frequently if not usually find upon the shelves of an Episcopal clergyman as many commentaries upon the church service as upon the Bible. Whereas Presbyterians speak of "going to preaching" the Episcopal equivalent is "going to service." It is no secret that persons reared in other churches find the short essay-like sermons of the Episcopal ministry, when compared with the more thorough and exhaustive exposition of God's word to which they have been accustomed, quite as unsatisfactory as is the simple unadorned service of their churches, when contrasted with the elaborate ceremonial familiar to the ritualists. The prominence given to the study of God's word is the chief element of strength in the Presbyterian Church; it is this which gives her the rock-like conservatism in doctrine, the healthy intelligence in religious opinions and the substantial weight which has constituted her the great educating agency, which has placed her catechisms, commentaries and works on theology in the very forefront and made them text-books and books of reference even among other denominations. It is due to the fact that her preachers have been teachers. Ignore this great calling and encourage these twenty minute essays upon ethical subjects instead of the thorough unfolding of God's word, this milk-and-mush diet instead of strong meat and in fifty years Presbyterianism would not recognize its own portrait.

3. This movement for greater variety and more æsthetic beauty in church services overlooks a third fundamental principle in Presbyterianism, viz: that nothing is legitimate in worship which is not expressly or implicitly laid down in the Scriptures. Man has no more right to introduce new features into worship than new articles in the Faith.

Let history be our teacher here. This was the point of difference between the Calvinistic and the Lutheran branches of the great reformation; the former holding that nothing was allowable in worship except what was commanded in the word of God the latter that anything was legitimate that was not forbidden in the Scripture. In this point, as a germ, lie all the differences between the ritualists and the non-ritualists. Throw down this rock-barrier and the tide of innovation meets no resistance; æsthetics becomes the law and Romanism has once been the result and might be so again. In all proposal of changes, however slight, look well to the future, beware of the thin edge of the wedge.

FRUIT AFTER MANY DAYS.

Meroh, or Uncle Morean, as he was called, had been an African Prince, and as such was highly educated. The vicissitudes of war threw him into the hands of his enemies, and he was bought by General Owen, of Bladen county, in whose family he received a christian education and most tender care. At the time of his death, and for many years previous to that event, he had been a devoted christian, and member of the Presbyterian church in Wilmington. These facts, which will be recalled by many of our readers, will engage special interest in the following extract from a letter of Rev. W. W. Eels, formerly a pastor of the church mentioned, to a member of the family above referred to:

"Did I ever tell you how the Lord carried out the desire of good old Uncle Morean's heart, and made him the means of sending the Bible to his tribe in Africa?

"The interest taken in the good man led to a desire to reach his people with the Gospel.

The American Bible Society therefore left orders at Liberia and along the coast that whenever traders appeared from this people at the Coast they should be told to carry the word home, that 'the words of Moses and of Jesus" would be sent to them if they wished it.

For many years this message was sent and no answer returned. During the sixteen or eighteen years previous to 1864 it was frequently repeated with the same lack of result. All this time Drs. Smith and Van Dyke, at Beirut, were preparing a new translation of the Bible into Arabic. All former versions were imperfect, and so were rejected by Mohammedans, as no book containing bad grammar or inelegant forms of speech could be from the perfect God. This new translation is pronounced by their scholars as perfect in language as the Koran. Just as it was ready to be delivered to the public, came the answer from the Foulahs (Morean's tribe), "We want that Book you promised us." It has been sent, and I have before me the copy of a letter of thanks for the gift from an old Moolah of the tribe.

If sent before in the former imperfect translation it would have been rejected; but when it was ready the way was opened, and Uncle Morean's long prayer has been answered. Now the Bible is in the hands of the most intelligent and least known tribe of the interior of Africa."

KENTUCKY SABBATH LAW.

Just now the air of Kentucky resounds with the shocks of battle over the Sabbath law. The general Sabbath law of Kentucky was much the same as such laws in other States, but it was found on trial that because of some technicalities, the law could not be enforced against liquor sellers. The Legislature recently so amended the law as that it should distinctly recognize liquor sellers, and on April 20th, last, it was signed by the Governor, and took effect.

The Mayor of Lonisville, opposed to the enforcement of the law, insanely attempts, in his chagrin, to nullify the operation of the law by professing to observe it to the letter. The Mayor's mortification has led him into a bit of childishness that will, if we mistake not, rally the friends of law and order and triumphantly carry through the Sabbath law and its observance. We give the sequel so far as it has transpired, from the Christian Observer: "Last Sunday morning he sent policemen around to the churches and took down the names of preachers, organists, choristers and sextons, with a view to their prosecution, for an infringement of the Sunday law. So that we are likely to have Dr. Stuart Robinson arraigned for preaching the gospel on Sunday; Mr. Wilson Escott and Mr. Smythe for leading the singing of the people on the organ or with the voice, and innumerable sextons for unlocking the church doors on the Sabbath day. The police arrested a lady for driving in from her suburban residence to church in her private phæton, and took down the name of a gentleman who was taking his lame wife to church in another vehicle.

"When such proceedings as these were carried on by the rowdies of Covington, we could afford to let them pass unnoticed in the contempt of silence. They acquire a claim to notice at this time only because of the temporary official standing of Mr. Baxter as Mayor of the city. Language can hardly express the disgust of the honest, upright citizens of Louisville at this official attempt to annoy and inconvenience the worshippers of God.

"When the Mayor of the city attempts to dictate to its people that, unless we will allow all sorts and forms of drunkenness and debauchery on our streets and in the beer gardens upon the Sabbath, he will shut up (if he can) all our sanctuaries of worship, he loses the respect of sober-minded men.

"He cannot close the sanctuaries; he dares not shut one door of them. Does not every thoughtful man realize that the object of the Sunday law is not to interfere with the observance of divine worship, but on the contrary, to promote it. The State does not say to any man, 'You must go to church.' But it does say, 'You must release your clerks from labor on that day, you must yourself cease from the activities of business on that day, so that all may be free to honor God by a sacred rest; and that divine worship may not in any way be hindered or disturbed. The design of the law is to secure the moral and religious training of the people; and the attempt of the Mayor to browbeat and to prevent the worship of God last Sunday serves only to display either his pitiable ignorance of the first principles of law, or a resolute determination (in the face of his oath to see that the laws are faithfully executed) to prevent the spirit of them from being carried out.

"The Mayor's course has, however, demonstrated the happy effect of a good execution of this law. There was a degree of good order on the streets of Louisville last Sunday, that has not been seen for years. The police report less drunkenness and disorder; those who passed along the streets report much more quiet and peace.

"The people of this Commonwealth are not to be bullied into a repeal of all Sunday legislation by this exhibition of spite. They know that the morals of the metropolis will soon affect the morals of every village in the State. And their concern for the purity of their own homes will restrain them from being led astray by any such ebullition of fanaticism as this."

ATTENUATED EPIDERMIS.

From this disorder which prevails to a great extent in our country, editors are known to be singularly exempt, but whether from excessive modesty or intense stupidity is not so clear. When, however, the disease strikes in on an editor, the symptoms are always fearfully aggravated. Persons of strong mental power are sometimes victims, but in general it is accompanied with much weakness in the intellectual part of the brain. It seldom exists apart from atrabiliousness of temperament, and its moral characteristics are usually excessive vanity, or superlative self-esteem. One of the most notable peculiarities of this serious malady is the disposition of the afflicted to rejoice in its possession. In the progress of the disease the patient becomes intolerable to his friends, and when he passes away, on the tablet of many hearts is written this epitaph: "Whatever may have been his virtues a thicker cuticle had been worth them all."

REDUCTION OF FARE.

The following Railroads, having answered requests for reduction of rates for the benefit of the Delegates attending meeting of General Assembly Presbyterian Church, in the United States, to be held in Charleston, S. C., May 20th, 1880. The same is given below for benefit of delegates:

Eight or nine members of the Society of Friends will be in the new British House of Commons, and in that number are included for the first time two ministers of that denomination.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

A lady expressing her very high appreciation of the editorial "The Church and the Social Side of Man's Nature," in our last issue, intimates that it deserves re-publication. We are always glad to have such kind and encouraging expressions, but to re-publish it is not practicable.

Rev. F. D. Moore, of Covington, Ky., whose name was for a little while before the world as a reverend champion of Sabbath desecration, has made, we suppose, his exit from the scene. His Presbytery condemned his teachings as heretical and enjoined him from repeating them, whereupon he withdrew from the Presbytery. The sentence seems mild enough, in all conscience, but our Northern brethren seem to understand how to squelch incipient martyrdom. They haven't sacrificed Mr. Moore, they stood aside merely, and let him do the work for himself.

The editors and proprietors of the Central Presbyterian, who certainly intended no injustice to us, refer to our note in last issue in regard to the matter of delayed copy. As they think our note may be construed into injustice to them we give their explanation: "We got the report only in time to give to the compositors on Saturday. It was sent to you by the first mail after it was put in type. We are not responsible for any delay."

A friend informs us that on the occasion of the joint debate of the Literary societies of Bingham school, the Debater's medal for 1879 was awarded to cadet Jesse B. Hawes of Wilmington. The occasion was highly enjoyable. Gen. J. M. Leach delivered the presentation address. The Young Men's Christian Association of the school is large and efficient, and has grown so rapidly that it has been found necessary to build a new hall for their accommodation.

Our Monthly, published in the interest of the Thornwell Orphanage, at Clinton, S. C., furnishes the following:

The Presbytery of South Carolina at its recent meeting, donated some nice volumes (in the hands of its colporteurs) to the Library of the Orphanage. Many thanks, dear brethren. Our Library now numbers about 650 volumes. We greatly need interesting books of history, travel, &c. Novels are not wanted.

By the way, this seems a proper time and place to note the astonishing improvement in this pamphlet. It is now highly creditable to the Orphanage, and deserves abundant support.

A friend sends us the following clipped from the Chicago Interior, and adds: "Is there a word of truth in it? If not religious journals should not lend themselves to the propagation of hate and slander":

"President Anderson, of Rochester University, is said to be the 'Rev. Enos Martin' of Judge Tourgee's story, 'The Fool's Errand.' Dr. Anderson is quoted by the Democrat of Rochester as saying of Judge Tourgee's experiences in the South: 'One night while sitting in his house he heard the approach of men on horseback, and at once realizing the object of their visit he extinguished the lights, barricaded the doors, and prepared for a fight. He had a repeating rifle, and as the Ku-Klux rode into the yard he fired at them repeatedly, wounding two or three, and causing so much consternation that they turned and rode away, leaving part of their disguises on the ground. When he felt sure that they had gone he turned up the lamps and saw his wife standing white and motionless by his side, clenching a revolver in each hand. She understood well enough what the attack meant. Her hair was then a dark brown. When she awoke in the morning it was gray."

As to the word of truth we should think not. When an assertion, in itself incredible, is offered to the public, every opportunity should be given to verify its correctness. But the earmarks and the gnards to untruth here seem palpable enough. Why are we not told when this happened? One night is extremely indefinite; it is very like to the "once upon a time" of fairy tales. One night means in this place, very little if anything more than, not one day. And where did it happen? In the South. Ah! there was a purpose in saying "in the South;" but so far as verification goes, it might as well have stated in the world. There is no good reason for this inexactness that we can see. And then that hair so beautifully brown at night—in the morning so gray. Well! we have read of such a thing, but it was extraordinary—very. The Interior was once regarded as disposed to be just to the South. Is it going over to the party of the other part?

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters or this column.

A friend writes that at Monroe recently there were six additions to the church, and at Wadesboro two.

At the recent meeting of Concord Presbytery, Rev. P. T. Penick and Elder J. J. Summerell were elected commissioners to the General Assembly; Rev. J. M. Wharey and Elder H. C. Hamilton, alternates.

We understand that the Presbyterian church at Oxford, the pastorate of which has just been resigned by Rev. D. E. Jordan, will call Rev. J. W. Primrose.

After close of the late adjourned meeting of Orange Presbytery, a highly interesting meeting was held to discuss the state of the Church in the county of Granville. As a result an Association of elders, deacons and ministers was organized, to meet every fifth Sabbath and the day previous at the several churches. Col. James S. Amis of Oxford, was made Moderator of the first meeting, which will take place at Nutbush church, the fifth Sabbath in May. A Committee of Arrangements was appointed, and a lively and enthusiastic meeting is anticipated.

The Concord Register (May 1st) says: There has been an intense spiritual feeling manifested at Davidson College during and since the meeting of Presbytery. Last Sunday morning the Rev. L. McKinnon preached an eloquent and powerful sermon, from the text: "Is the young man Absalom safe." Rev. J. H. Thornwell and other divines, have been preaching there every day and night this week.

TARBORO AND ROCKY MOUNT.

TARBORO, N. C., April 29, '80.

Dear Brother McLaurin: We held interesting services in the new Presbyterian church at Rocky Mount last Sabbath. Two persons united with the church by certificate; several expect to unite at our next sacramental occasion, on profession of faith in Christ. We received four persons into the Tarboro church upon profession of faith on Sabbath, April 18th. There is a deep religious feeling pervading the Church and congregation at Tarboro. Several others have signified their desire to unite with the Church, and will do so at an early day. The way appears clear for the organization of a church at Scotland Neck. The people will receive the church with a great deal of warmth. There has never been before as much interest manifested in the Presbyterian Church in that neighborhood as now. We have organized very promising Sabbath Schools at Rocky Mount and at Scotland Neck. Fraternally yours,

L. H. BALDWIN.

STEELE CREEK CHURCH.

Last Sabbath closed the communion service and three days interesting meeting at Steele Creek church, in Mecklenburg Presbytery. The exercises were conducted by Rev. W. E. McIlwain of Hopewell church, N. C. and Mr. J. T. Plunkett, of Nashville Presbytery, Tenn., who was present by invitation, and preached five earnest, convincing, impressive sermons. Eight members were added to the church; five on examination, and three by certificate. Our large church building was well filled Saturday and Sabbath. The Committee of Invitation desired some expression of the congregation, as to whether they should extend their invitation to Mr. Plunkett to supply our vacant pulpit the remainder of the year; the answer was in a unanimous affirmative vote. Arrangements were made for Mr. Plunkett to return early in June as a supply, with an ultimate view of prosecuting a call for his pastoral services. A. G. N.

ADJOURNED MEETING OF ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

Presbytery met at Henderson, N. C., 28th ult. Present: Revs. D. E. Jordan, T. U. Faucette and J. W. Primrose. Raleigh 1st church and five churches of Granville were represented by elders. Rev. D. E. Jordan resigned the pastorate of Oxford church and was permitted to preach as stated supply for twelve months at Nutbush church. Revs. L. C. Vass and Samuel M. Smith were appointed to install Rev. L. H. Baldwin pastor of Rocky Mount church on the third Sabbath of May, the former to charge the pastor and the latter the people, each being alternate to either. Stated clerk was authorized by amendment to bind five or more years' minutes of Synod. It was ordered that only one annual narrative on state of religion be forwarded to Presbytery. This action was taken by Presbytery last fall, but by some means was omitted in minutes.

SHREVEPORT, LA., April 24, 1880.

Dear Presbyterian: The Presbytery of Red River has just closed a most harmonious session. The usual routine of business was transacted.

Homer was chosen as the next place of meeting.

Commissioners—Rev. W. C. Dunlap, D. D., and Thomas H. Morris principals, and Rev. A. R. Banks and J. S. Milling alternates.

Burial service for laymen was rather approved though not actually recommended.

Deacons' Reports.—The attention of sessions and deacons was called to chap. 4 article 4 of section 4, Book of Church Order.

Vacant fields.—This Presbytery could easily supply ministers desiring to change location a choice between several different places. The field south of Shreveport could, if it could get the proper man, with the committee's aid, easily raise six or seven hundred dollars for a minister. This subject of supplies gained more earnest attention from Presbytery than any other presented to that body.

Presbyterial Sermon and Essay—Rev J. Y. Allison was appointed to preach the next Presbyterial sermon on "Keeping the Sabbath." The subject for conference was "Infant Baptism," with Rev. Cyrus Harrington as essayist.

New Churches.—One of whites, in Bossier parish, and one of colored members, in the city of Shreveport, were ordered organized.

Mr. Editor, if you wish to be most kindly entertained, just visit this Presbytery when the sessions are held in Shreveport.

MISSISSIPPI PRESBYTERY.

MR. EDITOR:—The Presbytery of Mississippi met on April 22d, at Union church. Opened with a sermon by Rev. C. A. Munroe, from Matt. 10:30. Rev. G. S. Roudebush was elected moderator, and Rev. C. A. Munroe temporary clerk. Nine ministers and four ruling elders were present during the meeting.

Commissioners to the General Assembly—Rev. J. Woodbridge, of Wesson principal, and Rev. W. B. Bingham, of Hazlehurst, alternate. Ruling Elder S. H. Lambdin, of Pine Ridge, principal and C. H. Fry, of Crystal Springs, alternate. Mr. J. M. Smith a recent student of Union Seminary, and a candidate under the care of this Presbytery, was examined on his literary and theological studies and licensed to preach the Gospel. Mr. Smith is a young man of promise and it is fondly hoped that he will soon become pastor of Rodney and Bethel churches, which he has been invited to supply. Rev. G. S. Roudebush was at his own request granted a letter of dismission to the Presbytery of Tombeckbee. "Free conversation on the subject of religion" was very interesting and encouraging. Rev. J. S. Shaw was continued the evangelist of Presbytery.

The Presbytery did not entertain favorably the recommendation of the General Assembly, in regard to "diligence in collecting funds" from beneficiary candidates who have abandoned the purpose of studying for the ministry.

Rev. J. S. Shaw and Rev. D. A. Planck were appointed a committee on the desecration of the Sabbath to correspond with a similar committee appointed by the General Assembly.

Port Gibson is the place for the next meeting. C. A. M.

South Alabama.—Licentiate F. J. Brooke was dismissed to Lexington Presbytery, and Rev. R. B. McAlpine to Wilmington Presbytery. Chas. R. Jones, Sam'l O. Hall and Thos. Cumming were taken under care of Presbytery as candidates for the ministry. Rev. T. W. Hooper, D. D., and Ruling Elder W. H. Fellows were elected commissioners to the Assembly, and Rev. W. H. Richardson and Elder T. A. Hamilton alternates. J. D. McLean, R. A. Lapsley and Thomas W. Raymond were licensed, and Licentiate W. A. Slaymaker ordained. A call to Uniontown church, was placed in the hands of Rev. Dr. E. T. Baird, and calls to Fairview, Bethesda and Friendship churches were handed to Rev. W. A. Slaymaker.

Enoree.—Mr. C. L. Stewart was licensed and a call to New Harmony church put in his hands. A committee was appointed to organize a church at Piedmont. Rev. A. L. Miller and Elder C. P. Barry were elected commissioners to the Assembly.

Arkansas—Met at Walnut Ridge church, 15th of April. Rev. Geo. L. Wolfe was received from the Presbytery of West Hanover and Rev. J. T. Baker from Palmyra Presbytery. Rev. J. J. Johnson was installed pastor of Walnut Ridge church. Commissioners—Rev. D. C. Boggs, and Elder W. S. Dunlap, were elected commissioners to the Assembly; Rev. S. W. Davies, and Elder J. B. Crane, alternates.

Athens.—A. D. Chenault, M. D., desiring to enter the ministry was advised for the present to pursue a course of theological study under the direction of his pastor. Rev. W. P. Gready and Elder J. B. Estes were elected commissioners to the General Assembly, and Rev. T. P. Cleveland and Elder A. P. Houston, alternates. Eugene P. Mickel was received as a candidate for the ministry.

Dallas.—The pastoral relation between Rev. W. W. Brimm and Fort Worth church was dissolved. Rev. W. S. Johnson having resigned as evangelist of Presbytery, Rev. W. W. Brimm was appointed to that post. Rev. Dr. John S. Moore and Elder M. S. Kohle commissioners to the General Assembly, and Rev. T. W. Erwin and Elder —— Roberts alternates.

Chesapeake.—Rev. J. A. Scott, Jr., and Ruling Elder W. L. Holloway, principals, and Rev. Dr. A. W. Pitzer and Elder Chase Andrews, alternate commissioners to the General Assembly. The pastoral relation between Rev. U. McCluer and Greenwich church was dissolved and he was dismissed to West Hanover Presbytery. Rev. J. C. Painter was received from East Hanover Presbytery. Mr. J. Calvin Stewart of second Presbyterian church of Alexandria, was received under care of Presbytery as a candidate for the ministry. Mr. Wm. Chunn was licensed.

Transylvania.—Unusual interest was manifested in the work of Home Missions. Commissioners to the General Assembly, Rev. E. M. Green and Elder J. J. Wood; and alternates, Rev. T. A. Bracken and Elder C. H. Breck.

Atlanta—Rev. W. A. Dabney was dismissed to Ouachita Presbytery, and Rev. W. E. Boggs, D. D., received from Presbytery of Memphis. Mr. Harvey S. Parry was received as a candidate for the ministry. Licentiate J. T. Bruce was dismissed to Presbytery of Augusta. Rev. Henry Quigg and Elder D. D. Peden, principals, with Rev. J. L. King and Elder W. P. Inman, alternates, were elected commissioners to the General Assembly.

West Lexington.—Commissioners to the General Assembly, Rev. G. H. Rout and Ruling Elder John A. Hamilton, with Rev. E. E. Ervin and Elder John Talliaferro, alternates. Rev. W. E. Keller was received from Louisville Presbytery and order taken to install him as pastor of Springfield and Mt. Sterling churches. Mr. J. S. Van Meter was licensed to preach Gospel.

Ebenezer.—The churches of Concord and New Hope were dropped from the roll. Rev. J. T. Leonard was dismissed to the Presbytery of West Lexington. Rev. W. T. Keady was received from the Presbytery of Platte, of the Northern Presbyterian Church. Rev. L. H. Blanton and Ruling Elder D. C. Collins were elected commissioners to the General Assembly; Rev. J. A. Dickson and Ruling Elder J. P. Reese, alternates.

Indians.—A committee was appointed to visit the western wild tribes of Indians to ascertain what may be done towards supplying them with the Gospel. Rev. Allen Wright and Elder Milton Brown were elected commissioners to the Assembly; Rev. J. J. Read and Elder Solomon Goforth alternates.

Louisville.—Licentiate S. F. Taylor was received from Ebenezer Presbytery, and measures were taken to install him pastor of Beulah and of Hebron churches. Rev. C. W. Robinson was allowed to retain a call from Mizpah church for one-fourth of his time. The committee on the Sabbath reported that unusual attention had been given to the request of the Assembly's committee on the subject. A committee was appointed to visit Shiloh and disorganize the church. Rev. S. M. Neel and Rev. W. G. White, with Elders G. W. Morris and John Wandling were elected commissioners to the General Assembly; Rev. Dr. Stuart Robinson and Rev. Gilbert Gordon, with Elders W. S. Harbison and John O. Ray alternates. Rev. W. E. Keller was dismissed to the Presbytery of West Lexington.

Winchester—Mr. W. Beall was licensed and dismissed to the Presbytery of Western District. Candidate F. W. L. Pitman was dismissed to the care of the Presbytery of East Hanover. Licentiate W. C. Campbell was ordained. Commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. M. W. Woodworth, Rev. J. W. Walkup, and Ruling Elders P. W. Boyd, M. D., and S. G. Jamison, principals; and Rev. R. H. Fleming and C. W. Hollis, with Ruling Elders B. P. Newman and T. E. McCoole, alternates. The pastoral relation between Rev. C. S. Lingamfelter and the Berryville church was dissolved; and also between Rev. E. H. Crumpton and the church of Berkeley Springs. Rev. J. S. Lefevre was received from Montgomery Presbytery. A call from the church at Harper's Ferry was placed in the hands of Rev. W. C. Campbell. Rev. J. A. Armstrong announced his acceptance of the joint call from the Shepherdstown and Kearneysville churches, and arrangements were made for his installation at each place.

Nashville.—Mr. R. A. Webb was licensed to preach the Gospel. An overture to the General Assembly was adopted praying the removal of the Committee of Education to Nashville, and the appointment of the Rev. J. H. Bryson as Secretary of the Committee. Commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. Dr. T. A. Hoyt and Rev. W. B. Thompson, Elders J. B. White and James E. Wilson; Rev. J. H. Bryson, Rev. E. O. Frierson, and elders J. G. Wallace and N. W. McConnell, alternates.

IX. Critical Notices.

X. Recent Publications.

Article II. is an able defence of the General Assembly of 1879. Dr. Peck satisfactorily shows that the action of the Assembly was an illustration of that vigilance which is the price of liberty, and that devotion to constitutional law which checks centralization.

Article III. would be more interesting if it were not anonymous. There is a wonderful amount of truth in it.

Rev. Harvey Glass is piquant.

Rev. E. C. Gordon deserves thanks for a clear presentation of truly Scriptural views. These are—first, the Lord Jesus will return to the earth personally and visibly to establish his perfected Kingdom of glory. Second. Previous to this return the conversion of the entire world is not to be expected. Third. This return, with the accompaning general resurrection and judgment, will introduce immediately the final and glorious state of the Church.

We wish this article could be generally read. It is neither pre nor post-millennial. We never could see where our post-millennial friends got their idea of a general conversion of the world before the advent, nor where our pre-millennial brethren get theirs, of conversions subsequent to the second advent.

Article VII. is a review of Dr. Armstrong's work. "The sacraments of the New Testament, as instituted by Christ." The many admirers of the first part—The Doctrine of Baptisms, which has been out of print for many years, will now be able to furnish themselves. The second part on the Lord's Supper is timely in view of wide spread error and ignorance of the subject.

Article VI. is a review of W. Millar Nicholson, M. A., D.Sc. "We were much gratified to perceive that precisely the view of the word doulos and its cognates, for which Dr. Dabney was so roundly scored by a deceased minister of Canada in the pages of the Catholic Presbyterian is quietly taken by Dr. Nicholson in this volume, as will be evident from his translation "enslaved and slave," at John 8:33," etc. We may add that Canon Farrar and all others who care more for their reputation as critics than fanatics, do the same. Farrar for example reads "These men are the slaves of the most high God."

The Review should have a larger circulation, J. W. P.

DAVIDSON COLLEGE AND CONCORD PRESBYTERY.

Mr. Editor: Davidson College is in Mecklenburg county, but in the bounds of Concord Presbytery. When this Presbytery was divided a few years since, some argued that the College ought to be in Mecklenburg Presbytery, as it was located in the historic and patriotic county after which this Presbytery was called, but others thought that as Concord was the Presbytery named in the charter in which the institution was to be located, it might cause some legal difficulty to make the change. I am happy to be able to say that the College is in a very prosperous condition. The number of students is larger than for many years past. The standard of scholarship is high, the expenses moderate, the moral influence is wholesome, the temptations to idleness and vice few and weak. From what I know of the location, the ability of the faculty, and the character of the discipline, I can safely commend the institution to the enlarged patronage of an intelligent Christian public. The Presbytery of Concord met for the first time at this institution on the 22nd of April. The Presbytery was very cordially received and very hospitably entertained. Harmony prevailed and brotherly love continued. On the day after the Presbytery met there was a wagon found on the top of the main building. Rumor said that the Presbytery had thus signalized its first meeting at that place by preparing to take a place among and upon the high places of the earth; but the opinion with the Presbytery was that the students had been so stimulated by their presence that they had taxed their ingenuity to give them an ocular demonstration that they were rising in the world, and that they were determined to leave a mark in some way and in some place. The Presbytery seemed to feel their individual responsibility to supply the destitutions in their own churches, and to do what they could to send the blessed Gospel of the Son of God to the ends of the earth. The impression made by the late meeting is well expressed in the words of the Psalmist: "Behold how good and how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity." W. W. P.

NOTES FROM LINCOLNTON.

The matter of special interest at the Spring communion at Lincolnton on the fourth Sunday of April, was the preaching by Rev. Wm. B. Corbett. It is a rare thing for the pastor here to be assisted, and the messages of this beloved brother and faithful minister came to us like "the dew upon Israel." We were "hungry and thirsty" and our communion like "the dew upon Hermon," was a blessing, and we hope we received Joseph's blessing: "Blessed of the Lord be Joseph's land for the precious things of heaven, for the dew, &c." We felt good under his ministry and prayed that his "doctrine might drop as the rain and his speech distil as the dew, as the small rain upon the tender herb and as showers upon the grass."

But it is ever as the Saviour said to the little flock around him at the close of the Passover Supper: "Arise, let us go hence" to duty, in the face of temptations, trials and snares. To-day we attend us and often "in the garden a new sepulchre." Christian fellowship, life's pleasures and possessions are overshadowed sometimes by dead friendship and gnawing grief and cankering care. The pastor was summoned on Wednesday to attend the funeral of one of the oldest and most respected members of his charge. Lewis Dillinger died on the 27th of April, aged [illegible] years and 5 months. He was born, lived and died on the same farm in Lincoln county, having lived 53 years with the wife of his youth, who survives him, with three sons and one daughter. Connected with the large and substantial families of the county, his death brought to his residence that excitement which comes to every house where the angel of death is a visitor. Although "the time of the singing of birds had come, and the voice of the turtle was heard in the land," the sun made the earth warm, the seed was springing out of the ground, the lilacs perfumed the air, the plow stood in the furrow, the farmers and busy mothers and others gathered at the house of the venerable neighbor, and stood around in anxious, helpless sympathy and attended his body to the grave. Only two weeks before he was at the station early on Sunday, anxious he said, to hear his pastor once more before he left us. We find it: "The clouds return after the rain." (Eccl. xii: 2.) R. Z. J.

Lincolnton, N. C., April 30, '80.

Some weeks ago we published a hymn of six stanzas entitled "Whosoever." The hymn was phrased by Rev. J. W. Primrose and has been arranged as a chant by Prof. [illegible] Baumann. The copy has been passed to a musical friend, and is highly commended.

Rev. Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., of the Broadway Tabernacle, New York, worn out with preaching and literary work, retires from the editorial staff of the Christian at Work, for a rest of four months in Europe. The Christian at Work will continue as before under the management of J. N. Hallock, who has had the control of all departments during the past three or four years. Mr. M. H. [illegible], who has been the active managing editor for six years past, and Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, who has edited the Home and Children's Department for about the same time, remain upon the paper, together with all the old editorial staff. Also an important addition is made in the scholarly pen of Prof. Stafford Doolittle, D. D., who has for some time written the Sunday school lessons and notes, and becomes one of the editors. Mr. D. T. Moore, well known as the founder and editor-in chief, of Moore's Rural New Yorker, is now the agricultural editor and devotes his entire time to the Farm Department.

We regard the Christian at Work as one of the largest and best religious newspapers in the country.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN.

The Rev. T. R. English has accepted an invitation to supply the church at Yorkville, S. C. —Southern Presbyterian.

Items from the Christian Observer:

Rev. S. E. Axson, of Rome, Ga., on account of the determined protest of his people against his removal, has declined the call to the church at Salem, Va.

Communion services were held on Sunday, the 18th, ult, in the Presbyterian church at Lexington, Mo., Rev. Thomas Watson, of St. Charles county, assisting the pastor, Rev. G. L. Leyburn There were five additions on profession and six on certificate. On Saturday night the wind blew off a portion of the roof of the church, but the services were not seriously interrupted

The Third church, Memphis, Tenn., had its communion meeting on the April 18th. Six were added to the roll of membership—four on profession and two by letter. The pastor, Rev. E. M. Richardson was assisted by Rev. Dr. J. N. Craig of Holly Springs, Miss.

About half a dozen families of the Presbyterian church at Taylorsville, Ky., have undertaken to tithe their incomes. Under this arrangement the income of the church has increased from $704 the year previous to $1,204 this last year. The pastor has never had occasion to ask the deacons to make collection of the subscription for his support. The six families report that they find it easier to give in this way than formerly in the old way.

Sunday, the 18th, ult., was the twenty-first anniversary of Dr. Stuart Robinson's pastorate of the Second church, Louisville, Ky. On the occasion he gave an exceedingly interesting narrative of the church, its condition and its prosperity. The church now numb rs 400 communicants, and last year gave for church, benevolent and missionary purposes some $15,000 to $17,000.

MISSIONS IN EGYPT.

In contrast with the great work to be accomplished before Egypt becomes a Christian country how feeble seem to be the influences for good now in operation! And yet the day of small things is not to be despised. The leaven of the gospel has already been hidden in the mass, and silently it is working and assimilating what it touches. In the beautiful province of the Fayoum many of the young men in business or engaged in teaching, and who will soon be the leaders of public opinion, were educated at the mission school at Osiout. The boarding schools for girls here in Cairo are destined to play a still more important part.

It is in vain to educate young men if they are to marry ignorant Mohammedan women. But if the girls are taught what is really useful, and above all, if they are imbued with vital religious truth, then they not only become prepared to be at the head of the household, but the emancipation of their degraded sex in the East has begun.

In Egypt there are four Presbyterian central missionary stations, viz: at Alexandria, Cairo, Sinoris, and Osiout, and thirty-five smaller ones. These are scattered through the towns between this city and the first cataract on the Nile.—There is also a theological school for the training of native young men for the preaching of the gospel. Of the missionaries, fourteen are foreign, and four are native ordained ministers and seven native licentiates. There are also fourteen foreign and ninety-eight native teachers in charge of schools numbering in all 1,271 boys and 622 girls. His Highness, Maharajah Dhuleep Singh, makes an annual contribution of $5,000 to the Presbyterian Mission in Egypt. His wife was educated in a mission school, and he has made this contribution each year since his marriage in token of his appreciation of Christianity and of what it has done in giving him such a helpmeet. In all, his gifts have now amounted to $70,000. The last Khedive, Ismael Pasha, who took considerable interest in education, made a grant of a valuable lot to the mission station in Cairo for the erection of their new building, in the best part of the city, not far from our hotel, and near the Ezbekeyeh Square. I visited one of the female schools, and at the invitation of the teacher, asked the pupils a number of questions which were translated to them in the Arabic, as their answers were to me in English, and was delighted at the promptness and correctness of their replies. They recited for me the Lord's Prayer in concert, and sung an Arabic hymn to an old familiar tune. One of the children in this school is the daughter of a former Pasha. I am informed that there is also a very interesting Anglican mission school under the care of Miss Whateley, daughter of the late Archbishop of Dublin, to which she has devoted herself with the most praiseworthy zeal for nearly twenty years. There are Sunday morning services held in the American chapel, in the English Church, the German Protestant, the Roman Catholic, and the Orthodox Greek church, in all of which the congregations are said to be small. But with one exception this is the only public recognition of the fact that the Sabbath is a sacred day in this great city of 400,000 inhabitants. Friday being the most sacred day in the week with the Mohammedans. It is an indication, however, of the progress of new ideas even here in the stereotyped East, that the Moslem courts of justice are generally closed in Cairo on the Sabbath, in imitation of the Christian custom. —M. D. H, in Central Presbyterian.

LARGEST BOOK PUBLISHED.—The new edition of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, just issued, is believed to be, in the quantity of matter it contains, by far the largest volume published. It now contains about 118,000 words defined, and nearly 15,000 words and meanings not found in any other one dictionary. The Biographical Dictionary just added, supplies a want long felt by the reader and student, in giving the desired information so briefly. Never was any one volume so complete as an aid in getting an education.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Bibliotheca Sacra, vol. xxxvii, April, '80, W. F. Draper, Andover, Trubner & Co., London. This quarterly is characterized by the variety of its articles and their bearing upon the topics of the day; we do not know of any review which contains a greater number of articles upon current discussion of our times, or articles from authors of more established reputation than its contributors. In the number before us we have an article upon "The Duration of Future Punishment;" one on the teaching of the Scriptures concerning "The Use of Alcoholic Beverages;" another on "The Sabbath," besides these there are two very interesting papers, one on "Pascal the Thinker;" the other on "Bernard of Clairvaux as a Preacher;" both of these are very readable, particularly Prof. Cooper's on Pascal—it is worthy to be classed with Rogers' famous essay on the same illustrious subject. There is a very curious, original and striking essay on "Music, a Language;" Dr. Herrick is the author of a suggestive and instructive article entitled "A study in Biblical Biography," which is based upon the history of Samson; the metaphysical reader will turn with interest to a discussion of "Hartmann's Philosophy of the Unconscious;" and all classes of readers will enjoy the "Notices of Recent Publications," among which we single out the brief review of "Farrar's Life and Work of St. Paul;" this notice impresses us as discriminating and just, which certainly cannot be said of the majority of book notices. The publishers deserve great credit for the manner in which the Review is gotten up: the paper is good, substantial and firm, and the typography excellent. Terms $4 per annum. Address W. F. Draper, Andover, Mass.

Louisiana. By Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "That Lass o' Lowrie's," &c. $1 25. Charles Scribner's Sons. 1880.

A pleasing plot, developed in the sprightly style of Mrs. Burnett. The scene is laid in North Carolina. She is mistaken in the low estimate placed on the education of the average farmer's family; but correct as to the real capability of easy development.

Unknown Graves. Words and music by L. A. Bennett. Sent for 20 cents. J. L. Shotwell, publisher, 1,001 Main street, Richmond, Va.

Tender Words, touching the dead Southern soldier, set to simple music, and appropriate to memorial day.

North Carolina Medical Journal.—Among the contents of the April number may be found, original communications by W. C. McDuffie, M. D.; an editorial, "Eligibility to Membership in the State Medical Society;" "Selected Papers" and "Current Literature." $3 00 a year; single copies 30 cents. Published in Wilmington, N. C.

The Saviour's Converts. What we owe to them, and how we may aid them By Rev. Wm. Scribner. $1. Chas. Scribner's Sons. New York. 1880.

An eminently practical book, on a most important but neglected duty, viz: the care of recent converts. Mr. Scribner discusses the Holy Spirit's agency; Revival experience of Converts; Inducements to stimulate the people of God to help converts; Doctrinal truths which converts should apprehend clearly to have healthy growth; Christian duties, difficulties, privileges and activities, in which converts need instruction; and the attention of the early Church to catechising the young. The subjects are well and briefly handled, and the whole impression of the book must be most valuable to every considerate Christian, and tend to quicken the power of the Church.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

JOSEPH R. WILSON, Stated Clerk.
WILLIAM BROWN, Permanent Clerk.

WORKINGMEN.

Before you begin your heavy spring work after a winter of relaxation, your system needs cleansing and strengthening to prevent an attack of Ague, Billious or Spring Fever, or some other spring sickness that will unfit you for a season's work. You will save time, much sickness and great expense if you will use one bottle of Hop Bitters in your family this month. Don't wait. See other column.

Get Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners applied to those new boots or shoes before you run them over.

Our readers doubtless remember a very remarkable proposition made by Messrs Marchal & Smith, Organ Manufacturers, of New York City. The enthusiastic reception which their "New" University Organ" received from all who tried it induces them to renew their offer in this issue of our paper. The terms on which these gentlemen offer their instrument insures complete satisfaction. They not only offer a price at which it seems impossible to furnish such an Organ, but also send it on trial, and if in every respect it does not please, they remove it without cost. There is no doubt that its power, sweetness, variety and economy have made it the most popular Organ in the country.—American Christian Review.

INVALUABLE FOR RAILROAD MEN.—"I suffered for more than a year with Indigestion, and during the last six months I was very Bilious, occasionally having a dumb Chill, followed by Fevers, which prostrated me. I took Simmons Liver Regulator, and for several months I have been as stout and hearty as any man could desire to be. I am thoroughly satisfied that it is all it is recommended to be for Indigestion and Bilious Complaints, for mine was certainly a stubborn case. I have heard many of my friends speak of it, and they all agree that it possesses all the virtues you claim for it.

"A. H. HIGHTOWER, Conductor M. & W. R. R."

"Your valuable medicine has entirely cured me of the most distressed case of Dyspepsia I ever saw. I am never without it on my engine, as it always relieves me of any distressed feeling after eating. It is the best family medicine in the world, and I never let it get out at my home. In this praise you may add to this.

"J. H. MALLETT, Engineer C. R. R., Savannah, Ga."

VICTIMS of wasted energies find sure relief in AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. It is the most potent purifier and a fountain of health and strength.

GENTLEMEN—I have tried your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure for "Bright's Disease," with which I have been afflicted for the last two years, and it has done wonders for me. I believe it is the only cure known for that terrible disease, and it is with pleasure that I write this testimony in its favor. You are at liberty to use this in any way you see proper to benefit suffering humanity. Truly yours,

MARRIED.

☞No notice of a marriage or death will be inserted unless accompanied by a responsible name, which is wanted not for publication but as a guaranty of good faith.

Near Bostick's Mills, in Richmond county, N. C., Feb. 25th, at residence of the bride's mother by the Rev. W. M. Bostick, Mr. D. A. McRAE and Miss AMANDA L. BOSTICK.

DIED.

☞Obituary notices must be paid for in advance The first ten lines are inserted free. The excess over ten lines is charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. Correspondents can ascertain what an obituary will cost by counting eight words to a line, and multiplying each line by ten cents

In Robeson county, N. C., April 19th, 1880, Miss CATHARINE J. CAMPBELL, daughter of the late Archibald Campbell.

She was an amiable and pious young lady—a member of Antioch church.

In the same congregation, April 20th, 1880, JOSEPH A. CURRIE, son of Alexander H. Currie, Esq., in the 35th year of his age.

He was for several years a devoted and consistent member of the Church.

In Robeson county, on Sabbath evening, April 18th, 1880, Mr. MURDOCH McLEAN, aged about 33 years, was suddenly called from time to eternity. It is supposed that his death was caused by apoplexy.

He leaves a widowed and aged mother and an only brother, together with many friends, to mourn over his sudden and unexpected departure. "Boast not thyself of to-morrow, for thou knowest not what a day may bring forth."

On the 22d of April, 1880, at her home in Monroe, N. C., in the 43d year of her age, Mrs. MINNIE REESE WALKUP, wife of the lamented Gen. S. H. Walkup, who a few years ago preceded her to the grave.

Mrs. Walkup was born in the county of Mecklenburg, in the community of Big Steele Creek church. She was raised in the lap of Presbyterianism, and as a consequence she carried the doctrine of her Church with her, to her new home, where there were but few of her way, and through life. The church of her birth was the church of her choice, the church of her practice, the church of her life, and its doctrine setting God as a guide even unto death sustained her in that trying hour.

Mrs. Walkup was a good woman; and we mean by this not an empty sound, but that she as a daughter, sister, wife, mother and christian, discharged her duties well. Our little church, which suffered so severely the loss of her husband, will also feel her loss. At prayer meetings, Sabbath service and the meetings of the Ladies' Aid Society, she was punctual. We will miss her, but our loss is nothing to her eternal gain. Her pastor, reading to her one of her favorite chapters (Rom. v.), of the peace of the believer, she said, "I have that peace;" and on another occasion, in speaking of the rest that remaineth for the people of God, she exclaimed, "Sweet rest! Sweet rest!"

Mrs. Walkup leaves five orphan girls. She had the satisfaction of seeing two at the years of discretion embrace the Saviour, and doubtless the others will at the proper age do likewise. To these fatherless and motherless lambs we would say be ye comforted, for God causeth all things to work together for the good of his chosen. Cast thy burden upon the Lord, he will sustain thee. When father and mother forsake, then the Lord will take up his precious children. He is a Helper of the fatherless; he is a Father of the fatherless; He relieveth the fatherless.

Children take the Saviour as the man of your counsel, and as the guide of your feet, and rest assured that in life and in death he will preserve thee from every sin, and at death open high heaven's portal, and greet you each within.

Mrs. REBECCA CATHERINE POTTS, daughter of Alexander Torrence, Esq., long an elder at Centre church, was born 26th September, 1819, was married to the late William Graham Potts 14th February, 1839, fell asleep in Jesus 23d March, 1880.

Mrs. Potts' life was a busy one. Besides being the mother of thirteen children, of whom eleven reached maturity and nine survive to bless her memory, she successfully discharged the duties of mistress of a large family of slaves up to their emancipation.

Forty years ago she professed her faith in Christ, and during all these years her humble, cheerful, charitable, dutiful walk testified to the sincerity of her profession.

It was, however, during the long, tedious illness that preceded her death that the beauty of her character shone out with peculiar attractions. So patient, so gentle, so forgetful of self, so thoughtful of the comfort and health of others, so simple in her faith in him, "whose promises," as she said "we have no reason to distrust," we may well believe that such a life and such a death were the fruit of the spirit of Christ.

Her remains rest in the cemetery of Bethel church, Concord Presbytery. PASTOR.

At Danville, Va., April 24th, 1880, JEFFERSON D. WALKER, the devoted son of Garrison Walker, of North Carolina, leaving to mourn their loss his father, mother, six brothers and three sisters.

He was born, as his name would suggest, April 20, 1861, just in time for older brothers to embrace him and hasten to the cry of war. He made a bright profession of his faith in Christ at the time of that most extraordinary outpouring of God's spirit at Cross-Roads church in 1874, at which time his whole family, with many others as we trust, became householders of faith. His amiable disposition, true piety, firmness of character and truthfulness (for the writer has never known a falsehood to fall from his lips), endeared him to his parents, relatives, employers and all with whom he had to do. But alas! this mortal life, with all its bright prospects of future usefulness, has closed. The Master, in his mysterious but all-wise providence, has called him from the busy throng of the earthly city which had been his home to that city which hath foundations, whose Maker and Builder is God.

The deep interest of friends was manifest in their daily visitation and activity in preparing and transporting his mortal remains to Cross-Roads church, where after a funeral service by the beloved pastor, he was laid by a sister who has been asleep in Jesus for thirty years. Let the same good people who so earnestly prayed that he might be restored to health, now pray for his mourning parents and relatives. We mourn, but not as those that have no hope.

The Lord redeemeth the soul of his servants; and none of them that trust in Him shall be desolate. (Ps. xxxiv: 22.) O. W. L. H.

TRIBUTES OF RESPECT.

The Session of Grassy Creek church is deeply moved in having to record the death of our beloved brother, ALEXANDER COOPER, who was admitted to the communion of this church in 1840, and ordained an elder thereof in 1851. To our struggling church his loss seems irreparable. But it becomes us to bow in reverent submission and trust to the will of Him who doeth all things well. We bear cheerful testimony to the earnest zeal of Mr. Cooper for the cause of Christ; to his uniform christian walk and conversation, his liberality, his inflexible adherence to what he believed right, as well as the gentle and tender graces of the Spirit, which so conspicuously shined in his life.

Resolved, That the pastor of this church be requested to preach his funeral sermon from the pulpit of the church he loved so well on the 3d Sabbath of May.

Resolved, That this minute be entered on our Session book.

Resolved, That a copy be forwarded to the bereaved widow and aged mother of our deceased brother; and also, for publication, to the Oxford Free Lance and NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN.

G. A. WILSON,
T. L. SHOTWELL,
WM. R. DANIEL,
JOHN W. PRIMROSE, } Session.

At a joint meeting of the Elders and Deacons of the First Presbyterian Church of Salisbury, held on the 17th of April, 1880, the following preamble and resolutions, introduced by Theo. F. Kluttz, were unanimously adopted.

Whereas, It hath pleased the great Head of the Church to remove by death our brother office-bearer, JOHN D. BROWN,

Resolved, That in his death his family has lost a most affectionate and provident father, husband and brother; the community an upright citizen and the church one of its most faithful and consistent members.

Resolved, That it is a pleasure to us to bear testimony to his sterling worth in all the relations of life, and particularly as a deacon of this church for many years, in which capacity he was ever foremost in the discharge of duty and always faithful to every trust committed to him.

Resolved, That we will cherish his memory and emulate his example in the hope that when the last summons comes it may find each one of us, as it found him, panoplied in the full armor of faith. We thank God for his life and we have hope in his death, for he "used the office of deacon well and purchased to himself a good degree and great boldness in the faith."

Resolved, That we tender to his sorely stricken family our sincere sympathies, and pray that the consolations of our holy religion may be vouchsafed to them.

Resolved, That these expressions of our regard be spread upon the minute book, and that copies of the same be furnished the family of our departed brother, and also to the Carolina Watchman and NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN for publication.

J. M. HORAH, Secretary of Deacons.

FOR THE FAMILY.

Fallen Flowers.

One of the workers of the world
  Living toiled and toiling died;
But others worked and the world went on,
And was not changed when he was gone,
A strong arm stricken, a wide sail furled;
  And only a few men sighed.

One of the heroes of the world
  Fought to conquer, then fought to fall,
  And fell down slain in his blood-stained mail,
And over his form they slept;
His cause was lost and his banner furled;
And only a woman wept.

One of the singers among mankind
  Sang healing songs from an o'erwrought heart;
But ere men listened the grass and wind
Were wasting the rest unsung like a wave;
  And now of his fame that will ne'er depart
He has never heard in h's grave.

One of the women who only love
  Loved and grieved and faded way—
Ah me! are these gone to the God above,
  What more of each can I say?
They are human flowers that flower and fall,
This is the song and the end of them all.

—The Athenæum.

"Wasn't it Lucky."

"We've got a holiday—a holiday! I shall have a jolly day—a jolly day!"

That's what Charlie Bonson said, as he came with a hop, skip, and jump into his mother's cottage one bright September morning, flung up his cap as high as the ceiling, and cut a few curious capers on the floor. Widow Bonson, who had sent her son off to school, washed, brushed, and as neat as a new pin not an hour before, was quite surprised to see him return so soon.

"A holiday, Charlie?" said she. "Why, how is that?"

"Why the tall chimney on the roof of Mr. Roantree's flour-mills was blown down by the storm last night, and fell right through to the school room floor: Wasn't it a lucky chance, mother, that it happened in the night time? Teacher says if it had fallen in school-hours it would have killed some of us, for the bricks are all in heaps just where we sit."

Widow Bonson looked at her son, a bright, curly-haired, blue-eyed little fellow, some nine summers old, and her eyes filled with tears as she thought of the goodness of God in sparing her and other loving mothers such a dreadful calamity as that.

"Charlie, my boy," said she, "do you think it was 'luck' and 'chance' that saved my little son from a great peril and his mother from many bitter tears? When I stood at the door yesterday morning and watched you running off to school, swinging your satchel round your head, and singing,

'Mother, mother, darling mother.
Never was there such another:'

I said—no, I prayed—'God bless my boy, and bring him safe home again!' I did the same thing this morning when you went away. Charlie, I think it was a kind providence of God that ordered it so that the dreadful crash came when nobody could be hurt. You call it 'luck'; I call it love. You call it 'chance'; I call it an answered prayer, and I am going to thank God for his goodness in sparing my little boy."

"Well, but, mother, you know it just HAPPENED to fall when we weren't there. I can't feel as though God had anything to do with it. If it had fallen when we were there, would God have kept it from hurting us?"

"He might have done that, my dear. Nothing can HAPPEN, as you call it, without his knowledge and permission, not even the falling of a sparrow, and I like to think that our Father in heaven is always near. You know that you read to me last night, 'the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him and delivereth them.' Charlie, my boy, let us always ask God's blessing and his care."

Charlie did not say any more. But he did what was quite as good—rather better, according to my thinking—for he thought a great deal about it, and that was just what his mother wanted, you know.

As Widow Bonson and her boy were sitting at dinner, Charlie asked and obtained permission to go to Brockley Wood, which was not far off, to gather blackberries.

"I will bring you some beauties, mother, for your tea," said Charlie. And I say bless him and every other boy in the world who takes care to bring the "beauties," whatever they may be, to his mother.

"Thank you, my dear," said his mother with a smile; "only come back safe yourself. Don't go climbing now, or getting into dangerous places."

"Oh, never fear, mother; I'll take care of myself," quoth Master Charlie, quite confidently.

"And I'll ask our heavenly Father to take care of you," said his mother; "that is the best of all."

Charlie Bonson had quite an idea that his mother need not trouble to do that—"as though I were a little baby and wanted a nurse," thought he. "I can take care of myself"

Away he went to Brockley Wood, swinging the little basket in which he meant to bring the "beauties," over his head, and whistling as merrily as a healthy school-boy ought to do, especially when he's out for a holiday. He found blackberries very plentiful and "beauties" into the bargain and in helping himself to his dessert he had a fine time of it. That business fairly done, Charlie amused himself by watching a couple of squirrels; then a splendid butterfly engaged his notice; then out came his pocket-knife, and he set himself to cut off and dress a long hazel "switch"; and thus the hours of his holiday were passing pleasantly by. Charlie had not noticed that the sky in the south was growing very gloomy indeed, and that it was not until one big black pioneer cloud hid the face of the sun that he began to fear a coming storm. He hastened to fill his basket to the brim with the finest and ripest berries that he could gather. Then the rain began to fall; big, heavy drops pattered on the bramble bushes and the beech-leaves faster and faster, until Charlie was glad to take refuge under a huge spreading beech-tree, beneath whose giant boughs he was almost as dry as if he were in his mother's cottage. By-and-by loud claps of thunder, which he had heard at first rumbling in the distance, came in quick succession, and the lightning flashed and flamed half across the sky. Our little blackberry gatherer was a good deal alarmed at this, but as the rain came down in torrents, he was very thankful for the comfortable shelter of the big beech-tree.

"Charlie, Charlie! Come here."

Charlie Bonson started up from the trunk of the beech-tree against which he had been leaning, and looked this way and that to find out who had been calling him. It was a woman's voice, and at first he was half-inclined to think it was his mother's. While he was thinking about it, half uncertain what to do, he heard it again, still more in earnest.

"Charlie, Charlie! Come, be quick!"

He rushed out of his shelter, plunged through the rain, and made his way to a little hand-gate, for that was where the voice seemed to come from. There was a little cottage close by it, and at the door a pleasant-looking woman was standing.

"If you please, I'm Charlie," said the little fellow. "What did you want?"

The woman smiled as she said, "But you are not my Charlie, you know. He was in the wood somewhere, and I was calling him to come out of the rain, which he did just in time. Come inside. Why, you must be wet through. Where have you been sheltering?"

"Yonder, ma'am" said Charlie, pointing to the big beech-tree, and even while his finger was still stretched, a flash of forked lightning struck the tree, split it in two with a loud, tearing crash, and then the fire seemed to bury itself in the ground below. Both the woman and the boy stood for a few moments in silence, looking at the shattered tree. Then the woman said:

"Thank God! What a mercy I called Charlie."

Charlie Bonson burst into tears.

"O ma'am," said he, "if you hadn't called for your Charlie, my mother's Charlie would have been killed. Wasn't it—"

But Charlie couldn't say "lucky" this time. He lifted his blue eyes to the woman's, and then for a moment to the sky over head, and said almost in a whisper, "Our Father has taken care of me again."

The good woman couldn't keep the tears from her own eyes as she stroked his hair, kissed him for his mother's sake, and said,

"God is good to your mother and to you. You ought to be a good boy."

"And so I will," said Charlie; "and I will never talk about 'luck' any more as long as I live."

When the storm had passed, Charlie took his basket of blackberries and made the best of his way home. His mother was standing at the door, looking out anxiously for her little son, and her dear face lighted up with gladness when she saw him safe and sound He told her all the story of his wonderful escape. Didn't she listen with a beating heart, think you? And didn't she thank God for bringing back her boy?

"Charlie dear," said she, "you see you couldn't have 'taken care of yourself.'"

"I know, mother said Charlie," as he flung his arms around her neck, "I want you to thank our Father for taking care of me again. It isn't luck. It is because he is kind and because my mother prays."

There and then Widow Bonson and her boy knelt together, and gave God thanks for his goodness Charlie Bonson is now an old man, and has white hair, and from that day to this he has never talked about "luck" and "chance," but he loves to talk about and trust in the gracious providence of God.—Sunday at Home.

Hold of Papa's Hand.

The patter of little feet on my office floor, and a glad voice exclaiming, "Papa, I'se come to 'scort you home!" made known to me the presence of my little six-year old darling, who often came at that hour to "take me home," as she said. Soon we were going, hand in hand, on the homeward way.

"Now, papa, let's play I was a poor little blind girl, and you must let me hold your hand tight, and you must lead me along, and tell me where to stop and how to go."

So the merry blue eyes were shut tight, and we began. "Now step up, now down," and so on until we had safely arrived, and the darling was nestling in my arms, saying:

"Wasn't it nice, papa? I never peeped once."

"But," said mamma, "didn't you feel afraid you'd fall, dear?"

With a look of pure, trusting love came the answer—

"Oh, no, mamma, I had tight hold on papa's hand, and I knew he would take me safely over the hard places"—Canada Presbyterian.

TWO BONAPARTE PRINCESSES ALONE AND PENNILESS IN PARIS

A correspondent of the New Orleans Picayune, writing from Paris, says: There is scarcely a day that, if you walk in the garden of the Luxembourg you may not see an elderly and young lady walking side by side, one sad as the other, both in deep mourning, now grown rusty (it has been nine months since the death of the Prince Imperial), both bearing all those thousand and one indications of poverty which strike the observer. The elderly lady has grown fat. She had great beauty once. She has all wrinkles now, more of them furrowed by care than by time (though these are not wanting). She was famous once for her grace; she now waddles carelessly. Her elegance was town talk; she has dowdy grown. She had a palace and $30,000 once; she now lives in a miserable garret, with servants for neighbors, and she is dependent on charity for daily bread. Mother and daughter both are princesses; the daughter is a granddaughter of Letitia Bonaparte; Napoleon I., King Jerome, King Joseph, King Murat, King Louis were her great uncles; Empress Josephine, Empress Maria Louise, Queen Hortense, were her great aunts; Napoleon III. was her second cousin; and yet there are days when if you, a stranger though you are, were to offer mother and daughter a five-franc piece they would take it; if they did not they would go to bed breakfastless, dinnerless, and supperless for that day. A hard fate! Nevertheless, nobody, not even the people who give them alms, pity them. Pity is withheld, not so much because they enjoyed $30,000 annually for eighteen years without giving one thought to the rainy days (whose clouds were always visible above the horizon), but because they had a great share in bringing those rainy days on France. One is the wife, the other is the daughter, of the assassin of Victor Noir—Prince Pierre Bonaparte. Wife and daughter live in a garret, Rue de Lille. Princess Matilda gives monthly—that is, almost every month—$20; occasionally this or that Bonapartist family slip a five or two-franc piece into their hands, or invite them to breakfast or to dinner. They have no other income. The daughter, Princess Jeanne Bonaparte, is studying sculpture and engraving, with the view of being able to earn bread and board. Her brother Roland is a sub-lieutenant in the Thirty-sixth regiment of infantry; he gets occasionally $20 as a present from Prince Jerome Napoleon—you know Prince Napoleon has not a generous hand. Prince Pierre's plight is still worse; swollen by gout till scarcely to be recognized, unable to walk except with crutches, and not every week even with their aid, he sponges on the charity of an inn-keeper in Versailles, an inn-keeper and wife, both Corsicans, and idolators of the Bonapartes. He eats nothing but a Rheims biscuit soaked in wine. He never leaves the inn except to go to mass; whenever he is able to go out he hies to church and communes; he is daily visited by a Jesuit priest. If he wishes exercise he hobbles up and down the ball-room of the inn. His wife and children never go near him.

The Composer of "the Messiah."

The character and personality of the man who played so large a part in the social world of our capital during his life, and whose name has been so intimately connected with the religious and musical associations of the country for a whole century, are not difficult to estimate. Among the little touches which seem to bring the man before us, Burney ("Account of the Handel Commemoration") gives some very good ones; how, when he was pleased with the way the music was going at one of his oratorios, his enormous wig always had a certain nod or vibration; how at the close of an air, he called out "Chorus!" in a voice which Burney says was "extremely formidable" (it must be remembered that the conductor's baton was not in use in England then); how he swore at the concerts at Carlton House, if the ladies in waiting talked during the music, and how the Princess would check them, saying "Hush, hush! Handel is angry:" and, what is a pleasant story, how he scolded the Prince and Princess of Wales for being late at a concert, and "keeping all these poor people" (the performers) so long from their scholars and other concerns." A musician who could talk thus at court in those days must have had a strong individual power about him. His dealings with his recalcitrant singers have already been mentioned; but he was as autocratic with one of his poets, who complained that Handel's music did not suit the words he had written, but only got for satisfaction, "Den de worst is bat." When setting words from the Bible he usually preferred to make his own selection, (though this was not the case in the 'Messiah'') and there is evidence in some remarks which are recorded of him in regard to his sacred compositions, that, in spite of the rapid and business-like way in which his oratorios were produced, and the fact that some of the choruses which have been regarded as most intensely expressive of the words, were really rifaccimenti from his old opera and harpsichord music, others of these were the offspring of very deep feeling in his own mind, and were genuine expressions of religious fervor.—Fortnightly Review.

Story of a Highlander.

It has been said, that of all the sciences it is a difficult task to make a Highlander understand the value of mineralogy; there is some sense in astronomy; it means the guidance of the stars in aid of navigation; there is sense in chemistry, it is connected with dyeing and other arts; but "chopping-off bits of the rocks," that is a mystery. A shepherd was sitting in a Highland inn, and he communicated to another his experiences with "one of thae mad Englishmen." "There was one," said he, "who gave me his bag to carry, by a short cut, across the hills to his inn, while he took the other road. Eh! it was dreadfully heavy, and, when I got out of his sight, I determined to see what was in it, for I wondered at the unco weight of the thing; and man! its no use for you to guess what was in that bag, for you'd ne'er find out. It was stones.' "Stones," said his companion, opening his eyes, "stones!' "Ay, just stones." "Well, that beats all I ever knew or heard of them. And did you carry it?' "Carry it! Man do ye think I was as mad as himself? Nae! Nae! I emptied them all out, but I filled the bag again from the cairn near the house, and I gave him good measure for his money."—Scottish American Journal.

The Thistle of Scotland.

The thistle is the national badge of Scotland. How it came to be so is told in the following story: Once during an invasion of Scotland by the Danes, they arranged to surprise the Scottish army. It was not considered fair or warlike to attack an enemy in the darkness of the night. So they resolved to march barefooted, that their tramp might not be heard Silently, slowly, but steadily they drew nearer and nearer to the Scottish camp. In a few minutes the surprise would have been complete. Suddenly a loud cry of pain rang through the air, startling both invader and invaded. The Scots sprang to their feet, seized their weapons, charged upon their foe, and defeated them with great slaughter. The cry that saved them came from one of the Danish soldiers, who with his bare foot had trod on a thistle!

A Russian Richelieu.

HOW GORTSCHAKOFF CLIMBED TO POWER AND RELINQUISHED AT LAST HIS SCEPTRE.

The closing scenes of Prince Gortschakoff's life have been full of pathos. Neglected by all but the Czar, the once loved statesman has been constantly reminded that he has outlived his usefulness, and that younger men are anxiously awaiting to succeed him. Too old for his daily walks in the gardens of St Petersburg, too blind to play whist, too enfeebled in memory to recall his favorite quotations from Horace or Catullus, the venerable diplomatist has seen the tide of democracy rise on all sides of him and sweep away every ambition of his long career. The darling of his old age, "ma neice, Mme. Akimfeff," whose name was every moment on her uncle's lips, left him with the Duke von Leuchtenberg, and made him break his pledged word to the Emperor that the alliance was the invention of evil tongues. His son, Michael, whose career the old man had so fondly watched, had long been the scourge of the Berlin embassy, and became, in the eyes of the world, the by-word of Russian nepotism. Schouvaloff, Walujieff and Ignatieff were fighting for his place. The popularity he won in 1863 was forgotten. Yet he has still clung to office, and the Emperor is not the man to remind so faithful a servant that his days are numbered. For Prince Gortschakoff's presence has always served to remind the Czar of the last vanishing glories of the highest Russian society. Like his friend and schoolfellow, the poet Pushkin, the Prince is a cultivated man in the full sense of the word, and possesses information on all that belongs to the educational requirements of his time. In everything that he has written, said or done he has betrayed himself an aristocrat by birth and mind, and whoever has studied his fine features knows that he has thought rather than enjoyed, and that when he has enjoyed he has treated life like an artist. He has always had a liking for old-fashioned attire, a predilection for high cravats and heavy velvet waistcoats, as though to show that a man who is to rule his fellow-men must be independent of fashion, and may indulge the humors of his tastes and his mature years. A gentleman in the smallest relations of life, the Prince has been advantageously distinguished both outwardly and inwardly, from the insolence of the old school of Russian dandies and the roughness of the new school of Russian philosophers. This is not, perhaps, the sort of praise that should be accorded to one who has stood so prominently before the world as Prince Gortschakoff, but it marks the side of his character which endears him to the Czar, and makes him almost the last representative of the forms and good traditions of an age which is rapidly fading away.

Operations at the State Fish Hatchery, at Avoca, on Albemarle Sound, are progressing with unexampled rapidity and success. Never before have they been conducted on so large a scale at this season. Last Friday Mr. Worth reports that 500,000 shad eggs were taken. Up to that date, 7,500,000 eggs had been secured. The hatching operations have also been very successful. On an average about 90 per cent. of the eggs hatch. The work of stocking the streams, already begun, will be continued until many millions of the young fry have been placed in them.—Raleigh Observer.

The young Chinaman who is getting an education at Andover, at the expense of the Chinese Government, was reported for neglect of duty. The reply came: "Send him home, and we will behead him.' Quite pleasant for John.

A lecturer on optics, in explaining the mechanism of the organ of vision, remarked, "Let any man gaze closely into his wife's eye, and he will see himself looking so exceedingly small that"—here the lecturer's voice was drowned by the shouts of laughter and applause which greeted this scientific remark.

An Irishman travelling in a street that was paved, was met by a dog with a threatening growl. The traveller attempted to pull up one of the paving-stones to throw at him, but it was fast "Arrah," said Paddy "what a country is this, where stones are tied, and dogs let loose!'

THE TIDY HOUSEWIFE.

The careful tidy housewife, when she is giving her house its spring cleaning, should bear in mind that the dear inmates of her house are more precious than houses, and that their systems need cleansing by purifying the blood, regulating the stomach and bowels to prevent and cure the diseases arising from spring malaria and miasma, and she should know that there is nothing that will do it so perfectly and surely as Hop Bitters, the purest and best of all medicines. AYER'S
Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach and Breath, Dizziness, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Tumors, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Gout, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these PILLS are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.

ABSTRACT OF THE MINUTES OF CONCORD PRESBYTERY.

Concord Presbytery met at Davidson College on the 22d ult., and adjourned Saturday evening, the 24th. Rev. J. M. Wharey, last moderator, preached the opening sermon from Psalms cxxxviii: 2. Present 19 ministers and 9 ruling elders.

Rev. J. A. Ramsay was chosen moderator and Rev. R. W. Boyd and Ruling Elder J. G. Hall temporary clerk.

The corresponding members present and invited to sit with us were Revs. S. H. Chester, M. R. Kirkpatrick, W. W. Pharr and Prof. J. F. Latimere of Mecklenburg Presbytery, and visiting member Rev. W. P. Williams of the M. E. Church South.

Rev. W. A. Wood, from the committee appointed thereto, reported the organization of a church (Clio) in Iredell county, with 26 members, two ruling elders and one deacon.

The usual standing committees were appointed by the moderator.

Rev. P. T. Penick and Dr. J. J. Summerell, ruling elder of Salisbury, were appointed as commissioners to the next General Assembly, and Rev. J. M. Wharey and H. C. Hamilton, ruling elder of Lenoir, their alternates.

Rev. L. K. Glasgow was nominated as moderator for the next regular meeting of Presbytery.

A call from the Camden church, S. C., for pastoral services of Rev. R. B. Anderson was read. The commissioner from said church and the representative of the Morganton church were heard pro and con touching the grounds of his removal. And while the Presbytery did not think it best officially to decide the matter but put the call into his hands, the sense of the Presbytery was clearly ascertained is opposed or unfavorable to his removal in view of the important field he is occupying, and the important and efficient work he is doing therein.

A call for the pastoral services of Rev. T. G. Thurston to the Taylorsville church was read, put into his hands and accepted, whereupon Revs. W. A. Wood, D. D., and P. P. Winn were appointed to install him pastor of said church, the former to preside and deliver the charge to the pastor and the latter to charge the people.

The following, recommended by the Sustentation Committee, was adopted:

Resolved, 1. That a committee consisting of Rev. W. A. Wood, D. D., Rev. P. P. Winn and J. G. Hall be appointed to take charge of evangelistic work in the western part of the Presbytery: that they secure an evangelist to concentrate his labors chiefly at two or more of the most promising points beyond the Ridge, and that they raise the funds for his support in all the churches of the Presbytery except those in Cabarrus county and the Salisbury church, and the evangelist's salary be not exceeding $600 per annum.

2. That Rev. J. M. Wharey, Rev. L. McKinnon and M. W. Johnston be appointed as a committee to take charge of evangelistic work in the eastern part of the Presbytery, to procure an evangelist and raise funds for his support in the churches of Cabarrus county and in the church of Salisbury.

3. That Rev. J. H. Colton visit Prospect and Fifth Creek churches and hold communion services.

That Revs. T. G. Thurston and R. B. Anderson be directed to look up some favorable points in Catawba county and see that religious services are occasionally held at such points.

The assessment of the churches for the commissioner's or presbyterial fund was read and the following adopted as the present assessment: Back Creek $10, Bethany $9, Bethel $9, Bethesda $9, Bethphage $13, Clio $9, Centre $13, D. College $11, Concord $14, Concord town $35, Drusilla $1, Fifth Creek $9, Franklin $12, Hickory $5, Lenoir $10, Marion $5, Mocksville $6, Morganton $15, Mooresville $9, Newton $7, Poplar Tent $25, Prospect $17, Rocky River $35, Tabor $1, Salisbury $35, Shiloh $3, Statesville $35, Sharon $5, Tabor $3, Taylorsville $8, Third Creek $12, Thyatira $12, Unity $12, Wilkesboro $3, Zion $2, Norwood $2.

Rev. J. H. Colton made report of his labors at Drusilla, Rev. B. L. Beall of his missionary work around Lenoir, Rev. J. H. Thornwell of his evangelistic work in Stanly county, and J. C. Kennedy, licentiate, of his labors since the last meeting of Presbytery.

The name of the Jefferson church was stricken from the roll and the names of the members ordered to be transferred to Wilkesboro church.

By order of Presbytery Rev. J. Rumple preached a sermon on Presbyterial Oversight; text 1 Pet. v: 1-4.

The following was adopted:

Whereas, the Rev. J. W. Davis, a member of this Presbytery and a missionary of our Church in Soochow, China, has made an appeal to the churches of our Synod to raise the sum of $1,000 with which to purchase a permanent location for a mission chapel and erect a chapel thereon, therefore Resolved, 1. That the churches of Concord Presbytery be urged to raise at once the sum of $200 for this purpose.

2. That the pastors and stated supplies and sessions of vacant churches be instructed to commend this important object to our people and take up collections as soon as possible.

The following, recommended by the committee on presbyterial oversight, was adopted:

Resolved, 1. That to the list of questions in our presbyterial report, the question be added, Is your session faithful in administering discipline?

2. That each minister be required to make to Presbytery a verbal report of his work at each fall meeting.

The following, recommended by the committee to co-operate with the General Assembly's committee on Sabbath observance, was adopted:

Resolved, 1. That all our preachers should exert themselves to preach and circulate papers and documents, such as the Sabbath Manual of the A. T. Society, and especially the essay of Rev. James Stacy, D. D., published by our committee at Richmond, the International Sabbath Reporter.

2. That at least one sermon each year be preached in every church on some point connected with this subject.

3. That one sermon next fall, by previous appointment, be preached before Presbytery.

4. That a brief statement of the action of our ecclesiastical bodies some of which are very strong papers, be published in a form to show all our people what has been done formerly.

Rev. P. T. Penick was appointed to preach on Sabbath observance at the next fall meeting.

Newton was chosen as the place and Thursday before the first Sabbath of October, 7 o'clock p. m., as the time for the next regular meeting of this Presbytery.

Revs. R. W. Boyd, P. T. Penick and Prof. J. R. Blake were appointed a committee to confer with a like committee appointed by Mecklenburg Presbytery, and arrange, if practicable and agreeable, for carrying on the work of colportage in the bounds of the two Presbyteries by co-operation.

The narratives from the following churches were approved without exceptions: Back Creek, Prospect, Taylorsville, Statesville, Thyatira, Salisbury, Unity, Mooresville, Morganton, Wilkesboro, Mocksville, Poplar Tent, Siloam, Marion, Third Creek, Centre, Bethphage, Bethel and Davidson College. The following with exceptions: Clio, Concord (Iredell), Concord town, Zion, Newton, Hickory, Drusilla, Bethany, Lenoir, Shiloh, Franklin, Bethesda, Fifth Creek, Norwood, Tabor.

Rev. A. D. Hepburn, D. D., was directed to preach one Sabbath at Mooresville in the absence of the pastor to the General Assembly. J. N. H. Summerell, licentiate, was granted permission to labor outside the bounds of this Presbytery. Rev. B. L. Beall was directed to visit Catawba Station and preach there. H. W. Flinn, licentiate, was transferred at his request to Tombeckbee Presbytery, Miss.

Leave was granted Clio and Shiloh churches to employ Rev. P. P. Winn as stated supply for the present year: Third Creek and Bethesda, Rev. A. L. Crawford, and Zion, Rev. L. McKinnon.

The various reports required were made and ordered to be forwarded to the General Assembly.

The following was adopted:

Resolved, That the thanks of this body are due to this community and more especially the citizens of Davidson College, for the generous hospitality which has been extended to the members thereof, during its meeting now closing, to the Faculty of the College itself for much kindly interest, accommodation and labor bestowed, to the Christian spirit in which other communions have mingled with us, to the various railroads for accommodations extended; to one and all Concord Presbytery expresses gratitude and thankfulness.

Presbytery then adjourned after the usual form.

NOTHING THE MATTER.

Why should any doctor pronounce any patient dangerously ill unless there are some alarming symptoms? Especially would it be wrong to do so while the pulse is strong and the appetite good. So, there must be doubtful propriety in making so much ado about the short comings of the Presbyterian Church in North Carolina.

If there were weaknesses and failures in the management of my family affairs, I would not allow one of my children to talk of it on the streets and highways. The better plan would be to discuss the matter around the fireside—far better to talk of it at home. Many persons have been troubled at the tone of the late discussion in the PRESBYTERIAN. One and another asks, "Why is it that our Church is losing ground in our State?" It is true that the writers do not say so, but they are so understood by many. And the result is that many are discouraged.

I once heard of a number of philosophers who met and earnestly discussed the question "why is it that a fish placed in a tub of water will not force the water out of the tub?" After many and learned arguments in all directions, a little man rose and said that he would like to make the experiment before he made his speech. The test was applied and it was found that the fish did make the water run over. So it seems to me, we had better not discuss so long and so earnestly "what is the matter," until it is shown that something is the matter.

During the last twenty years, Orange Presbytery has organized twenty-two new churches and has built more than that number of new houses and, no doubt, the other Presbyteries have done as well or better. During the same time our Presbyteries have grown from three to five, and the probability is that we shall soon have six. We have not grown in numbers quite as fast as some others, but we have gone forward with a strong and vigorous step. Numbers do not always give strength and influence. I would not detract one iota from the laurels which our sister churches have won. I rejoice at their prosperity. But then when we count the Associate Reformed and the German Reformed, &c., who are with us in doctrine and polity, we are by no means a contemptible body. If they had not been among us, we should now have their large and respectable churches numbered with ours.

And then too, look at the schools in the State—male and female, and colleges. We have as many and as good as any other Church among us. I will not say we have more and better, for that might be regarded as offensive. A few years ago we did far more to send the Gospel abroad than any denomination in the State. I do not know exactly how it is now. We are not behind at any rate.

Our Church is a power in North Carolina—a power intellectually, morally, and in numbers. If we were looking for numbers, we could easily have them. All that need be done would be to pull down the fence a little lower. I do not say that other denominations have done this—I do not profess to know. But I do know that since I have been a minister I could have brought many—very many—more into the Church by making the terms more easy.

Our doctrine and polity are good and scriptural; let us work it right and all will be well. Wisdom says look before you—not behind. If you do you may stumble and fall. Once upon a time some boys concluded to play a prank upon a fellow-student. The boy was in good health. One would go up and say, "how badly you look, how long have you been sick?" And another would say, "you appear to have been very sick, how you have fallen off, &c." Thus they persevered from day to-day until the poor fellow did become sick and died. So the account goes on. Again I say, let us gird on the armor afresh and strike many and manly blows for our blessed Master. I do not believe that the patient is sick. I am opposed to sending for the doctor. Especially is it dangerous to prescribe so many kinds of medicine. This good old Ship of Zion has landed many thousand and can land as many more.

EDUCATION IN NORTH CAROLINA.

Mr. Editor: This was the subject of editorial remark in the PRESBYTERIAN a week or two since—a subject always of great interest, and especially at the present time in relation to the Public School System of our State.

While we agree, in the main, with the views and opinions expressed in the editorial, we think also it does injustice indirectly, and of course, unintentionally, to the history of this whole matter of Public Instruction in North Carolina; and by implication at least ignores the credit which is due to our venerable mother, and particularly to those of her sons to the manor born, with whom that history is intimately connected. Whatever may be the defects of the System of Public Education presently in operation; and however desirable to have them removed; and to find the man for the hour and the need, it still remains undeniably true that measurable success has attended this enterprize in the past, and beneficent results, both moral and material, have been in some appreciable degree realized. That there has not been the "veriest trifling" in the matter on the part of the venerable mother; and that the efforts and energies of a few of her patriotic and live men in inaugurating and sustaining this important public institution have not been "futile," it seems to us is demonstrated by the fact that before the war North Carolina was acknowledged to be in the van of educational progress, not only by her Southern neighbors, but at the North as well, and in New England at that, as may be easily shown by reference to the best authorities for educational statistics in the years 1859-'60. With the exception perhaps of Delaware no other Southern State made any pretentions whatsoever to a system of common schools.

At the breaking out of the war North Carolina had such a system in full operation as to become the model for similar systems both in Virginia and Georgia. She had a school fund of $2,000,000, the interest on which, together with the proceeds of a special tax, amounting in all to a sum ranging from $250,000 to $300,000 was amply sufficient for the support of the schools. This fund was all lost by the general breaking up of the banks of the State at the close of the war. It was, however, preserved intact during the progress of the war, notwithstanding the most strenuous efforts made in the Legislature to confiscate it to war purposes. Not a school was closed in all that dark and trying period; at any rate, not from any want of money or text books or through any stopping of the machinery of the system. These results—and they are surely very honorable to the State when, if we recollect aright, not another Southern State and but few Northern ones, could exhibit a similar record—were mainly due to the faithful, manly and patriotic exertions of such men as the then State Superintendent of Common Schools, Mr. C. H. Wiley, and ex-Governor Morehead. Again, after the war the former of these gentlemen ably seconded by Gov. Worth in the teeth of opposition and prejudice, and in spite of the general apathy, began the labor of setting the common schools on their feet again. The beginning was made with getting a fund of $300,000 for this purpose, and a liberal policy adopted in reference to the education of freedmen. What misfortune attended this renewed effort under the gravest difficulties we all know. Alien hands obtained the power and the money, and once more was the work retarded, which, had the State been left alone to prosecute according to the genius of her people and institutions, might today have been on a secure basis in the interest and affections of the people, as well as financially; and more wisely and efficiently administered.

But the misfortunes of the present should not cause us to forget what has been, nor to lose sight of the men who have proven themselves wise, able, and efficient leaders in this important public enterprise, (See Moore's School History of North Carolina, pp. 236 and 238.)

For one, we are free to say that we also know of one son North Carolina has, who has been tried, and who can bring varied information and a ripe experience in addition to all the qualifications required of a Superintendent of Public Instruction, and who, as he helped to do once before, could now again lead the good Old North State into the van of educational progress.

HOWE.

TRUSTING GOD.

Whoever plants a leaf beneath the sod
And waits to see it push away the clod,
He trusts in God.

Whoever says, when clouds are in the sky,
"Be patient, heart, light breaketh by and by,"
He trusts in God.

Whoever sees 'neath winter's field of snow.
The silent harvest of the future grow,
God's power must know.

Whoever lies down on his couch to sleep,
Content to lock each sense in slumber deep,
Knows God will keep.

Whoever says "to-morrow," "the unknown,"
"The future," trusts unto that power alone
He dares disown.

The heart that looks on when the eyelids close,
And dares to live when life has only woes,
God's comfort knows.

FAMILY FEELING IN THE CHURCH.

A pastor whose congregation is, happily, made up of rich and poor, remarked of late that the prevailing feeling among them seemed to be that of a family. There is certainly no more beautiful conception touching a community of believers than that of "the household of faith," "the household of God," etc.; but how rare to find this family feeling in the church! The want of sympathy between the rich and and poor, the rivalry and estrangement among the richer sort, the general indifference to strangers, not to say indifference to everybody outside of a favored circle, the spirit of faction which not unfrequently divides a church into wrangling members and hostile camps, but too often make the family feeling in the church about the last thing to be found, not to say the last to be hoped for. By so much the Church is a sad perversion, equally unattractive and unenjoyable. There is many a church in which things are so uncongenial and discordant, or at least so cold and repelling, that many a Christian finds in it nothing whatever answering to home life. Not a few have been driven almost to sheer unbelief because the disagreement of saints appears to be so much greater than their communion. At this moment the church at large needs to cultivate nothing so much as that spirit of the household which makes the Christian feel at home. Seeing there are ten thousand reasons for which they fly from the world and become allied to the Church, it is hardly less than a crime when, not without reason, they are so disappointed in the Church that they are ever and again tempted to go back to the world.—Churchman.

LIVES OF BEAUTY.

The longer I live, the more fully do I appreciate a certain style of life that is quiet, but full of self-sacrifice, retiring but patient, peaceable and steadfast. Such lives make so little stir by the side of the noisy, demonstrative goodness of others, that they are not apt to be properly valued until they are gone. When you stand above the dead hands so thin and white, closed forever on some little bud put into them, then—how you miss something, not a noise, not a bustle, but a great work, a useful life. It is one silence that makes another silence appreciated. It is the hush of death, that you miss and value that life that went about with such noiseless and yet such beneficent step.

Looking back from the darkness of such an hour, one can see that this life was like the shining of a star; without a sound, but there was the light. Are not such quiet, but strong, conservative forces in the world worthy of much praise? They are blessed elements in the home life. They bear the burdens, make the sacrifices, say the charitable words. They are the rallying-centres around which diverse characters group themselves, united to one another because united to that centre. They are the nurses in sickness and the comforters in sorrow. They bring back the wandering son, they wait on the querulous old father. If daughters, they are like mothers in that care which rises up till it overspreads all need. If mothers, they are like daughters in that ministry which stoops to the notice of the smallest want. These lives are such healthy contributions to that which is beneficent in society. They may not be known very much beyond their neighborhood. They do not make a bustle and go about with a conspicuous and flaring torch, dazzling the town from one end to the other. They stay in their places and quietly shine. Light though, is the strongest when concentred. In their neighborhood, these lives have an influence that they themselves are little conscious of. They are the peace-makers, the comforters, the doers of little neighborly services, the strong bonds of charity and love, that give a neighborhood the character of a family.

In the Church of Christ, how the minister appreciates these lives. They are so consistent, sweet-tempered and steadfast, never saying or doing things that keep him forever travelling to straighten out. They are not making rents he must continually be closing up. He can leave them to themselves, knowing that they are always bringing stones of strength to the walls of Zion. They may be among the back-seat Christians in any services in God's house, for their retiring disposition may detain them in the rear, but their example puts them in the front seat at once. In good works, they lead off though never aware of it.

When they die, it would be like them to go very quietly, even suddenly, as if they wanted to make as little trouble for others as possible. They may go so abruptly that they have not time to leave a dying confession behind them, but you never care to ask how they died, so consistently have they lived. It seems a very natural and reasonable thing that any time they should go to heaven, their lives are in such harmony with its laws. There are some really good people who, we feel, will go to heaven; still there are certain inconsistencies about them, and when we think of their going to heaven, we feel that there may be the shock of a collision with their heavenly surroundings—it is a river rushing with some chafe and fret into the sea. But in the lives we have pictured, the river so meets the sea that it is hard to tell where the river leaves off and the sea begins. To these, heaven is simply to go on doing for others, ministering and making happy. At once, they wait on a parent, a child, a brother, a sister, making heaven still more heavenly. When some people go to heaven, we think how much they will get from it, but in the cases before us, we think how much they will give to heaven.

Though they have been such comforters in life, they make many sorrowing hearts when they die. Our consolation is, that they leave behind such beautiful twilight in which we may walk, and the beauty of this twilight suggests how fair a land their sun now shines upon.—Rev. E. A. Rand, in Christian Intelligencer.

MIRACLES.

A miracle is only an exercise, in a new way, of the Almighty power we see daily producing perhaps the same results in nature. Infinitely varied forces are at work around us every moment. From the sun to the atom, from the stone to the thinking brain and beating heart, they circulate sleeplessly, through all things, for ever. As they act and re-act on each other, the amazing result is produced which we know as nature, but how many mysterious inter-relations, of which we know nothing, may offer endlessly varied means for producing specific ends at the command of God? Nor is there anything more amazing in the works of Christ than in the daily phenomena of nature. The vast universe, embracing heavens above heavens, stretching out into the Infinite—with constellations anchored on the vast expanse like tiny islet clusters on the boundless ocean, is one great miracle. It was wonderful to create, but to sustain creation is itself to create a new, each moment. Suns and planets, living creatures in their endless races, all that the round sky of each planet covers—seas, air, sweeping valleys, lofty mountains, and the million wonders of the brain and heart, and life, of their innumerable populations, have no security, each moment that they shall commence another, except in the expenditure of fresh creative energy. Miracles are only the momentary intercalation of unsuspected laws which startle by their novelty, but are no more miraculous than the most common incident of the great mystery of nature.—Giekie's Life of Christ.

TEMPER AT HOME.

I have peeped into quiet "parlors" where the carpet is clean and not old, and the furniture polished and bright; into "rooms" where the chairs are neat and floor carpetless; into "kitchens" where the family live, and the meals are cooked and eaten, and the boys and girls are as blithe as the sparrows in the thatch overhead; and I see that it is not so much wealth, nor learning, nor clothing, nor servants, nor toil, nor idleness, nor town, nor country, nor rank, nor station—as tone and temper that make life joyous or miserable, that render homes happy or wretched. And I see, too, that in town or country, God's grace and good sense make life what no teachers, or accomplishments, or means, or society, can make it, the opening stave of an everlasting psalm, the fair beginning of an endless existence, the goodly, modest, well-proportioned vestibule to a temple of God's building, that shall never decay, wax old, or vanish away.—Dr. John Hall.

DAILY GUIDANCE.

We all acknowledge, in words, our need of God's providential care in our daily lives. But sometimes we are startled to find in ourselves an amount of practical unbelief which grieves our hearts. For instance, we are going smoothly onward in our usual way, the routine of living little disturbed by any extraordinary experience, when suddenly an unexpected thing, a trouble, an anxiety, a perplexity, a hinderance, or an exasperation is projected across our pathway. Then, if we are in the habit of praying to God for direction, we instinctively uplift a petition, or seeking the seclusion of the closet, we tell Jesus of the difficulty and ask for help. We would hardly know how to encounter the sudden distress without this special aid. Often, while the breath of prayer is still upon our lips, the answer comes, in conscious peace, in the stillness and listening attitude of the spirit, and in the strength which is infused into the soul, which had known itself so weak:

Every inmost aspiration is God's angel undefiled,
And in every "O, my Father!" slumbers deep a "Here, my child!"

The wave of thankfulness which sweeps over us is a cleansing tide, and on it are borne thoughts which are tenderly penetrative and reproachful. Why, when the Lord is so near, and so willing to reveal Himself to the asking heart, are we content to do without Him so often and so long? Why need prayer ever be a weariness, or sink into a mechanical performance of duty? If guidance is a necessity in an emergency, is it less a necessity when hour follows hour crowned with benefits from One above? Are we not losers—nay, paupers—in spiritual life because we linger afar off in our daily experience, and are satisfied to have only fragmentary and interrupted communion with the Lord, who has signified His readiness to abide with us.

The reply to this, from some, may be, that we do not really need God's counsel in the minute and common affairs of the household and the shop. Like children at home, like clerks in a counting-room, like sailors on a ship, we may be trusted to go on with those tasks and offices to which we are used, and to which we attend intuitively. To a certain extent, yes, we may; and yet the house without a mother, the business without a superintendent, and the ship without a master, fare badly. Always the ruling thought, the felt presence of the head, is an inspiration, an incentive, and a protection in every home, or school, or service. There are many class rooms in which the work goes on admirably and conscientiously, although the instructor be temporarily absent, but it is because the pupils are thoroughly in sympathy with him, and are moved by love and enthusiasm to do their utmost as he wishes them to do it, whether or not they see his face.

If we sought for daily guidance, and were determined to walk with Jesus, in all our ways, we should not be surprised at calamity, nor afraid of evil tidings, nor overwhelmed in the moment of disaster. We may have our Lord, if we care to have Him, so constantly with us, in such precious relationship, that the smallest duties will grow beautiful in the light of His smile. When our fair young daughter, radiant in the charm of a satisfied heart goes singing about the house, watches from the window, and flies to the door, she may open it to the lover's welcome face, we comprehend her happiness. There is no coldness of use and wont about this proud sincerity of affection. But sometimes there stands One, His locks wet with the dew, His fingers dripping against the latch, and we hear not his knock, and are in no haste to let Him in. What wonder that, when we waken to a want of Him, the story is too often, the Beloved hath withdrawn Himself, and is gone!

Can we know that we are led of God every day? And how? If we seek, we shall know.

The invisible witness of our own consciousness will reveal it to us. In whatever strait, if we are sure that we desire, first of all, that God's will in and over us shall be fully done, we may rest assured that we shall not be left in doubt. Having asked reverently, we must act promptly, according to the light given, nor must we regret our acting if the result be contrary to our hopes. Sweet is that uttered conviction of the Psalmist: "Nevertheless, I am continually with Thee. Thou hast holden me by my right hand, Thou shalt guide me with Thy counsel, and afterward receive me glory."—Christian at Work.

THE TRUE MAN.

It is the faithful performance of the little duties of life that form the noble character, which is more to be desired than all the wealth of the world. The granite shaft that stands in stately beauty is formed of little particles of matter, united together in one enduring mass,—a fit monument for heroic virtues and enduring constancy. He and he alone, is a true hero who goes forward and discharges his duties to his God and his fellowmen because so commanded by one who cannot err.—Baltimore Presbyterian.

TEMPERANCE AND SLEEP.

The one principle of health which may fairly be described as fundamental and universal is temperance—temperance in the pursuit of pleasure, in excitement, in speech, in thought, and, above all, in worry, which kills oftener and far more surely than word. Next to temperance come sleep. Shakespeare and Young anticipated the conclusions of modern hygiene when they described sleep—the former as "the chief nourisher in life's feast," and the latter as "Nature's sweet restorer." Insufficient sleep is probably the most frequent cause of nervous failure; and certainly, when the failure has come, sleep opens the surest avenue to recovery. Then indeed too much sleep can hardly be taken; for as in infancy, the recuperative powers seem to work only during complete sleep.

A REASON FOR TRUST.

Nicholas Biddle, when president of the Bank of the United States, once dismissed a a clerk, because the latter refused to write for him on the Sabbath. The young man, with a mother dependent on his exertions, was thus thrown out of employment by what some would call an over-nice scruple of conscience. But a few days after, Mr. Biddle being requested to nominate a cashier for another bank, recommended this very individual, and mention this incident as proof of his trustworthiness. "You can trust him," said he, "for he wouldn't work for me on the Sabbath."

Gleaned from Exchanges:

There were eleven Jewish candidates before constitutencies at the present general election. Of these five have been elected members of the new British Parliament.

The Japanese edition of the Church of England Book of Common Prayer is said to be nearly completed. It is being prepared under the supervision of a mixed committee of English and American missionary societies.

The Liberal Protestant organ of France, the Renaissance, commenting on a threatened visit of the Salvation Army to France, deprecates it as calculated to render Protestantism ridiculous, and as certain to provoke the intervention of the police.

Pere Didon, the Dominican, whose sermons on divorce and on science and religion, created such a stir, and who lately repaired to Rome, has, it is asserted, been rusticated by the General of his Order. He is to be interned in the small monastery of Corbaro, Corsica, inhabited by five or six Italian monks.

In the Island of New Hebrides, in the Southern ocean, three thousand seven hundred pounds of arrow-root were shipped recently for London by the native Christians who have been gathered in by the Gospel within the last thirty years. Their offering is to make payment for an edition of the Old Testament, as it is now being issued in their language. Silver and gold they have not, but what they have they freely give.

The new suit against Mr. Mackonochie came before the Court of Arches on Saturday. The charges were that in the celebration of the Holy Communion at St. Alban's, Holborn, he followed all the ritual which has been pronounced illegal, and that he had disobeyed the monitions and judgments of the Ecclesiastical Courts. For these offences, which were proved, Mr. Jeune, on behalf of the promoter of the suit, asked that Mr. Mackonochie should be deprived of his perpetual curacy. Lord Penzance doubted whether the statutes conferred the power of deprivation, and took time to consider his judgment.

Last week a meeting of Rev. D. Macrae's congregation, Dundee, was held in the Kinnaird Hall, when a provisional constitution, which has been in course of preparation for sometime, was submitted, and, after all its articles had been discussed seriatim, was unanimously approved. The form of government unites the main elements of Independency and Presbyterianism, the ultimate appeal in Church matters being to the people, while the administration of spiritual affairs is entrusted to Presbyters or elders under the presidency of the minister. An important change in regard to the eldership has been provisionally approved, the constitution providing that a third of the elders retire every two years, remaining eligible, however, for either immediate or subsequent re-election. It is understood that Mr. Macrae, had he remained in the U. P. Church, was to have overtured the Synod in this direction. It is understood that a formula is also in course of preparation, which is to present in a brief and catholic form the vital elements of Christian faith and life. It is intended that this formula shall be sufficiently short to permit of its forming a part of public worship, like the Apostle's Creed or the Lord's Prayer. A catechism is also to be prepared for Sunday School and home use.

FRANCE—EVANGELIZATION IN NORMANDY.—M. Monchatre, pasteur of the Reformed Church at Elbeuf, near Rouen, recently delivered an address in the French Church of Bayswater on the work of evangelization in his own field and in the adjacent department of the Eure. He dwelt on the gradual but sure progress that the Gospel is making in that part of France. At Elbeuf the Protestant schools have assumed such an importance that the French government has given its official sanction to the work. At Evreux the Societe Central of Paris and the authorities of the Reformed Church have placed a stated pastor, who is faithfully carrying on the work. Divine service is held regularly at Louviers and at Pont Audemer, which were the headquarters of Protestantism before the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, but which now are entirely Roman Catholic. At Bernay the municipality has allotted to Protestant worship a suitable hall in an abbey now in ruins. M. Monchatre reminded his hearers that France seems at the present moment disposed to receive the Gospel, and urged each Christian to do his duty. A sum of 13,000 francs is needed for the schools, and 9,000 francs are still owing to the treasurer. The Protestants of Rouen and Elbeuf, seeing the good work at their doors, assist in supporting it by contributions.

Christianity always suits us well enough so long as we suit it. A mere mental difficulty is not hard to deal with. With most of us it is not reason that makes faith hard, but life.

Everyday toil is everyday blessing,
Though poverty's cottage and crust we may share;
Weak is the back on which burdens are pressing,
But stout is the heart that is strengthened by prayer.

Somehow or other the pathway grows brighter,
Just when we mourn there are none to befriend;
Hope in the heart makes the burden seem lighter,
And, somehow or other, we get to the end.

There is no scientific ground of faith, simply because what has become science is taken out of the sphere of faith. We must obey the voice of duty when there are many other voices crying against it, and it requires earnest heed to distinguish the one which speaks for God. We must cherish the impulse of conscience in the moment when it urges us to action, lest it cease from its promptings and we be left to the blind guidance of appetite and passion.—Dr. March.

THOSE STATISTICS.

A few weeks since the Biblical Recorder published what purports to be "Statistics of Christian Denominations in North Carolina," in which the Missionary Baptists are set down at 167,699 and Baptists of every name at 189,935. These statistics sent to the papers throughout the State—sent to all we suppose—by very many were published, without note or comment. This general publication is our apology for devoting our time and space, to a consideration of their accuracy.

The intrinsic absurdity of the claim set forth is manifest when we reflect that the entire population of North Carolina in 1870 was 1,071,361—now possibly 1,200,000—certainly not over the last named figures. Now rating six persons to each family, children, adults and servants included, we have an average of about one Baptist communicant to every household in the State. Here we might rest the case, but we prefer to demonstrate the utter unreliability of these so-called statistics.

The public, asked to give credence to a statement, on its face incredible, have a right to demand that the conclusion reached shall have been attained by methods as thorough, as complete, in every respect as approved, as those of the denominations with which comparison is made.

We inquired of the Recorder, "Have you any reliable official documents such as other denominations possess, setting forth the membership of the Baptist churches in detail? or have we a right to guess? Let us know how the figures are arrived at."

(In what follows throughout this article italics are ours.) The reply of our contemporary is given in full:

"The Baptists of North Carolina have seventy-five District Associations. Each of these associations holds an annual session. To these annual sessions each church belonging to the associations sends two or three delegates and a church letter containing a statement of its spiritual and financial condition with the changes in its membership during the previous year. Those baptized, received by letter, dead, dismissed and expelled are all put down and at the end of the line is given the total number in full fellowship at the time the letter is written.

"These statistics are published in the minutes of the District Association and a copy of the minutes are forwarded to the American Baptist Publication Society, 1420 Chesnut street, Philadelphia. Rev. Mr. Walker, of the society, compiles from the seventy-five minutes the statistics of the Baptists of the State. This is done in all the States in the American Union. So there is no difficulty in knowing exactly how many Baptists there are in North Carolina, or the United States. There is no guessing in the matter, nor any room for a guess by anybody. The letter from each church is read to the church in conference assembled and adopted by a vote of the church before it is sent to the District Association. Only members in good standing, or what is termed full fellowship, are counted. The statistics are correct and give not only the number of members but the amounts contributed to the various objects of benevolence also. The figures given in the table referred to are taken from the Baptist Year Book for 1880, page 58, and were gotten from the minutes of the District Associations for 1879. We don't blame you for being a little surprised, brother."

It may be noted just here that the Recorder virtually admits that the Baptists have no "reliable official document, such as other denominations possess, setting forth the membership of the Baptist churches in detail; if it be not admitted at least it is so.

We are referred to the "Baptist Year Book for 1880" and turning to the page indicated we find the Associations noted, and their membership stated, but the number of churches, of which the membership is aggregated, are from three, up the wide range to ninety; in no case is a church mentioned separately. We submit that for the purpose of verification the record is worthless. To say that ninety churches register 12,000 members affords no more light, than at one dash to mark the mighty total for the entire State.

There they are in fine display—in the Year Book we mean—but when we lift our eyes, they disappear like mists before the morning sun. A fact let us say in passing, that cannot be attributed to the retiring disposition of our Baptist brethren.

We are told that "there is no guessing in the matter, and no room for a guess by anybody." We demur. In the Year Book we find that seventy churches were not reported and these are estimated as enrolling 7,500 members. Pretty lively guessing we should say. Again very many of the churches noted as reported are colored. Now if anyone can believe that there is no guessing and no room for guessing among the Baptist colored churches, not so we.

Under the Presbyterian system a report from each individual church duly approved is sent to the Presbytery. These reports are compiled by the stated clerks, always gentlemen of approved qualifications, and transmitted to the stated clerk of the General Assembly. In due time the minutes of the General Assembly appear with a record of each church, its number of members, accessions and dismissions, and contributions to each of the various objects of benevolence, and church work. The whole arranged in a straightforward, methodical, and business-like manner. From first to last there is order, system, regularity and over all Church control.

In the Baptist denomination, each church being independent, the system under which statistics are compiled, so far as it is a system, is under no control whatever; every church is a law to itself, and what is done beyond each congregation is voluntary. Are we wrong in saying that under the circumstances anything approaching accuracy is impossible?

The views advanced are not singular. By many doubtless they have been anticipated; to all who will seriously consider them, we think they will stand commended. Yet, it may not be amiss in confirmation, to introduce evidence from a perfectly disinterested quarter. The Superintendent of the United States census of 1870, in accounting for the difficulties attending the compilation of church statistics, says:

"Some of the larger religious denominations, either in consequence of their peculiar organization, or by reason of special efforts, maintain a careful system of reports and returns, and the statistics of such denominations are accordingly entitled to great consideration." After specially commending the accuracy of the Methodist system, he proceeds: "There are other denominations, one or two, notably the Baptists, of great importance, in which an absence of central control in the government of churches and the want of a thorough system of reports and returns, deprive church statistics of value." Again: "The discrepancies between the returns of the census and the statistics of the Church are greatest in the case of the Baptists. * * * The discrepancies are mainly in the Southern States, where the conditions of society, especially among the freedmen, are such as would account for even larger differences than exist." After disposing of the Baptists, the Superintendent refers to the Congregationalists, where also there is absence of central control. "In respect to the Congregational Church again, the difference between the statistics of the census and those of the denominational organs is decided, though by no means as extreme, as this denomination has never extended its agencies southward with any considerable success."

The Biblical Recorder says of these statistics: "They are correct." It is manfully spoken, but the compilers of the Year Book are not so confident, thus: "Our distance from the churches embraced in the Associations, and our limited resources for securing information, render it impossible for us to attain desired accuracy, unless those who are nearer, and therefore better informed, will give prompt and favorable response to our appeals."

Distance from the churches would be a small matter under a proper system, but limited resources for obtaining information is a fatal defect. Prompt response to appeals is desirable to be sure, but in this case, to ask that responses should be favorable don't sound well. We acquit, however, of all evil intention.

"Much valuable information," the compilers go on to say, "has been gathered from denominational journals." This refers to published reports of course; but let us imagine, if we can, Presbyterian authorities searching the religious journals for statistical information. Is not the whole statistical system of our Baptist brethren utterly awry?

So much for statistics of membership. In its reply to our inquiries the Recorder volunteered the information that the statistics "give not only the number of members but the amounts contributed to the various objects of benevolence also;"—amounts (plural.) We really expected to find at least the contributions of the Baptist Church to each of several causes of benevolence. But, throughout the entire Book we find but a single page containing reference to contributions, and there a sum total is set against each State of the Union. The explanation is easy. An intricate system of detailed financial accounts cannot be dependent in any measure upon the haphazard method of writing to Association clerks, getting information from churches near, or searching the denominational journals. The Baptist system, weak in every part, here breaks down. But if details cannot be accurately obtained, what of the aggregates? Aggregates are composed of details.

On the contribution page we find North Carolina set down as contributing to all the objects of benevolence, in figures beautifully round, $225,000. Was there no guessing here? What is included in the term benevolent contributions we may not know, but as guessing is in order, we infer that it includes all monies expended for the work of the Church. If so, what a showing for the, said to be, 167,000 Baptists in North Carolina! The 18,000 Presbyterians of the Southern Church in the State contributed $114,168—over half the amount.

Here we bid adieu to the Recorder and its statistics. Our task has not been heavy, neither has it been pleasant, but it seemed not less than duty to expose a baseless claim, lest unchallenged error should assume the garb of admitted truth.

DECLINE AND FALL OF PUBLIC MEN.

We like occasionally to furnish our readers with a good moral article founded on history. Such treatment of current history, as we give below from the Scottish-American Journal, is instructive in more than one direction:

"There is something very admonitory and suggestive in the changes brought about by the revolutions of politics and the unvarying flight of time, both in regard to persons and systems. However great the power, or brilliant the success, of warriors and statesmen, a moment arrives when the sceptre falls from their grasp, and when they are doomed to witness the collapse of many of their cherished schemes, or become utterly powerless to force the acceptance of their ideas. Many are the illustrations which history furnishes of this perhaps common-place remark, and the lesson to be derived from them is that which impresses the immutability of God as contrasted with the frailty of man.

"In the present condition of European affairs three or four characters stand boldly prominent as illustrating the rapidity with which shadow and decline follow upon pomp and power. Not many months ago three of the most renowned personages in Europe, apart from the occupants of thrones themselves, were Lord Beaconsfield, Prince Bismarck and Prince Gortschakoff. Thiers, in France, had already paid the debt of nature, and MacMahon had stepped down from the Presidential chair; and as the Berlin Conference met day after day amidst so many outward signs of majesty and authority, the universal thought appeared to be that upon the will of the three great men who represented Britain, Germany and Russia the peace of Europe literally depended. It was an imposing spectacle, and one can hardly overrate the influence each of these statesmen and diplomatists wielded, whether for good or evil.

"Not less impressive, if something less imposing, is the attitude in which they now stand before their countries and the world. Beaconsfield has been decisively beaten by his life-long rival in an appeal to the British constituencies, and is now a powerless, crestfallen Minister, concerning whom his warmest admirers admit that his day is over, and that he can never hope to regain power. Bismarck is opposed and thwarted in some of the smallest details of policy, and in a fit of resentment throws up his office, and on the alleged ground of enfeebled health wishes to retire from the scene where recently he was arbitrary and supreme, into a solitude which means defeat. And Gortschakoff, perhaps the greatest of the three, is feebly struggling with the last great enemy, without a shadow of hope that he will conquer, if indeed he is not already vanquished by the "king of terrors," with no more of power left him than the humblest peasant he has so often made to tremble in his presence. It is a mournful and suggestive picture, not less for the politician than the moralist.

"At the age of 82 years it could not be expected under any circumstances that Prince Gortschakoff would long continue to wield his accustomed power. He entered upon political life when not more than 20 years of age, and now for 60 years he has been a central figure in Europe. As diplomatist or minister he has had to do with all the leading events of Europe during that time, and in his own country not even the Emperor himself has exercised a greater influence upon the national and foreign policy of the government. In the estimation of both the present Czar and his father he has deservedly occupied a high place, and as far back as 1862 the Czar made him Vice-Chancellor of the Empire, and bestowed upon him the insignia, in diamonds, of the order of St. Andrew, and other exalted honors. The removal of Prince Gortschakoff will visibly affect the administration of Russia; and this, combined with other public events, may help to change the policy of Europe more strongly in the direction of peace."

IS THE GOOD TIME AHEAD?

In a late issue of the Goldsboro Messenger a correspondent incidentally throws out some views of political duty which have the ring of solid gold. Verily there is a good time ahead for North Carolina if the "Christian people are becoming alive to the duty and importance of supporting for office only men of the highest virtue and morality." We give the writer's views:

The people—the thinking people who do not want office, but good officials, the people who have no collars around their necks and no rings in their noses—are tired of machine politics and machine politicians. There is one good, cheering sign in these days of rings and jobberies and small beer politicians; in all the States the Christian people are becoming more alive to the duty and importance of supporting only the best men for office, men of the highest virtue and morality, as well as men of good abilities. The following, which I find in the last number of the Richmond Christian Advocate is in point:

"'I like the ring of your leader. That's the way to strike. Christian people must refuse to vote the immoral, corrupt, and loose men. I intend to use great carefulness hereafter. PAUL WHITEHEAD.'

"It would begin a new and glorious era if even for foremost men in the churches, would take such a stand. Men of the world would respect Christians more if every one 'voted as he prayed.'"

Rev. Mr. Whitehead is a distinguished member of the Virginia M. E. Conference.

The people would like just one time to name the candidates without dictation from the "bosses." They would like to see none but sober, moral, high-toned men put in office. They would like to see how this would work. It ought to be tried just one time. Possibly all would fall in love with it and keep on trying it. They do not desire to be compelled "to scratch," but they demand men of the highest possible reputations for integrity, for morality, for honor—men who would not be suspected even by their opponents; men of pure, unspotted records and blameless lives; men who would not be placed on the defensive, but who could expose the corruptions and the evil course of the opposite party, without fear of being assaulted successfully in turn.

MEETINGS OF PRESBYTERIES.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

THE PRESBYTERY OF CENTRAL TEXAS

Met at Rockdale April 22d. Present, fifteen ministers and fifteen ruling elders.

Rev. A. H. P. McCurdy, licentiate, was received from the Presbytery of Western Texas and was ordained. The new church of Hutto was enrolled. Mr. McCurdy is to be installed pastor of this church for one-fourth of the time and is to supply the Round Rock church. The latter church being without acting ruling elders a committee was appointed to visit it and do what may be necessary in receiving members, installing officers, &c.

Rev. J. A. Walker of San Saba, who was dismissed sometime since to the Presbytery of Western Texas, but had not joined that Presbytery, was re-enrolled, at his own request, as a member of this Presbytery.

Rev. A. S. Doak and Sidney Seymour of Georgetown were elected commissioners to the General Assembly, and Rev. L. Tenney and T. C. Smith of Waco alternates.

An overture to the General Assembly against the division of the Synod at present was adopted.

This meeting was held in a new house of worship just complete and dedicated by the Rockdale church.

The next meeting is to be at Bolton, Oct. 14th. L. TENNEY, S. C.

Memphis—Commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. E. M. Richardson and Elder J. W. Carr, principals, and Rev. E. Daniel and B. M. Estes, alternates. Presbytery inaugurated a colportage work. Two churches of colored people were enrolled, and one colored man was received as a candidate for the ministry.

Chickasaw—Rev. Theodore Hunter was dismissed to the Presbytery of Central Mississippi. Rev. J. D. West, with Dr. J. W. Frazier, principals; Rev. W. T. Savage and W. B. Gilmer, alternates, were elected commissioners to Assembly.

Paducah—Prof. A. H. Todd, Oscar G. Morton and James H. McCullough were licensed to preach the Gospel. Commissioners to Assembly: Rev. L. O. Spencer and Elder C. H. Rieke; Rev. J. T. Hendrick, D. D., and Hon. T. G. Poore, alternates.

Columbia—Dissolution of pastoral relation between Rev. J. T. Rothrock and church at Lewisburg, and Rev. J. T. Rothrock dismissed to Presbytery of Western District. The following overture to the General Assembly was adopted: To remove the office of the Executive Committee on Education from Memphis to Nashville, as more convenient and favorable for its administration; and in the event of its removal, recommend the Rev. J. H. Bryson for the secretaryship.

Central Mississippi—Mr. W. I. Sinnot was taken under care of the Presbytery as a candidate, also A. D. Garrin, a colored brother. The latter is now at Tuskaloosa Institute. Rev. S. S. Brown accepted a call from Concord church; Rev. J. McCaldwell a call from Carrollton church, and Rev. T. L. Haman calls from Old Salem, Shongalo, and Hopewell. Rev. Theodore Hunter also accepted a call from Mt. Hermon church.

St. John's—The Presbytery recommended that church fairs and festivals be discountenanced and discouraged by the sessions of the churches. Rev. E. H. Briggs and Ruling Elder B. F. Whitner were elected commissioners to the General Assembly, with the Rev. W. H. Dodge and Ruling Elder A. M. Jones as alternates.

North Alabama—A new church was enrolled near Florence and called Middle Cypress. A resolution was adopted, commending the diligence and efficiency of Rev. E. M. Richardson, Secretary of Education, "and that our delegate to the General Assembly be instructed to express to that body the presbyterial endorsement of the present Secretary, and their desire that he be continued in that office of the Church."

St. Louis—Overtures the General Assembly to transfer Secretary McIlwaine and the Committee of Home Missions to St. Louis. Commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. Edward Martin, principal, and Rev. R. P. Farris, D. D., alternate. Ruling Elder E. H. Chapman, principal, and J. C. Moore, alternate.

Tombeckbee—Licentiate A. B. Coit was ordained as an evangelist and is engaged in the Presbytery.

Louisiana—Rev. C. M. Shepperson, D. D., was received from the Presbytery of Fayetteville. Presbytery clothed Dr. Shepperson with evangelistic powers, to enable him better to perform his labors.

Ouachita—Rev. E. M. Munroe was elected Stated Clerk. Rev. W. A. Dabney was received by letter from Atlanta Presbytery, and Rev. J. M. Hoge was dismissed to Idaho Presbytery. A call was presented to Rev. J. M. Brown and accepted by him; a committee was appointed to install him. Arrangements were made to inst all Rev. W. T. Howison over Hope church. Mr. A. C. Wilfong was taken under care as a candidate for the ministry. Commissioners to the General Assembly: Rev. J. M. Brown and Ruling Elder M. W. McGill; alternates, Rev. E. M. Munroe and Elder J. W. VanGilder.

Potosi—Rev. T. C. Barrett was dismissed to the Presbytery of St. Louis. Charleston church was dissolved. Rev. John B. Rubey and Elder Z. B. Penney were elected commissioners to the Assembly; Rev. C. W. Alexander and Elder John A. McCormick, alternates.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

The Covenant is a bright and sharp Reformed Episcopal paper. It comes to us considerably enlarged, and we learn that its increase of prosperity is such as to justify its hope that it can be made a weekly journal in no great while.

We purpose to delay publication of next week's issue till Friday. This will enable us to get in the organization of the Assembly and the Moderator's sermon. By the way, as we cannot give our readers a verbatim report of the proceedings of the Assembly, we advise those who wish to keep posted as to the doings of the body to send forty cents to the News and Courier, Charleston, S. C. In that way they will receive a full report daily.

The following card from Rev. R. P. Farris appears in the last St. Louis Presbyterian:

"The undersigned announces that, with the view of better serving the purposes for which the St. Louis Presbyterian was established, he has become its owner. At an early day, it will appear in a new dress and otherwise improved. A statement of aims and plans will then be made. Meantime, as the change severs the paper from the Presbyterian Publishing Company, it is requested that all communications and payments be addressed to St. Louis Presbyterian, or

"ROBERT P. FARRIS."

Our best wishes to our contemporary and its owner under the new regime.

We are aware that we are striking directly athwart general public opinion, when we say that we doubt whether the raising of boys in a city under proper safeguards is unfavorable to their growth in morality. But of one thing we are sure that the transferring of youth from the lesser temptations of the country to the innumerable snares of the city, is exceedingly perilous. Our opportunities for judging in this regard have not been slight. With this preface we commend the following from the Canada Presbyterian:

"The responsibility of city churches in watching the coming of the young men from the country, and taking them under their fostering care, cannot be over-estimated. Hundreds of young men, well trained at home, ready for active Christian service, come to the city every year. They are strangers to city life; having no conception of its dangers; entirely unfitted to meet its temptations; easily led into its paths of virtue or vice. If they are met at the threshold of their city experience with a warm, earnest Christian welcome, and made to feel that their coming was expected and their services wanted, they will shun the glitter of evil and at once become active helpers in temperance and religion. But if they are left to find their own way into city society, the chances are that runners of the different agencies of destruction will secure them."

The following ought to call forth our hearty sympathy for Dr. Hoge—and does—but it is hard to repress a hearty laugh, when we think how utterly unappreciated was the sublime confidence the Doctor reposed in the honesty of the people among whom he was travelling. A few weeks ago he could leave his drawers unlocked, and even his cigars lying about; but we are sorry for the Doctor withal.

A letter received in Richmond yesterday, and dated 28th March, from a lady in Dr. Hoge's party now travelling in Palestine, gives the following interesting account of an exciting episode:

"We had an unfortunate affair the night before. Some one broke into Dr. Hoge's tent and carried off his trunk and travelling satchel containing all his valuables—his gold watch and opera glasses, a purse containing £40 in gold, besides much else. After a great fuss and much searching the trunk was found over on the hill, rifled of its contents, and his clothes all scattered around. We hardly hope that anything will be recovered, though the Governor here is making an effort and has arrested some parties. It was a most unfortunate beginning for us and our dragoman; but we think him innocent and have placed the guilt upon our guards who watched beside us whilst we slept. We hope nothing worse may occur."

Another letter written on the 4th of April and received at the same time, stated that nothing had been recovered, but that the matter was in the hands of the American consul, at Jerusalem and the American minister at Constantinople, who was present in Jerusalem at the time. Little hope is entertained, however, of recovering the lost articles.

The party consists of Rev. Dr. Hoge, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Pemberton, Rev. Mr. Holcombe and wife, missionaries to India, and Miss Spaulding, of New York. They were all in excellent health and spirits, and were to have left for Damascus in a few days.—Richmond Dispatch.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters or this column.

CALL DECLINED.

His brethren in Concord Presbytery and in this Synod will be glad to know that Rev. R. B. Anderson has declined the call to Camden, S. C.

BETHESDA CHURCH—ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

At a recent communion service at Bethesda church, Caswell county, two persons joined the church on profession of their faith. Rev. D. Irvin Craig was assisted by Rev. A. Currie, who preached some fine sermons.

An aged member of Hope church, in Orange Presbytery, writes that the church is prospering. Rev. P. H. Dalton preaches for the congregation once a month and is very much beloved. During the past four or five years the membership has increased from sixty to ninety.

Mr. J. N. H. Summerell, licentiate of Concord Presbytery, who has just graduated from Union Seminary goes to Kentucky to preach one year for Rev. Rutherford Douglass, pastor of Pisgah church in West Lexington Presbytery. Mr. Douglass has recently been made Chancellor of the University of Richmond, Ky. We heartily trust that our churches will recall the brother to this State, by or before the time his present engagement expires.

Rev. D. A. McRae writes from Crockett, Texas, under date May 3d:

"I am now in Texas expecting to spend at least five or six months here before returning to North Carolina. I find a flourishing colored Sabbath school under the care of our Church and a colored congregation organized in accordance with the Assembly's plan. So the good work is going on in many places."

The Moore Index has this to say: "We learn that the new church at Buffalo will be dedicated on Saturday before the third Sabbath in this month, (May 15th.) Rev. Evander McNair, D D., so well known in this country, and so much beloved, will preach the dedication sermon. We congratulate our Buffalo friends on the completion of their beautiful church and the prospect of its early dedication. The spring communion will be observed on the third Sabbath, the 16th inst. Rev. Dr. McNair and Rev. Dr. McKay, and perhaps other ministers will be present with the pastor during these interesting and notable services."

MEETING OF THE ASSEMBLY'S TRUSTEES

The Charlotte (N. C.) Observer reports that the Board of Trustees of the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church met in that city Thursday. Hon. James Hemphill, of Chester, the president, was in the chair. Mr. J. H. Wilson, Gen. J. A. Young, Cols. J. L. Brown, J. E. Brown and Dr. E. Nye Hutchison, were present. Cols John L. and J. E. Brown being appointed a committee to examine the annual report of the treasurer, Mr. Jesse H. Lindsay, of Greensboro, reported it favorably. Several agents were appointed to look after various legacies belonging to the General Assembly. Hon. James Hemphill, of Chester, was re-elected president, Mr. J. H. Wilson, vice-president, and Mr. Jesse H. Lindsay, secretary and treasurer. The board adopted a recommendation to the General Assembly that the treasurer be allowed compensation, as he was required to give heavy bond and his work was considerable, owing to the increasing property of the Church.

MT. OLIVE, N. C., May 10, 1880.

Mr. Editor: On the first Sabbath in this month we had a meeting of unusual interest. After Rev. B. F. Marable had delivered a most excellent discourse on Church Government, Mr. A. R. Hicks, Jr., was duly installed to the office of ruling elder, and Mr. B. B. Carr to the office of deacon. Mr. Marable first showed the scripturalness of the offices of teaching and ruling elders (showing the difference between these two offices, &c.) and of the office of deacon, by reading various passages of scripture in which the offices are so fully and clearly set forth. Upon the basis of this he formed his discourse, showing the excellencies of the Presbyterian Church Government as differing from all others.

The discourse was highly interesting and instructive, and was very attentively listened to by a large and appreciative audience, consisting mostly of members of the Methodist and Baptist churches, and of non-professors who have been raised up in these churches. No doubt many who had known little or nothing of Presbyterian Church Government, without having heard anything at all calculated to offend, went away deeply impressed with its scripturalness and with its superiority over all other church governments.

I believe, Mr. Editor, that Presbyterianism would thrive much better and exert a much greater influence if our honored clergy would oftener preach their distinctive doctrines as taught in the Confession of Faith.

I know whereof I speak when I say that the charge is often brought against Presbyterians that they do not preach their doctrines. Ought this to be so? Did St. Paul or any of the apostles hesitate at all to proclaim the whole truth? L. R. L.

BROKEN SPOKES.

All are agreed, I think, that our Church in this State is far below the proper standard of efficiency. Your paper, sometime ago, proposed the questions, Why is this so? What is the matter? A number of writers attempted answers to these questions, and, as usual with us, some went straightway to theorizing. Since the days of the schoolmen no institution has been so fruitful in theory as the Presbyterian Church. From session to General Assembly we discuss theory "world without end." Thus our time and energy are spent, and the work is not done. Some one has well said, "We spend our time in mending nets, and therefore catch no fish." Twenty years have been spent in revising the Book of Church Order—time enough to have translated the whole Bible into a dozen foreign languages—and now it is to be feared that we are to spend ten years more in revising the Directory, providing a "burial service," &c., &c. In the meantime we will sow but few seed, cultivate poorly what are sown, and then strangely wonder at the small harvest.

Our difficulty is not one of theory but of practice. We have some broken spokes. Let us mend them and everything will move on grandly. One of these is the condition of the eldership.

No pastor can succeed without an efficient eldership, and far less when he has a bench of elders standing in the way of progress. Many churches are thus afflicted, and have been thereby kept in a state of stagnation for a generation, and this must continue to be so as long as there are such sad mistakes as to the qualifications for the eldership. A vacancy occurs, an elder is to be elected, and some very good person suggests the name of brother A, because he is an old man, has been a member of the church for many years, or is a very amiable man, or is a man of large wealth. The question of fitness is never raised. No one asks, Has he the moral courage and energy which will give him official force? He is elected because nothing can be said against him. Thus many brethren wholly unfitted for the place find their way into the eldership. They are good and pure men, qualified for various positions in life—ready, it may be, for the kingdom of heaven, but exactly unfitted for the duties of the eldership. Thus good men are made the occasion of immense evil by being placed in positions for which God did not fit them.

If any one doubts the magnitude of this evil let him but look at the condition of many of our sessions. Here is one composed of three elders. One of these elders is fully awake to all the interests of the congregation, and would push them forward with energy, but the other two feel but little interest in their official duties and display less. We find no sympathy in his anxiety, no co-operation in his proposed plans of work. He tries again and again to awaken an interest, to arouse some sort of earnestness in the session, but all in vain. He at last sinks into a state of desperate indifference, and the pastor is left to struggle on virtually without an eldership. Thus the working force of one valuable man is lost, the pastor hindered and discouraged, and a whole congregation obstructed by those two good men.

Here is another session of five elders; four of them are men of character and action, but the senior elder has been in office for half a century. His opinions therefore must have peculiar weight, and to them special deference must be paid. But he invents nothing, proposes nothing, and being a man of a misty, cloudy mind, sees nothing clearly. To whatever is proposed he objects, and hinders any new enterprise. Thus, by the stupidity of one man, the working force of four valuable men is lost, and the church kept in a state of stagnation and death.

In the eldership of our Synod we have many men whose value cannot be expressed in gold and silver, but many others who are not only valueless but are a great hindrance to the Church. Of these latter we have need to be freed, and if they have not the good sense to die or resign then let Presbytery demand their resignations and put the proper men in their places. Thus will one broken spoke be mended, and the force of the Church be vastly increased. TG.

CHURCH SERVICES.

The remarks in last week's issue, in regard to church services, are full of truth and wisdom, especially this sentence: "The prominence given to the study of God's word is the chief element of strength in the Presbyterian Church." Talk of culture—we have it in greater degree than any Protestant church in the world. Candid Episcopalians admit that, as a general thing, our clergy are better sermon-writers than theirs; and assign the true reason that the sermon is the most important part of our service, while the liturgy is the most important part of theirs. If we cannot have both the good sermon and the liturgy, let us by all means have the good sermon. I admit the beauty and charm of the Anglican liturgy but the Hebrew liturgy, found in the Psalms of David, is infinitely finer.

But there is truth too, in the remark quoted of the D. D., "There is a growing spirit of unrest and dissatisfaction in the Presbyterian Church." The fact is, our particular form of Presbyterianism is a machine, which cannot be successfully run by any but truly pious people. Whenever worldliness begins to gain the upper hand, then appears "the growing spirit of unrest and discontent." The worldling is thoroughly uncomfortable in our church; the long sermons not only bore him, but now and then touch his conscience in a most unpardonable style. The D. D. says "the Presbyterian Church shuts herself out from the realm of the æsthetic." God in mercy grant that she may continue to do so. Has not the Church of Rome given us enough of this æsthetic?

A certain English divine in describing the æsthetic side of the Romish Church, said he was so fascinated by it that nothing but the grace of God prevented him from yielding to her seductions and entering her communion. She appeals to the senses "the lust of the eye and the pride of life"—but where is the true beauty: the beauty of holiness? Ah, the realm of the æsthetic is not found in forms and ceremonies. Puritans and Presbyterians look for it in a different way from Romanists and Ritualists. True religion gives its possessor that nobility of soul, and true sweetness of spirit, which blossoms into deeds of noble daring, of self sacrifice, and of tender loving kindness to our fellow creatures. It blossoms into sermons of fervid eloquence, into prayers of exquisite pathos and earnest entreaty, and this, thank God, is our realm of the æsthetic. This is the pure and unadulterated poetry of Presbyterianism. And men and women who are of this calibre, have neither time for, nor patience with, mere forms and ceremonies.

No, no, our trouble lies in quite another direction, and the same paper of last week, points out one, at least, of the remedies which lie within our reach. One of the items of news is this: About half a dozen families of the Presbyterian church of Taylorsville, Ky., have undertaken to tithe their incomes. Under this arrangement, the income of the church has increased from $704 the year previous, to $1,024 this last year. The six families report that they find it easier to give in this way than formerly in the old way." Only let all Presbyterians follow this good example, and I think we will hear no more of the "growing spirit of unrest and discontent in the Church." The tenth of the incomes of all Presbyterians in our Southern Church, would enable us, not only to pay well our bishops who labor in word and doctrine, and to support in comfort aged bishops and widows, but it would sustain a parochial school at every church. Every Presbyterian child ought to have a thorough education. Ignorance, rather than poverty, is the disgrace of the nation. If two or three of the bench of elders received salaries, just as the pastor does, in order to devote their entire time to the education of the children of the Church, what an immense impetus it would give to the now dragging wheels of our ecclesiastical train. This was John Knox's idea, and I think true wisdom would lead us first to try thoroughly our own system before we bring in innovations from other churches. Any well educated, pious member of the church might be elected an elder for this purpose, if none of those present are fitted for it.

The best educated class are the most respectable class. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," was the sorrowing wail of the Hebrew prophet. I do so dislike to hear an elder or deacon using ungrammatical language, or to hear our saucy young collegians laughing at Elder A.'s or Deacon B.'s ideas on matters of history or science. It lowers the dignity of the whole church for office bearers to be grossly ignorant.

Let us tithe our incomes, and then the treasuries of the church will always be full. And every baptized child will have free access to a thoroughly good education. It ought at least to be as good as that provided in the public schools of Prussia. And we should guard against the danger of scepticism, which is the great danger in Prussia, and is becoming one of the greatest of evils everywhere; and it is the one thing which churches are especially organized to fight against, and she ought to have entire control of the minds of her children. It is a great advantage for every child to board at home, under the mother's eye, while receiving his or her education. They will be better and happier all their lives for it. It is the scriptural method—the child should never be removed from the oversight of the parent, who is to instruct him "when he sits in his house, and when he walks by the way, and when he lies down, and when he rises up." (Deut. vi:7.)

ATTENTION, CHURCHES OF MECKLENBURG PRESBYTERY.

At the session of Presbytery at Dallas a resolution was adopted authorizing the chairman of our Committee on Colportage to confer with the committee of Concord Presbytery with reference to joint action; that Presbytery at its last meeting passed a similar resolution authorizing its committee to confer with ours. Our Presbytery also passed a resolution (as it has done for the last three or four meetings) urging our ministers and sessions to give our people at least a chance to contribute to this cause. Seventeen churches have responded in small amounts since our enterprise was begun. Will not the brethren be good enough to pay some attention to these repeated orders of Presbytery and just pass the hat around? If they get nothing they will have done their duty and discharged themselves of responsibility. But they will get something, and that something may enable the Presbytery of Mecklenburg to buy a horse, which horse may be able to pull Concord Presbytery's wagon around over the two Presbyteries, and supply our congregations and destitute regions with the excellent and cheap books with which the market now abounds. MONTHLY REVIEW OF MISSIONS.

Senor Carreoro, the native evangelist, who was recently sent from Matamoras to establish a new station in Victoria, in Eastern Mexico, writes that although the leading padre had denounced him on his arrival, and all who should speak to him or have anything to do with him, that nevertheless there were eighty or ninety persons to attend his first religious service of whom there were at least twenty women, and the utmost decorum prevailed throughout the services.

From the Brazil Mission we have intelligence, through the English mail as late as the 5th of March. There were seventy-five pupils in the Campinas Institute, and others were expected to join. Mr. Boyle mentions that since his removal to Moggy-Mirim he had received ten persons in the church at Penha and two to that of Moggy-Mirim, besides baptizing a number of children at both places. NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The Nursery is a gem of its kind. The May number is before us, and a capital one it is. $1 50 a year. Boston, Mass.

Little Folks' Reader for April comes to us looking as bright as a May morn. A charming book for the very litte folks. 75 cents a year. D. Lothrop & Co., Boston.

Elementary Principles of Scientific Agriculture, by N. T. Lupton. Devoted to scientific agriculture, soils. plants, composition on properties of the atmosphere, manures, fertilizers, &c. The work pleases us very much. D. Appleton & Co., 13 and 15 Bond street, New York.

Knight's Popular History of England. Volume II is at hand. We referred to the importance of this excellent work on reception of the first volume, a few weeks since. I. K. Funk & Co., 10 and 12 Dey street, N. Y.

Rowland Hill: His Life, Anecdotes and Pulpit Sayings. Whatever concerns Rowland Hill will be of interest to the general reader, because of his genial disposition and unbounded philanthropy. The price is very low, 15 cents. I. K. Funk & Co., New York.

St. Nicholas Magazine puts in its benignant smile, and the children all over the land are happy. There are five complete short stories in the May number, two Natural History articles, Mrs. Alcott's serial "Jack and Jill," brimfull of fun and running over. How to Care for the Sick is a practical article, and a capital one. Besides there are—oh! so many—humorous pieces and funny pictures. Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge's special faculty seems to be to combine the useful with the entertaining for children.

Wide Awake. The May number of this pleasant magazine contains many interesting stories for the young people, among which are, The Twin Cousins, How we went Bird's Nesting, The Storks and Their Friends, besides several others of equal attractiveness. The Bed Post Doll, A Spring Snow Storm and Out in a Shower are nice little poems. Published by D. Lothrop & Co., 30 and 32 Franklin street, Boston, at $2 per annum.

A Short Life of Charles Dickens, with selections from his letters, by Charles H. Jones, has appeared in Appleton's New Handy-Volume Series. The author has, in a concise and compact form, given an account of Dickens' life and work in such a manner as will please the numerous class of readers whose curiosity about even so popular an author, can be satisfied within the limits of a handy volume. 35 cents. D. Appleton & Co., New York, publishers.

Ruskin's Letters to Workmen and Laborers—Fors Clavigera and Idyls of the King, by Alfred Tennyson—have been received from I. K. Funk & Co., publishers, 10 and 12 Dey street, New York. Idyls of the King is considered the best selection from the poet laureate. These are both published in the "Standard Series" at the exceedingly small sums of 15 and 20 cents respectively.

Memoirs of Napoleon, by the Duchess D'Arbrantes (Madame Junot), has been received in two nicely bound volumes from D. Appleton & Co. The author was herself intimately acquainted with the family of Napoleon, from earliest childhood and has therefore given an accurate account, not only of his political career but also of events in his private life. The books are written in a pleasant style, and will delight all who are at all interested in Napoleon and the interior of the court of France.

Loiterings in Pleasant Paths, by Marion Harland. Author of "The Dinner Year Book" &c. Pp. 435. $1.75. Charles Scribner's Son's, New York. 1880.

Marion Harland (Miss Hawes of Richmond, Va.) needs no commendation or introduction to our readers. On a pilgrimage abroad, seeking restoration of health, she and family spent two years in England and on the Continent, in France, Italy and Switzerland, with manifold strayings from the beaten tracks, and stereotyped descriptions. So she gives the freshest, and most attractive descriptions we have read for a long time; with all the warmth of first and fresh impressions, yet guarded by leisurely and mature investigation.

Lecture on the Origin and Growth of the Psalms, by Thomas Chalmers Murray, Associate Professor of the Shemitic Languages at the Johns Hopkins University. $1.50. Charles Scribner's Sons. New York. 1880.

Prof. Murray—son of "Kirwan"—died just afte delivering these nine lectures before a general audience at the University. He was a scholar of distinguished promise. These lectures posess intense interest as among the first delivered in America upon the Shemitic languages and literature, especially the Psalms on the purely academic separate from the theological aspect. They sketch the history of Shemitic peoples; rise and development of Hebrew literature, especially the Psalms, their collection, arrangement, style, age, theories of Maccabean and Davidic authorship; dramatic art among the Shemitic, and the Music of the Second Temple. King James' version is used, so that every intelligent Bible reader will find the book full of new light as to the structure and literary character of the Psalm book. It's spirit is reverent and orthodox.

Discussions in History and Theology, by Geo. P. Fisher, D. D., L L. D., Prof of Ecclesiastical History in Yale College. $3. 800, p. 555. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.

There are sixteen essays published at different times by this eminent scholar, on subjects, connected with his special studies, and of current interest. They fall into a three-fold grouping. 1st. The Roman Catholic Question, with an added essay on the Massacre of St Bartholomew under the light of modern discoveries. 2d. New England Theology, and its leaders, Edwards, Channing and Taylor. 3d. Theism and Christian Evidences; looking at the position of Rationalists, Renan, Matthew Arnold and the Tubingen criticism on the Gospels. The style is lucid, and the disquisitions embrace subjects of vital and present importance, presented sharply and compactly.

The Sanitarian for May. A. N. Bell, M. D., Editor. New York. $3 per annum.

Wide awake in the discussion of preventable cases of disease; Sanitary architecture, and whatever protects human life.

What guarantee have you that the substitute offered you may not at one time contain one thing and at another something else, for you can be blindly deceived by fraudulent medicine which is only made to get up something cheap to take the place of the genuine of high reputation? The genuine has been manufactured for years—a half million of dollars expended to secure its reputation; and too much money is invested in Simmons Liver Regulator by Zeilin & Co., to risk the loss by allowing the medicine to fall from its high standard. The best part of a lifetime has been spent in securing this reputation which will last for generations. The substitutes having no reputation to lose will be made of the cheapest and poorest materials to enable the dealer to buy what is cheap.

FOR THROAT DISEASES AND COUGHS.—"Brown's Bronchial Troches," like all other really good things, are frequently imitated, and purchasers should be careful to obtain the genuine article prepared by John I. Brown & Sons.

Be not deceived by imitations of Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer; call for Hall's and accept no other.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

SOUTHERN.

The following relative to Portland Avenue church, Louisville, Ky., of which Rev. James H. Morrison is pastor, we copy from the Christian Observer: "On Sunday morning the pastor preached his anniversary sermon to a large congregation. On September 1, 1880, this church will be twenty-five years old. A brief review of the history of the church was given in the sermon. During these twenty-five years, with many ebbs and flows, the membership has increased from the original eight to one hundred and twelve. Fifty-seven have been received the past year. Mr. Thos. Semple was ordained and installed a ruling elder. Three children received the ordinance of baptism. One member was received by letter from Scotland."

From the same paper we take the following: "The Westminster church, Nashville, has done well, and is struggling to do better. They have bought the property hitherto used by them, on the corner of College and Ash street. It belonged to the Seceder church, and is a very desirable location. They have money enough subscribed to pay for it, but are anxious to improve it, and so the ladies have resorted to the plan suggested in the following card. For all purposes, including the amount subscribed for the purchase of the property, this little church of seventy-five members has contributed during the last year about $1,200, independent of what has been given outside. On April 25th, they installed Dr. R. G Rothrock, formerly an elder in the Richland church, Giles county, Tenn., as an elder in Westminster church, and ordained and installed Messrs. R. B. McLean and G. W. Gifford as deacons. They now have three good Elders and five Deacons."

Seven persons, four by examination and three by certificate were received into Grace Street church in Richmond, Va., on Sabbath, 2d inst.

The following post office addresses have been changed: of Rev. W. H. Wood from Marlboro, Frederick county, Va., to Stephen's City, in same county; Rev. C. S. Lingamfelter from Berryville, Va., to Martinsburg, West Va.; Rev. A. H. Price from Craig's Creek to Broadway, Rockingham county, Va.

On Sabbath week three communicants were added to Concord church, of which the Rev. J. C. McMullen is pastor—making eighteen additions since April of last year.—Southern Presbyterian.

The Murfreesboro (Tenn.) News has this: The union meeting which, for several weeks past, has been conducted in the Presbyterian church, was closed last Wednesday night. During the progress of the meeting the congregations were very large, and much good has been accomplished. Between twenty and thirty professions of religion have been made, and conspicuous among the good results of this and the meetings of last year, is the unity of sentiment and brotherly love which characterizes the Christians of the different denominations.

The St. Louis Presbyterian learns through a correspondent, of the prosperity of the church at Sedalia, Mo. The correspondent says of Rev. P. D. Stephenson the pastor: "He is an excellent preacher and pastor." Since he took charge, the debt has been largely reduced and all current expenses promptly met. Of course, as this fact indicates, the church is in good condition spiritually.

Rev. W. H. Marquess was installed pastor of the church in Fulton on the 26th ult.

On Sunday, April 25th, a destructive storm prevailed south of Nashville, which, we regret to learn, totally wrecked the Presbyterian church at Decherd, Tenn. Its loss will be a heavy disaster to the self-sacrificing little band who worship there, and who find it difficult to maintain the regular ministrations of the gospel.—Christian Observer.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States

Will meet at Charleston, S. C., on the third Thursday (the 20th day) of May, 1880, in the Second Presbyterian church, at 11 o'clock a. m. The opening sermon will be preached by the Moderator of the last Assembly.

The undersigned, Committee on Commissions, will meet in the Lecture Room of said church on Wednesday, the 19th, at 8 o'clock p. m., to enroll the names of Commissioners.

SECULAR MISCELLANY.

We see by the Tuscaloosa (Ala.) Gazette that Dr. W. G. B. Pearson is announced by his friends a candidate for the office of sheriff of Tuscaloosa county. Is this our olden time Bladen friend? If so we wish him triumphant success.

A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette says the priests of Spain "are less well educated than the average Spaniard of the middle class, himself perhaps the worst educated man in Europe." For this state of things, the Concordat is to be thankful chiefly.

Sea Island cotton has been grown in New Hanover and in Pender counties within our recollection. Dr. John L. Meares, of Wilmington (now of San Francisco, California), about the year 1856, planted an acre of this cotton on his plantation nine miles east of Wilmington. It grew well and yielded about one hundred pounds of lint, worth at the time forty or fifty cents per pound. There is a good deal of land along the sound in New Hanover, Pender and Onslow counties adapted to the growth of this crop.—Fayetteville Examiner.

MALARIAL FEVER.

MALARIAL FEVERS, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness and neuralgiac ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs the ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm always. See "Proverbs" in other colun.

GENTLEMEN—I have tried your Safe Kidney and Liver Cure for "Bright's Disease," with which I have been afflicted for the last two years, and it has done wonders for me. I believe it is the only cure known for that terrible disease, and it is with pleasure that I write this testimony in its favor. You are at liberty to use this in any way you see proper to benefit suffering humanity. Truly yours,

DIED.

☞Obituary notices must be paid for in advance The first ten lines are inserted free. The excess over ten lines is charged for at the rate of ten cents per line. Correspondents can ascertain what an obituary will cost by counting eight words to a line, and multiplying each line by ten cents.

At his home, in Newton, N. C., on the 23rd of March, Mr. GEORGE BERIER, in the 66th year of his age.

His disease was pneumonia; from which he suffered greatly for more than ten days.

He was a native of Davidson county, in this State, and began life as a clerk in Lexington. He then went to Statesville and clerked for some time in the store of Mr. Thomas McCrory. Removing to Island Ford, he engaged in business for himself, but finally settled in Newton, where he was long known as a prominent merchant.

Mr. Berier was a man of positive character and sterling integrity. Strong in his convictions. he always contended earnestly for what he felt to be just and right.

He was a most devoted husband and father, and for many years a professing christian. His end was peace. He bore his last illness with signal resignation and then passed into another world cheered by the hope of a blessed immortality. R. B. A.

Col. WILLIAM ROAN, a member of the Morrison Presbyterian church, fell asleep in Jesus February 29, 1880, at his home on Cartoogycherye, in Macon county, N. C., aged 55 years.

March 14, 1880, Mr. DAVID McCONNEL, in his 90th year.

For many years he was a consistent member of the Presbyterian church at Franklin, N. C.

Near Franklin, N. C., April 29th, 1880, Miss LIBBIE BULGIN, in the 20th year of her age.

She was a bright, cheerful and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church."

TRUTHS.
Hop Bitters are the Purest and Best Bitters Ever Made.
They are compounded from Hops, Buchu Mandrake and Dandelion—the oldest, best and most valuable medicine in the world and contain all the best and most curative properties of all other Bitters, being the greatest BLOOD PURIFIER, LIVER REGULATOR, and Life and Heath Restoring Agent on earth. No disease or ill health can possibly long exist where these Bitters are used, so varied and perfect are their operations.
They give new life and vigor to the aged and infirm. To all whose employments cause irregularity of the bowels and urinary organs, or who require an Appetizer, Tonic and mild Stimulant, these Bitters are invaluable, being highly curative, tonic and stimulating, WITHOUT INTOXICATING.
No matter what your feelings or symptoms are, what the disease or ailment is, use Hop Bitters. Don't wait until you are sick, but if you only feel bad or miserable use the Bitters at once. It may save your life. Hundreds have been saved by so doing. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.
Do not suffer yourself or let your friends suffer, but use and urge them to use Hop Bitters.
Remember, Hop Bitters is no vile, drugged, drunken nostrum, but the Purest and Best Medicine ever made; the "INVALID'S FRIEND AND HOPE," and no person or family should be without them. Try the Bitters to-day.

FOR THE FAMILY.

Ebb-Tide.

Long reaches of wet grasses sway
Where ran the sea but yesterday,
And white-winged boats at sunset drew
To anchor in the crimsoning blue.
The boats lie on the grassy plain,
Nor tug nor fret at anchor chain;
Their errand dcne, their impulse spent,
Held to an alien element,
With sails unset they idly lie
Though morning beckons brave and nigh:
Like wounded birds, their flight denied,
They lie, and long, and wait the tide.

About their keels, within the net
Of tough grass fibers green and wet,
A myriad thirsty creatures, pent
In sorrowful imprisonment,
Await the beat distinct and sweet,
Of the white waves' returning feet
My soul their vigil joins, and shares
A nobler discontent than theirs;
Athirst like them, I patiently
Sit listening beside the sea:
And still the waters outward glide:
When is the turning of the tide?

Come, pulse of God; come, heavenly thrill;
We wait thy coming—and we will;
The world is vast, and very far
Its utmost verge and boundaries are,
But thou hast kept thy word to-day
In India and dim Cathay
And the same mighty care shall reach
Each humblest rock-pool of this beach.
The gasping fish, the stranded keel,
This dull dry soul of mine shall feel
Thy freshening touch, and, satisfied,
Shall drink the fullness of the tide.

Rain from Heaven.

The following story is told by an old clergyman, who has during his life travelled over half of the world. He had lived in England, Ireland and Scotland, France, Germany and Spain, had been a missionary in India, and was the founder of a Home for poor children in the Western States of America.

It was during the early years of the institution, when he was traveling with the view of making collections for this excellent object, that he found himself in Yorkshire, England, addressing the congregation of what is thero called Dissenter's Chapel, on the outskirts of a large town. The people who listened to him were mostly poor workmen and workwomen, but his account of the orphan asylum, and of its little inmates touched their hearts. There was quite a considerable collection made. Even the smallest child seemed to have had a half penny given it for the poor-box, which was passed around, and only one gave nothing, and that was a pretty girl of twelve, who had shed tears at the tale of poverty, and seemed particularly touched to hear of a little lame child who had evinced a disposition to do good to others despite her infirmity.

This girl's face had been so bright and earnest that the old clergyman had noticed it particularly, and now, as he watched her, he saw tears stealing through her fingers. Soon she arose and softly stole out of the church—for all this happened after service was over and the blessing uttered—and the clergyman scarcely expected to see the little, round, sunburnt face again.

However, that very afternoon, when he had had his tea and was walking slowly along a little green lane near the home of thy friends to whom he was paying a visit, he saw a small, compact figure in pink calico, crowned with a round straw hat exactly like a boy's, ducking short courtesies to him from a little distance, and he recognized the girl whom he noticed at the chapel, and nodded re-assuringly to her. On this she advanced and stood close beside him.

"If yo' please, sir, yo' be t' gentleman as spoke t' us to-day, yander," she said, softly, blushing and casting down her eyes. "And if yo' please I'm fain t' speak t' yo'. I put naught into' poor-box to-day, sir. It might be yo' noticed it, sir, and thought I did not care for t' poor little children; but I did, sir."

"You are only a child yourself, my dear," said the gentleman; "children are not expected to have money to give. You have the heart to give it, and this is a great thing; and when you are older you will be able to do more as you please."

"Yes, sir," replied the child, "and it's not as father would grudge me the money for the plate, but he's been mortal bad lately with a fever, and has just got about. But, sir, this is what I wanted to say to yo'. I heerd yo' tell, as you'd bid awa' a year and coom back again then and tell us what you'd seen and heard, and I wanted to ask yo' if I mightn't give what bit of money I might have? It couldn't be much to the poor children, to the poor little things, when yo' come again. That was what I wanted t' say, sir."

"Indeed you may, lassie," said the old man. "And you can pray for them if you can do nothing else. I wish rich old men and women had your kindly heart, my girl."

Then the child said, softly. "Please, sir, I'd like to know when yo' come, if I chanced not to be at the chapel, and any one would bring me word. My name is Maggie—Maggie Zolliver, sir."

Then she dropped her little, bobbing courtesy, and went away.

The clergymen left the place, and remained away as he said he would, a year. When he returned he spent his first Sabbath morning in the chapel, and there, on the first bench, with a proud, happy look in her eyes sat a little girl, with a round, brown face, and smooth, cropped, black hair, who clutched a folded paper tight in her hand.

For a moment the old gentleman looked at her without recognition. Then he called Maggie Zolliver, grown as only a girl of twelve can grow in a year. The plate was passed about and she put a few pennies into it, but when the rest were gone she lingered, and came softly up to the reading desk.

"Please, sir," she said, "I've stopped to gi' it to yo' fer fear 'twould bo lost i' the plate. It's for the little poor children; and please might some of it be used for the little lame girl yo' spoke of? I feeled as if I knowed her when you tcld us about her knittin' the stockin' and all."

Meanwhile the clergyman had opened the paper and found within it a bank of England note for one pound—five dollars of our currency.

"Why, Maggie, this is a great deal for one little girl to give," said he. "How did you get it? From some rich person, I suppose"

"No, I worked for it," replied Maggie, and the Lord sent me work. Last summer there came a dry time, and there was no laundry in the town where they wash the clothes of the gentlefolk, and we have a deep cistern, and the water there is cool and fresh always. And besides I'd caught a deal in barrels and hogsheads, for the same thing had happened the year before, and I'd taken on't. And I went to the man that hires the washers and asked him if I might fetch water, and he promised me I could, and he said he'd give me a penny a pail. It was a bit of a walk, but I'm strong, and the dry time lasted a long while, and I emptied the cistern and the hogshead and kept going to and fro all day, and when the wet spell did come I had my pound earnt, and I bade him give me't in a nice, clean note, for twas for the clergy gentleman, and this is it, sir if yo' please."

"I think more of it than if a rich man had given me a hundred pounds!" cried the clergyman. "And I shall write down here, 'A pound from little Maggie Zolliver,' and your name will be read to the poor little children in the 'Home' in America."

But Maggie dropped her courtesy again.

"Please sir, don't," said she. "I didn't do it for to be telled aboot. I'd feel shame, and then 'twas God gave me the means to earn the money, and it seems wrong to say 'twas me gave it; and please, sir, if yo' must write a word after it, couldn't yo' just put 'Rain from Heaven,' sir? for 'tis the rain I saved earned the money, if you please."

"And that is the way it was written," said the clergyman. "'Rain from Heaven.' But the angels knew all about Maggie Zolliver. They had her record written, I feel very sure."—New York Ledger.

Jesus in the Heart.

I was telling a dear little baby-child, only three years old, of the kind Saviour, Jesus, who loved him so much and had a place in heaven for every one who come to Him and was willing to go there.

The little one listened to me with wondering brown eyes, for a time in silence. Suddenly he sat upon my knee, and opening his arms wide toward heaven, said earnestly, "I wants my Jesus here!" pressing the tiny hand upon his heart

My heart went up to the Saviour that He would take my child listener at his word, and come as an everlasting guest to the little heart that opened to Him that day. You, dear children, who are reading this little story, have the same "want" as that little one needed. You need Jesus, but do you feel your need? Have you ever felt you must have Him "here"—in your very heart—that you cannot be content until He comes and dwells thereforever?

Little Herbert spoke out the need of every human soul; an indwelling, loving Saviour. No far-off Jesus was enough for him, he wanted a presence and a possession. That is what you and I; and every child of man have need of—Jesus, Jesus only. Will he refuse to supply all your need? Nay, "My God shall supply all your need."

"Behold, I stand at the door and knock If any man hear My voice and openeth the door I will come in unto him." Only let your heart cry to the Lord Jesus, "Lord Jesus, come quickly!"—Canada Presbyterian.

Managing Horses by Electricity.

An ingenious and efficacious method of subduing savage and restive horses has been brought to the notice of the French Societe d'Encouragement of Paris. The machinery is simple, and consists of a Clark's magneto-electric apparatus enclosed in a box, which is placed within easy reach of the driver or rider. A conducting wire running through the reins connects the apparatus with the bit. By turning a handle attached to the electro-magnet a current is formed which effects the horse's mouth, and so surprises him that he stops and stands still. The most dangerous horse may be subdued in a short time by the application of the electric current, combined with a soothing manner and caresses. Experiments have been tried with this apparatus upon some vicious and dangerous horse. A Hungarian horse, which was considered unsafe to shoe, was brought up to the forge, making evident manifestations of his perversity. In a few minutes after the current was applied to him he allowed himself to be caressed on the shoulders and back, then let his legs be touched and his hind-feet raised; and, finally, suffered the workmen to change his shoes without being restrained or showing any further opposition to the proceedings. A trial of the apparatus was also made in the presence of the director of the Cab Company of Paris upon some horses which it had till then been impossible to shoe. They all yielded to its influence. One of them was accustomed to roll on the ground, strike out, and resist in every possible way. In the first application of the currents, says the director in his report, "To my astonishment they lifted his feet without any great difficulty; at the second, he was as easy to shoe as if he had never opposed the least resistance. The animal was conquered. A dangerous horse was arrested instantly after it had sprung into a gallop, by turning the handle of the magneto-electric apparatus. The result is not obtained by any violent or painful action. The current is not strong enough to stupify the animal; it rather produces in him astonishment, and a disagreeable but not painful sensation of an electrical pricking. M. Defoy has also invented an electrical stick or switch, which is not less ingenious than his bit. It is a riding whip, containing two conducting wires, which are insulated by leather. The wires terminate in two points set perpendicularly to the whip, and are put in connection, as the case of the bit, by means of a magneto-electric apparatus. If the horse is in the habit of rearing, it is enough to jog him with the legs as he is preparing to rise, and at the same time apply the points of the electric stick to the top of his shoulders. He will immediately subside and let his head down. So, when a horse tries to turn around the application of the current to the side of his face toward which he is about to turn will cause him to stop immediately. With the help of this little instrument M. Defoy is able in a little while to make a horse obey all his wishes.—The Popular Science Monthly.

The Deaf and Dumb Talking.

The most interesting exhibition the possibilities of teaching the dumb to speak was given by Professor Knapp at his institute Friday. Nineteen children comprised the pupils, thirteen boys and six girls, from five to fifteen years of age.

Upon entering the room and seating themselves at their desks each watched intently the motions of Professor Knapp's lips. He said, "Stand up;" they all arose. "Fold your arms;" they did so. "Sit down;" all complied. None of these children can hear any sound whatever; are totally deaf. During the course Professor Knapp has tried an audiphone, but has met with no success in its use, and less than two years ago none of his present pupils could tell by the motion of his lips what he said or could make any sound whatever. His first exemplification of his theory Friday was by placing two little girls, not over six or seven years old, before him upon a raised platform, and pronouncing distinctly for them the words papa and mama, which they repeated after him, and in order to convince the audience that they understood what they were trying to say, they laughed merrily as they forced out each syllable and pointed to their parents in the audience.

They next wrote on the blackboard the letters f and p to represent the sounds produced by the Professor when he pressed his upper teeth against his lower lip and his two lips together respectively. Upon the Professor pointing to their parents one wrote the word papa and the other mamma. He next produced a number of articles and brought up a half dozen deaf and dumb boys, who readily gave the names of each as shown; they said in succession bell, boat, pipe, eel, doll, ball, flag and sheep. They also wrote the name of each on the blackboard, and distinguished between ship and sheep, cup and tub, and fox and box. From a box of animals, similar to those inhabiting toy arks, they selected each as called upon by the professor in a manner which would have been highly gratifying to the manufacturers of these toys, which have a world-wide notoriety of looking very much more like each other than the animals they are intended to represent.

Exercises in repeating phrases and sentences after their instructor followed, and when he said "I see a bad boy," they at once answered "No! no! a good boy." To the sentence "I have a good mother," one little shaver pointed with glistening eyes to the audience where his mother was shedding tears of joy at the development of his speech.

The efforts of some of them to articulate were painful in the extreme, and could not be looked upon with anything but pity, on account of the remarkable results accomplished. They named in their own peculiar way objects in a picture, and apparently understood by the operation of the sense of sight everything said by the Professor fully as well as those who heard him. The examination was continued in the higher branches of study, mathematics, geography and history, and evinced a progress and efficiency which it seemed hardly possible these unfortunate beings could acquire.

Withal, they seemed delighted to be making the effort to speak, and great rivalry existed among them as to who should answer the questions. Professor Knapp contends that in a course of eight years' tuition, under his system, he can teach the deaf mute to articulate properly, and understand all that is said to him. His exhibition yesterday certainly proves very great progress on the part of his pupils.—Baltimore American.

Suicide of the Scorpion.

Mr Allen Thompson, in a letter published in "Nature," writes that while residing many years ago at the baths of Lucca, in Italy, some friends were much annoyed by small black scorpions. Having been informed that the scorpion would destroy itself if exposed to a sudden light, his friends soon became adepts in catching the scorpions and disposing of them. This consisted in confining the animal under an inverted drinking glass or tumbler, below which a card was inserted when the capture was made, and then, waiting till dark, suddenly bringing the light or a candle near to the glass in which the animal was confined. No sooner was this done than the scorpion invariably showed signs of great excitement, running round and round the interior of the tumbler with reckless velocity for a number of times. This state having lasted for a minute or more, the animal suddenly became quiet, and, turning its tail on the hinder part of its body over its back, brought its recurved sting down upon the middle of the head, and, piercing it forcibly, in a few seconds became quite motionless, and, in fact, quite dead. —Christian Union.

Rag Carpets.

My new one—new two years ago—is almost worn out. And yet, though this one has not done very good service, I think more of rag carpets than I used to. It is not because they are especially fashionable, for I have seen only one rag carpet since I put it upon the floor. That other one in a sitting room of a near neighbor, has since given place to a cotton carpet of gay colors and pattern, costing half a dollar a yard. When I "run in" to see my neighbors I usually sit with my feet upon an ingrain or Brussels carpet. It is very pleasant, and I admire the neat carpet and the flowering plants, and all the dainty trifles on shelves and brackets. But when I go home and find my "hit-or-miss" rag carpet strewn with the little girls' dolly work, and the little boys' whitlings, and the baby's crumbs and playthings, I am glad it is only a rag carpet, and that I am not obliged to worry about the injury which would daily happen to a nice carpet where five childen spend a good part of their waking hours. Besides, I think it is more "Eastlakey" than the very gay carpets of some of my neighbors! Anyhow, it harmonizes better with my very plain sitting-room furniture than good ingrain or Brussels carpeting would. I like nice things, and if ever Fortune gives them to me, I shall be thankful I hope, as I am now for babies and for the companionship of childhood, and for the experience of a mother. I believe I will make one more rag carpet, at least. I think it will be "hit-or-miss" instead of striped, and I think I will put it down as I did this, without sewing the breadths but simply lapping them, one a few inches over the next, stretching each one well, and tacking them very little except at the ends. It is easy then to take up and shake or beat the carpet and put it down again, so that the worn places may be less exposed. It is easy to wash out the most soiled portions. I will have a stronger warp next time, and think I will have it in two colors, so that there will be stripes running lengthwise of the breadths. I will be particular in cutting and tearing the rags to have them so that they will be even-sized threads in the filling, for I have never liked to see the places in this old carpet where thick woollen rags have sometimes joined on to finer cotton strings, making the texture of the carpet uneven, and causing it to wear out more easily. The little girls must sew them neatly, so as not to give a bunchy look when woven. I think I will have the rags divided into three kinds for sewing-a basket of dark rags, one of light, and one of gay colors. The first may include the black and dark-browns and grays The second will contain the light nondescript grays, browns, and old calico stuff; the third anything at all bright. The one who sews can go round and round with these three lots, and so make a tolerably even "hit-or-miss." I am not sure that this will pay, but I am sure that I know of no carpeting for 50 cents a yard that will do as good service as a good rag carpet made as above.—American Agriculturist.

A Great Violinist.

Our Joseph is the greatest living violinist, but not the greatest violinist that ever lived. He has the fullest tone, in fact the grandest tone, I believe, that it is possible to produce on the violin; his mechanism is so irreproachable that, whatever the difficulty, it does not seem to cost him any effort. His intonation is so pure that Helmholtz—who pretended that no instrumentalist could produce the pure fifths which he produces on the harmonium, built expressely to the true pitch which he so energetically advocates—had to admit that nothing could beat Joseph's fifths—a fact which those who knew the difficulty of the problem will be fully able to appreciate. More than this, his conception of the great masters, and his unimpeachable honesty in rendering them, stand unrivaled in the world. Nevertheless, with all the classical repose and purity of the antique statue, the combination of the highest intelligence and the purest taste, the most wonderful tone and peerless mechanism, he attains not the divine or the infernal passion of Paganini, which stands alone in this century, and although you cannot refuse our Joseph, and do not wish to withhold from him unlimited admiration, the highest esteem, the deepest regard, yet you must admit that he cannot drive you to that degree of madness which it was given to certain artists to excite in their audiences—as Liszt on the piano, Paganini on the violin, and Malibran with her singing—all three artists well remembered. The stories told about Paganini when he played, and old men who had never, for long years, touched their violins, brought them out from the dust, thoroughly mad after caressing the instrument again in their arms; the despair, on the other hand, of such immense violinists as Mayseder, who after a concert of Paganini at Vienna, stood there, his head bent on his breast, the tears rolling down his cheeks, dropping his violin, which was saved from his treading it into pieces only by the old violinmaker, A. Fisher, precipitately interceding, when Mayseder exclaimed, "I am nothing" (Ich bin rein nichts), and sank down annihilated into the chair, and would not be comforted; such stories as Borne, in his inimitable Pariser Briefe, describing Paganini's second concert, tells of a legend that he had "signed away his soul to the Evil One in exchange for the talent that would subjugate the world and produce him a mine of gold;" such effect as he produced on Malibran, who at first would not believe in his superiority, and then fainted away in her box, unable to bear the superhuman power of of his genius—such moments are known to have occurred in Joseph's life. It is possible that his profound contempt for all that is humbug, and his perhaps too eager avoidance of effect in the least sought for, may be the reason of his more quiet, though profound, success.

Those who have not heard Paganini will most likely find the ideal of which their imagination dreams in Joseph, the most accomplished violinist of our days. His amiable character, his spotless honor, his charming simplicity, have made him as many friends as he has admirers, and surely this is a great happiness.—Scottish-American Journal.

Ayer's
Hair Vigor,

FOR RESTORING GRAY HAIR TO ITS NATURAL VITALITY AND COLOR.

It is a most agreeable dressing, which is at once harmless and effectual, for preserving the hair. It restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray, light, and red hair, to a rich brown, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use thin hair is thickened, and baldness often though not always cured. It checks falling of the hair immediately, and causes a new growth in all cases where the glands are not decayed; while to brashy, weak, or otherwise diseased hair, it imparts vitality and strength, and renders it pliable.

The VIGOR cleanses the scalp, cures and prevents the formation of dandruff; and, by its cooling, stimulating, and soothing properties, it heals most if not all of the humors and diseases peculiar to the scalp, keeping it cool, clean, and soft, under which conditions diseases of the scalp and hair are impossible.

As a Dressing for Ladies' Hair

The VIGOR is incomparable. It is colorless, contains neither oil nor dye, and will not soil white cambric. It imparts an agreeable and lasting perfume, and as an article for the toilet it is economical and unsurpassed in its excellence.

THE LATEST NEWS FROM OUR MISSIONARY IN SOOCHOW.

THREE ADULTS AND TWO CHILDEN RECEIVED INTO THE CHURCH.

Our Saviour Himself tells us that the beginning of a Christian church is as the sprouting of a grain of mustard seed. The progress of truth when it is preached in a heathen land is always slow at first. From the nature of the case this must be expected; those in Christian lands must be patient with their missionaries and not be weary in well doing because the latter cannot in a year or two sow the seed, make it ripen, and have a great and glorious ingathering of souls. It would, however, be unreasonable, and would show a great lack of faith if missionaries and their supporters did not confidently expect that truth must conquer in the end.

In Soochow we have had our time of working in hope. Year after year we have watched our little flock and felt distressed because it is was so small. All we can do is to work in faith, trusting in the exceeding great and precious promises. But this year we see some fruits of our labors. A woman who first joined the church more than ten years ago, but had for some years refused to be numbered among God's people, recently sought admission into our church. This change is, we hope, the result of the Spirit's influence in her heart. Miss Safford's kindness to her and good influence over her seem, so far as man can see, to be the means by which the change has been wrought. She was received into the church at our last communion and her grandson, a child about four years old, was baptized. At our next communion we expect to restore to church fellowship a young man whose privileges have been for a year suspended. His case is hopeful: he was disciplined on his own spontaneous confession, and is restored at his earnest request. He is teaching in Mrs. DuBose's boarding school, and is, of couse, under good influence. We also expect to receive at the same time on profession of her faith a woman thirty-five years of age who has for two or three years sought admission into the church. She was first brought to know the truth under Miss Safford's influence, and for years looked to her as her only spiritual guide. She is now Mrs. Davis' servant and has been for several months receiving daily instruction. She tells the women, who come in great numbers to see Mrs. Davis, that she believes in Christ: she makes known the Gospel according to her ability; she tries to learn more of the truth day by day; is learning to read the New Testament; at family prayer she pays the closest attention. Her oldest child, a daughter, has married and, according to Chinese custom, belongs to her husband's family. Her other child, a little boy five years old, will be baptized when she joins the church. He is pupil in one of our schools, and receives Christian instruction daily. All together they are not many—three adults and two children, but we are very happy to have this much encouragement. The general outlook is very encouraging. We who are here in the field see many indications of God's watchful providence and care over our work.

THE PEOPLE ARE BECOMING ACQUAINTED WITH THE GRAND FUNDAMENTAL DOCTRINES OF CHRISTIANITY.

Day after day many influences are at work bring the millions of this province to a knowledge of the truth. Multitudes hear the word daily in our street chapels; about two hundred children are in our schools taught the way of life; crowds of women and girls visit the missionary ladies and learn more or less of Christian doctrine; books and tracts are distributed by the thousand; in all these ways the truth is shining forth into this heathen darkness. A few days ago Mrs. Davis and I went to a small village near Soochow. I went along the streets selling books and tracts, while she remained on the boat and talked to women and girls who came on board to see her. She also went ashore for a short time and paid an interesting visit to the family of one of the villagers. The female members of this family treated her with great kindness, and insisted on her coming again. We found some of both sexes who had heard the Gospel and remembered not a little of it. I never go out into the country around Soochow without meeting men who have some knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus.

THE PEOPLE ARE LEARNING THAT THE LIES CIRCULATED CONCERNING MISSIONARIES ARE MADE OUT OF THE WHOLE CLOTH.

The most common fable is that we give medicine to the scholars who come to our schools, and to any that we can get under our influence, especially church members, in order to make them believe what we tell them. We have had during the past year in our schools forty pupils. The second child that came spent his first hour in our house crying because he thought that we were preparing a dose for him. A few days ago three of our scholars came in to evening family prayers. Some come every day. Sometimes half a dozen of them are present. As these three boys were bright and intelligent, we all had a pleasant chat after prayers, and I sent them away just before 9 o'clock, fearing that their parents might grow uneasy about them. The parents of one of them, not knowing where he was, searched for him, and all their neighbors learned that they had been anxious on the child's account. When the parents learned where the boy had been they and their neighbors, alike foolish and unreasonable, concluded that the foreigners had evil designs upon their child, that they would give him medicine that would produce some fearful effect upon him. The strength of their delusion lay in its very vagueness. So they took him from school. But the lad himself knew that the fears and suspicions of his parents was sheer nonsense In a few days he returned to the school. All the scholars know that after months of attendance no medicine is given them, and having learned what the foreigners really are, the positive truth displaces the vague falsehoods which thousands of Chinamen believe.

OFFICIAL RECOGNITION AND PROTECTION.

One of the most encouraging features of the present aspect of affairs is that we have at last official recognition and protection. Our stay in Soochow has long been ignored rather than allowed; we have been simply disregarded rather than tolerated. Of course, the officials know that we are here, but they pretended to ignore the fact that we resided in the city or had any right to do so. Our being formally and officially recognized was brought about in the following manner. A few years ago a gallant young Englishman named Margary, passed through China till he reached the extreme southwestern province, Yunnan. His object was to determine which is the best overland route from India to China. He carried passports given him from Pekin, but was nevertheless murdered at the instigation of the Governor of Yunnan city. His murder was an abominable outrage and an eternal disgrace to China. The English were furious and war was imminent, for the Chinese Government refused to punish the officer who perpetrated the disgraceful crime. Something had to be done to quiet the English, and as they are very anxious to have China open to commercial intercourse, the Chinese Government agreed to open several new treaty ports. The present Empress who holds sway during the minority of the youthful Emperor has ordered the Chinese officials to take better care of foreigners. The officials would like to drive foreigners from the land but one was murdered while trying to find a road for commercial intercourse connecting India and China and behold! The result is that several new ports are opened. It is evidently bad policy to kill the foreign devils: that is the way in which the matter presents itself to the high officials who guide the affairs of the nation. If a few more Englishmen are put out of the way as Margary was, the whole county will be open to foreign intercourse. The result of this conviction is that the officials have been ordered to take care of the lives of foreigners. Accordingly one of the secretaries of a district governor in Soochow has been instructed to take charge of the foreigners who reside in the city, or who come to Soochow on a visit. A proclamation has been issued which states explicitly that foreigners have by national treaty the right to open chapels, hospitals, or schools, to rent land and build foreign houses thereon. This is the best thing of the kind that I have seen. When the governor's secretary called to give me a copy of the proclamation, I pointed out to him that the phrase "rent land" was not "buy land." "O well," he replied, "it is all the same; if you wish to buy land there will be no trouble made about it." According to Chinese theory the land is the Emperor's and cannot be alienated. Foreigners refuse to become Chinese citizens for that would be to forgo the right to be protected by their consuls. There is here a difficulty theoretical but not real. No objection is made to a foreigner's holding land in China. He is not allowed to call it his, but can employ a native to buy the land in his own name and then deliver all the papers into the foreigner's hands. The transaction is virtually a sale, and is perfectly safe. The original owner lays no claim to the land: the foreigner's agent makes no claim to it. The purchaser takes possession of the property. The official who has jurisdiction over the place where the land is gives the foreigner a proclamation telling the people not to molest him: he builds his house and remains in quiet possession of the same. The people flock to see the new house and the foreign lady who can speak Chinese and the only inconvenience is that more come than can be received.

WE SORELY NEED LARGER PREMISES.

We are living in a rented native house which is too small to suit the demands of our growing work.

Many women come to see Mrs. Davis during the week and a very common question is, "which is your worship day?" It is a very natural question: they hear Mrs. Davis and her woman urging the importance of worshiping the one true God. "Well, how do you worship Him? Do you burn incense and candles? Do you bow down and knock your foreheads on the ground? Or do you recite passages from your books?" Of course the proper reply is, "Come on worship day and see." But we cannot give this invitation. We cannot hold services in the street chapel because it is too near the street. When we would sing, there would be a great rush into the chapel. When we would read, the unlimited crowd would talk and walk about. And when we stood up to pray there would be so much talking and commotion that there could be no solemnity or profit in the service. It is easy to simply preach in the chapel. For there is only one foreigner present and he is on the rostrum whither the people are expected to look. There is no foreign lady present to distract the attention of the audience from the services, and by simply sitting still tempting the women to come and talk to her. There is no singing, no rising up to pray, or sitting down to hear. If the people were like the country clown who went to church and afterwards said, "I didn't understand much but I rose and fell with 'em every time," it would be easy to hold services in the street chapel. The trouble is that here they rise but they do not fall. They walk around and stare at anything or put a question to anybody that specially attracts their attention.

We cannot ask the women to come and see our manner of worship for the school-room is the only place where we can hold Sunday services. And it is too small to seat any besides the scholars and our family. If we had a larger place we could have on Sundays an audience of two hundred. Many of these would be women and girls belonging to the middle class of society, the class to whom we look with deepest interest and hope. In a year thousands would learn the way of life who have little or no prospect of learning it unless they come here, for we are the only Protestant missionaries in this end of the city. We are as those who walk along the high margin of a swift stream which is sweeping thousands into destruction. We would save the wretched drowning souls but we cannot reach them. All we can do is to wring our hands in agony and implore Christians in our native land to send us the means that we need.

ABSTRACT OF PROCEEDINGS OF FAYETTEVILLE PRESBYTERY.

This body met at Laurel Hill, N. C., April 21st, 1880, and was opened with a sermon by Rev. Wm. S. Lacy, from Psalm xix: 10. All the ministers were present and 29 ruling elders

Rev. N. T. Bowden was chosen moderator and Messrs. W. J. Stuart and D. McIntyre clerks.

Rev. E. McNair, D. D., of Ouachita Presbytery, and Rev. S. C. Alexander, of Mecklenburg Presbytery, being present, were invited to sit as corresponding members.

The usual committees were announced by the moderator.

The committees previously appointed to install Rev. Roger Martin pastor of Centre and Shoe Heel churches, and Rev. John H. Coble pastor of Laurinburg church, reported the discharge of these duties.

Several visiting committees reported churches visited.

HOME MISSIONS.

The average salary promised laboring ministers is $714.

Sustentation—For the year 30 churches gave $214 97, 20 churches gave nothing. Amount appropriated for 6 months—Harmony church $25, Cameron $25, Salem $25; total $75.

Evangelistic Work—Twenty churches gave $130 81, 30 sent no contributions; 4 churches paid to colored evangelistic work $12 50. Invalid Fund, 25 churches gave $137 16 and 25 gave nothing.

Supplies—Tirza: Rev. N. McKay, D. D., one Sabbath and sacraments; Lebanon (by request): Rev. E. McNair, D. D., one Sabbath and sacraments; Rockingham: Rev. Roger Martin, one Sabbath and sacraments; Galatia: Rev. A. McQueen, one Sabbath and sacraments.

The following resolutions appended to said report were adopted:

Resolved, 1. That the Presbytery urge the officers of our churches to make more vigorous efforts to pay the salaries of their ministers promptly at the time appointed in the call sanctioned by Presbytery.

2. That the treasurers of our churches be instructed to pay over all benevolent contributions to the treasurer of Presbytery at the end of every two months from the first of each year.

The report of the Treasurer and his vouchers were reported to the Finance Committee.

The report of the committee on the resolution to General Assembly was adopted. This is an encouraging report.

The committee to prepare a suitable biographical sketch of Rev. Archibald Baker, deceased, presented their report, which was accepted, and a copy ordered to be forwarded to Mrs. Baker. Sessional records approved.

COMMISSIONERS TO GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

Rev. Joseph Evans and Mr. Daniel McIntyre, principals; Rev. D. Fairley and Mr. A. S. Baker, alternates.

Shoe Heel church, Robeson county, N. C., was chosen as the place, and Thursday before the third Sabbath in October, 1880, at 11 o'clock a. m., as the time for holding the fall session of Presbytery.

The Committee on Education made their report.

Messrs. Frank P. Harrell and Lanchlin A. McLean, having completed their theological courses, having delivered their usual sermons and lectures, and having sustained the usual examinations, were duly licensed to preach the Gospel. They obtained permission to labor without our bounds for the next six months.

One candidate was taken under our care.

Presbytery ordered $50 of Mizpah church fund to be paid to Rockingham church.

Rev. D. Fairley reported on colportage.

Historical sketches of churches were ordered to be forwarded to Rev. J. Rumple, Salisbury, N. C.

Home Missions Committee submitted bylaws, which were approved. The usual missionary meeting was held Saturday afternoon. Addresses were divided, and a collection amounting to $33 taken up.

VOTE OF THANKS.

Resolved, That the hearty thanks of Fayetteville Presbytery are due and are hereby tendered to the congregation of Laurel Hill church for their generous hospitality to its members during its present sessions, and that the pastor be requested to read this resolution from the pulpit.

This short abstract is published, as the Stated Clerk hopes to have the printed minutes out in two or three weeks.

JACOB'S WRESTLING.

"And He said, Let Me go, for the day breaketh. And he said, "I will not let Thee go, except thou bless me."—Gen. xxxii: 26.

BY REV. OLIVER CRANE, M D.

On Thee, Thou great Unknown,
Am I dependent,
For I am here alone,
Without defendant:
If Thou wilt mercy show
And not oppress me,
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

The struggle has been long,
And strength is failing,
I know that Thou art strong,
And all-prevailing,
But bodings darker grow,
And fears distress me;
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

I know the night is past,
And day is breaking,
But I upon this cast
My all am staking;
I cannot bear the blow,
If Thou repress me,
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

The morning light will bring
Impending danger;
To Thee alone I cling,
A lonely stranger;
O save me from my foe,
And now redress me,
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

I would not, though I fall,
Be Thee impugning,
But let me now prevail,
In importuning;
Since all to Thee I owe,
Bid hope possess me,
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

Thy seal is on me set,
And I am halting;
But Thou, though maiming, yet
Art me exalting:
Thou dost a name bestow—
As prince address me,
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

Thou Messenger Divine,
From heaven descended,
O! make me henceforth Thine,
Till life is ended;
Thou canst o'ercome, but O!
Do not suppress me,
I will not let Thee go,
Except Thou bless me.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

Four benedictions are bestowed on the passive virtues, four on the active. To bear poverty with lowly resignation to God; to mourn, and yet trust that all is for the best; to reproduce the meekness which Jesus Himself displayed, and to endure trial and persecutions loyally for His sake, are the negative graces demanded as conditions of membership of the New Kingdom. But active virtues are no less required: the hungering and thirsting after righteousness, which finds its food in fresh, joyful, continuous acts of goodness; the mercy which delights to bless the wretched; the purity of heart, which strives to realize in the soul the image of God, and the gentleness which spreads peace around it.

The key-note of all the utterances of Christ reveals itself in these few sentences. His kingdom is at once present and future—present by the undoubting faith in His assurances that it would hereafter assuredly be attained; future in the fact that the realization of its joys was reserved for the life to come. Unlike John, He proclaims that the time of expectation is over; that the New Kingdom has already come as a living power in the soul, diffusing its blessings at once within and around its members. It is established in its rights and duties, to develop and advance henceforth, till its glory covers the earth. In one aspect, it is incomplete till its full realization in the distant future; in another it is already perfect, for it reigns in every single soul which has humbly accepted Jesus as its King.

After this introduction, He proceeds to enforce on His disciples the duties of their new relation to Him, and to cheer them by recalling the dignity it confers. "You have, indeed, good cause to rejoice," says He, "and to be brave of heart, for ye are the salt of the earth; the light of the world; a city set on a hill." Mere ostentation, or insincere parade of virtue, were abhorrent to Him, and formed His great charge against the acted religion of the day. But the enthusiasm of true goodness, He tells them, must of necessity be seen and felt. Life is shown by its energy; where there is no active vital power there is only death. He prescribes no lengthened code of duties, but trusts to the ardor and devotion of loyalty to Himself as a perfect equivalent. Drawn to Him by grateful and lowly affection He leaves it to the love of His followers to exceed all precise direction, and outstrip all formal requirements. His kingdom is as strictly under law as any other; but for the endless statutes of earthly monarchies and the equally unnumbered prescriptions of the old theocracy, He substitutes a single all-sufficing law—the law of love which makes each member of His kingdom a law to Himself. All are to give themselves up to Him as unreservedly as He has given Himself up for them.

Intense sincerity is thus made the fundamental demand, and His own personal example their standard and pattern. To be the light of the world, they must needs look to Him, for He had especially applied that name to Himself. They had the immense advantage of example so much more effective than precept. The New Kingdom was only the reflection of His own character, and thus His commands were best carried out by imitating His life; for He Himself was the one perfect illustration of complete fulfilment of its laws. No grudging or partial devotion would suffice. They must heartily conform their inmost being to His image, and shed around them, in their respective spheres, the spiritual blessings which beamed brightest from Himself. Thus calmly, and as His natural right and place He constitutes Himself the grand ideal of humanity, and men feel that there is no rashness or incongruity in His assumption of the stupendous dignity.

Failure however is human, and hence, a few solemn words of warning are added. "Salt keeps and makes sound what would else corrupt. But impure salt may lose its saltness, and once lost it cannot be restored. What was before of blessed use is, henceforth worthless and may be cast out upon the road to be trodden under foot. If you, the salt of the earth, lose your spiritual worth, by faintheartedness, or cloth, or dark unfaithfulness, your needed energy and efficiency are irreparably gone. Who will take your place? You will be no longer fit for the work I have assigned you. If the salt be pure, it will not lose its power; it is the earth and impurities mixed with it, that make it worthless; and so you must put away all that might make you go back, if you would be true disciples. Your lasting worth depends on your devotion to me being unqualified and absolute. You are to enlighten men as the sun enlightens the world. I am the light of the world: you shine in my light; see that, in turn, you illuminate the darkness around you. A light is to shine, not to be hidden. Like a lamp on its stand, it is your office to shed light, and drive off darkness. The beams of your good works must shine before men, that they may honor God, your Father, in Heaven. Like a city set on a hill, you are to draw on you all eyes."—Geike's Life of Christ.

PRIVATE CHARACTER and PUBLIC TRUST.

There is nothing more common than to hear it affirmed that in seeking men for public trust, or in putting them into public offices, the community has no right to inquire into their private characters, or to make any serious deficiencies to be found in these a reason for withholding public confidence, or for refusing to bestow that honor and influence justly due to superior ability, which would otherwise be freely and frankly rendered. Now, we altogether protest against the principle involved in this way of talking. In many cases it has greatly helped to keep shameless vice in countenance when this has been associated with intellectual ability, while it has tended to lower the general tone of morality, by the worthless being honored, and the immoral promoted to positions of trust and emolument. It is quite true that mere respectability of personal character is not all in all, and that it would be exceedingly absurd and short sighted to put an incompetent blockhead into a position, the duties of which he could not discharge, simply because his private morals were pure and his general conduct unimpeachable. But, while this is the case, it is still beyond all contradiction that in a state of society in any measure approaching to what it ought to be, the personal character of those who seek to be leaders will not only be carefully scrutinized, but moral excellence will always be an important factor in determining the amount of confidence to be reposed and the degree of honor and admiration to be rendered.

Instead of such a rule being less rigidly applied to public servants it ought to be more so, and, indeed, the extent to which it is so used may very well be taken as a gauge of the current morality and an indication of how general opinion and practice tend. The noble people will be nobly represented and the moral will generally be found in much the same position. If the base, the intemperate, the tricky, the false and the licentious are found in places of trust and honor, it must be taken as an indication, in a free country, that they are a fair average representation of the morality of those who have chosen them, and who, so far, regard them with confidence and honor. And yet, if this is so, and that it is, is beyond all reasonable question, are we not forced to some rather unpleasant and humiliating conclusions, as we—all over this continent—contemplate those who, after all due processes of constitutional winnowing have been gone through, are to be spoken of and treated as the "finest of our wheat?" Of the humblest township councillors up to the highest office-holders in North America, is it to be said in general "They are, mentally, competent—and, morally, respectable?" In very many cases this can truly be affirmed; but, in very many more, it is notoriously and unblushingly the reverse. People have no need to be either censorious or suspicious before coming to such a conclusion. It is acknowledged on all hands, and in too many instances it is even defended. "Yes, he's a drunken, worthless reprobate; but he does the work we choose him for efficiently and well." "His private conduct is, we know, a perpetual scandal; but what have we to do with his private character so long as he attends to his public duties?" "Morally he is tainted to the core, his mouth is full of oaths and his life is a record of social villanies; but he is very clever and speaks well." "Yes, he lies dreadfully; but has he ever betrayed the public interests?" And so the deprecating, apologetic, or positively laudatory phrases go the round, and councillors, aldermen, reeves, mayors, members of parliament, etc., etc., have, not only their private, though ostentatious, iniquities condoned and poo-poohed, but have them even made so sacred that the slightest reference to their existence as a bar to office is too often denounced as far worse than the worst thing condemned, and far more indicative of a bad heart and a worthless character. And so it comes to pass that professedly religious men are not only in many cases represented by rascals, but are often found moving heaven and earth to have these elected; that sober men put drunkards upon their ticket; that foul-mouthed blasphemers are patted on the back by those who claim to have the fear of God before their eyes, and that fathers of families, and patterns at that, often rather chuckle than otherwise over the escapades of their favorites, though these escapades have issued in homes being laid desolate and in lives being blasted for ever more. Nobody at the present time in the slightest degree acquainted with public life or public men, whether in Canada or the States, would ever affect to call such representations into question, but the veto is always ready and the hackneyed excuses is thought always sufficient, "Private character has nothing to do with public trust." "He's a worthless man, we allow, but an able councillor; a drunken reprobate, but a clever alderman; a swearing ruffian, but a capital reeve; a swindling trickster, but a first-rate mayor; an impudent liar, with a brow which has long since forgotten how to blush, but an able M. P., and a highly honorable man: "a"—but there is no use in completing the sentence. It can be duly rounded off with an et cetera, to suit each individual experience. Is this what ought to be? We very much more than doubt if it is. And sure we are it is not what will be when Christianity has assumed its rightful position, and Christian morality has come to exert its proper influence, and to assert and maintain its regal and rightful sway.

THE SWEET GALILEAN VISION.

M. Renan has been discoursing of Christianity in a patronizing way before London audiences. By soft words and sweet phrases he seeks to ingratiate himself with the Christian public. The "Sweet Galilean Vision" he terms Christ's earthly ministry, and this leads the London Spectator to pay its respects in this wise:

"If Christ were really what we hold him to be—one who, being in the form of God, thought it not a thing to be grasped at to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took on him the form of a servant, in order to raise human life up to his own level—there was much more in his teaching that was not sweet than that was sweet, much more that was severe, much more that savored of the fire which he came to send on earth, and which he saw in spirit already kindled, than of that mere fragrant and gorgeous lily of Eastern imagination, to which Mr. Renan is so much in the habit of comparing it. For a different reason, still less can Christianity be praised as a "Sweet Galilean Vision," if it is what M. Renan believes it, that is, if it is only one amongst many equally legitimate and equally striking blossoms of the human spirit. * * * That is sweet which adds to the beauty of the universe without increasing its burdens. If Christianity be true, it has increased our burdens for our own good, in order that, in the immortal life, our burdens may be far less heavy and our hearts lighter. If it be false, it has increased our burdens to no purpose, in order that millions might strive for a kind of life which, though it may have a beauty of its own, is no more incumbent on men than any other kind of life which the moral genius of man might devise, and is infinitely more difficult, laborious, and indeed impossible of attainment. In neither case does it deserve to be patronized as a mere rare and lovely flower of Eastern growth. It is either a supernatural religion of most arduous obligation, or a superstition of a most arbitrary kind—either a fire to burn up half our nature that it may glorify the other half, or a fire to burn up one-half that it may indurate and mutilate what remains. Whichever of the two it be, it is not a "sweet vision," but either a very awful or a very terrible vision. If the vision of the worm that dieth not and the fire that is not quenched, be true, it is sufficiently dreadful; if it be false, it is sufficiently shocking. In neither case is it very sweet. There is something in the honeyed words which the Pantheists of the new culture use about Christianity, that seeme to us worse than the bitterest sneers of the old infidelity. They talk of a very sweet thing in costumes."

CONSECRATION.

[A friend sends the following paper which that devoted servant of Christ, the late Rev. M. J. Wallace, of Arkansas, prepared and adopted for the rule of his life.]

1. I throw myself on the mercy of God entirely through Christ for salvation.
2. I throw myself wholly into the service of God, as my life-work.
3. I cast myself on the wisdom of God, for direction.
4. I cast myself wholly on the faithfulness of God, for support.
5. I look wholly to God for whatever reward He may give me.
6. I take God alone for my portion, in time and eternity. I hang my soul, my life, my happiness, my all upon God in Christ, and this without reserve and forever, cutting loose from all else and binding myself and my all in Christ.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

FOREIGN.

Gleaned from Exchanges:

Greece has a new Episcopal newspaper, the Voice of Religion, published at Athens.

The French Council of State has decided that bishops are to be styled in decrees Monsieur, instead of Monseignenr, the latter term being contrary to the law of 1802.

Owing to the intended expulsion of the Jesuits from France, renewed rumors of the selection of Jersey as a place of refuge for a large body of that fraternity are in circulation.

The Viceroy of Egypt has given to the mission of the United States Presbyterians $40,000 in property, and the donations of the Maharajah Dhuleep Singh have amounted in all to $80.000. It has thirty-five stations, nearly 1,000 communicants and 1,200 pupils.

The Rev. Chas E. B. Reed, Assistant Secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, in a paper read at the Mildmay Conference in 1878, estimated that 150,000,000 Bibles or parts of the Bible had been circulated in the past seventy-five years.

The Rev. Dr. Somerville, the Scotch evangelist, is holding meetings in Florence, Italy, and the National Theatre, which holds 1,500 persons, has been crowded, hundreds having been unable to gain admission. The people desire him to secure the largest theatre, which holds 3,000 persons.

Professor Lagarde, of Gottingen, has contradicted in the German papers the story of a MS. of the Apostle Peter having been found among the papers of a deceased Swedish Jew at Jernsalem, and of the British and Foreign Bible Society having vainly offered £2,000 for it. He has been at the pains of writing to the President of the Society, who informs him that the story is quite unfounded.

Military chaplains are to be dispensed with at the end of the year in France. The Roman Catholics have not yet decided what to do, but in all the garrison towns where there is a church the Protestant ministers will go personally to the barracks to invite the soldiers to attend service on Sundays. There are sixty-four garrison towns which have no Protestant place of worship, and in these ministers on special mission will ask permission of the mayors to receive soldiers in one of the halls of the mairie.

A Brahmin's estimate of missionary work is given by the Rev. Dr. Chamberlain, of the American Presbyterian Mission at Arcot, India, who says that after one of his Bible lectures a Brahmin asked permission to say a few words, and proceeded thus: "Behold that mango tree yonder. Its fruit is approaching to ripeness. Bears it that fruit for itself? From the moment the fruit is ripe till the last mango is pelted off it is assailed with sticks and stones by every passer-by, till it stands bereft of leaves and bleeding from its broken branches. Is it discouraged? Does it say, If I am barren no one will pelt me? Not at all. Next season the buds and fruit appear again. That is a type of these missionaries. I have watched them well. What do they come here for? Not for gain; some of our clerks get more than they. Not for an easy life; see how they work! No! They seek, like the mango tree, to bear fruit for others, and this, too, though treated with much abuse. Now, what makes them do all this for us? It is their Bible;" and at the end of an eloquent defense of that book he said: "Do what we will, it is the Christian's Bible that will sooner or later work the regeneration of this land."

The Brahmins in India are divided by the question whether the water of the Ganges, their holy river, will not lose its sanctity after it has been bridged over by Europeans.

The Kafrarian Watchman states that the thirtieth session of the Board of Revisers of the Bible into the Kaffir language has just closed. The work done was the revision of the Psalms from the first to the seventy-first.

The decrees on the religious orders have been extended to the French colonies. The Jesuits have establishments in Bourbon and Madagascar, and other unauthorized orders are also represented in the colonies.

Pope Leo XIII. is said to have made himself very unpopular with the Italian clergy by his district discipline and by his having withdrawn from the higher clergy much of the patronage and power of nominating to the vacant benefices which they have hitherto enjoyed.

SUPERFICIALITY.

The great Fichte it is said almost desired "taxes on knowledge" to allay it a little.

The world has made giant strides in this respect during the last century. The media for conveying information have been so greatly multiplied that the diffusion of knowledge may be said to be general. Even the young can remember the time when books, periodicals, newspapers and general literature were much scarcer than at the present time. The newspaper, as it is now known, is a very modern institution. The average man is much better informed than his ancestor of fifty years ago. This state of things will render the man of encyclopedic attainments an impossibility for the future. It has already introduced an era of specialists, and this tendency will doubtless prove a growing one. The departments will be divided and subdivided until excellence in any one division will require exclusive attention to a very small arc of the universal circle. This will no doubt insure a higher standard in every department in which there is competition. The result will therefore be a good one. But in general there will be great and increasing danger of superficiality growing out of this general diffusion of knowledge. A comparison between the older and more modern literature will reveal this danger; the modern style is undoubtedly less heavy than the older, and alas! the matter is considerable lighter also. Compare any late work with one written on the same topic in the long s and ck period and in the majority of instances the more recent work is a very weak dilution, more easily swallowed perhaps and more palatable but with far less solid, substantial nutriment in it.

It is a question whether the multiplication of vehicles of information is an unqualified advantage. Here comes in the proverb of "the man of one book"; there is a wholesome and suggestive truth underlying the old adage, though in its literalness it may be a falsehood. It is not what is taken into the intellectual stomach, but what is digested that gives muscle to a man's thought. The most hopeless case is the man who reads incessantly without reflection. Some men devour books so voraciously, and in such variety, that they are afflicted with mental dyspepsia and their constitutions are ruined. Others are inveterate tasters; they never eat anything but only nibble; their stereotyped phrase with reference to a book is, "I have dipped into it" "I have glanced at it." After sampling it they lay it aside with the delusive idea that they will read it at some future time. But it is never done. New specimens are sampled and likewise laid aside and the library instead of being an association of the man's friends, counsellors and companions, becomes instead, a cemetery where they are affectionately, tenderly and even reverently buried. This "dipping into" and "glancing at" becomes a confirmed habit, and confirmed superficiality is the result.

LAYING OF CORNER STONE.

We learn that the band of active Presbyterians of Ebenezer colored church, Newbern, N. C., have felt encouraged to buy their lumber and begin their building. On Thursday, May 13th, in hope and fear, with prayer and psalms, they laid their beautiful marble corner stone, a present from Mr. Geo. W. Claypoole, the skilled marble worker of Newbern. The ceremonies were introduced by Rev. L. C. Vass, pastor of the 1st Presbyterian church. Appropriate addresses were made by Rev. A. A. Scott, educated at Lincoln University, and now serving the church, and by Ruling Elder George H. White, attorney at law. The colored Masons, in full regalia, increased the interest by their beautiful rites, and the Newbern colored band added excellent music. In the presence of a large audience the stone was set in its place, with prayer, in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

Since the appeal of Ebenezer church for help appeared in our columns they have received from several sources, some without any name, $35, and from gifts on laying the corner stone $13, making $48. This leaves $500 to be raised in order to get $100 promised conditionally. Surely kind friends will now come up to help "Ebenezer," that this work begun thus may not stop until it is completed for worship. Help Christ in the person of His poor children. Send any gift from $1 on to any point along the line to $500 to to the acting treasurer, Rev. L. C. Vass, pastor of First Presbyterian church, Newbern, N. C. For fear you may forget send at once. Who will be first, and who will be the largest contributor?

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION IN NORTH CAROLINA

The Annual Report of Hon. John C. Scarborough, Superintendent of Public Instruction of North Carolina, 1879, lies before us. This report is to the Governor, and contains information and statistics of the public schools, but as the General Assembly of the State was not in session at the time of its preparation, recommendations for the improvement of the school system and the increase of the school fund are reserved for the next annual report, to be submitted to the Assembly at its regular session of 1881.

While we do not call into question the propriety of the course pursued by the Superintendent, we could wish that the public might be informed as to the plans proposed, particularly for the increase of the school fund, and the more that now, if we do not fail to discern the signs of the times, there is a disposition among the people to urge forward educational reform. We content ourselves with a very general review of the report at hand.

It appears from the report that the number of children in the State between the ages of six and twenty-one years is, of whites 271,348, and of colored 154,841. Attending the public schools at any time from September 1st, 1878, to September 1st, 1879, there were 153,354 white children, and 85,215 colored. Average attendance: white, 93,951; colored, 56,837.

The number of school houses is, for whites 2,487; for colored 970. Number of public schools taught during the year, for white children, 3,605; for colored 1898. Value of public school property, for whites, $109,597 50; for colored, $33,971 60. Number of white teachers of all grades, 2,423, and of colored teachers, 948. Average length of school terms 9¼ weeks, and average salary of teachers $22 14.

The total receipts from poll and property taxation amounted to $288,613 21; from all other sources, $184,588 13. Total, $473,201 34. On hand September 1, 1879, $147,211 79.

There have been paid to the graded schools, white and colored, from the Peabody Fund, $3,600; to the University Normal School, $600, and to the State Colored Normal School, at Fayetteville, $500. Besides these sums $2,000 have been paid by Dr. Sears, but not through the Superintendent's office.

Two hundred and ninety-two students attended the University Normal School, and 93 attended the Colored Normal School.

The tabular statements are well gotten up, and show the details in a business-like manner.

NOTES AND JOTTINGS.

Thanks to the Marshalls of the Davidson College societies for an invitation to attend the commencement exercises—also to Marshalls of Franklin Literary Society of the Horner school of Oxford, N. C., for a similar compliment.

Our "News Notes" will be found specially varied and interesting this week. On account of its timeliness we call special attention to an article on first page from Canada Presbyterian entitled "Private Character and Public Trust."

The Charlotte Observer says:

Rev. L. B. Gibson, colored, who had attended the negro Horne as his spiritual adviser and conducted the services at the gallows, afterwards accompanying the remains to Mt. Mourne, where they were buried, reported to us that during Horne's confinement in prison and since his execution, he has discovered that many of the colored people were ignorant of the fact that burglary is a capital crime.

We have thought as much, and no pains should be spared to let the fact be known that by the laws of North Carolina, the penalty of burglary is death.

The catalogue of Davidson College is before us. The students number 112, from North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, and Texas; the three States first named being most largely represented. The scope of instruction at Davidson is wide and the variety great. The faculty is composed of gentlemen of thorough attainments and educational skill. An atmosphere of the highest morality surrounds the students. All in all Davidson College, as a training school for young men, has no superior in the country.

It is superfluous perhaps to state that the N. C. Medical Society which assembled in Wilmington last week is a very highly intelligent and, in the main, dignified body of gentlemen. They left a very fine impression, we feel sure, upon our community. One thing, we are disposed to bring into prominence in this connection. The committee of the New Hanover Medical Society having in charge arrangements for the excursion to Smithville, complimentary to their guests, decided to furnish no liquors for the occasion. Too often accompanying invitations, the assurance that there will be an abundant supply of whiskey, is heralded through the press as an inducement to those invited to attend. A very gross compliment, if indeed it is a compliment, to the guests. All honor, we say, to those who adjudged that the Medical Society of North Carolina might be regarded as occupying a position not to be reached by such groveling inducements. We trust the worthy precedent will be generally followed.

We really thought we were fully up to the measure of commendable enterprize, in delaying our paper so as to give our readers the sermon of the Moderator of the General Assembly at the earliest possible moment after it was delivered. But we were slow in comparison with those who 'took no note of time,' and recorded the act before it was done.

The Central Presbyterian pays the following just compliment to the sermon: "We regret exceedingly that the pressure on our columns this week, and the late hour at which the copy was received, compels us to omit some portions of the sermon of the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Wilson, the retiring Moderator. Of course this impairs it somewhat, but we have attempted to preserve the train of thought. We like the sermon exceedingly; first, because it is timely; Dr. Wilson has chosen the right topic; secondly, it brings out with the perspicuity of light the true idea of a healthy Church, showing us what it ought to value. The style and the matter are alike admirable. It is published one day in advance of its delivery.

[Copy was mailed from this office on the 13th inst.—seven days in advance of delivery of the sermon.—ED.]

The London Weekly Review takes a very sensible view of the appointment of a Roman Catholic—and such a Roman Catholic!—to the viceroyalty of India. What follies and what wickedness are committed under the name of charity:

"The appointment of a Roman Catholic to the post of Viceroy of India is naturally causing a great deal of indignation among the Protestants of the United Kingdom. Why the government should have appointed Lord Ripon, whose accession to the Church of Rome made so much stir some little time ago, and who has since signalized himself by his zeal in promoting the interests of his new religion, is indeed strange, when there were so many other men, not in the service of Rome, as capable, or more so, to fill the most important post under the Crown. Surely, if there is any place in the world where the religion of Great Britain—which is still Protestant, in spite of all efforts to make it otherwise—should be represented, it is India, with its multifarious creeds and religions. To appoint a Roman Catholic to supreme command there is practically to show the Hindoos that we do not care much for the religion we are endeavoring to teach them, and to cast a slight on those Protestant missionaries who have worked so hard and so well in spreading the knowledge of the Gospel in India. No wonder there is great rejoicing at the Vatican over the appointment.

In response to our request, the Charleston News and Courier kindly furnished us advanced copy of the first day's proceedings of the General Assembly. The report, full and complete, as from that enterprizing journal, we give in its appropriate place.

We feel entirely warranted in saying that the proceedings, as they transpire, will be given in a complete and thoroughly satisfactory form in the News and Courier. As our reports must necessarily be condensed, we advise all who desire to have the full account of the proceedings to send forty cents at once to the journal mentioned.

NEWS NOTES.

We specially invite news from all quarters for this column.

HAYWOOD CHURCH IN ORANGE.

A friend writes that a delightful communion service was held at Haywood church on 16th inst. Rev. P. R. Law, who serves the church, preached to a very large and deeply interested congregation. Four persons were received into membership. The congregations are increasing and both pastor and people are greatly encouraged.

SOUTH RIVER CHAPEL.

South River Chapel in Wilmington Presbytery on the 15th inst., made out a unanimous call for the pastoral services of Rev. A. McFadyen. Mr. McFadyen has been serving the church about nine years as stated supply, and no man could have served more faithfully and acceptably.

BETHEL CHURCH, CONCORD PRESBYTERY.

We have just closed the series of meetings incident to our spring communion at Bethel church, Concord Presbytery.

The congregation was interested and edified by the preaching of Rev. S. H. Chester, of the Presbytery of Mecklenburg. Brother Chester is very near to us, across the Catawba, but this is the first time the people of Bethel have listened to his preaching. This is an instance of the separative power of even a small river.

Seven additions were made to the roll of communicants—two by letter, bring in one family; two on profession of faith, a father and a mother, bringing two families, and three of our baptized children.

We also organized a Ladies' Missionary Society, with a good beginning. G.

WHITE PLAINS.

Dear Brother: Spring communion of White Plains church came off on last Sunday, our pastor, the Rev. H. B. Garriss, officiating, assisted by the Rev. James Kelly. Brother Kelly preached a series of able sermons to the edification of our people. During this meeting there were four additions to our church on examination. This church is in a prosperous condition, under the blessing of God. The pastor labors earnestly for the salvation of souls. He has a call in his hands from Horeb church, Bethel Presbytery, and unless we give him a liberal support we fear he will leave us, for he is worthy of his hire. In view of this call, we hope that our people will be aroused to new energy and retain him where the Lord has blessed his labors. Our church has more than doubled under his ministration. We hope, however, the cup of Horeb may be filled to overflowing with the blessings of salvation to the souls of her people. M.

Jarvis, May 14.

MILTON CHURCH, ORANGE PRESBYTERY.

Dear Brother McLaurin: Last Sabbath (9th inst.) our hearts were greatly cheered by receiving to the communion of our church twenty persons. For a long time we had felt the great need of such a season of refreshing. And some hopeful indications were found in increased congregations and more serious attention to preaching. Meanwhile the meeting was commenced by our Baptist brethren, who were visited by Rev. W. E. Hutson, one of their evangelists. Under his earnest and faithful preaching it soon became evident that a deep religious interest pervaded our community. Christians were quickened, and in pleasant harmony both churches seemed heartily to join in the great work. The meeting lasted for about eighteen days, the Baptist church receiving, I believe, nearly thirty additions, and our own twenty. There are still others that we hope will soon unite with us.

Very hurriedly yours, &c.,
H. T. DARNALL.

COLUMBIA SEMINARY.

Mr. Editor: The Board of Directors were in session Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday (May 11-13). Every member of the board was present for the first time in years. A thorough examination revealed the fact that the Seminary is about $20,000 better off than it was six months ago—$3,500 by gifts, $7,500 by payments from Adger & Co., and $8,000 or $9,000 by increase in the value of investments. A considerable addition has been made to the library, mainly by Rev. J. Douglas' bequest of his personal library to the number of 1,372 volumes. The total number of volumes now in the Library of the Seminary is 20,295.

Rev. J. L. Girardeau, D. D., resigned his Chair of Didactic and Polemic Theology, and, in spite of all entreaty, insisted upon its acceptance, which the Board were finally constrained to grant. Dr. Girardeau's reasons for resigning are not known to the writer. This news must send a thrill of sadness through every heart that desires the continued existence of the Seminary and knows Dr. G. Warm in his affections, magnetic in his eloquence, intensely earnest in his piety, over his teachings are spread the blaze of love and the steady light of metaphysical exactness. The few who have had the privilege of studying under him must ever feel in themselves the influence of the humble genius whom they have learned to love and revere.

The Board abstained from filling this vacancy, for the two reasons that they need time to find a suitable man and are uncertain whether they would have means to pay the salary of a suitable man. They resolved to close the Seminary until this vacancy is filled.

Dr. Woodrow, in a powerful address at the close of the term on Thursday, pronounced the present Senior class the most satisfactory of the last twenty classes. It numbers fourteen. There are seven in the Middle class and four in the Junior. F. P. R.

Columbia, S. C., May 11.

Under date 17th May the gentleman who kindly furnished the above interesting information adds:

"I can now furnish these additional facts: During the suspension of the Seminary Dr. Howe is to receive a salary of $1,500 and to have charge of the library and buildings. All who call to mind that Dr. H. has devoted his life to the Seminary will approve this action. Dr. Woodrow, as he desires it should be, receives no salary, and he has no work assigned him. Dr. Plumer is made Professor emeritus, with a salary of $1,000. This is felt to be proper, in view of Dr. Plumer's age. These facts, with those contained in my last, are now current in Columbia."

A lady writing from Charlotte informs us that personal appeals to members of the congregations of the First and Second churches in that city, realized $106 25 for the appeal made by Rev. John W. Davis. The collection was made on April 10th, and the funds forwarded to Rev. Dr. McIlwaine, Treasurer.

We would publish the letter in full if we supposed it would be agreeable to the writer that we should do so. We give this extract: "We were gratified to see the action of Concord Presbytery, and we hope the balance required to make up $200 for our Presbytery will be raised among the different churches. Rev. Dr. Wilson wrote me about the 1st of April that he had then received about $200. I know not what amount since, and we heard that the people of Salisbury had given most liberally, but not the amount. We noticed the $25 in your paper by a North Carolinian, and the $1 from a little boy. If the people could know what amount in all had been raised, and be kept posted, we think it would encourage as well as stimulate others to go to work for Mr. Davis. His appeal certainly should be responded to promptly and cheerfully. I received 50 cents the other day from a very little boy for Mr. Davis, and will hold it as a nucleus, in case a further effort is required of us."

We add that any news on the subject is specially desired, and will be promptly published. In this issue we have further news on the subject.

THE HOUSE OF WORSHIP IN SOOCHOW, CHINA.

Some of the readers of the PRESBYTERIAN will remember that the matter of assisting Rev. John W. Davis in his effort to build a house of worship in Soochow, China, was brought up at the meeting of Orange Presbytery that was held at Washington in March, and that some interest was manifested on the subject. It was resolved by the Presbytery, that we make an effort to raise $200 at least, of the $1,000 that Mr. Davis asks for. A collection was taken up for this object, during the meeting of the Presbytery, and $73 10 were contributed by the liberal people of Washington, together with the visitors to and members of Presbytery. Besides this Mr. Lindsay informs us, that he has received for this object, from Newbern church, $11 25; Chapel Hill church, $4 50; First church, Raleigh, $30 50. Making in all $119 35, that had been sent to Mr. Lindsay before the 22d of April. Since then he has perhaps received more, and I think that Henderson church sent a contribution directly to the Committee, so we do not know the exact amount contributed. But I suppose I am safe in saying that there is something over $50 still wanting to make up the whole amount proposed. It is to be hoped that ministers will bring this matter before the churches as soon as possible. The money is needed. We have no time to lose. Mr. Davis made his appeal some time ago, and is no doubt anxiously awaiting the result. Let us help him at once. It is not necessary for us to stop at $200; perhaps we can raise more. When this amount is reached, it will be made known, through the PRESBYTERIAN.

J. L. CURRIE.

Mr. Editor: The good ladies of Sharon church, Mecklenburg county, by their united efforts have succeeded in raising $42 85 to assist Rev. John W. Davis in building the desired church in Soochow, China. They have forwarded it through the treasurer of Mecklenburg Presbytery to Rev. Dr. Richard McIlwaine. Hoping that the ladies in other churches may respond to the call as cheerfully as did our Sharon ladies, we feel encouraged to think that the $1,000 can soon be raised.

I hope you will notice this in your columns. It may encourage others to try what they can do for our brother in a foreign land.

Very truly yours,
C. H. WOLFE,
Treasurer Sharon church.

Proceedings of the General Assembly.

FIRST DAY.

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States convened in the Second Presbyterian Church in Charleston, S.C., on Thursday, 20th May, inst. The church was filled by a large and very devout congregation. The floral decorations around the pulpit were very fine, and standing at the right of the reading desk was a large vase filled with flowers gathered from the grave of the lamented Dr. Smythe.

The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Joseph R. Wilson, D. D., the retiring Moderator, from Psalm cxviii: 25; "Oh Lord, send now prosperity." The morning prayer was offered by the Rev. A. W. Clisby, of Macon, Ga. The sermon was an admirable discourse, in every way clear, logical and eloquent, and was delivered in a most impressive manner by its distinguished author, whose name is known in all the churches.

MODERATOR'S SERMON.

"O Lord, send now prosperity." Psalm 118: 25.

The poem from which this prayer is quoted, is, throughout, an utterance of the Church: the utterance of gratitude for past experiences and of confidence as to the future. God had, according to His promise, brought her out of a long captivity, but there were still other of His pledges which were to brighten into splendid fulfillments. His special grace was to surpass His special providences; so that where there had been those hidings of His face, harder to be borne than the hidings of his power, there should henceforth be only light; and in this light was the Church to enjoy a spiritual prosperity with which no mere temporal advantages would compare. This alluring prosperity was, however, to come not by miracle nor by chance, nor yet by virtue of a listless waiting on the part of its expectants. The voice of prayer must rise to claim it. The hand of faith must open to receive it. Lifting that voice and extending this hand, each member of the body of Israel and all together as a united whole, are, accordingly, seen to stand, saying: "O Lord I beseech Thee, send now prosperity." What prosperity we already have, maintain, what we do not yet possess, add; but send only that which is real and lasting: and send it at once. Truly a prayer not less comprehensive than earnest!

That in this appeal to her divine Head, is represented the true attitude of the Church in our own day, it were a needless task to illustrate. A still further and larger prosperity is always to be sought in behalf of a living organism whose law is that of progress, and whose decline must begin just so soon as an imagined perfection has been reached;—and this is especially the case where the organism in view is of the nature of a personal existence.

I. There is, therefore, only one inquiry which here demands an answer: what is it that constitutes a Church's prosperity; which is equal to the question, how does she best realize the idea of her mission; or to this simpler interrogatory, how shall it be ascertained whether she is in the experience of a healthy growth?

That mere automatic expansion is not indicative of such a growth, we at once perceive by a look at the papacy, wherein mechanism takes the place of life.

That mere extent of territory occupied does not testify to it, we are assured by thinking of those primitive churches whose hands, so soon paralyzed, were joined in a circle the area of which included a great portion of the then civilized world.

That mere breadth of showy foliage fails to give proof of it, is seen in certain well-known specimens of modern ecclesiasticism, not necessary now to be named, which, whilst obtruding to the sight many limbs of bold assumption, are yet able to exhibit but a sparse fruitage of saving truth to the disappointed taste.

Nor, as is sometimes superficially thought, does a growthful prosperity depend for its expression upon the numbers whose names serve to swell the rolls of a professing membership—as is witnessed in not a few instances of individual churches, whose communion tables are crowded with nominal believers many of whom are nowhere else felt to be on the side of Christ. It is, indeed, a taking spectacle: that of a vast army gathered beneath the banner of salvation's imperial Chieftain. But, what other than an impediment to its efficiency are those thousands of them who are always faltering in the ranks:—the trembling doubters, the flinching dodgers, the prepared deserters: the images of soldiers only, upon whose ill-fitting and flimsy armor the ring of actual battle is never heard, in whose lifeless hands the blade of conquest is never seen to cut, and upon whose shrinking persons is never discerned the batterings and blood of a persevering heroism? Of what good use are the men who, when showing themselves at their best, are recognized as mere lookers-on where others are engaging the foe: or are known only as loitering murmurers, who, although ready to claim a share in the prizes that may be gained, will not venture beyond the safe margin of the fiery fray to help the struggling winners in its thick: cold, cautious, colorless, cumbersome! It may be well for the Church statistician to reckon up from year to year, the hundreds who have been added to the thousands already registered, and to gather into some imposing total a view of the augmented mass; and all concerned ought to be grateful the while for every fresh mark of gracious increase. But in the Church as elsewhere, people should be weighed rather than counted; and then it would probably be found that it is the clustered twos and threes, shining here and there like mutually-revolving stars amid spaces of comparative emptiness, whose influence of spiritual gravity most serves to maintain the balance of Zion's attractive and progressive forces. The Moravians were never numerous, and yet how great their achievements, how powerful their example, how penetrative their zeal! Numbers are desirable, but only when they constitute a membership whose constancy is as a law of nature, whose fidelity is as a principle of justice, and whose working-energy is as the movement of a tireless heart. Multiplied admissions into the Church ought, therefore, to be regarded not as constituting more a ground for gladness than as furnishing matter for anxiety. Would that our membership were expressed by the very largest figures which hope itself might name, yet who would not prefer Gideon's three hundred devoted followers to those rejected thousands, who, because they could not be trusted against the day of need, were sent back to their homes? Quality has always been more potential than quantity in enterprises where soul was more needed than body. Tares there are—perhaps tares there must be—in the best guarded fields of grain, but it is an "enemy" that sows them, we are told; and woe be to that Church which, for the sake of a boasting and transient appearance of deceptive bloom, is in this matter its own enemy!

Nor is a wealthy, necessarily a prosperous, Church. Other things being equal, an opulent membership might be indeed justly regarded as occupying an important vantage position which it were folly to despise. Property sanctified is properly serviceable; and the more of this kind the better. Otherwise, however, it may become even a source of weakness, by fostering a worldly pride in the soil where heavenly humility ought alone to grow. Money is power and power indispensable, but it is not always a helpful power; being such only when expended purely for the Master's sake who has Himself taught us that He is better pleased with the small gifts of the money unostentatiously dropped into His treasury, than with the larger offerings of the few who regard the noisy applause of men as above the silent praise of God. At any rate, His wisdom is illustrated in the fact that the controlling mass of His people is composed of those who have comparatively little of this world's goods—evincing that He, certainly, knows how to render a Church prosperous without the aid of such riches as other kingdoms depend upon. Men of wealth there are among His chosen ones, whose hearts, as liberally disposed as their means are plentifully bestowed, reveal them to the eye of a thankful admiration as truly noble specimens of consecrated Christian devotion; but "not many" of these are called: only enough to show that even in the most difficult walk of tempted life divine grace has power to subdue and to transcend. Assuredly, as things are, no Church is called to mourn over its poverty as if this were a fatal calamity, nor on the other hand to rejoice in the possession of distinguished affluence as if this were a principal good. Have not some of the most flourishing of the historic churches been those which knew not where, year by year, to turn for the maintenance of their worship except to their treasury in God? Has it not been so with the Waldensian Christians? Was it not so, at least for a time and that the most fruitful, with the Free Church of Scotland? Do we not read that this was the case with those early churches which Paul and Barnabas planted, and with that which, earlier than these, glorious Pentecost saw gathered? In fact, is this not true of our own body, which, although emerging from the war stripped almost to nakedness, yet has never ceased its successful efforts to advance its columns of spiritual conquest, at home and abroad? Poorness is thus a positive blessing sometimes; a blessing not disguised but manifest.

II. I now pass, however from a consideration of what does not constitute Church prosperity, to some suggestions as to what does; although knowing beforehand that I am thus about to enter upon territory less secure to the foot than the ground I have just left, and that I might herein walk far without fully overtaking the precise object of my search. In outline it is obvious enough, because it is very large; but in its many details, if these should all be traced, there could be no end to the pursuit of that which I have in view. I will look at it from only three somewhat elevated points of observation as sufficing for a comprehensive survey of the whole.

1. In the first place, a true prosperity is found in the thoughtful purpose of all who represent the Church to maintain, in its unabridged integrity and in its unadulterated pureness, a well-defined evangelical doctrine. Happily for us we inherit from our fathers a scriptural organization whose shining distinction has been its steadfast adherence to the entire revealed word of God, as that exclusive standard of faith and duty apart from which religious belief has nothing valuable to affirm and religious practice nothing laudable to achieve. So that almost the whole history of Presbyterianism is a history of battles under the banner on which was emblazoned this order: "hold fast the form of sound words." To such an extent is this true, that it has even been content to suffer reproach on account of the tenacity with which, with both hands, it has clung to the "thus it is written," and for its readiness to meet with sharp controversial zeal all those whose pseudo-charitable folly has presumed to loosen a single nail or obscure a single opening in the sanctuary of divine inspiration. We thus derive from an ancestry whose labors and endurances on the changing field of polemical disputation have served to shed a lustre imperishable upon our Church's annals, albeit the contention was sometimes over what might seem nothing more nutritious than a dry bone of metaphysical opinion. In these later days, however, has emerged a disposition, visible here and there, to relax the bonds of a theology, which, although fixed in the holiest experiences of God's people, is believed not to be broad enough for covering the advancing steps of "modern thought." Let it be softened, therefore, some are ready to cry, be toned down to a lower key, be relieved of its jagged points, made more humane, placed nearer to the demand of enlightened reason! Allow the several sciences to manipulate and mend it, to clip from it at this angle, add to it at that, reconstruct it everywhere, and render it less severe throughout! Temper your harsh doctrine of original sin with that of a self-resistable depravity; your doctrine of God's absolute sovereignty with that of man's partial independence of the divine will; your doctrine of elective grace with that of personal merit; your doctrine of a limited atonement with that of a universal final restoration; and all your doctrines with those which a philosophy more rational than apostles knew, is prepared to suggest! Amend your Confession of Faith, not merely touching what is obscure, but chiefly as to what is supernatural! Forget that it has stood the test of ages, some of which were more fiercely gladiatorial than the present, and the assaults of foes some of whom were giants taller and mightier than any who have since appeared; forget the baptismal fires of a martyrdom through which every one of those grand old truths has passed, leaving hardly any smell, and nothing of the soot of the furnace upon them, and passed thus unscathed because "One like unto the Son of God" was with them;—forget all those heroic strugglings of the Lord's people who, in sorrow and in joy, have witnessed to the truth which the Holy Ghost himself, lifting it from prophecy and psalm and epistle, conspicuously impressed upon their saintly lives; and, forsaking this wine of centuries, substitute therefor the watery gushings of a weak philanthropy such as influences, and thins, and renders contemptible, the teachings of those who seem to think that, instead of its being man's chief end to glorify God, it is God's chief end to glorify man! The Church grows towards a sure and ever-surer prosperity only when its nutriment is the strong meat of its Lord's own providing, however hard to digest some of it may be, and pines away towards ghastly death when it becomes content to feed from the made-dishes of men's preparation. Sad and dark will be the day whose coming is foretold by some who claim to have already beheld the streakings of its approaching dawn, in which our enfeebled pulpits shall cease to echo the heraldings of men who, strong with the courage of deep conviction, never suffered one note, however discordant to the ear of sinful nature, to fall away from the wondrous psalm of that same salvation which Paul taught, and for which a greater than Paul died. Fidelity to the whole body of inspired truth, is to any Church, not more a dictate of wisdom than a necessity of existence. Let us have God's word, or none! If His all-directing voice shall become faint amongst us, let every other voice, except that which is raised for the revival of His, become dumb!

There is little or no danger on this score, so far as we are concerned, do any of you exclaim? Well—perhaps not. But who knows? Other Churches, similar to our own, have not escaped the intrusion of heresies that have entered through unguarded doorways. There is always a temptation to leave ajar the gate where principle may go out to embrace popularity, and where the seductive voice of soft cant may come in to rebuke the faithful tongue of hard candor. How far, already, has maudlin sentiment begun to usurp the power of scriptural statement in the matter of eternal punishment? How far, too, have some gone who would dislocate the frame of our theology so as to leave space for elevating some favorite part—such as the doctrine of the second advent, such as the doctrine of the "higher life"—to a prominency which threatens to overshadow much of the residue? And what, to go no further, mean those murmurings against the sufficiency of an ordained ministry on the part of those who would improve the inspired method by interpolating the evangelism of a self-constituted and irresponsible itineracy? It is by insidious approaches that plausible error creeps to the front; and our prayer for prosperity has sometimes to be lifted in the face of the very goodness itself of men who aim to do well but who are always found to do ill in proportion to the extent of their departure from "the good old paths." Not that there may not be progress in amended methods of doctrinal statement, and in fresh unfoldings of doctrinal interpretation; but never can there be a true progress by means of tunneled short-cuts through the great mountains of doctrinal substance.

2. A second element in Church prosperity is found in such a vital union of all its co-acting parts as shall, more and more fully, verify that text which describes "the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part," making "increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." When the Church has visible oneness, such as is evinced in community of doctrinal symbols and in identity of governmental order, much is already gained, that, viz., without which there could be no proper movement. But where, in addition, there exists an inward principle at work which is engaged in regulating the very beatings of the Church's heart, as is evinced in this movement being a movement of the entire body as a single mass and towards a common object, still more is gained, viz., that without which there could be no proper vitality. Sameness of knowledge as to what constitutes a Church, considered as to articles of belief and modes of polity, may exist along with languor of mutual interest and inefficiency every way. The orthodoxy may after all be a dead orthodoxy, and the most scriptural organization outwardly viewed may be in practice a nullity. It may be an exquisite marble statue, as hard and as cold, although as beautiful: a faultless work of art, but fixed in its place: an object to be admired, but having no other use.

Now the theory of the Church requires us to suppose that it is the body of Christ informed throughout with the Spirit of Christ, apart from which informing Spirit it is not different from any other voluntary association of men, self constituted and self-guided. In this respect, accordingly, it resembles an individual believer, who, with all his outward professions, is of no valuable service unless he has secured the indwelling presence of the Holy Ghost. But when he does possess this life-imparting agent, what occurs? Why, this: in proportion to the extent in which he is thus spiritually pervaded, he is energized not only, but in a way that blends the purposes of his will into a single determination and that puts into harmonious activity all the parts of his being for making this concentred determination effective. Were the Church as a whole, therefore, to be placed in a condition represented by the life of one of its godly members, what would necessarily be witnessed? This: they who rule ruling in concord, and they who serve serving in concert, whilst both of these parties are in equal agreement with the one all-controlling Spirit who sits at the convergent and uniting centre of all. Granted then a true Church, and it ought to prove a vigorous Church, with its universally diffused vigor manifested in the mutual sympathy of its several vitalized parts. And, if this vitality were complete throughout, what would be further seen? Certainly this: every one who helps to constitute the whole would always be found adjusted to his right place; and, in achieving therein each his own unobstructed work, the edifice would go up apace, story by story, until its cap-stone should be finally laid in heaven and song. The chief prayer of the Church, is, accordingly, for the Holy Spirit, if it would be a Church transfused with a life harmonious, and because harmonious, strong and growthful.

Inasmuch, however, as no such strength-imparting harmony can be expected in the body at large unless it be conspicuous in the service of government, it becomes us in particular, fathers and brethren, to see to it that there be no needless jarrings on these "high places of the field," lest a cold thrill of separating influence be sent into the dependent mass below. Unity of official counsel is essential to union of subordinate conduct. But whilst no impact of mind, in those who share the burden of a co-ordinate and co-active Captaincy, can become too close, yet of course must room be always left, in such an incorporation of living forces—and just because they are living—for the utmost frankness and freeness of mutual discussion: only ought nothing of this room to be spared for the clashings of jealousy. There is always an atmosphere in Church courts wherein fraternal hearts may burn high with emulative love, but none for the low heart-burnings of antagonistic hate. There is abundant space here for the widest play of differing opinions, but none for throwing the war-stones of repelling alienations. There is ample scope for interchanges of charitable forbearance, but not one foot of ground for hurling the wounding darts of impatient egotism. There is large opportunity for applying the tests of critical examination to proposed measures and means, but not any for rolling the empty barrels of mere fault-finding; broad acreage for much planting, but no portion of it can be yielded for the marring process of pulling up sprouting roots or of felling blossoming trees. Genuine earnestness in Church management engages itself, rarely ever, in undoing. It lets alone what is well, and strives mainly to add what is better. It does not carp, it constructs; it does not suspect, but sustains; it does not worry, it works; does not waste the past, but awaits the future. In all true praying, therefore, for the prosperity which depends upon unity of counsel and effort, there must be a remembrance of the many hindering imperfections that are to be removed, as well as of the many desirable results that are to be attained.

3. The third and last element which needs now to be mentioned, as entering essentially into the idea of Church prosperity, is its free and steady outgrowth. Besides soundness of doctrine, besides wisely-considered unitedness of action, there must be propagating spread. In these respects the life of the Church resembles that of a healthy human body; it must have good blood coursing through its veins, and also sympathetic organs whose blending activities are busy in maintaining, each in its appropriate place, the full measure of their common vitality; but it must also refuse to live for itself alone, by seeking timely contact with others, and by showing itself in all directions a member of the greater body of mankind. Isolation stifles. A recluse Church is none. She is bound to extend her warmest hand to every sister Church, the integrity of whose scriptural standards and the devotedness of whose scriptural spirit are akin to her own, and with these if she can, or without them if she must, is under obligations to proclaim her Lord to all the world. One of the very purposes of her existence is, to expend in behalf of the myriads outside of her pale those immense treasures of which she is the responsible steward; indeed otherwise, she has almost no adequate apology for existing at all. And hence, in both Testaments the numerous predictions to this end. Hence, especially, the importance which has been attached, and with such eminent reason, to Christ's ascension command, whose utterance was almost immediately followed by such an exhibition of the missionary zeal as gave no rest to apostles and evangelists, until they had set an example of obedience which the lapse of time has served only to brighten as an inspiring lesson for all time. If the animating soul of the Church is the divinity that dwells at her heart, her worthiness of such a dweller is declared in the humanity that streams from her upon a pitied race which is crying to her for help: for it is by the conjunction of her divinity with her humanity that she alone fairly represents the God-man to whom she claims to be indissolubly wedded. Obscure her divine side, and you spoil her beauty no more than is done by dimming her human side. Attach her only to the skies, and she becomes a cloister; attach her to the earth alone, and she becomes a corpse; but attach her in just balance to both, and she becomes the comprehensive glory of each. Her light is the light of God; it has however been kindled to be borne onward and aloft, for the guidance of her own steps not merely but for a radiance which has no limit save the darkness of sin. Thus the gospel was never intended for a monopoly: it is, on the contrary, the gift of a universal property like the ever-circulating day. To confine it is to corrupt it. To amass, is to abase it. To withhold, is to waste it, and is to convert it into a curse rather than to conserve it as a blessing. So true is this, that never yet has there been known a body, miscalling itself a Church, whose hand, denied to the rescue of perishing men has not proved a hand of suicide laid upon itself. Every soul that perishes by reason of her neglect, is a soul that plants the seed of its destruction in her own bosom.

Beyond all question, the Church, when scripturally viewed, is that one institution for which mankind ought to be more grateful than for all others combined. In a sense that is far from being merely figurative, she presents a continued incarnation of the Lord of glory; she both personates and illustrates Him, by perpetuating His visibility: she is He, as a bride is her husband. But how can she verify herself to be all this, unless, like the Head with whom she is identified, she takes into the embracings of a boundless love the entire family which she is His arm to serve and save? And, in proportion as this arm is shortened, in the same proportion does it become shriveled; to lose, by and by, its unused strength altogether in a paralysis for which there is no remedy except the shameful remedy of death! In a word, her unceasing outgrowth of activity for Christ is but another expression for indicating her extending growth towards the perfection of Christ's own beneficence:—and in the advancing degrees of this heavenly beneficence are to be traced the corresponding degrees of her earthly prosperity. For she prospers only when she spiritually lives; for she thus lives only when she graciously acts; and she acts in entire trueness to her lofty character, only when she is prepared with those feet of swiftness which shall carry her, burdened with the care of all souls, around the habitable earth. Talk, then, of prosperity—a prosperity worthy of the name—when the hosts of Zion substitute mere dreams of conquest for its ever-enlarging reality, or where these easy resolves to go forward to possible victories are suffered to take the place of the vigorous and persistent march. This were talk indeed! As well speak of health when air is withheld from the smothered lungs, or of strength when exercise is denied to the desponding limbs. In vain are your evangelical doctrines, empty are your fraternal unities, unless these are caused to melt into agencies of holy enterprise which shall flow from rill to flood in unceasing expansion.

I have now done. From other points of approach might my subject have been differently, and perhaps better seen. But in what has been said, all that was needful to the purpose in hand has been at least suggested to minds more fruitful than my own. It has not been forgotten in this discussion, you will have perceived, that the Church has no original power of her own, but is at every step dependent upon that almighty Spirit who alone imparts a true unity to His people, who alone vitalizes an otherwise dead doctrine, and who alone energizes all successful activity. But neither has that truth been forgotten which it is even more important to recollect because more likely to slip from the thoughts, viz: that the Church, although an agent whose duty is the duty of an appointed servant, is by no means a passive instrument in the hands of her Master, as if she possessed no real life of her own: an imparted and a dependent life, truly, but none the less a responsible life. The Church is, therefore, capable of sinning and of receiving punishment, or of freeing her skirts from blame and of receiving praise. She is a doer for God as no other of his creatures is, and albeit when she has done her best for Him there is herein no place for pride, yet when she falls short of this there is then room for shame. Let her pray, therefore, for needed prosperity, and pray urgently, because such prosperity is indeed of the Lord's sovereign bounty; but then it is no more a gift granted to kneeling prayer than it is a reward bestowed upon deserving labor; and where this labor is lacking that prayer is presuming.

Upon the conclusion of the sermon the choir chanted "the Lord's Prayer." Dr. Wilson then declared that the General Assembly was in session and constituted the body with prayer after which the roll of the Synods was called. The following commissioners were enrolled:

The next business in order was the election of a Moderator. For this important position the Rev. James Woodrow, D. D., of Columbia, and the Rev.

T. A. Hoyt, D. D., of Nashville, Tenn., were nominated. Rev. E. M. Green was appointed to assist the clerk in conducting the count. The commissioners were called by the permanent clerk of the Assembly, the Rev. Wm. Brown, D. D., and the vote announced. Dr. Girardeau was excused from voting. The election resulted in the choice of Dr. Hoyt, the vote standing for Dr. Hoyt, 59; for Dr. Woodrow 47. Dr. Smith, of New Orleans, and the Rev. J. H. Bryson, of Nashville, were appointed a committee to conduct the new Moderator to the chair.

In resigning his seat as Moderator, Dr. Wilson presented Dr. Hoyt with the rules for the government of the Assembly in a few well-timed remarks, to which Dr. Hoyt briefly and eloquently responded, asking the forbearance and consideration of the Assembly while discharging his duties, and imploring the guidance and control of Him who is the fountain of all wisdom in all the deliberations of the General Assembly.

Rev. E. M. Green was, on motion of Dr. Wilson, elected reading or temporary clerk.

On motion of Dr. Wilson, during the present week, the General Assembly will meet every day at half-past 9 o'clock in the morning and adjourn at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

The General Assembly then adjourned, after prayer and the Apostolic benediction by the Moderator.

For the N. C. Presbyterian.

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. C., May 13th, '80.

MR. EDITOR:—Please allow me to say through your columns that although a member of the Committee of Home Missions I was not consulted about "Special Order No. 4" in your last issue. I think the language of that communication objectionable in that it reflects upon brethren in our Presbytery.

Fraternally yours, A. MCFADYEN.

CALLED MEETING.

Wilmington Presbytery will meet at Burgaw, N. C., May 29th, to consider and act upon a call from South River Chapel for the pastoral services of the Rev. A McFadyen.

G. W. MACMILLAN, Moderator.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

PRESBYTERIAN (SOUTH).

At the late meeting of Savannah Presbytery the Rev. M. C. Britt was chosen a trustee of Davidson College, to fill the unexpired term of Rev. J. P. Kerr. The pastoral relation between Rev. J. P. Kerr and the church at Thomasville was dissolved and he was dismissed to Macon Presbytery. The pastoral relation of Rev. R. A. Mickle with the church of Brunswick was dissolved.

The St. Louis Presbyterian states that the trustees of Arkansas College have conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity on Rev. J. H. McNeilly of Nashville, Tenn., and Rev. S. W. Davis of Fayetteville, Ark.

Change of postoffice addresses:

Rev. J. H. H. Winfree, from Williamsville to Middlebrook, Augusta county, Va., and Rev. J. A. Waddell, from Ivy Depot, Va., to Selma, Alabama.

Items from the Central Presbyterian:

At a congregational meeting of Salem church, Roanoke county, Va., on last Sabbath, 9th inst., Rev. John A. Preston of Franklin, Pendleton county, W. Va., was called to the pastorate.

From a letter sent us by a correspondent we use the following scrap of church history relative to Hat Creek church, Va.: "John Irvine, a native of Ireland, came to Virginia in '76 from Pennsylvania, and purchased a farm on Little Falling River, in what is now Campbell county, Va. He took up a large body of land around him. His nearest neighbors were ten or twelve miles distant. The Indians were still prowling about the country committing deeds of violence. Soon afterwards many others came and settled in the neighborhood. Mr. Irvine being a zealous Presbyterian, set to work and built a log church, which he called Hat Creek, on the site of which the present neat and comfortable church edifice now stands. The services of Rev. Gilbert Tennant of Pennsylvania were secured for twelve months, and a church organized with six ruling elders, viz: John Irvine, Sr., Charles Cobbs, Joshua Morris, John Marshall, Publius Jones, and John Irvine, Jr. With this little band of zealous Christians the nucleus of what is now a large and influential Presbyterian church was formed. After Mr. Tennant left the church was ministered to by Revs. Messrs. Waddell, David Rice, William Manton, James Mitchell, Cary Allen and William Irvine, son of the elder John Irvine. There have been four churches built on the same site. The church is now in a prosperous condition, numbering over 200 members."

Items from the Christian Observer:

Rev. T. D. Latimer has accepted an invitation to supply the church at Mayslick, and requests correspondents to note the change of his address to Mayslick, Mason county, Ky.

Rev. Walter H. Robertson, of the last class at Union Seminary, has located at Gloucester C. H., Va.

Mr. Hugh Top and Mr. Wm. Rothrock were elected elders, and Mr. Leonidas Gordon and Mr. Wm. Frairly deacons of Richland church, Giles county, Tenn. Three persons, heads of families, were received as members of the church on the communion occasion.

The Hot Springs church, Ark., was organized on the 14th of April, 1876, by a committee of Ouachita Presbytery, composed of Rev. E. McNair, D. D., Rev. F. M. Howell and Ruling Elder J. H. Pattillo. There were two ruling elders, J. B. Hieronimus and Wm. H. Barry, and one deacon, Dr. C. E. Reid, and twenty-three members. Mr. L. C. Young was elected deacon and ordained on the occasion. Rev. F. M. Howell preached for the church one year, preaching only once a week. He died of yellow fever in Somerville, Tenn. Since the organization seventy-two members have been added; twenty-six of these have been added during the last year under the ministrations of Dr. McLeshan. Thirteen have been dismissed by letter, leaving eighty-three communicants. The annual report shows that the congregation has raised the past year nearly $800. There are 75 children in the Sunday school.

Our Presbyterian friends have secured subscriptions enough to insure the erection of a church amply sufficient to accommodate the very large congregation who worship at Mossy Creek, Augusta county) under the pastoral care of that very justly popular preacher, Rev. J. W. Rosebro. Under his ministration the church has attained a degree of prosperity exceeding any former period of its history.—Valley Virginian.

From the Texas Presbyterian we learn that a camp meeting is arranged to take place at Barrett's Woods, Texas, on July 15th. It will continue one week. Services of the following ministers have been secured, viz: Rev. Drs. B. M. Palmer of New Orleans, R. K. Smoot of Austin, Texas, A. P. Smith of Dallas, Texas, and H. B. Boude of Sherman, Texas. The announcement is made thus early in order that those who decide upon attending may make their arrangements in time.

Handbook of Drawing. By William Walker, Lecturer and Teacher of Freehand Drawing, in the Owens College. Two hundred wood-cuts and diagrams. $1 75. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. 1880.

Prof. Walker resides in Manchester, Eng. His book, favorably received there, is by special arrangement with its author, issued in a revised edition in America. It is a very complete and satisfactory work on elementary art education; defining, principles and applying them to sketching, shading, relief, and perspective. As in ancient Greece, and in France and Germany now, so in our land, children should be taught drawing, as well as writing, with the use of such skilful guides as this book.

Now and Then, at Daisy Dingle Farm. By Meade Middleton. Pp. 203. Illustrated. Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia. 1879.

This little book tells how a happy farmer's family spent their Sabbaths at home, when they could not attend church. They were most delightful days, and built up that household in knowledge of God's Word. Every family will be blessed by reading this book, and imitating the customs of Daisy Dingle Farm.

We are pleased to learn that Bethel Academy under the charge of Rev. L. K. Glasgow is prospering. During the present session forty-nine pupils have been enrolled and the attendance has been very constant.

The annual examination will occur on 11th June. Judge Schenck has been invited to visit the school on the occasion.

YELLOW FEVER.—The engineers of the Central Railroad of Georgia say:

"Though exposed to the worst miasmatic influences of the Yellow Fever, by going in and coming out of Savannah at different hours of the night, and also in spending entire night in the city during the prevalence of the Yellow Fever epidemic of 1874, with but the single exception of one of us (who was taken sick, but speedily recovered) we continued in our usual good health a circumstance we can account for in no other way but by the effect, under Providence, of the habitual and continued use of Simmons Liver Regulator while we were exposed to this Yellow Fever malaria.

RESULTS OF VIVISECTION.

A series of highly interesting experiments with dogs has been lately made by Prof Mott, and in the Scientific American of Feb. 7 a detailed account is given.

The disclosures are so unpleasant and startling, coming home, as they do, to every one, that we believe they should be given the greatest publicity. The effort Dr. Mott is making to purify our articles of kitchen use should receive the support of every thinking man and woman. There has been too much indifference on this subject—an indifference that has resulted in Americans earning the title of "a race of dyspeptics." Poison, year after year, is introduced into the stomach with a criminal disregard to consequences that is appalling. If every purveyor of domestic supplies will carefully consider the result of Dr. Mott's experiments, as detailed in the Scientific American, one of the greatest, if not the greatest, of these evils will be corrected.

Dr Mott says: "The introduction of alum in flour, for various purposes, has been a trick of the baker for the past 100 years. Fortunately for society, its introduction is limited now to a few unscrupulous bakers. In England, France and Germany it is an offence punishable by a fine and imprisonment to use alum in any connection with articles of food. It should be so in America.

The Royal Baking Powder Company of this city a long-established corporation celebrated for the absolute purity of their goods, some time ago commenced a vigorous warfare against many of their competitors who were indulging in hurtful adulteration. The contest excited great interest in scientific circles, in which Prof. Angell, Dr Mott, and other leading lights took a very prominent part. The experiments of Dr. Mott are a result of this discussion, and go to prove conclusively that the most dangerous adulteration that a community has to guard against is alum in baking powder. In his paper, the Doctor says; "It was with difficulty I found a suitable place to conduct the experiments so that the animals would not disturb the neighborhood; but, through the courtesy of the Commissioners of the Dock Department, I secured a shed on their premises, foot of Sixteenth Street and East River. This shed I had completely remodeled into a suitable house, having the dimension of about 16x14x12 feet. Sixteen stalls were made inside having the dimension of 3½x2x2½ feet. The bottom of each compartment was covered with straw making a pleasant bed for the dogs. I then secured 16 dogs from the Pound, which were all carefully examined to see if they were in a perfect state of health. None but the strong, healthy dogs were selected. The breed, age, food, color, and weight of every dog was carefully noted. Each dog was then confined to a stall and securely chained, and they all received a number, from 1 to 16. I commenced my experiments on the 9th of September, and finished Dec. 3. My assistant was with the dogs from morning until night, and never left the animals without first securely bolting and locking the dog house.

No stranger was allowed to enter the house unaccompanied either by myself or my assistant, and the dogs never received a mouthful of food or anything else from any one except from my assistant or myself. I will now detail the result of my experiments:

"Dog No. 1.—Breed of dog, coach, Age, 1 year, Health, perfect. Food, bread and crackers. Color, spotted black and white. Weight, 35 pounds.

"To this dog, on the morning of the 9th of September, were given eight biscuits at 8:10 o'clock. The biscuits were made by myself as follows: One quart sifted flour, 20 teaspoons alum baking powder, 2 cups water, 1 tablespoon butter, 22 biscuits made, weighing 27 ounces; time of baking, 20 minutes.

"At 11:30 just three hours and twenty minutes, the dog was taken very sick, vomiting profusely; his vim and brightness of eye had departed, and he trembled considerably in his limbs."

Experiments were then made upon three dogs with biscuits containing only 10 teaspoons of alum baking powder. The result indicated that some animals are more liable to yield to the effects of poisonous substances than others are. When, on the other hand three other dogs were fed with biscuits made with pure cream of tartar baking powder, no ill effects were experienced. They ate and ate with an evident relish, day after day, and even whined for more.

It was next necessary to discover what effect alum has on the solvent power of the gastric juice. In order to obtain some pure gastric juice, a curious device was resorted to. Dr. Mott sent several dogs to Prof. Arnold, Medical Department of the University of New York, who inserted a small metallic tube directly through the skin and into the stomach of each one of them, when the dogs were in a perfectly healthy condition. Prof. Arnold sent to Dr. Mott some gastric juice, which was produced by tickling the lining of the stomach of the dogs with a feather or glass rod which caused the gastric juice to flow out of the tube into a receptacle placed underneath the dog to receive it.

Dr. Mott, aided by Prof Scheller, then began some experiments with the four samples of gastric juice, which he had received from Prof Arnold, to discover the effect of the gastric juice in which alum had been dissolved upon fibrine, a white, very easily digested substance having a basis of coagulated blood. The fibrine was imperfectly digested, and the experiments were very important, as showing that alum can check the digestion of so easily digested a substance as fibrine. They indicate, therefore, how dangerous it is to introduce these two salts into our stomach, if we do not wish to excite indigestion and dyspepsia. Further experments showed that the digestive power of the gastric juice is entirely destroyed by alum, so far as its power of dissolving the more indigestible substances, like the boiled white of an egg, is concerned.

Dr. Mott then determined to learn whether alumina could be found in the various organs of the body if a dog was fed with hydrate of alumina. He found a considerable quantity of the stuff in the blood, liver, kidneys and heart.

The Doctor goes on to describe the different symptoms exhibted by these dogs as they passed through almost every phase of animal agony until they were left in a complete state of physical prostration. To those especially interested in the details of this subject the article in the Scientific American supplement will give most complete information, and we will spare the sympathetic reader the account of the sufferings of these dumb brutes.

Dr. Mott's conclusion, after making these experiments, are of vital interest to every one who either makes or eats bread, and therefore concerns all.

"These experiments," said he recently, while speaking before the American Chemical Society, "clearly demonstrate that the salts left in the biscuit when a cream of tartar baking powder is used are perfectly harmless, but when an alum baking powder is used are very dangerous, for in every case where dogs were fed on biscuits made with such powders the dogs were made very sick, causing them to vomit profusely, lose all energy, and show weakness in their limbs."

It is a clear and triumphant corroboration of the assertions of the Royal Baking Powder Company, and entitles them to the gratitude and support of the community they are endeavoring to protect. As they claim, and Dr Mott has shown, bread made of alum is totally unfit for human or animal food.

'Tis true, in the bread of domestic consumption there may not be as large a proportion of baking powder as was in the bread used by Dr. Mott, and that accounts for the fact that the symptoms in the reader are not so well defined as they were in the experiments in question. How many there are of our immediate friends suffering from this evil, scientific investigation will alone reveal; but many a lingering and suffering invalid, with no defined idea of his trouble, can easily trace it to its source by stopping the use of alum powders, substituting some brand like the Royal Baking Powder, whose manufacturers have a competent chemist in their exclusive employ, who rigidly analyzes every ingredient before its incorporation into their powder. The old cry of "honesty is the best policy" may be worn threadbare, but its truth will hold forever, and while adulterations and short weights abound, it is a pleasure to see at least one in the trade strenuously endeavoring to give full weights and pure goods.—New York Tribune.

Unquestionable.

The Herald, Detroit, Mich., says of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure: "Its efficacy in kidney, liver and all urinary diseases is so fully acknowledged that it is not worth the questioning. Bona fide testimonials from well known citizens in public and private life are evidences strong enough to convince the most stubborn doubter."

BRONCHITIS.—Throat Diseases often commence with a Cold, Cough, or unusual exertion of the voice. These incipient symptoms are allayed by the use of Brown's Bronchial Troches, which if neglected often results in a chronic disease of the throat.

MALARIAL FEVER.

MALARIAL FEVERS, constipation, torpidity of the liver and kidneys, general debility, nervousness and neuralgiac ailments yield readily to this great disease conqueror, Hop Bitters. It repairs the ravages of disease by converting the food into rich blood, and it gives new life and vigor to the aged and infirm always. See "Proverbs" in other column.

Walking made very easy with Lyon's Heel Stiffeners; they keep your boots and shoes straight.

The Hygeia Hotel, Old Point Comfort, Va., capable of accommodating seven hundred guests, is unsurpassed as a watering place. It is easy of access to the traveling public. All the steamers plying on the Bay and James river touch at the pier within twenty rods of the hotel. The climate is unequaled for salubrity, malarial fevers being unknown. The facilities for bathing, boating and fishing are fine, with excellent drives, Fortress Monroe, the Normal School, Soldier's Home and the old town of Hampton being within the limits of an easy drive or sail.

On the morning of the 31st ult. our whole community was shocked by the announcement of the death of Dr. ANGUS STEWART, of Laurinburg.

He had been complaining for some time past of rheumatism, but was able for the most part to attend to his professional duties. So far as we know, his exit from life was unexpected to himself, and it was especially so to his family. He was called away in the 43d year of his age, being in the prime and vigor of life.

He was a man of many noble traits of character, and so far as we know, left the world without an enemy. The very large number of persons who attended the burial may indicate to some extent the esteem in which he was held.

May the Lord, who doeth all things well, graciously bind up the wounded hearts and sanctify this sad dispensation of His providence unto all who are exercised thereby.

On April 9th, in Orange county, N. C., Mrs. LOUISA A. WOODS, wife of S. K. Woods, in the 37th year of her age.

Her sufferings were very great; but through them all she was sustained by the christians faith and hope. She leaves a bereaved husband, who will mourn her loss, and three small children, who will sadly miss a mother's tender care.

She was a consistent member of Little River church. We believe that through her many trials she kept the faith, and we hope that she is now wearing the crown of rightcousness which we have reason to believe was laid up for her.

In Reidsville, Rockingham county, N. C., May 15, 1880, little LACY DENNY, infant son and only child of John and Sally Denny.

He was a bright little boy, aged 18 months and 7 days, the light and joy of the household. "Of such is the kingdom of God."

"Death gazed at the flower with such tearful eyes,
He kissed its drooping leaves;
It was for the Lord of Paradise
He bound it in His sheaves."

May the Lord lift the light of His countenance up, on the heart-stricken parents, and give them grace to bear this sore trial. D. I. C.

In Raleigh, on the 12th inst., Mrs. BARBARA ADAMS, a member of the Second Presbyterian church.

One of whom the world was not worthy. Faithful to her Saviour in life, He did not forsake her in death.

In Durham, May 4th, Mr. F. M. WALKER, in his 67th year.

For fifty years an exemplary member, and for more than forty years an efficient officer in the Presbyterian church, his life was a "living epistle for Christ." In feeble health for some years, he set his house in order. Entirely conscious to the end, calmly he fell asleep, after expressing his unshaken trust in Jesus Christ.

At Company Shops, N. C., on the 9th inst., Mr. WILLIAM DOUGLASS FAUCETT, in the 52d year of his age.

Only a few months ago, he found his Saviour, and joined the Presbyterian church at its organization. In his death our community witnessed a grand triumph of faith. Death had no sting, and the grave no victory. B. W. M.

IN MEMORIAM.

ALEXANDER BLUE, a ruling elder in Ashpole church, having faithfully served his day and generation in the Church militant below, has been removed to the Church triumphant above.

He was born February 16th, 1801, and died December 17th, 1879. Ordained an elder in Ashpole church March 15th, 1840, and, until disabled by his last illness, noted for his liberality, zeal and fidelity, he was ever at his post of duty in the sanctuary. In every relation of life he was much admired and loved for his genial disposition and many amiable qualities, both of mind and heart. He possessed in an eminent degree those noble traits which constitute the true Christian gentleman. As an officer of the church he was punctual, zealous and faithful, enjoyed the confidence and esteem of his brethren of the ruling eldership, and his intelligence, prudence and wisdom gave to his opinions great influence in the councils of the session. In his death the church has sustained a grievous loss, yet we would not murmur, for we are thankful to our Heavenly Father for his long life of usefulness and valuable service. Doubtless our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That this session cherishes the memory of our departed brother with sentiments of the highest esteem and affectionate regard.

Resolved, That this minute, as a tribute of respect, be recorded in our session book.

Resolved, That a copy be forwarded to the family of the deceased, and also, for publication, to the NORTH CAROLINA PRESBYTERIAN.

D. SINCLAIR, Clerk of Session.

NO REMEDY IN THE WORLD ever came into such universal use, or has so fully won the confidence of mankind, as AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL for the cure of Coughs, Colds and Consumption.
